REPUBLICANS CERTAIN OF CONGRESSIONAL TRIUMPH

National Survey Indicates Control of Both Houses Will be Kept; Democrats Hope for Senate

Surface indications point to a Republican victory in the Congressional elections next Tuesday. Confidential advices at the Republican and Democratic headquarters checked in the light of last minute reports from correspondents throughout the country forecast continued Republican control of both branches of Congress. The Democrats seem assured of making gains in both the Senate and House, but apparently insufficient to give them a majority in either chamber.

The Senate continues the spectacular battle ground of the canvass. There the contest is far closer than in the case of the House and the Democratic managers are proposing to see victory quite as insistently as are the Republicans.

Of the ninety-six Senate seats, forty now are held by Democrats. There are fifty-five Republican seats, including that for Maine made vacant by the death of Senator Fernand, which presumably will be filled by a Republican at the special election November 29. There is one Farmer-Labor Senator.

To win control of the Senate the Democrats must gain not less than eight seats and to gain eight seats the Democrats must win almost all of the Republican seats that are seriously in jeopardy as well as holding all the Democratic seats at stake in the election. As to holding the Democratic seats, it is a lead-pipe cinch for the Jeffersonians, because all the seven seats involved are in the Solid South.

MUCH APATHY

As to capturing eight or more of the twenty-eight Republican seats, however, the prospect is not so rosy for the Democrats. The survey of the country by Times correspondents shows that the Democrats may reasonably be expected to elect Senators in place of Republican incumbents in Maryland, Oklahoma and Arizona and they have about an even chance to do likewise in Kentucky and Missouri.

The Democrats still remain hopeful that they can carry the hotly-contested States of Massachusetts, New York, Indiana, Colorado, Nevada, Oregon and Washington, but pre-

Senator King Opens Night Hearing on Campaign Fund Charges at Phoenix; Will Move to Los Angeles

PHOENIX, Oct. 30. (AP)—United States Senator King arrived here at 10:45 o'clock tonight and proceeded immediately to the United States District courtroom in the Federal Building, where the hearing is to be conducted on charges preferred by Senator Cameron, Republican, against the Democratic State Central Committee and his opponent in the race for the United States Senate, Representative Hayden, that $100,000 was being thrown into the State by copper interests and certain interests in California to defeat him.

Senator King read the charges as contained in a telegram dispatched by Senator Cameron to Senator Reed, chairman of the Senate Campaign Funds Committee.

He also read charges contained in telegrams sent by Senator Ashurst, Democrat; W. L. Barnum, National Committeeman from Arizona; Louis B. Whitney, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, asking that an investigation be conducted into all campaign expenses in Arizona revolving about the Senatorial race.

Senator Cameron was not represented, it developed, when Senator King called for representatives of the contending parties. He announced that the hearing would proceed, nevertheless.

H. W. Rountree, certified accountant, testified that the Democratic State Central Committee had received $13,586.80 from various candidates and State employees up until September 27. The donations included $2650 from Hayden, $325 from Gov. Hunt, $500 from L. N. Douglas, candidate for Congress; $1000 from J. S. Douglas, Arizona capitalist, and $500 from Carl Pleasant, local contractor. The balance was received from Frank R. Duffey, who held in trust funds contributed by State employees. Rountree declared the committee's account showed no contributions from corporations.

After Roundtree testified that the committee had spent $14,631.41—more than it received—and explained that this was possible because the committee's account was overdrawn, but that it "got by" because it would take four or five days for some of the checks to reach the banks, Senator Cameron appeared with E. W. Campbell, his campaign manager.

Senator King then outlined what had taken place and announced that he would subpoena Stephen D. Mather, director of the National Park Service. Mather is now at Grand Canyon.

King told Cameron that he would move the hearing to Los Angeles to hear witnesses suggested by Cameron. The move might be made Monday, he added. A heated exchange between the two Senators took place when Cameron accused King of failing to subpoena certain witnesses the Arizona Senator asked for while King was en route to Phoenix.

"I will not tolerate that," King replied, adding that he would "get all the facts" on all money expended in the primary and general election campaigns.

Judge C. F. Ainsworth, Cameron's attorney, then was granted permission to outline his client's charges.

NEW ROYAL MARRIAGE FORECAST

Name of Visiting Rumanian Princess Ileana Linked With Humbert of Italy

BUCHAREST, Oct. 30. (AP)—Marriage of Princess Ileana to Crown Prince Humbert of Italy is hinted by the newspapers in connection with the forthcoming visit here of an Italian mission headed by the Duke of Spoleto and Marshal Badoglie, for whom unusual honors are being arranged.

The importance attached by the government to the mission's visit is shown by the fact that King Ferdinand himself will receive the members at the railway station and that they will be his personal guests during their stay.

It is reported that they bear an invitation for the Rumanian King and Queen to visit the Italian sovereigns in the spring.

The name of Princess Ileana, now touring the United States and Canada with her mother, Queen Marie, has been mentioned before in connection with that of Crown Prince Humbert. She is in her eighteenth year, the youngest daughter of the Rumanian sovereigns.

Humbert, who is one of the most desirable royal matches of Europe, celebrated his twenty-second birthday September 15. There has been keen interest in his choice of a bride, and among the names mentioned have been those of Princess Marie Jose of Belgium, the infant Beatrice of Spain and Edda Mussolini, daughter of the Italian Premier.

HOOVER ASKS REPUBLICAN VICTORY AS PROGRESS AID

Secretary Points to Administration Record in Urging Need for Continuance in Office

En route to his home at Palo Alto to cast his vote in Tuesday's election, Secretary of Commerce Hoover stopped off to deliver an address at San Bernardino yesterday afternoon and at Los Angeles last night to deliver a radio address.

In both addresses Secretary Hoover not only reviewed the achievements of the Republican party during the last five and one-half years of the post-war reconstruction period but also made an urgent appeal that Republicans be elected to Congress at the coming election in order that the party may carry out its executive and legislative program at Washington. He based his appeal for the election of candidates pledged to Republican principles upon the excellent record established by the Republicans since they took over the reins of the government five and one-half years ago.

BUSINESS ASSERTED GOOD

In a brief interview granted representatives of the press upon his arrival at San Bernardino yesterday morning, Mr. Hoover remarked that business conditions over the country are good and that if the American people have their own interests at heart they will see to it that the next Senate is Republican.

Although he disclaimed any prowess as a political prognosticator, Mr. Hoover said that all indications are that the Republicans will have a majority in the Upper House.

In commenting upon the political situation in California Mr. Hoover said he had come home to vote a straight Republican ticket. He digressed articularly to say that he hoped W. E. Evans will be elected to Congress from the Ninth District.

"Mr. Evans is a man who has a thorough knowledge of your needs and your conditions in California and I am sure he will be a strong man in Congress," said Mr. Hoover.

In response to questions as to whether Congress will act on the Colorado River problem at the coming short session of Congress Mr. Hoover said: "We are all going to make every effort to put it over." Opposition from the upper-basin States might be hard to handle and overcome at the short session, he said.

He declined to comment on the outcome of the special session of the California Legislature on the Colorado compact, saying that he was not mixing in such controversial matters, but was confining his efforts to bringing about harmony of action on the entire problem . . .

"Conditions throughout the country are good," Mr. Hoover said. "One way to test the condition of the country is to determine the employment situation. If you have full employment business conditions are healthy. If any appreciable portion of men are out of work over the country, then the country is sick. At present everyone in the United States has a job if he wants one."

In bringing the interview to a close Mr. Hoover, who is a Stanford alumnus, admitted that he would rather be at the football game in Los Angeles this afternoon than making speeches.

"I am frank to say that I think it a great imposition to hang such a football game up before a man when he has other matters that prevent his attending the game," he said.

The municipal auditorium at San Bernardino was thronged with more than 5000 persons who came to hear the address of the Secretary of Commerce. His remarks were delivered without the flourish of oratory common to the average political speech, but what he said carried such weight that throughout his lengthy address one could have heard the drop of the proverbial pin, so intent were his listeners upon hearing what he had to say.

MRS. PORTER PRESIDES

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Florence Collins Porter, picturesquely characterized as the dean of Republican women of California. She ably introduced Secretary Hoover, referring to him as one who through his remarkable work in the Belgium relief work ten years ago

POLICE QUIZ STAGE SET

Chicago Officers Under Scrutiny

Federal Jury Will This Week Seek Evidence of Deals With Gangsters

Hundreds of Officials to be Called and Damaging Evidence Predicted

BY J. P. GALLAGHER
"Times" Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, Oct. 30. (Exclusive) The eyes of the nation, if not of the world, again will be focused upon Chicago and Cook county this week when the super-rule of highly organized criminals, made possible through the collusion with police officials, officers of the courts and politicians, will face the searching scrutiny of a most exhaustive Federal grand jury investigation. The Federal body was to have investigated this phase of the city and county's nationally notorious crime and gangster-murder wave last week, but postponed it while inquiry is being conducted into the doings of the office of the Sheriff of Cook county, Peter Hoffman. Mr. Hoffman and his first deputy warden, Wesley Westbrook, recently finished serving jail sentences—the former thirty days and the latter sixty days—for contempt of court in connection with the granting of freedom to convicted gangsters who were supposed to be imprisoned in the County Jail. Neither of these officials is through with the Federal government yet. Both have to stand trial November 29 for conspiracy to defeat the ends of justice and for accepting bribes from gangsters.

The Federal grand jury will also delve into the activities of the State's Attorney's office, especially those of the sixty policemen assigned to it by the City of Chicago.

REASONS FOR REVIEW

There are several reasons for the Federal government's review being held in Chicago, the most outstanding of which are:

Chicago is the cradle and stamping ground of the most powerful, most desperate and most prosperous criminal gangsters in the country.

This city has commanded the attention of the civilized world because of the spectacular gangster murders by machine guns in the hands of rival mobs.

Law enforcement and the administration of justice in the city and county have broken down, as is evidenced by the fact that 110 members of criminal gangs have been murdered during the last three years while only one of the murderers was caught and sent to jail.

And, because the citizens, terrorized by revolver and machine-gun battles on the crowded thoroughfares of the city as well as the county and aghast at the failure of the local law-enforcing officials to cope with the situation, have demanded it.

Another angle, none the less important, is that Federal authorities because of continued gang raids on

Obregon Host to Deputies in Courtesy Visit

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 30. (Exclusive) What is accepted here as a mute testimony of the full support Gen. Alvaro Obregon enjoys in the Chamber of Deputies was evidenced by a courtesy visit of 130 Deputies belonging to the majority bloc of the Chamber, when they called upon Gen. Obregon this morning.

The delegation was headed by Gonzalo Santos, party leader, who, with all others of the group recently voted favoring a constitutional amendment which would allow Obregon's re-election as President of the republic.

No speeches were exchanged, but the visit was accepted as a silent indication that Obregon may count on the Chamber of Deputies for full support of his candidacy.

Rail Capitalist Dr. W. S. Webb Dies in Vermont

BURLINGTON (Vt.) Oct. 30. (AP)—Three sons and a daughter lost in a race with death to reach the bedside of Dr. William Seward Webb, railroad builder, capitalist, physician and sportsman. Death resulted from a heart attack at his home, Shelburne House, near here. He was 75 years of age. With Dr. Webb when the end came were his wife, the former Ella Osgood Vanderbilt, daughter of the late William K. Vanderbilt, and a daughter-in-law, Mrs. J. Wetson Webb.

Dr. Webb was the builder and a former president of the Mohawk and Malone Railroad and a director of the Pullman Company, the Central Vermont Railroad and other transportation companies.

Early in life he studied medicine at Columbia University and at Vienna, Paris and Berlin.

Besides Mrs. Webb he leaves three sons, Seward, Vanderbilt and J. Wetson of New York, and a daughter, Mrs. Frederick Dyril Jones of Hyde Park, Mass.

PRESBYTERIANS SEEK $500,000 FOR SCHOOL

SEATTLE, Oct. 30. (AP)—A campaign in Idaho and Washington to raise $500,000 to establish and maintain centers for Presbyterian students at the universities of Washington and Idaho and Washington State College and to permanently endow Whitworth College, Spokane, was announced here today. The campaign is part of a national movement of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education.

WINNIPEG GREETS MARIE

High Officials of Manitoba Welcome Royal Visitor; Arrival at St. Paul Set for Today

WINNIPEG (Man.) Oct. 30. (AP)—After two days of complete relaxation while crossing the hills and prairies of Central Canada, Marie, Queen of Rumania, tonight plunged again into the whirl of social functions, attending her reception to Winnipeg.

Marie spent the day in her private car with her children, Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana, and with them watched the rolling wooded country give way to the flat lands of the country's great wheat belt. A mantle of snow, the first encountered on the tour, covered the ground.

Manitoba's official welcome was extended to the royal visitors by Lieut.-Gov. T. A. Burrows, Premier John Bracken and Atty.-Gen. R. M. Craig. Mayor Ralph H. Webb greeted the Queen in behalf of the city.

Marie was escorted to the Fort Garry Hotel, where a formal reception was held. Later she was the guest of honor of the Women's Canadian Club.

Tonight Marie witnessed another colorful function in the Parliament buildings, where her hosts were Lieut.-Gov. Burrows, Mrs. Burrows, P. A. Talbot, Speaker of the House of Commons; Mrs. Talbot and Premier and Mrs. Bracken. A public reception lasting two hours followed after which an informal supper was served to the royal visitors, the official Rumanian party and the members of the Cabinet.

Departure from Winnipeg was fixed at midnight, with arrival in St. Paul, the first long stop scheduled for the return to the United States, set for tomorrow afternoon.

Rumanian King's Doctors Verify Illness Reports

BUCHAREST (Rumania) Oct. 30. (AP)—King Ferdinand is ill and under treatment by his physicians. He is suffering fro man intestinal complaint.

TWO STATES BLANKETED WITH SNOW

Wyoming and Colorado Have Freezing Weather as Storm Heads South

DENVER, Oct. 30. (AP) — Leaving from one to four inches of snow, temperatures below freezing and clearing skies, the snowstorm which has raged for forty-eight hours in Wyoming and Colorado today was headed for New Mexico and Texas.

Pueblo, Colo., had four inches of snow during the storm period compared to three inches in Denver. Learville, Colo., laid claim to the lowest temperature with a minimum of 2 above zero. Cheyenne, Wyo., however placed a close second with 8 above.

Passage of the storm and lifting of a dense fog which fell over the two States found the Fokker monoplane Josephine Ford, in which Lieutenant-Commander Richard E. Byrd flew over the North Pole and which was snowbound yesterday at Cheyenne, winging its way westward toward Salt Lake City.

Antiforeigners Peril American Women in China

PEKING, Oct. 30. (AP)—American authorities are considering the advisability of removing all American women and children from Szechwan Province in view of the increasing gravity of the antiforeign situation.

Latest messages from Chengtu, capital of Szechwan, say the Chinese are making efforts to obtain control of Union Christian University, allegedly as the result of Bolshevik encouragement.

WEST EUROPE SEA OF MUD

Torrential Rains Mire Roads, Cut Communications and Put Rivers Out of Banks

PARIS, Oct. 30. (AP)—Western Europe from Holland to the Pyrenees is a vast stretch of mud due to the rains which have fallen almost without let-up for several days. The ordinary affairs of life have been made unpleasant and in some regions serious damage has been done by the persistent downpour, particularly in Belgium, in the Vosges, where some of the rivers have overflowed their banks.

Rain is still falling tonight in Paris and most other parts of France with the prospect that it will continue.

Communications have been considerably interfered with in the region surrounding Belfort, while Strasbourg during the last twenty-four hours has experienced the heaviest rainfall ever recorded there in a similar period.

The land from Paris to the Atlantic Coast, according to travelers as well as newspaper and government dispatches, is one vast stretch of water and mud. In Switzerland it is raining in the lowlands and snowing in the mountains to an unusual extent for such an early date.

Even Northern Africa is being partly deluged, dispatches from Marrakech telling of torrential rains that have cut off communications with Casa Blanca.

BRUSSELS (Belgium) Oct. 30. (AP) Floods, resulting from the heavy rains of the last few days are menacing every part of Belgium and have already caused devastation in the Charleroi region, necessitating cessation of many industries.

The authorities of Liege fear a repetition of the disaster of last winter in which the city suffered heavily, with more than 15,000 houses flooded.

The Belgium floods of last January were the worst experienced in the country since 1740. The death list was placed at twelve and the property damage at approximately $4,500,000. The cities of Liege, Namur, Charleroi and Mons, with scores of smaller towns, suffered heavily.

Hoover Pleads for Republican Victory to Aid Prosperity

SECRETARY ON WAY TO VOTE

Addresses Given in South En Route Home

Cabinet Member Greeted by Political Aides

Administration's Record Cited in Speeches

had left an indelible impression upon the hearts of the women of the Old World.

Without equivocating, Mr. Hoover plunged into the meat of his subject, which was to tell of the remarkable progress along reconstruction lines made by the United States since the close of the World War and of the great credit due the Republican party for bringing about this great recovery from the world's greatest conflict at arms.

MIGHTY TASK

He told how the Republican party five and one-half years ago was intrusted with the task of bringing the country out of the throes of a post-war period of depression and uncertainty unequaled in the world's history. It was a great order for any political party to accept, he said, but the Republican party accepted it. And then he proceeded to tell, in a few words, how the Republican party had carried out a reconstruction program that is the marvel of the world.

"We were, at the close of this greatest of wars in the history of the world, promised a generation of calamity. Instead, we have brought about a generation of well being and prosperity that promises to establish a world record," he said.

"This remarkable recovery of a great nation from the effects of an unprecedented world war has been brought about not by mere accident or by luck," said Mr. Hoover. "It has been the result of wise policies enunciated and carried out by the Republican party. And if these policies be pursued to their natural conclusion under the direction and guidance of the Republican party, we will be on the road to the greatest condition of national well being ever enjoyed by any nation at any time."

NEED DECENTRALIZATION

Mr. Hoover pointed out the dangers to rational government through overloading that government with duties or through an overcentralization of powers in that government. He pointed out that the war had brought about a great centralization of government, but that the Republican party upon assuming control of the postwar government recognised that if progress was to be made the government would have to relinquish to the individual those functions which the individual best could operate.

"We recognize," he said, "that if the government were to restore confidence in the governed it must relinquish those Socialistic practices which it had been forced to pursue because of the war."

And so there was restored through the policies followed by the Republican party the confidence of business men. Once that was re-established the rest came as a natural result, he said.

SEEK MIDDLE ROAD

Mr. Hoover touched upon the problem of the collection of the war debts and remarked upon the two schools of critics in this respect. The one school holds that the United States has been too generous to the foreign nations owing us. The other school holds that this country has been something of a Shylock. The course we have pursued, and the desirable course, Mr. Hoover said, has been somewhere between these two extremes. His remarks on this point were heartily apiauded by his audience. He pointed out that those who argue for a cancellation of the Allied debts must bear in mind that the United States made those loans based upon an obligation to the American taxpayer and that in all negotiations with foreign debtors he must bear the American taxpayer in mind. To the critic who cries for putting the escrews on the foreign debtor, Mr. Hoover pointed out that it is not the desire of the United States to bring misery and financial destruction to any foreign power.

In urging the choice of Republicans at Tuesday's election, Mr. Hoover pointed out that the theory of our form of government requires that one party or the other be in power and that if the Republican party is to be charged with the responsibility of the national government for the next two years, as it is, certainly the Republican administration should be supported by having Republicans in control of the Legislative branch of the government. To send Democrats or Republicans not bound to party fealty to Congress could result only in deadlock and confusion at Washington for the next two years, he said. For this reason, he said, these mid-term elections are dangerous to our form of government.

It is much easier, he remarked, to find the road to economic destruction by the political route than to find the road to economic stability.

TALKS OVER RADIO

During his address over radio KFI last night, Mr. Hoover covered much of the ground he went over in his address at San Bernardino. One of the strong points he made at night was that the Republican administration makes no claim to credit which belongs to a great people. It can rightfully claim, however, that this great mass of people would not have made progress in an atmosphere poisoned by unwise or shifting governmental policies.

"The measure of our national prosperity, our stability, our hope of further progress at this time is the measure of what we risk with a change in these policies and the leadership under which we have come this far," he said.

If anyone thought America's prosperity was the natural outcome of the course of events following the World War, let him look upon the condition of the majority of European governments at present and decide whether the wise policies of the Republican party had anything to do with our present healthy national condition of affairs, said Mr. Hoover.

The Washington Arms Conference, he pointed out, showed not only that world disarmament is a practicable thing but also that the will for world peace in America is paramount.

STANDARD HIGHER

The standard of living of the masses is the measure of a nation's progress, he said, and then remarked that under Republican policies the standard of living in America has advanced considerably.

"This election is one of more than local issues," he said. "It is far more than that. It involves also whether the national administration shall be crippled in its work of reconstruction and the promotion of progress, whether we shall have consistent, continuous resolute, economic and governmental policies; whether the policies by which we have come thus far are to be halted and whether we are to substitute two years of confusion and hesitation in the completion of a great national task.

"It must be borne in mind that the control of either branch of Congress by the Democratic party as the result of the coming election means a deadlock in the progress of governmental policies. A Democratic Congress will not even make possible the adoption of alternative policies. The executive department of the government will remain within the control of the Republican party for these two years and it is pledged to the maintenance and development of the policies now in operation. We do not propel a vehicle forward by hitching one horse with his head forward and one with his head backward. Yet this is all that can possibly result if the two branches of the government be in different parties."

SPEAKS FROM TRAIN

En route to Los Angeles on a special car of the Pacific Electric, Mr. Hoover stopped at Covina, Claremont, Baldwin Park and other points to speak briefly to crowds gathered there to hear him. He urged upon them to send to Congress such men as W. E. Evans, from the Ninth District, Senator Shortridge and the others on the Republican ticket.

Among those of the Los Angeles delegation who went to San Bernardino to welcome Secretary Hoover home were: Ralph Arnold, Superior Judge Crail, Joe Crail, E. P. Clark, W. L. Honnold, Willits J. Hole, Louis B. Mayer, S. W. McNabb, S. C. Packer, D. W. Pontius, Al Sittel, B. B. Smith, Supreme Court Judge Curtis, C. R. Stevens, George B. Bush and Shirly Ward.

Mr. Hoover and Mrs. Hoover planned to leave Los Angeles for their home this morning.

Boy of Fifteen Youngest Lifer at San Quentin

SAN QUENTIN, Oct. 30. (AP)—The San Quentin State prison today received as a prisoner for life a boy who was described on the commitment papers as 15 years of age. He is James Trautman, and was sent from Sacramento county for robbery. He held up a man at the point of a gun.

The prison officials said that Trautman was the youngest prisoner to be sent to San Quentin in its history. According to information here, he first was given a hearing by the Juvenile Court judge and later by the criminal department of the Sacramento County Superior Court.

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 30. (AP)—James Trautman, 15-year-old boy robber was sentenced to San Quentin prison by Superior Judge Charles O. Busick here October 23 when he confessed in open court to eight hold-ups during a period of a few months.

ASSERTED SLAYER OF FIVE MEN CONVICTED

MERIDERN (Mass.) Oct. 30. (AP)—Kinnie Wagner, asserted slayer of five men, was today found guilty of first-degree murder in connection with the slaying of Deputy Sheriff Murdock McIntosh of Greene county, and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Wright Act Repeal Opposed in Resolution

Protective Tariff Policy of Party Upheld

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—No weakening of the Volstead law, which "lends aid to canment of all laws constituted the emphatic stand taken by the Republican Federation of Women's Clubs of Southern California in a one-day business session here today. Secretary of Commerce Hoover was the guest of honor.

Resolutions were adopted against repeal of the Wright Act and urging representatives in Congress to "resist any attempt to modify the Eighteenth Amendment, except to strengthen it," and to uphold the "great Republican principle of protective tariff which insures the full development of American industry, agriculture and labor and makes safe and secure the foundation stones of the nation's peace, prosperity and domestic tranquility."

Criticism was expressed of the present working of the direct primary law, which, which "lends aid to candidates with possible past Socialistic records or leanings to put their name on a Republican or Democratic ticket without needing to divulge their past affiliations with radical interests."

The officers of the Southern Division are Mrs. Florence Porter, South Pasadena, president; Mrs. W. E. Evans, Glendale, first vice-president; Mrs. Charles Vandewater, Long Beach, second vice-president; and Mrs. F. A. Kellogg, San Diego, recording-secretary.

CHICAGO POLICE QUIZ TO BEGIN

the United States mails, which are now guarded by marines, has awakened to the fact that the growth of gang power is one of the outstanding manifestations of present-day lawlessness and the most important factor in adding vast sums to the nation's staggering annual bill for crime, and that it must be eradicated.

POLICE PANIC

As the Federal inquiry nears, consternation is reported in all ranks of the police department, and among the politicians friendly to the powerful gang leaders. Two hundred and fifty patrolmen and fifteen commanding officers are to appear before the Federal investigating body. That there will be damaging confessions is almost a certainty, and that the heads of several prominent police officials and many police privates will be figuratively cut off is as sure as fate.

In the ranks of the gangsters there is unrest. A truce was reached several days ago between the leaders of Chicago's two principal gangs that will last at least until after election day. For be it known that the gangsters will be well represented at the polls to supervise the vote for their friends and to see that the general public does not get an even break. In order to save their candidates it may be necessary to resort to the slugging and kidnaping of election judges and watchers and the theft of ballot boxes. In this respect they can be depended upon to work in unison. But even this element has respect for Uncle Sam once he gets on their trail.

Prof. Frederick M. Thrasher of the department of social science at the University of Chicago, is authority for the assertion that there are 1313 gangs in Chicago. He spent two and one-half years investigating them.

While some of the organizations were found to be a basis of neighborhood spirit and progress, most of them, Prof. Thrasher says, act as the cradles of crime in the city. It is an easy step, the professor points out, from social gangs to minor criminal bands, and from that through education in various penal institutions to the highly organized criminal gangs of the present day. The criminal syndicates, the professor said, he found to be the worst. They are country-wide organizations of certain gangs, having branches in outlying towns, who terrorize the countryside.

"The advent of the speedy automobile has sent the gang from the city to the rural districts," Prof. Thrasher said.

GANGS RUN WILD

On January 1, 1923, three years ago, there were thirteen different gangs running wild in Chicago and Cook county.

They were led at that time by John Torrio, Dean O'Banion, Terry Druggan, Ralph Sheldon, "Polack Joe" Saltis, James Genna, "Klondike" O'Donnell, "Spike" O'Donnell, Thomas De Coursey, Martin Guilfoyle, John R. (Mitters) Foley, Leo Murray and William J. Oakey. Each one was made up of from five to fifty followers. Like all criminal gangs they specialized in commercialized vice, gambling and the handmaiden of both, booze and beer. The sale and distribution of the latter was found to be profitable because of the large number of "blind pigs" in operation.

The proverbial unlucky number thirteen proved most unfortunate for the gangsters. Internecine warfare broke out in 1923 over the "fat" or most profitable territories. Between that time and today over 110 members of the various gangs have been shot to death, scores were maimed by flying bullets and driven out of the "racket" or out of town, and other scores were terrorized into withdrawing entirely. So that at the present time the original thirteen gangs have dwindled into two compact and highly organized gangs composed mainly of members of the other gangs who dominate the city completely and who have become immensely wealthy from the rewards of their nefarious "rackets."

BLIZZARD HITS QUAKE REGION

ganization, was destroyed at midnight, only a day after 400 children had been removed from the building. The personnel house of the American relief workers was so badly damaged that it had to be deserted. Partitions fell and the walls cracked, but all the relief workers escaped without injury. The personnel house of the Kazachi Orphanage also was so badly damaged that it was unsafe to attempt repairs. The 5000 orphans in all the asylums were removed to out-of-doors.

A blizzard which set in today added to the suffering of the earthquake victims. Dugouts were bing built to shelter the inhabitants of the native villages. Native teachers and 420 of the older boys in the orphanages joined in the work of making these shelters.

The populace of Leninakan and twenty-eight near-by villages are subjected to acute suffering because of the severe weather, the cablegram stated.

Georgetown University of Washington, and Fordham University of this city, were requested to forward to the American relief workers scientific information as to the recurrent shocks with data on disturbances in other parts of the world, also that the possibility of future shocks may be determined, thereby enabling the relief workers to be prepared.

Relief workers searching the ruins of Leninakan for injured and dead found in the wreckage of one building a baby that had been trapped under debris for two days, and was still alive when found, according to a cablegram received today by the Near East Relief. The child was added to the number of orphans already being cared for by the relief organization.

AMERICAN LOAN FOR QUAKE RELIEF PROPOSED

ERIVAN (Armenia) Oct. 30. (AP)—A movement has been started here to interest the United States in the flotation of an international loan to finance the reconstruction of the region devastated by last week's earthquake. It is estimated that $50,000,000 worth of ruined property must be replaced.

PORT SHIPS FIRST GRAIN

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—The port of Prince Rupert entered the grain-export trade for the first time recently, when the freighter Aden Maru took the first shipment of grain to leave the northern elevators. The shipment is for Japan and the loading was marked by a ceremony in which government and city officials participated.

Two New Code Letters in McPherson Mystery Case

KEYES DECLARES PASTOR SENT THEM TO ORMISTON

Radio Man's Arrest Asserted Near; District Attorney on 'Duck Hunt;' Gilbert Hurls Challenge

Two more code letters, in addition to the one already published, which, it is charged, were written by Aimee Semple McPherson and sent by her to New York to Kenneth G. Ormiston, formerly radio engineer at Angelus Temple, were said to be in the possession of Dist.-Atty. Keyes yesterday.

Mr. Keyes left his home early yes- morning to go "duck hunt-" but mystery surrounded the real of his trip when it was re- authentically that he has two letters which, he believes, were by Mrs. McPherson and sent Ormiston, fugitive from justice on charges now pending be- Municipal Judge Blake.

ORMISTON TRAIL HOT

interest revolved about the letters and the activity of Mr. investigation, it was learned Los Angeles investigators are the trail of Ormiston and so him that his arrest is in the immediate future. Cohn, chief of the District At- detective staff, declined the Ormiston development but he is in communication New York representatives who the search for him.

was followed by reports from that Ormiston was being in Tia Juana, Mex., where, it he had been for the past days working at a Tia Juana which is to be reopened having been closed for sev-

Nelson, manager of a San which is to operate the radio, said he had not en- Ormiston to work at the radio and that if Ormiston was or had worked he was not of it. He said it was possible that the Tia Juana radio manager might have employed Ormiston.

The search for Ormiston centers out of New York City, where a trunk supposedly Ormiston's was seized at the Cumberland Hotel. Investigators also seized a code letter addressed to the owner of the trunk which, with its contents is now en route to Dist.-Atty. Keyes. The latter also has in his possession a photostatic copy of the letter which has been placed in the hands of Milton Carlson, handwriting expert, for comparison with Mrs. McPherson's handwriting.

Disclosure of the first code letter by Mr. Keyes brought forth a heated reply from W. I. Gilbert, chief of Mrs. McPherson's staff of attorneys. Mr. Gilbert issued a statement charging Mr. Keyes with trying the case in the newspapers. This brought a hot retort from Chief Dep. Dist.-Atty. Davis, in charge of the office in the absence of Mr. Keyes. Mr. Davis declared that Mr. Gilbert and the evangelist are attempting to throw up "a smoke screen" to divert public attention from the new Ormiston developments.

Cohn was in communication yesterday, it was said, with investigators representing the District Attorney's office. Reports persisted at the Hall of Justice that Ormiston actually is in custody in the East but Cohn denied he had information to that effect.

Yesterday's controversy between the attorneys centered around the code letter which Mr. Keyes charges was written by Mrs. McPherson. The fact that this letter and Mr. Keyes's statement were published in the newspapers and not presented in court at the evangelist's hearing with her codefendants on conspiracy charges, amounted to an imposition on Mrs. McPherson's constitutional rights, Mr. Gilbert charged.

HOW LETTER READS

The first code letter as deciphered by Mr. Keyes, and his assistants, reads as follows:

"Dear Darling Man: This is from a girl who loves you with all her heart! Wuff! Putting up noble fight here. Now, for any sakes, keep cool. Don't lose your head and come forward. That would be awful! You're doing fine. That person did not get your letter! So you are all right on that score! I don't want you to think that your B. W. (Beloved Woman) did those silly things—those folks were plants who forced way in. Think everything will ultimately be all right! Don't worry self sick, dear. If I were sure you would get this I would send you (thousand dollars.) How can I tell? Have you all you need? Are you taking care of yourself? Oh, I love you, dear, darling man, I love you with all my heart. Why did you let me come back? A. O Weth! Forever—some day all will come right! Now, cheer up! You are doing fine and I will be K.O., I think, unless "E" breaks—and God forbid that happening. Hold that end down whatever you do! And leave rest to me. God bless you and comfort you. my dear—this is hard enough for me, but poor you—you must be nearly insane. My heart aches for you—I feel your arms and comfort all time. Poor little Ba Br Be wants N. But going to go down there today and growl at the whole world to beat the band—head up now—and whatever happens, don't come. Your Own Darling Woman That's Always Yours.

[Signed] "JACKIE."

The code letter is concrete proof of the State's theory in the conspiracy charges, according to Mr Keyes. He made the flatfooted announcement the code letter was sent by Mrs. McPherson to Ormiston.

GILBERT'S ANSWER

The statement of Mr. Gilbert follows:

"It is still my position that neither Mrs. McPherson nor her counsel should, while the cause is pending under submission before the court discuss testimony which had been in the possession of the District Attorney during the trial, but which has not been offered in evidence for the information of the court and the defendants on trial.

"I also observe that the Constitution of the United States provides that a person accused of crime shall be confronted in open court and not in the newspapers, by his accusers. This was for the purpose of requiring an accused witness to be under oath and subjected to examination both by the court and by counsel for the accused.

"It is further provided in the Constitution that a person is presumed to be innocent of the commission of a crime until proven guilty in a regular and legal manner; and the District Attorney should be the first to undertake to guarantee to every citizen that constitutional protection.

"The object of an examining trial is to advise the defendant of the testimony which the State expects to produce against them in the trial court. Instead of following this course, the District Attorney concealed what he concedes to be most important testimony in his possession against the defendant, until the case was closed, at which time it was released for the benefit of the newspaper which had assembled it.

TACTICS SCORED

"The provisions of the Constitution of the United States are also redeclared in the Constitution of the State of California. There is no rule, either of law or procedure, which could countenance a public official of this State in the prosecution of a case in placing a portion of his testimony before the court and releasing the remainder of his information to be used by newspapers while the court has the case under submission."

"It is to be observed that Mr. Gilbert did not answer the question as to whether Mrs. McPherson wrote the letter," Mr. Davis stated. "Mr. Gilbert also has refused to permit Mrs. McPherson and her mother to say whether or not the clothing in the Ormiston trunk belongs to Mrs. McPherson. Speaking about ethics, the evangelist has been conducting a pretty thorough case for herself over the radio."

The defense and the prosecution in the preliminary hearing of Mrs. McPherson and others are prepared to file their final briefs with Municipal Judge Blake tomorrow.

Although the conclusion of the hearing of evidence in the case precludes the possibility of the State presenting to the court any possible evidence that may be obtained through the contents of the trunk, interest in what its contents might actually reveal to the local authorities in connection with the case was growing apace as the time for its arrival from the East approached.

The trunk, which investigators located in an eastern hotel, was traced from the Maryland Hotel in Pasadena through Florida to the New York hotel where it was found. When it was opened at the request of the District Attorney it was found to contain a large quantity of woman's wear, including lingerie, costly gowns and flowing robes of striking color and design. A strand of red hair found in a boudoir cap taken from the trunk furnished the chief item of interest upon which the investigators have fastened their attention. A test has been ordered by Keyes to determine how this strand of hair compares to specimens of Mrs. McPherson's hair.

The outcome of such test is expected to be announced by Keyes after Judge Blake renders his opinion in the case. In the event that Mrs. McPherson should be bound over, the trunk contents are likely to become vital to the prosecution's case in court, if it can be established that any of Mrs. McPherson's belongings were in the trunk. On the other hand, unless such connection can be established, the trunk will be of no value in the case, further than possibly leading to the capture of Ormiston.

It was said that Mr. Keyes pins as much hope on the two new letters as the one already made public. The code letters were seized at the Cumberland Hotel, New York, where a trunk, supposedly Ormiston's, was found and confiscated. The trunk, packed with women's wearing apparel, is en route to Mr. Keyes under $5000 bond and is due to arrive in Los Angeles Tuesday.

According to Mr. Keyes, the three code letters as well as the contents of the trunk will be used as evidence if Mrs. McPherson, her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, and Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman are held to answer by Municipal Judge Blake on conspiracy charges. Judge Blake is expected to hand down his decision Wednesday.

Dep. Dist.-Attys. Dennison and Murray, who assisted Mr. Keyes in presenting the evidence against Mrs. McPherson at her preliminary hearing, announced yesterday they plan to question Mrs. Elizabeth Frame of Santa Monica, close friend of the religious leader and her mother who, it is charged, acted as go-between for Mrs. McPherson and Mrs. Wiseman, the Carmel "Miss X" hoax woman. She will be questioned to determine whether she had any knowledge of the code letters, Mr. Dennison stated.

Mr. Keyes charges the letters were mailed to Ormiston for Mrs. McPherson by a woman who is a close friend of the religious leader and whose name has been mentioned in connection with the case already.

In developing the new evidence, Mr. Dennison also said he planned to quiz Miss Emma Schaffer, secretary of the evangelist. The point Mrs. Frame and Miss Schaffer are to be questioned on, it was said, was a portion of the letter already decoded which expressed the hope "E" would not "break." The full content of the first code letters follows later in this article.

MRS. KIMBALL HAPPY

Seizure of the trunk and deciphering the the letter mean her vindication also, according to a letter received yesterday from Mrs. Virla Kimball, twin sister of Mrs. Wiseman, by her attorney, S. S. Hahn. The defense charges that Mrs. Kimball was the woman who posed as "Miss X" and signed the famous "Miss X" affidavit in Salinas.

In her letter, Mrs. Kimball said the new discoveries make her happy. She reiterated she does not know Ormiston and was not in Carmel with him during May when, it is charged by the State, the evangelist occupied a bungalow with the radio engineer.

In closing, Mrs. Kimball's letter says:

"My reason for writing this letter to you at this time is to inform you that statements made by Mrs. McPherson have been slanderous to me and my children. Please file a damage suit against her as soon as possible.

[Signed] "MRS. VIRLA KIMBALL."

During the preliminary hearing Mrs. Kimball announced she had instructed her attorney to sue Mrs. McPherson for $500,000 damages for asserted slander.

According to advices received yesterday from New York, the wife of Paul Rader, Chicago evangelist, said the fact that one of her husband's handkerchiefs was found in Ormiston's trunk was of little significance.

"He is always losing them," Mrs. Rader was quoted as saying. "It is ridiculous to try to attach any significance to the finding of the handkerchief."

Her husband, she said, had not seen Mrs. McPherson more than twice in his life. Mr. Rader occupied the pulpit at Angelus Temple early this year during Mrs. McPherson's absence in Europe.

PROPOSITION NO. 3 ASSURES CIVIC CENTER PLAN SUCCESS

County Proposition No. 3 is submitted to assure the success of the Federal, State, county and city Civic Center.

The first step in the development of a Civic Center is to acquire the necessary lands. Portions of the lands now available are owned respectively by the city, county and Federal governments. With the proceeds of this bond issue it is proposed to purchase the necessary additional lands for the site of our Civic Center.

We recommend the approval of the measure, first, from the standpoint of economy. It will prevent excessive severance damages.

Second, the acquiring of the property now will prevent the buying of these properties at extravagant increased valuations.

Third, it will prevent the buying back of present street areas that are to be abandoned.

Fourth, it will provide a site for the new State Building.

Fifth, it will provide a site for the new Federal Building.

EVANGELIST SCOFFS AT WUFF NOTE

Mrs. McPherson Calls Idea That She Wrote Letter Too Foolish to Answer

Although declaring as "too foolish for answer," Dist.-Atty. Keyes's accusation that she wrote the love letter found in a trunk in New York purporting to belong to Kenneth G. Ormiston, Aimee Semple McPherson, now facing charges of conspiracy, made it clear to her audience at Angelus Temple last night that her "wuff" is not a "wuff," but a "woof."

"Around the house, when playing with my children, I sometimes use the expression 'woof,'" the evangelist declared. "Those who are seeking to put over this gigantic frame-up should learn the correct spelling, however, before they write their letters."

Mrs. McPherson had her own interpretation for the symbols used in the letter. One of them, "D D M," which Dist.-Atty. Keyes says means "Dear Darling Man," she said might mean to her "Dirty Disreputable Monkey" or even "Dirty Desert Man."

Referring to the love letters, the pastor said she had "been considered for many years a woman of common sense" and she "believed she still was."

"It takes more than a blue dress that matches a blue trunk to make me blue," she told her audience.

"And I would receive the greatest shock of my life if something of mine has not been planted in that trunk," Mrs. McPherson declared. "This is a newspaper war, feeding on the rivalry of great syndicates. Newspaper men have been allowed the freedom of my house throughout, with access to everything therein. And nothing is stopped at to make a 'big scandal story.'

"However, I have something to be happy for. I understand I am coming heir to $2000 worth of clothes, including a wonderful evening gown with many spangles and ornaments and an evangelistic robe of red. But I don't know what I would do with an evening gown."

Referring again to the letter found in the trunk the evangelist expressed her opinion that "nobody could translate such hieroglyphics without having written them themselves or known who did write them."

"And anybody could forge my printing," she concluded.

Thousands cheered the evangelist throughout the service, in which she compared the No-Man's Land of the World War with circumstances existing today in what she termed a war between God and the devil.

Deaf Hear Instantly

Amazing Invention Brings Immediate Relief to Those Who Are Deaf

A wonderful device which enables the hard of hearing to hear all sounds as clearly and distinctly as a child, has been perfected by the Dictograph Products Corporation, Suite 2976 Security Building, 510 South Spring Street, Los Angeles, Calif. There is no waiting, no delay—but quick, positive, instantaneous results—you hear instantly. So positive are the makers that everyone who is hard of hearing will be amazed and delighted with this remarkable device, the famous Acousticon, that they are offering to send it absolutely free on trial. ARBITRATION OF STRIKE DECRIED

Legion Proposal Regretted at Bay City

Industrial Head Declares Murder Not Issue

Rioting Called Challenge of Anarchists

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—In answer to the proposal of Golden Gate Post, No. 40, American Legion, that arbitration of the present carpenters' strike situation in San Francisco be submitted to the Legion's county council, Albert E. Boynton, managing director of the Industrial Association, today declared arbitration impossible.

Characterizing the adoption of the Post's resolution as "hasty and ill-considered action," Boynton issued a statement in which it is set forth that the only strike issue is the flat refusal of union carpenters to allow nonunion men to work on the same jobs with them in the Bay region.

The strike order of March 23, 1926, by the Bay District Council of Carpenters is quoted by Boynton for this refusal:

"You are hereby notified that on and after that date (April 1, 1926,) nonunion carpenters cannot work on the same job in this district with carpenters holding membership in the United Brotherhood of Carpenters' and Joiners of America."

REGRETS PROPOSAL

Expressing regret over the adoption of the resolution by Post No. 40, Boynton continued:

"That issue, denying as it does the guarantees of the Constitution of the United States and the State of California, cannot be arbitrated and the last body to suggest it should be the American Legion."

Boynton's statement set forth that violence and murder are not issues in the carpenters' strike. Attacks upon 300 citizens and the murder of C. W. Campbell, for which eight officers and members of local carpenters' unions are now under indictment, while more than sixty others await trial on felony charges, he declared, constitute not a strike issue but a challenge of anarchy against government.

Boynton charged that the Legion Post's assumption of strike violences on the part of the Industrial Association is utterly false. He cited as his authority the official records of the police department and courts.

AFFIDIVITS BOUGHT

"These charges are based on repudiated affidavits," Boynton declared, "bought and paid for by private detectives in the employ of union labor leaders who know full well their falsity but use them to poison public opinion, carefully avoiding the proper legal procedure which they would be quick to invoke were the charges true or valid."

The statement concluded with regrets that Golden Gate Post was "misled into an untenable position by a prejudiced group who would not hesitate to sacrifice the honor of the American Legion to accomplish an un-American purpose."

Service of injunction writs granted on Wednesday by Judge Walter E. Hersinger restraining the carpenters' unions and their members from violence and sabotage in connection with the strike was continued throughout today by the Industrial Association.

Writs served on Archibald J. Mooney, vice-president of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, and seven others accused of the slaying of C. W. Campbell, American-plan carpenter, drew a laugh from the octet under indictment in the County Jail today.

The body of Campbell, who died as the result of an attack by thugs at a construction job a week ago, was buried today under the auspices of the Industrial Association.

Autoist Burns to Death Under Overturned Car

STOCKTON, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—With spectators looking on, helpless to render aid, K. M. Aasoad of San Francisco, maintenance man for the California Automobile Association, burned to death beneath his overturned and flaming automobile, between Angels Camp and San Andreas late yesterday afternoon. A broken wishbone caused the machine to upset. Flames immediately began to consume the machine and Prof. Smith, Joseph Broglia, Clarence Johnson and others who rushed to the scene, were unable to get near enough to release Aasoad, who was pinned beneath the car.

An inquest was conducted last night, the jury returning a verdict of accidental death. Aasoad was placing road signs for the association.

Only Two Rebel Bands Continue Mexican Forays

MEXICO CITY Oct. 30. (AP)—Quiet prevails in most of Mexico, with only two rebel groups operating, the War Department announces.

These groups are headed by Juan Galindo, in Vera Cruz State and Gen. Gallegos in Durango. All the others have unconditionally surrendered.

The Yaqui Indian revolt in Sonora State is characterized as purely a local problem.

Galindo is head of the rebels who, on May 18, last, captured the American mining engineer, Conrad C. Braden and Jules Gallagher. Braden was tortured to force him to write a note asking that $6000 be sent as ransom. The men were rescued by Mexican troops, May 27.

TWO HURT IN TRAIN MISHAP

PUEBLO (Colo.) Oct. 30. (AP)—Two express messengers were injured when two baggage cars, a day coach and the head trucks of a Pullman car of Denver and Rio Grande Western passenger train No. 16, eastbound, were derailed twenty-two miles west of Canon City today.

STRATON GOES UPON WARPATH

Fundamentalist Flays Fosdick and Rockefeller

Asserts Pastor Notorious for Modernism

Old-Fashioned Religious Spirit Urged

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (AP)—Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton, fundamentalist pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, is at odds with the Southern New York Baptist Association, and other northern Baptist organizations.

In making the announcement of his congregation's independence before a large audience at his church, Dr. Straton assailed "a certain wealthy layman" and his "brilliant but erratic young modernist pastor." His audience understood him to mean John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, who was under fire as a modernist when he filled a Presbyterian pulpit here.

Answering inquiries as to whether he and Miss Uldine Utley, child evangelist who has been preaching in Dr. Straton's church, had accepted the Pentecostal doctrine or belief in ordination of pastors by the Holy Spirit, Dr. Straton said:

"It is notorious now that our New York Baptist City Mission Society, our Southern New York Baptist Association, which now, alas, is only the City Mission Society under another head, are both under the direct, overshadowing influence of one very wealthy Baptist layman and a certain brilliant but erratic young modernist preacher, who is this wealthy layman's pastor and under the influence of this layman.

"A dozen years ago this wealthy young layman, who is altogether delightful personally, although altogether un-Baptistic and heretical spiritually, delivered an address before our New York Baptist Social Union Association in which he explicitly and deliberately repudiated the greatest of our Baptist principles, even declaring his repudiation of baptism by immersion, which custom, of course, flows out of our larger principle of the binding authority of the Bible as the inspired word of God and the necessity of obedience to both the example and command of Jesus Christ."

Dr. Straton appealed to other Baptist churches in the New York region to join in "an old-fashioned spirit of Baptist independence."

Mexico Judge in Union Dispute to be Transferred

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 30. (AP)—District Judge Ricardo Couto, storm center of a controversy between the Supreme Court and the Regional Confederation of Labor, dominant workers' organization, will be transferred to Morelia from Mexico City, it is announced.

Threatening the alternative of a general strike, the union body about two weeks ago demanded the dismissal of Judge Couto after he had in several cases, granted injunctions sought by employers declaring certain local strikes illegal. The Supreme Court refused the demand, but has now decided to transfer the judge from the Federal district.

BRITISH REDUCE RUBBER EXPORT

Rise in Price Depends on American Demand

New Regulation to Go in Effect Tomorrow

Defensive Measure Urged in United States

LONDON, Oct. 30. (AP)—New rubber regulations will become operative Monday when the percentage which may be exported from Ceylon and Malaya for the ensuing quarter will be reduced from 100 to 80 per cent on the standard of production. This was because the average price of rubber for the current quarter was below 21d.

The question of the disposal of the unused export coupons, representing from 30,000 to 40,000 tons, has not been decided by the Colonial Office but announcement on this subject is expected soon. There had been apprehension that the Colonial office might cancel these unused export coupons as a further measure of restriction.

The new basis on which standards for calculating restrictions will be fixed for the new year beginning Monday probably also will be announced immediately the regulations go into effect. Singapore advices already have foreshadowed that the existing basis of 400 pounds per acre for the highest yielding estates would be reduced to 300.

The market view of the new regulations is that they aim at maintaining the price of rubber between 21 and 24d, and their effect on prices the past week has been almost negligible. But should the reduction of 300 be confirmed officially a rise in prices is expected, provided the demand from the United States remains regular.

A reduction to 80 per cent in the amount of rubber which may be exported at a minimum rate of duty from Ceylon and Malaya was expected by rubber importers because the trend of prices during the current quarter has kept rubber below the average of 21 pence, necessary to maintain 100 per cent exportation under the Stevenson scheme of restriction.

Only a week ago the colonial office decided that the Stevenson scheme would continue for at least another year, but under new regulations. These regulations go into effect on November 1 and will not be changed until November, 1927.

Under the revised regulations the amount of rubber to be permitted export at the minimum rate of duty would fluctuate with the price in London. If the average price is under 21, but not under 18 pence per pound during any quarter, the exportable percentage of standard production for the ensuing quarter at a minimum rate of duty, would be reduced by 10. If, however, the reduction thus affected is a reduction from the figure of 100 per cent, the reduced percentage for the ensuing quarter would be 80. This was the case in the reduction ordered today by the colonial office.

MAY BE INCREASED

Other paragraphs of the new regulations provided for an increase in the percentage of exportable rubber if the average price went above 21 pence. In no case, the regulation stated, was the percentage to be increased above 100 or decreased below 60.

The average price of rubber for the current quarter up to the 20th inst. was 20.149 pence which made it apparent that the average for the entire quarter was likely to fall below 21 pence and thus cause a reduction in the export of rubber.

On July 30 the Colonial Office established the 100 per cent production for the quarter beginning August 1, when it was found that the average price of rubber for the preceding quarter was just one-thousandth of a pence over the minimum of 21 pence.

OTHER PRICES RISE

Only recently E. G. Holt, chief of the rubber division of the Department of Commerce at Washington, reported that because of the success of the Stevenson restriction scheme in keeping up the price of rubber, foreign governments have sought to raise the price of other commodities, many of which are essential to American industrial activities. These included long-staple cotton, camphor, coffee, iodine, nitrates, potash, mercury and sisal.

As a defensive measure it was recommended that the fullest efficiency be obtained from the commodities purchased through the longer use of the articles, their repair and greater care.

CUT EXPECTED AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. (AP)—Commerce Department officials said today that the cut in British rubber shipments had been generally anticipated in the American rubber trade.

More important, however, is the question as to how much the rubber is considered a 100 per cent standard production.

When the restriction scheme was promulgated first the British fixed the figure of 294,000 tons as the normal standard annual output from their plantation. By various changes in plantation ratings the standard has been raised until the American observers consider that it is somewhere between 310,000 tons and 325,000 tons. A revision of these figures is now under way and will take effect after November 1 and it is from this new total that the effect of the new 20 per cent restriction will be calculated.

Rubber went to $1 per pound when the control first got into action, but following a campaign in the rubber trade of the United States, led by Secretary Hoover, and aimed at economies in rubber utilization, the price fell again.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAIMED

Coolidge Calls on Nation to Give Praise to Almighty for Year of Favored Prosperity

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. (AP)—In a Thanksgiving proclamation today President Coolidge asked the nation to make November 25 a day of praise to God for a year in which the United States had been "blessed among the nations of the earth."

The full text follows:

By the President of the United States of America.

A proclamation:

As a nation and as individuals we have passed another twelve months in the favor of the Almighty. He has smiled upon our fields and they have brought forth plentifully; business has prospered; industries have flourished, and labor has been well employed. While sections of our country have been visited by disaster, we have been spared any great national calamity or pestilential visitation. We are blessed among the nations of the earth.

Our moral and spiritual life has kept measure with our material prosperity. We are not unmindful of the gratitude we owe to God for His watchful care which has pointed out to us the ways of peace and happiness; we should not fail in our acknowledgment of His divine favor which has bestowed upon us so many blessings. Neither should we be forgetful of those among us who, through stress of circumstances, are less fortunately placed, but by deeds of charity make our acknowledgment more acceptable in His sight.

Wherefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby set apart Thursday, the twenty-fifth day of November, next, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer and I recommend that on that day the people shall cease from their daily work, and in their homes or in their accustomed places of worship, devoutly give thanks to the Almighty for the many and great blessings they have received, and seek His guidance that through good deeds and brotherly love they may deserve a continuance of His favor.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the United States.

Done at the city of Washington, this thirtieth day of October, in the year of our Lord 1926, and of the independence of the United States, the one hundred and fifty-first.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

By the President:
Joseph C. Grew, Acting Secretary of State.

ATHEISTS PROTEST RELIGIOUS MESSAGE

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (AP)—A telegram asking him to refrain from issuing a Thanksgiving proclamation on the ground that it is contrary to the secular principles of the Constitution has been sent President Coolidge by the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, it was announced today.

The telegram said in part: "The atheists of America call upon you to return to the precedent established by Thomas Jefferson, who refused to issue a single religious proclamation. When asked his reasons, Jefferson said 'I consider the President as interdicted by the Constitution from meddling with religious institutions, their doctrines, discipline or exercises.'"

EX-SCREEN STAR SAILS FOR ITALY

Mary Miles Minter Goes "to Live Down Scandal of Taylor Death"

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—For the first time since the murder of William Desmond Taylor, film director in Hollywood, four years ago, Mary Miles Minter today partly broke her silence, consented to talk and be photographed aboard the Lloyd Sabaudo liner Conte Rosso, on which she sailed for Genoa and Naples.

Miss Minter is traveling under the name of Juliet K. Reilly. She occupies a stateroom with Miss Margaret McCarthy, a friend.

When Miss Minter was asked why she was traveling under a name other than that by which she is generally known, Dorothy Manners, an actress friend, said that the once well-known screen actress is using the name "in an endeavor to live down the scandal surrounding the murder of William Desmond Taylor."

"How long do you expect to stay abroad?" Miss Minter was asked.

"I wish I could stay away forever," she replied.

In reply to several questions regarding her plans Miss Minter said: "When a person doesn't want to talk she should use one word in replying to all questions. The word I have selecting is 'cockroach.'" Then followed the series of "cockroach" answers.

Miss Minter admitted she did not know whether she is going back into pictures. "It's on the knees of the gods," she said.

Chief Launches Police Shake-up

VICE SQUAD MEN GET NEW POSTS

Unit Abolished and Detail Scattered to Divisions

Narcotic Attachment Sent to Detective Department

Capt. Gifford Given Place in Traffic Bureau

In the most far-reaching police shake-up yet undertaken by his administration, Chief of Police Davis yesterday abolished the vice squad as a centralized organization, transferred its members to precincts to work as divisional squadrons in uniform and announced that hereafter the commander of each police division will be held responsible for conditions in his district. The vice squad had worked from Central Division, operating in all parts of the city.

A short time before announcing this action, Chief Davis prefaced it by issuing a warning to all high officers in all departments that their conduct is to be closely watched and if they are found incapable of meeting their duties they will be called before the Police Commission "to determine their fitness to continue in the department."

Capt. Longuevan, head of the vice squad, was transferred by the order to the intelligence bureau. The narcotic squad, which has been operating as part of the vice squad under Sergt. Littlejohn, is transferred to the detective bureau. Detective Lieutenant Hoy of the vice squad is transferred to the intelligence bureau with his chif.

GIFFORD TRANSFERRED

Capt. A. W. Gifford, commander of Central Division, is transferred to the traffic division, where he will become field inspector, and Capt. J. B. Lyons is transferred from the administrative bureau to Central Division to take his place.

Chief Davis denied that the far-reaching order has any political significance and said it was for the "good of the service."

Commenting upon the order, Chief Davis stated that he hoped to put a stop to "buck-passing" by holding each division commander responsible for every class of crime committed in his division.

Carrying out of such an order, it is explained, will mean that each division commander will be held responsible for the activities of the vice squads in his division. Heretofore, and as a result of the complete reorganization of the police department made by Chief Vollmer of Berkeley during his year's sojourn as head of the local force, these squads were directly under the head of the vice division, which has been considered separate from any of the other police divisions.

EMERGENCY SQUAD DISBANDED

Comments heard around police headquarters as a result of the order indicated that there is likely to be plenty of official kindling to add to the Police Commission's wood pile in the near future.

At the same time Chief Davis announced the "breaking up" of the emergency squad, a detail of thirty men, picked for their marksmanship and good records, for the especial purpose of patrolling those districts in which an unusual amount of violent crime has been reported. These men, according to the Chief's order have been directed to return to the various divisions to which they were formerly connected.

This move, the Chief said, is in accordance with his policy of "tightening up" the department, as the emergency squad was a mobile squad under the direction of an acting captain of police and not connected with any particular division.

One of the most significant statements in the order issued by the Chief was; "Department heads are particularly admonished that this will be a test of their metal, and the observation in this regard will mean either their retention or discharge from service. Department heads who cannot meet their duties immediately will be brought before the Police Commission to determine their fitness to continue in the department."

COMMANDERS RESPONSIBLE

The rest of the order addressed to division commanders and department heads, follows:

"Pursuant to a policy of reorganization, your attention is called to the fact that in future all division commanders will be held strictly responsible for enforcement of all laws and the maintenance of order in their respective divisions.

"The police department is endeavoring to concentrate all its energy not only to suppress crime but equally as well to prevent it. To accomplish this result complete co-operation and efficient co-ordination of its man power is vitally essential.

"Invariably the men in charge of the various departments and divisions have risen from the ranks by reason of industry, application and ability. The field of police work lends itself admirably to considerable initiative and ability. To fully bring out these qualities and afford the community the benefit of them, requires the best in every man, which naturally embraces honest effort, study and the ability to be equal to every occasion. The only process tried and found capable of accomplishing such result, is that of individual responsibility. There is no serious duty without correspondingly exacting responsibility.

"With the commander of each division rests the responsibility to observe and execute faithfully and effectively not only the duties that devolve upon him, but equally as well, those matters which will be especially detailed to him. It is only by such process that the man power of the department will be developed and at the same time, determine what departments are weak as a consequence of deficient management.

"It is aimed, as far as humanly possible, to eliminate inefficiency, repetition and duplication which results in a waste of time and a great loss of man power. Both man power and time must be conserved to produce a maximum service out of the equipment available to us. The solution of the problem in no small measure depends upon individual responsibility, the manner in which it is met as well as the manner in which it is disposed of. We must be mindful that individual responsibility is not divided, shared or passed, it primarily rests with the individual upon whom it devolves.

[Signed]

"JAMES E. DAVIS,
Chief of Police."

Cake Presented to Mayor Cryer and Chief Davis

Chief of Police James E. Davis and Mayor Cryer are a pair of cake-eaters—not in the popular sense of the term, but literally. Yesterday, each was presented with a prize-winning cake that had been baked by two members of the Los Angeles chapter of the Girl Scouts of America. The two works of culinary art had been adjudged the most excellent of 100 that were entered in a cake-baking contest conducted by the local chapter as part of its National Cheer Week program.

Neither recipient wasted any time in cutting his cake and staging an impromptu feast. Naturally, both are keen for bigger and better Cheer Weeks.

Clara Elizabeth Miller baked Mayor Cryer's cake, while Isabelle Kots was the author of the other.

The committee presenting the cakes included Gladys G. Bruner, director of the Los Angeles chapter; Virginia Gargan, Emily Marr and Gertrude Grossman.

HUGE SAVING POSSIBLE IN DAM WORK

Engineer Asserts Use of Local Materials Will Cut Costs by $1,200,000

Crushed rock and gravel can be produced at the site of the San Gabriel dam for 35 to 45 cents a ton, while the Union Rock and Gravel Company charges 85 to 95 cents a ton f.o.b. its plant at Azusa, eleven miles down the canyon, Chief Engineer Reagan of the county flood-control district declared yesterday in a communication to The Times. The letter was in answer, Mr. Reagan said, to letters which have been published in the First Supervisorial District by George A. Rogers, head of the Union Rock and Gravel Company, indicating his readiness to deliver the material at the dam site for $4,000,000, which works out to 67 cents a ton. Reagan declares the use of local materials will save $1,200,000 at this price.

The haul up the canyon, over a railroad with many 24 per cent curves and 3 per cent grades, would be a very serious business and of doubtful feasibility, Reagan declares. "The demands upon it would make it the most congested railroad in the country if it could be operated at all under these conditions," the engineer declared.

When bids are called for, Reagan said, the complaining company and others will have an opportunity to compete with the local material.

Grasshoppers have done such great damage in Guatemala that they are now considered to be a serious menace.

journey, which began last June and has included not only a tour of the principal countries of Europe, but also visits in Canada and Mexico, in addition to sundry trips to different eastern cities following the international contest in Washington.

Upon reaching home he discovered a large stack of letters and telegrams from various persons and organizations in Los Angeles and other places in Southern California, congratulating him and asking him to make speeches.

His first speaking engagement will be this evening at 7:30 o'clock, when he will deliver the oration on "The Constitution," which won him his laurels, at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Jefferson avenue and Third street, Los Angeles. He will be introduced at this meeting by Prof. William A. Hensey, Hollywood High School debating coach, to whose training Wenig owes much of his success.

Tomorrow at 11 a.m. he will be honored at a special assembly at Memorial Auditorium of Hollywood High School. This function will be in the nature of a reception, when the orator, who was graduated from Hollywood last June just before going to Europe, will be greeted not only by his erstwhile schoolmates, but also by a large number of distinguished citizens who have been interested in the young man's oratorical triumphs.

The welcome extended will include not only that of Hollywood High School, but that of all other high schools in Los Angeles, which will be represented by the presidents of their respective student bodies. There also will be representatives of the Chamber of Commerce and of different women's clubs and other organizations. Among the speakers will be Superintendent Dorsey and President Odell of the Board of Education. The function will close with a luncheon to be given at the high school at noon.

SECOND TRIUMPH

Wenig's arrival in Los Angeles was his second triumphal homecoming. The first was last June when he arrived from Washington after being awarded the first place at the national finals of the American section of the oratorical contest, dealing with government, which this year was conducted for the first time on an international scale, under the auspices of a group of major American and foreign newspapers. In the American national finals, Wenig defeated six other champions, representing the flower of high-school oratory among approximately 1,800,000 students in all parts of the United States, who entered the 1926 contest.

His tour of Europe was a part of the reward gained by his prowess in the American contest, the first prize this year being a tour of Europe awarded to each of the seven contestants in the national finals. The party of seven finalists, conducted by Randolph Leigh, national director of the contest, sailed from New York July 3, last, and visited France, Germany, Italy, England, Switzerland, and Holland.

INTERNATIONAL CONTEST

The countries, aside from the United States, taking part in the international contest, were England, France, Canada and Mexico, and at the close of the tour of the American finalists, the five orators receiving the highest awards in the respective participating countries met in the forensic arena in the international contest in Washington on the 15th inst., where Wenig was awarded the international championship and as such received a handsome cup from President Coolidge. This victory represented the highest place in an oratorical competition entered by an aggregate number of contestants in the five participating countries of some 2,500,000 high-school pupils.

Young Wenig expects to enter college about the first of the coming year, his ambition being to become a lawyer.

"I have not as yet decided what institution I will enter, but it will be in California," he said.

In the meantime, aside from speaking engagements, he will devote himself to assisting in the extension of the Constitution Club, an organization formed by the finalists in the National Oratorical Contest on the Constitution in 1924. This organization, of which Wenig is now the president, is composed only of entrants in the contest who reached a place in the national finals.

"The plan at present is to form chapters of this organization in several of the larger cities throughout the country, the membership of these chapters to be composed of such contestants in any given section as attain distinction in the contest, though they may not attain the national finals," said Wenig. "The details have not as yet been worked out, but the plan is now in the process of being completed. It is believed that this organization will not only stimulate interest in future contests, but that it will develop an organization peculiarly prepared to defend the Constitution and to render aid in popularizing the country's fundamental law. It is probable that similar organizations also will be started in the other countries where the contest movement has gained a foothold."

EXPERIENCES ABROAD

The young man spoke entertainingly of his experiences abroad, where he delivered his oration on several occasions.

"In London I spent one evening with Anthony Asquith, the son of former Premier Asquith," he said.

"I liked Berlin very much because of the cleanliness everywhere in evidence and the orderly manner in which the city is laid out. In Italy one is everywhere reminded of Mussolini, whose silhouette is found on walls and columns all over the country. I believe I found my visit in Mexico City the most pleasant of the entire journey. The Mexicans are tremendously interested in the oratorical contest and arranged a meeting where the Mexican champion and I delivered our orations in the presence of an audience of nearly 5000.

"I found interest in Washington in the international contest even greater than that manifested earlier in the year in the national contest. The meeting took place in the Washington Auditorium and the audience attending must have numbered at least 8000. The novelty of listening to the exponents of five different forms of government made a powerful appeal and I believe the enthusiasm exceeded that of the national finals in June. The Mexican orator spoke in Spanish and the French representative in French, and the audience had been supplied with printed translations of the two addresses.

"I found the foreign orators fine fellows and became quite chummy with the Englishman. We discussed many questions of international policies and even touched on such subjects as the American Revolution, which we argued pro and con for hours on our way across the Atlantic. The experiences on this tour furnished marvelous lessons in internationalism."

Bride Refuses to Pay Husband's Cigarette Bill

Mrs. Louis Scherer may agree to a separation from her husband, but she certainly does not intend to pay his board bills and repay money he borrowed from his landlady for cigarettes and other items.

This is what Mrs. Scherer, a bride of seven weeks, declared yesterday when she obtained a complaint charging Mrs. Hermie Staples, the landlady, with larceny, according to Chief Investigator Vail of the City Prosecutor's office.

The marital bark of the Scherers came to grief when the groom and the landlady ejected the bride from the premises at 1709 South Flower street, according to the complaint.

The bride went to her mother's home in Alhambra, according to the representations made to the City Prosecutor, and when she later went back to get her trunks she was presented with a bill of $152 for board, a package of cigarettes the landlady bought for the husband and $62 Scherer is said to have borrowed from Mrs. Staples.

BAD BEHAVIOR DUE TO GLAND DISEASE, STATES SCIENTIST

"Through knowledge of the gland functions many defectives may be normalized," states Dr. Max G. Schlapp, director of Children's Court Clinic, New York City.

In his article appearing in The Journal of Heredity, among other highly interesting things, Dr. Schlapp states: ". . . endocrine maladjustments in the female parent may not only cause cell of the child to grow badly, but in addition often lay the foundation for future functional disorders. Hence mental defectives of either formative or functional types frequently are the off-spring of women suffering from slight or grave diseases of these all-important secretory (ductless) glands."

In his booklet, "The Prolongation of Human Efficiency," Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler, famous endocrinologist of Los Angeles and San Francisco, presents in an easily understood way why the dominating factor in human life is the endocrine chain (ductless glands).

Every man and every woman—those in a normal state of health equally with those in ill health—should acquaint themselves with what is being accomplished in extending the human life span by and through gland surgery. The Dr. Wheeler booklet may be had by calling at 3173 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, or will be mailed for 12c to cover cost. Dr. Wheeler may be consulted daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at this address.—[Advertisement.]

A Chance for California

By SAMUEL G. BLYTHE
Political Writer of The Saturday Evening Post

John B. Elliott

The United States Senate is an interesting and enduring institution said by its admirers, and its members, to be the greatest legislative forum in the world and by its detractors to be merely an opportunist political clearinghouse. It has been with us ever since our Government was organized and will be with us until that Government is disorganized. It is as permanent as we are and of vast consequence in our domestic affairs and in our international relations. Therefore, as no whole is stronger than its parts the character of the Senate, and the membership of it, should be one of the greatest of American concerns.

Some Americans know the Senate legislatively, some know it politically, some know it in its other varying and various phases including the sociological, the psychological and the common and crass manifestations of it. However, to most Americans the Senate is a gathering of ninety-six men who do nothing much but talk, a political body that is partisan in its majority and minority demonstrations and is usually in disfavor with the people. Ordinarily, we take out our interest in the Senate by cussing it, and let the politicians decide who shall go to it and what those who do go to it shall do after they get there.

Opportunity for People of State to do Something for the Senate

Occasionally, there comes an opportunity to the people of a State to do something for the Senate and themselves in the way of obtaining Senatorial representations that will be intelligent, useful, of high character and of undoubted integrity, and the people of California have such an opportunity this year. They have it in their power to send a Californian to the Senate, for the six years beginning on March 4th, next, who has every attribute for able, dignified, loyal and understanding Senatorial service to California, and who combines with that a real Americanism, a broad knowledge of national and international affairs, a sturdy and elevated patriotism, and a personal repute of the highest character.

I refer to John B. Elliott of Los Angeles, the progressive candidate of the Democratic and Prohibition parties for United States Senator, and the reason I so refer to him is two-fold: First, because I know the United States Senate and, second, because I know John B. Elliott. I know the United States Senate thoroughly. I have watched it, studied it, examined into it, dug into the inner processes of it for some thirty years. In that thirty years I have known, some intimately, some not so intimately, but all Senatorially and politically and legislatively, a great many Senators. It would take an unnecessary count to determine just how many, but from the nineties of the previous century until the present time the understanding of Senators and the Senate has been one of my jobs as a newspaper correspondent at the Capital for the New York World, as the political writer for the Saturday Evening Post, and so on.

Kind of Senator Who is Most Useful to His State and to the Country

As I say, my acquaintance with the Senate has been comprehensive, detailed, intimate. I know how it does things, why it does things, all the wherefores of its operations, decisions, actions and manifestations. Knowing these things I, also, have a good general knowledge of the sort of a Senator who is most useful to his State and to his country. I have watched them come and go by the score. I have seen them blow in, blow up and blow out. I have seen men on that floor who were scarcely fitted for membership in a county board of supervisors, and I have seen real statesmen there. And I understand their motives, methods and the machinery of them.

Therefore, with this understanding of the United States Senate, I very earnestly say to my fellow citizens of California that their interests and the interests of our State, and our country, will be best served if we elect John B. Elliott to the Senate in November. I have known Elliott well for twenty-five years, and have an enduring respect and admiration for his character, his quality of mind, and for his fitness for the place. He has lived in California for a quarter of a century, and he understands California, knows the needs of California at Washington, and, given the leverage of a Senatorship, has every qualification for being of the utmost service to the State and to the nation.

His acquaintance with California is comprehensive. It was gained as a newspaper man in Los Angeles, as the Los Angeles, Southern California and Southwestern representative of that greatest of newsgathering organizations, the Associated Press, and by an official and business life in the city of his residence. He was successful as a newspaper man. He was successful for eight years in the important office of Collector of Customs for the Los Angeles district, a Federal position wherein he won a first place as an administrator and executive, and where he gained an extensive knowledge of the Federal needs of the State. He has been successful in business since his retirement from Federal office.

John B. Elliott's View of National Problems Is Sane and Well-informed

More than that, his experience has been national. He was with the Associated Press in Washington for several years, in charge of an important branch of the work in the very Capitol building itself, and came constantly in contact with the members of the Senate and of the House of Representatives, gaining by this experience a comprehensive and exact knowledge of legislative procedures, processes and limitations that, as a Senator, would be of the utmost importance and advantage not only to California, but to his country as well. His knowledge of national affairs is wide and accurate. His view of national problems is sane and well-informed. His integrity of character is unassailable, and his ability is of the highest order.

California rarely has had such an opportunity—the opportunity of selecting for United States Senator a man who combines a wide, exact and sane conception of the economic, legislative, political, physical, financial and governmental needs of this State because of his long residence here and his active participation in State affairs and his intelligent conception of State requirements with an expert, well based, intimate knowledge of Washington affairs, and national affairs and international affairs.

No Waste of Fruitless Years Learning How to be Senator—He Knows How Now

John B. Elliott will not be obliged to spend several fruitless years learning how to be a Senator. He knows how now. This is a consideration of vital importance. Any Representative or Senator, understanding the mechanics of Congressional affairs, is of vastly more value to his constituents, as well as to his country, if he knows how to do things and how things are done than a wordy orator whose only conception of public service is to make resounding, and empty, speeches. His knowledge of Washington is not surpassed. Nor has any man a higher aspiration for the useful, patriotic and effective application of such knowledge.

He is in his forties, active, virile, of fine address and or impelling personality. He is diplomatic in his dealings with men, but firm in his adherence to the equities. He was born in Kansas, and comes of sturdy pioneer stock on his father's side and from the Virginia line of John Marshall, the great jurist, on his mother's. He is not a spread-eagle orator, but talks well and convincingly and with understanding of his subjects. He writes with clearness and facility. He is married, and has one son. His long residence in California, which culminated in a sweeping victory in the primaries over an exceptionally strong opponent, has made him well known to our people, and his candidacy extends to California a chance to secure Senatorial representation at Washington of the highest, most useful, and most creditable sort.

ARMISTICE DAY PLANS OUTLINED

Veterans of Many Wars Will Take Part

Gigantic Parade to be Held at Coliseum

Honor Division to Lead Marching Line

Led by a police escort and Grand Marshal George F. Hamilton and his staff, and with veterans of American wars marching behind the colors, the annual Armistice Day parade and review Thursday afternoon, November 11, in the Los Angeles Coliseum, is expected to be the largest and most spectacular that ever assembled in Los Angeles to commemorate the Allies' victory in the World War.

Each division commander will select his own staff, one member of which will be responsible for directing organizations of that division to assembly points. All organizations of the various divisions will form at points allocated to them at 1:45 o'clock on the afternoon of November 11. After the entrance into the Coliseum, the Grand Marshal and his staff will leave the procession and make their way to the stand from which they will review the assembled forces.

The First Division, which was the first American outfit to reach French soil in 1917, and which won undying glory in the Meuse-Argonne and around the town of Santigny, will meet at a banquet on Wednesday evening, November 10, in the banquet rooms of the Los Angeles City Club.

Medical officers, formerly of Camp Greenleaf, Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., will also observe the day on the evening of November 11, at the banquet in the City Club.

The parade order is as follows:

Formation to begin outside of Coliseum, Exposition Park, at 1:45 p.m. Thursday, November 11.

The organizations participating will assemble at places herein designated, reporting to division commander immediately on arrival.

Republican Victories in Congressional Elections Prophesied on Eve of Ballo

DEMOCRATS STILL ASPIRE TO GET SENATE CONTROL

Observers Throughout Nation Say G.O.P. Will Suffer Some Loss but Will Keep Upper Hand

election indications give them slight basis for their optimism.

In other States Democratic hopes have dwindled to the vanishing point. Illinois seems safe for the Republican ticket as do Ohio, Iowa, Idaho, Utah and California.

The outstanding aspect of the campaign, in the national sense, has been indifference, and the most frequent word appearing in reports sent into party headquarters in Washington, D. C., is "apathy." From State after State fair State come reports of decreases in registration, not only below 1924 but below the previous off-year, 1922. Whenever there is a fight at all, it is over local conditions, or local personalities. Many national Republican managers have a listless air of wishing it over, and merely a listless curiosity about the outcome. The Democratic leaders are only slightly less listless, although they have the stimulus of knowing all along that it was automatically certain the Democrats must make some gains, and the only question is how many.

There is no national campaign. There has been no crystalizing of issues from Washington. No vitalizing leadership has gone out either from President Coolidge or from any Democrat. About the only campaign incident that has had the dignity and scope of nationality has been the series of speeches Secretary of Commerce Hoover has delivered across the country from New York to California. They have been so universally well received as to suggest how readily the campaign could have been put on a national basis and a high basis. But one man delivering one speech in a State is not enough to lift the level of the whole State from local bickerings about local issues and local men.

CHIEF ISSUES

The main issues varying from State to State are prohibition, tariff and taxation, Ku Klux Klan, campaign expenditures and farm relief. The World Court is not being emphasized by either of the old parties, since both parties are about equally responsible for voting American adherence.

The wet-and-dry issue is a question of major proportions in such States as New York, Massachusetts, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Ohio and Nevada. In New York and Missouri the liquor issue is befuddled owing to the fact that in those States the candidates of the major parties are "wet"—in New York about equally so. In Missouri Senator Williams, the Republican nominee, may be just a shade dryer than is Representative Hawes, his Democratic opponent. But a magnifying glass is necessary to determine the difference. And in Maryland the situation is the same as in Missouri, with both candidates wet, but Senator Weller probably a little less moist.

On the other hand, in Massachusetts, where ex-Senator Walsh, the Democratic nominee, is avowedly wet, Senator Butler, the President's close friend, is listed as dry. Again, in Ohio, ex-Senator Pomerene is labeled by his friends "sanely wet," while Senator Willis is as dry as kindling wood. In passing it may also be noted that in Illinois, Mr. Smith, the Republican standard-bearer, is classed as a dry. On the other hand, George E. Brennan, the Democratic candidate, is wet and proud of it. In Pennsylvania William B. Wilson is dry, while William S. Vare, the Republican candidate, is as wet as any of the seven seas.

The drys assert there is no danger of their losing many seats in either branch of Congress and this the wets privately admit is the fact of the situation. What they expect to do, say the wets, is to cut down the dry lead, and they have, according to advices from the doubtful States, the best chance they have had in years to do this.

The issue of tax reduction was injected into the campaign by the Democrats through Senator Simmons, senior Democratic member of the Senate Committee on Finance, and Representative Oldfield of the House Committee on Ways and Means, and also chairman of the Democratic National Congressional Committee, but apparently failed to take hold. Mr. Simmons, who shares with Senator Underwood the distinction of framing the last Democratic tariff law, insists that a cut of as much as $500,000,000 in Federal taxes is possible and should be enacted at the short session of this Congress, and, furthermore, be made retroactive so as to apply to 1926 incomes. The administration, however, does not see the situation in the same way. The President, Secretary Mellon and other responsible Republican leaders are a unit in pronouncing the Democratic proposition out of the question at this time.

FARM RELIEF

On the question of farm relief, the lines will remain drawn about the same as in the present Congress in which the McNary-Haugen bill, projected by the corn belt, was beaten by the eastern Republicans and southern Democrats, the Fess bill favored by the administration was blocked by the western Republicans and southern Democrats and the Democratic export corporation measure was rejected by the Republicans unanimously.

On the question of the tariff the outstanding development is the failure of the Democrats to breathe new life into the old issue. Not only have the Republicans in the great agricultural empire of the Middle West and Far West failed to rise in revolt against protection, but the Democratic party and candidates have been compelled by local exigencies to make concessions to the sentiment favoring the protective tariff. The Democratic platform in Massachusetts, for example, boldly indorsed protection of Massachusetts industries and former Senator Walsh, Democratic nominee for the Senate, advocated protection measured by the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad, which is pure Republican doctrine; so, in Ohio, former Senator Pomerene, Democratic nominee for the Senate, gave assurance that no vote of his would impair the protection of Ohio industries. Altogether, this canvass leaves the Democratic stand on the tariff appreciably weakened.

The Pennsylvania and Illinois Republican primary campaign-fund disclosures furnished a juicy theme for Democratic arraignment of the Republicans, but do not appear to constitute an important factor in determining whether the Republicans or the Democrats shall control the Senate. The Democrats have sought to embarrass Republican candidates for Senator by demanding that they state whether they will or will not vote to seat Smith of Illinois and Vare of Pennsylvania. Nearly all these Republican candidates have replied that they would not decide until after hearing the evidence. There is no indication anywhere that any candidate is going to be defeated because of that answer.

Following is an outline of the political situation in the various States as presented by Times correspondents.

NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—The most interesting Senatorial and gubernatorial races of them all are taking place in New York. Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., is having a man-sized fight on his hands to retain his seat against the candidacy of Justice Robert F. Wagner. With Butler of Massachusetts, Wadsworth is regarded as a most important administration man and should either or both of them be defeated, the consequences to Mr. Coolidge's third-term chances would be almost fatal.

Again will Gov. Al Smith, for all of his vast popularity, be able to prevail against Ogden L. Mills, Republican member of the lower house? If not, the Tammanyites' Presidential aspirations in 1928 will be futile. Both Mills and Wagner are thoroughly capable men; both are worthy opponents for the regnant favorites. The campaigning has been the most vigorous New York State has seen in years. The issues, however, have been vague. All are wet. All favor the World Court. Little has been said about the tariff.

In spite of plenty of ground to believe and predict otherwise, the odds seem to favor Wadsworth and Smith.

PENNSYLVANIA

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—William S. Vare will be elected United States Senator. When the Republican primary expenditures were made public, there was some hope among the Democrats that William B. Wilson, a former member of Woodrow Wilson's Cabinet, would receive enough disaffected Republican votes to gain the Senatorship, but that hope has largely vanished. Vare stands practically certain to present his credentials to the Senate, whether he is seated or not. Wilson has been making capital of Vare's expense account and the wet and dry issue. He has union labor and drys behind him. He will get numerous dry Republican votes and lose numerous dry Democratic votes.

Feeling against prohibition is running high in some sections of the East. That is fortunate for Vare. For it is generally granted that Wilson is the abler candidate.

It is Wilson's misfortune that Pennsylvania is so topheavily Republican and his opponent's expenditure of over $600,000 in the primary is not horrendous enough to secure a Democratic victory.

MARYLAND

BALTIMORE, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—No administration Senator up for re-election has a harder fight on his hands than Maryland's senior member of the upper house of Congress, Ovington E. Weller. Millard E. Tydings is the Democratic candidate. Weller is on the opposing ticket to Gov. Albert Ritchie, also up to succeed himself, who is personally so popular that he is expected to win quite handily and, therefore, it is the belief that Ritchie will carry Tydings along with him. Maryland is, for that reason, considered a doubtful State.

The wet and dry issue is not one of importance in this State. Everybody is wet including Senator Weller, who, though he has backing of the drys, took a political expediency stand the first of this month against the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act.

While the Republicans are not by any means conceding the election to the Democrats, those who know the State thoroughly believe that Tydings has a splendid chance of being carried to victory through the popularity of Gov. Ritchie.

MASSACHUSETTS

BOSTON, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—As nearly as an observer can fathom the political mind of the people of this State, the general disposition seems to be that Senator William M. Butler will be returned to the Senate as an earnest of the continued good faith of his own people in President Coolidge.

Senator Butler is the only candidate seeking re-election to the Senate whom the President has openly indorsed.

Former Senator David I. Walsh, however, has been making a vigorous campaign, supported by the wet element, which is large in this State, and making the most of slack conditions in some of the industries of New England. The margin that will separate the two when the votes are counted is not expected to be large. The Democrats are freely predicting victory for Walsh.

There is expected to be no marked changes in the Lower House alignment.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

CONCORD (N. H.) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Senator George H. Moses expects no trouble is winning Tuesday's election, and all the indications that are available bear him out. His Democratic opponent, Robert C. Murchie, has put up a spirited campaign, but has not been able to dent the normal Republican strength, and Senator Moses's own large personal following. It will be a Republican victory throughout the State.

CONNECTICUT

HARTFORD, Oct. 30. (Exclusive) Senator Hiram Bingham will be elected Tuesday by an overwhelming majority, according to best information available as the campaign closes. Rollin U. Tyler, Democrat, has made no headway in his canvass. A solid Republican delegation will be returned, all present Congressmen seeking re-election.

OHIO

COLUMBUS, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—The Buckeye State's next delegation in the House of Representatives, headed by Speaker Nicholas Longworth, will be again overwhelmingly Republican. But the supporters of Senator Frank B. Willis are not so optimistic over his chances for re-election, although the odds are in his favor. Powerful union-labor leaders, business men and others, are opposing his candidacy. The campaign of Atlee T. Pomerene, Democratic Senatorial candidate, on the other hand has gathered some strength.

Pomerene, because of his reputed liberal views on prohibition, may carry Cincinnati, Cleveland and other large cities, but the rural districts are expected to beat him.

Gov. A. V. Donahey, Democrat, running for a third term, is facing his first real vote-getting test since he was elected Governor. Myers Y. Cooper, Cincinnati, realty millionaire, the Republican candidate, is admitted to be the strongest candidate Donahey ever has faced. Cooper will carry Cincinnati and Cleveland, and probably Toledo and Dayton, and is strong in the rural districts because of his record as president of the Ohio Council of Churches and president of the State Fair Board.

INDIANA

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—The entire Indiana delegation to Congress, consisting of two Senators and thirteen Representatives, will be chosen at the polls Tuesday. At present the Republicans hold all seats except three in the lower house. Although sometime ago the re-election of Senators James E. Watson and Arthur Robinson, the latter an appointee of Gov. Ed Jackson, was taken for granted, the possibility of a Democratic victory is now being given credence. The opponent of Senator Watson is Albert Stump, formerly a member of the lower house of Congress. Mr. Stump is an Indianapolis attorney, is bone dry and has a most charming personality. He has visited every corner of the State, speaking and making friends. Evans Woolen, opposing Robinson, is a man of a type unusual to present-day politics, being president of one of Indiana's largest banks, yet a liberal on most economic and political subjects. He appeals more to the conservative electorate, especially to the business man, than does Robinson.

The Republican leaders are not so greatly disturbed by the recent revelations about the Ku Klux Klan, because much of that was already known within the State; what they do fear is the best Democratic State organization in the history of the Hoosier State, under Earl Peters, State chairman. The Indiana Democracy this year is a fighting, harmonious, cohesive whole, supporting two high-class, able leaders in Stump and Woolen. For this reason the State is considered doubtful.

ILLINOIS

CHICAGO, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Illinois will choose one Senator, and elect twenty-seven Representatives Tuesday. The candidates for Senator are Frank L. Smith, Republican; Hugh Magill, Independent, and George E. Brennan, Democrat, boss of Chicago and oceanically wet. Normally to think of a Democratic Senator from Illinois is fantastic. To think of the Democratic boss of Chicago, Brennan, becoming Senator from Illinois, would be even more fantastic. But developments that have occurred within the past few days are supposed to favor Brennan. Brennan's most conspicuous advantage is the presence of an independent candidate, Hugh Magill. Many Republicans will either vote for Magill or else stay at home, because they feel outraged at the fact that Smith, while acting as Public Utility Commissioner, received campaign contributions from three public utility heads.

Some Republican wets will vote for Brennan because Brennan stands, next to Gov. Smith of New York as the leading wet of the country. In spite of these and other conditions, the strong judgment of disinterested political observers is that Smith will win. Many Democrats will refrain from voting for Brennan because he is wet. Many other Democrats will refrain from voting for him becasue of their conception of him as head of the Democratic Tammany in Chicago. Yet other Democrats will refrain from voting for Brennan because of the specific charge that he is as much tarred with campaign contributions from the head of a public utility corporation as Smith. These groups of disaffected Democrats will compose a large majority of the party in the rural sections of the State. Everything, therefore, points to a victory for Frank L. Smith.

KENTUCKY

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Results of Tuesday's election in the Blue Grass State depend on the mountains. If the apathy that exists in that section can be quickened into a normal Republican majority, Senator Richard P. Ernst has a chance to edge by his Democratic opponent, Alben W. Barkley, now a Democratic member of the House.

Senator A. O. Stanley, Democrat, was beaten two years ago—the year of the Coolidge landslide—by internal dissension in his party between the liberals and the puritans. Stanley was a liberal. This year, however, Barkley is being supported by both elements of the party. He himself is a crusading reformer. It is expected that Barkley will sweep the lowlands, offsetting the advantage Ernst will gain in Louisville and the mountains, thus making the race a very close one. It may have no significance, but it is a curious fact that Kentucky has not re-elected a Senator of either party since 1888.

The complexion of the lower house delegation probably will be unchanged.

MISSOURI

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—The Republican leaders in this State think they have every reason to believe that the recent trend of developments favors the sitting Republican Senator, George H. Williams, as against the Democratic contender, Harry B. Hawes. Among other reasons, it is said that the intellectual quality of Williams's speeches, which in the beginning were supposed to handicap him as a campaigner, have actually commended him. The Democratic candidate, Hawes, has set his speeches in a key of humor, among other things, making fun of President Coolidge.

One thing is noticeable in particular—the apathetic disinterest in the race.

In the last primary the Republicans polled 37,585 more votes than their Democratic opponents, and the party is basing one of its chief hopes on that showing. It appears Williams will not get a normal Republican majority in St. Louis, but will do well among the small towns and the farmers. The situation is reversed with Hawes, who is too wet to suit the outlying districts as against Williams's slightly more temperate stand—the latter is more nearly dry. A close vote is assured.

COLORADO

DENVER, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—On Tuesday Colorado voters will select a United States Senator, four Congressmen, a Governor and a full set of State officials in addition to voting on eight amendments. Chief interest centers in the gubernatorial contest in which William F. (Billy) Adams, Democrat, is opposed by Oliver H. Shoup, Republican. On the outcome of this contest probably will depend the fate of the other candidates. No vital issue has been raised and the campaign has developed into one of the worst muddles in the history of the State. Each side is trying to show that the other has Klan backing, and both are accusing each other of having wet tendencies. As a matter of fact the Klan was put out of business in the primary and as an organization is backing no candidate.

THOUSAND SEEK CONGRESS SEAT

Almost Entire House Trying to Stage Comeback in Off Year

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. (AP)—Despite the avalanche of criticism aimed at Congress in recent years, seats in that body still are eagerly sought.

This "off-year" campaign find nearly 1100 men and women seeking the 472 places to be filled in the Seventieth Congress—435 in the House and 37 in the Senate.

Almost the entire House membership—496, to be exact—is trying to stage a comeback, while twenty-nine Senators would succeed themselves.

In one State—Illinois—there are ten candidates for a single Senate seat.

There are 933 candidates for the House, the Democrats having nearly 400 in the field, with 64 of them unopposed, and the Republicans having 372, of which 23 are without opposition.

ODDIE VICTORY FORECAST

Roy Baker Opposed by Old Residents in Nevada; Governor Race Regarded Doubtful

RENO, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Nevada voters will go to the polls Tuesday to elect a United States Senator, member of Congress at large, Governor and entire State ticket, as well as county and township officers.

Tasker L. Oddie, Republican incumbent, on the eve of election, appears to have the Senatorship in his pocket. He is being opposed by Raymond T. Baker, director of the United States Mint under President Wilson. There is a third candidate, George T. Bice, independent, but he will receive only a complimentary vote.

Oddie is seeking re-election on his record as a staunch administration man, while Baker has made his campaign on the basis of what he can do in Washington for Nevada, which he had declared no other man could do. Although a Democrat, he has declared himself for a protective tariff which would protect Nevada industries, but this declaration came too late, it is said. Although a native Nevadan, Baker has lived but little in this State, and this has resulted in a campaign against him on the part of old residents. He has been charged with having the backing of the Fleishhacker banking and steamship interests, and this, it appears, has hurt his candidacy. The Fleishhackers own the Floriston Pulp and Paper Mill at Floriston, just over the California line, the waste from which pollutes the Truckee River, and every fisherman in this section is fighting this pollution.

Samuel S. Arentz, Republican incumbent Congressman, is opposed by Maurice J. Sullivan, for twelve years Lieutenant-Governor, and Arentz also appears to have clinched his return to Congress.

In the gubernatorial contest J. G. Scrugham, Democrat, incumbent, is opposed by Fred B. Balzar, former State Senator and former Sheriff and Assessor of Mineral county. At the beginning of the campaign Scrugham appeared to have a "cinch," but Balzar in recent weeks has gained many friends and votes, and he now promises to make this a close contest. It would be difficult at this time to predict the outcome.

There is a contest for every other State office, Treasurer and Inspector of Mines, excepted.

Nevada will vote on the prohibition question also next Tuesday. One question proposes the approval of a legislative resolution of two years ago, calling for a Federal constitutional convention to take up the prohibition question, while the second question has to do with the modification of the original resolution which, it is thought, takes in too much territory in declaring prohibition a failure.

But there however, that the Demo- will go to the polls due to the bitter- Klan battle, and that the element will line up with the Republicans. Darnell, unsuccessful Democratic candidate for the Senatorial nomination aginst Elmer Thomas of Medicine Park, who has had Klan backing, has announced that he will throw his influence to Senator Harreld, the Republican seeking re-election. Darnell during the past several days also stumped the State for Senator Harreld. His influence is worth while in that he polled 75,000 votes against Thomas in the primaries. Jack Walton, bitterly anti-Klan, who ran third in the primaries with 63,000 votes, will cast his support to Harreld also. It is possible, therefore, that with this and other Democratic support Senator Harreld will pull through safely, although the State is normally Democratic by about 30,000 votes.

WETS AND DRYS LOSE LEADERS

Factions' House Champions Discarded by Vote at Primaries

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. (AP)—Both the drys and the wets go into Tuesday's election without their outstanding champions in the House running as candidates for re-election.

Representative Upshaw of Georgia, one of those who received "honorariums" from dry organizations for speeches, lost out in the Georgia Democratic primary to Lester J. Steele, another dry.

John Philip Hills of Maryland chose to try for a place in the Senate, only to be defeated in the Republican primary by Senator Weller.

HAYDEN PREDICTED WINNER

Rough Canvass Gives Arizona Democratic Senate Candidate Majority Over Cameron

PHOENIX, Oct. 29. (Exclusive)—Rough canvass of the State indicates that Carl Hayden, Democratic candidate for Senator, will have a majority of at least 4000 over Ralph H. Cameron, Republican incumbent. The latter is believed to have overdone a vigorous and apparently expensive campaign.

Hayden, present Representative, appears to have been relying upon the strength developed in his biennial elections since Statehood. The only doubt lies in charges that Cameron has formed a defensive alliance with Gov. Hunt, Democrat, who is credited with a personal strength of about 12,000 votes and who is declared jealous of Hayden. Opposition to Hayden in the primary election developed a strength of only 9000 votes, while Hayden received 36,700. At least 4000 Republicans are opposing Cameron, who is declared to have used his office for personal gain and to have ignored all party organization. Cameron is also being opposed by the Anti-Saloon League.

There appears little doubt concerning victory for Lewis Douglas mining man, Democratic candidate for Congress, though he also has opposition in his party similar to that known by Hayden. His opponent is Judge O. J. Baughn, a Phoenix attorney, formerly on the bench of Pinal county and a strong Cameron advocate.

The Governorship problem cannot be solved before election. Much of the overwhelming Democratic majority has been eaten away by the defection on interminate number of thousands of anti-Hunt Democrats, determined to end the Hunt regime in its fifth term.

That this will be strong enough to turn the side to E. S. Clark, the Republican candidate, is hoped but the situation is complicated by the supposition of a Cameron-Hunt combination. Supporters of Thomas Maddock in the Republican primary race against Clark openly have declared for Hunt. While the number of such Republicans insurgents is relatively small, it might be effective in a close contest. Hunt and Cameron have been associated so closely in attacks made upon the Salt River Valley Water Association that about 8500 Democratic farmer votes are declared to have been lost by the Governor.

IOWA

DES MOINES, Oct. 30. (Exclusive) Republican voters will elect Iowa's next Senator. Members of both parties admit that fact. But they differ on whether the Republican choice will be Smith W. Brookhart, Republican nominee, or Claude R. Porter, Democratic standard bearer. When Daniel Steck, Democrat, went to the Senate two years ago, it was Republican votes that sent him. Porter and his Democratic supporters are bidding openly in this campaign for those same Republican votes.

On the eve of the election, however, it appears that Brookhart will be the victor. When the Republican nominee was defeated two years ago, the barrage of Republican votes loosed against him was largely the result of his denunciation of President Coolidge and his campaigning with the La Follette organization. Brookhart, having made his peace with the party is now campaigning with the active support of the State Republican organization, which he lacked two years ago.

Porter will miss the soldier vote that Steck commanded through the Republican Service League. Iowa will be represented in its present Republican solidarity in the House, according to present indications. In only two districts is there a close race. Gilbert N. Haugen is seeking his fifteenth term and is meeting with stiff opposition from Frank E. Howard, Democrat, of the Fourth District. In the Eighth District, W. S. Bradley, Democrat, is making things warm for Representative Lloyd Thurston.

There is practically no doubt of the election of a straight Republican State ticket headed by Gov. John Hammil, who seeks re-election over Alex Miller, Democrat.

WISCONSIN

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 30. (Exclusive) The Ku Klux Klan, bond issues and beer, promise to bring out a big vote Tuesday, but no upsets are looked for with the prospect that all Republican nominees will ride through victorious.

Gov. John J. Blaine, who won the Republican nomination for United States Senator, is expected to have little difficulty in defeating the two independents who are dividing the opposition vote. Charles D. Ross will probably be second in the race with anti-Blaine progressive and conservative votes although the latter group will split up between him and J. N. Tittemore, Omro.

Present Congressmen, all of whom won their nomination fights, are slated to win the final contests.

A number of wet and dry organizations have launched extensive campaigns to get out a heavy vote on the beer referendum. Most predictions are that the pro-beer ballots will be in a majority.

WASHINGTON

SEATTLE, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Republican success in Washington in next Tuesday's election is forecast because of the popularity of the national administration. Quite aside from minor issues that have been injected into the campaign, the high regard in which President Coolidge is held by the Washington Republicans is expected to assure the re-election of Wesley L. Jones to the United States Senate over A. Scott Bullitt of Seattle, Democrat.

The Republicans also expect to return four of the five Washington representatives to the House and they have strong hopes of displacing Sam B. Hill of Waterville, the sole Democratic incumbent from this State. John F. Fancher of Spokane is Hill's Republican opponent and is said to be making serious inroads on Hill's strength and to have a fair chance of winning.

Of the other Republican Congressional candidates, the hardest fight is being put up against John F. Miller of Seattle as representative from the First District. Stephen F. Chadwick, Democrat, is giving Miller the only real contest he has had since his first election to Congress in 1916, but here again, administration considerations are likely to prevail and to assure Miller's success.

The re-election of three Republican representatives is certain. They are Lindley H. Hadley in the Second District; Albert Johnson in the Third District, and John W. Summers in the Fourth District. Of these Hadley alone has opposition, but his Democratic opponent, Mrs. Frances C. Axtell, is not regarded as a dangerous contender. The Democrats realized the hopelessness of putting up any nominee against Albert Johnson, "the man from Hoquiam," who has long been popular and is stronger at home because of the national prestige he has gained through his immigration bill.

OREGON

PORTLAND (Or.) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—With both Republicans and Democrats advancing positive claims as the campaign closes, and with Senator Stanfield, independent, predicting his now election, the outstanding fact is that Republican Oregon will probably remain Republican, at least in so far as its delegation in Congress is concerned.

Never has a more bitter campaign been waged in Oregon than the one that has been directed at Frederick Steiwer, Republican nominee for the United States Senate for the place now held by Stanfield. Stanfield, who jumped in for re-election as an independent when he failed to make the grade in the primaries, and Bert E. Haney, Democrat, have both turned their heavy artillery on Steiwer. The latter, according to the best evidences, has weathered the storm and will come out a victor by a substantial plurality, with Haney and Stanfield trailing along in the order named.

The Republicans of Oregon will also return their three present Representatives to the House. W. C. Hawley in the First District, and N. J. Sinnott in the Second District have no opposition worthy of the name. In the Third District, which is Multnomah county, the seat of Portland, M. E. Crumpacker, is certain to be returned. He has a Democratic opponent, Joseph R. Carson, who is running on a wet platform. Carson, however, is not well known and has no political strength, other than his Democratic nomination and his antiprohibition announcement.

If the Republicans lose any office in Oregon it will likely be the Governorship, now held by Walter M. Pierce, Democrat. Pierce is making an aggressive fight for re-election against I. L. Patterson, the Republican nominee.

Within the past week a new angle, that of prohibition, has been injected into the Senatorial campaign. This came about by the announcement of Senator Stanfield that he would favor a national referendum on the subject. This announcement was regarded as an open bid for the modification vote but it also has had the effect of alienating some of Stanfield's dry support.

IDAHO

BOISE, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Idaho has gone through one of its most vigorous off-year political campaigns in many years. The fight has centered around the Senatorship with Senator Frank R. Gooding, Republican, practically assured of re-election. He has had an opponent on the Democratic ticket who has made it an unusually bit of hard campaigning, John F. Nugent, former United States Senator and lately a member of the Federal Trade Commission, has contested every moment of the time since the nominating conventions. H. F. Samuels, a persistent office seeker, Progressive candidate, has kept his party's strength well lined up by attacking the records of both Gooding and Nugent. The whole campaign has been marked by bitter personalities and if there has been an issue, that is it.

Nugent has taken the Senator to task for his changed front on the World Court, from an adherent and a supporter to an outspoken opponent.

As the Senatorial campaign comes to a close Idaho may be counted to retain its Republican Congressional delegation. Both Republican Congressmen Burton L. French and Addison T. Smith will be re-elected, it is indicated.

UTAH

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 30.—Indications of close contests in some of the counties of Utah have caused some nervousness among the managers of the Republican State campaign but analysis of the situation seems to justify belief in the re-election of Senator Reed Smoot. The ripple of nervousness among the Republicans is due to several causes, among which is the fact that Ashby Snow, the Democratic contestant for election to the United States Senate, is not only a man of wealth and business acumen, able to advise wisely as to the financing of the State campaign, but is a man of vigorous and picturesque personality, and has succeeded in precipitating some situations which proved disquieting to Mr. Smoot's advisers.

Mr. Smoot occupies a unique niche in American politics and has a following which storm and flood could not wash away. While the fringe of his support may be fretted by Progressive and Democratic agitation, this support is compact and able to withstand much strain. This can be understood when it is remembered that he is an apostle of the Mormon Church, with only two men standing between him and the post once held by Brigham Young.

There is less certainty concerning how the two Republican Congressmen, up for re-election, will fare at the election next Tuesday. Elmer O. Leatherwood, representative from the Second District of Utah, including Salt Lake City, is opposed by William R. Wallace, Jr. Expectation is that Mr. Leatherwod will be re-elected but not by an overwhelming majority.

Don B. Colton, representative from the First District, is having a much harder fight than Mr. Leatherwod. He is opposed by Ephriam Bergeson, who resigned as president of the Utah Farm Bureau to enter the race.

WYOMING

CHEYENNE, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Wyoming's political campaign drew to a close today after a fast and furious pace had been maintained for several weeks. The contest raged around the head of Mrs. Nellie T. Ross, Democratic Governor, seeking re-election.

The campaign has been carried to Mrs. Ross's door on this issue—that she has failed to recognize women in her appointments and her opponents have made the most of it by asking her why. They set out that she has appointed 179 persons since she became Governor and of this number 174 have been men.

After the smoke has cleared away the best judgment of those who have kept tab on the whole campaign is that Mrs. Ross will be re-elected over Frank C. Emerson, Republican.

Charles E. Winter, Congressman-at-large, Wyoming's only representative in the lower house, Republican, has an easy victory ahead for re-election, according to general observations. He is opposed only by Thomas F. Fagen, Democrat.

TEXAS

AUSTIN (Tex.) Oct. 30. (Exclusive) With a full complement of Republican candidates for Congress in the field in Texas more than ordinary interest is attached to the results of the election on November 2. It is not expected, however, that the contests will result favorably to the Republicans in more than one and possibly two districts. Due to the fact that there is a party schism in the San Antonio district, the Republican incumbent, Congressman Harry M. Wurzbach, may be defeated by his Democratic opponent, A. D. Rogers.

In the Amarillo district S. E. Fish, Republican, is making the race against Marvin Jones, Democrat incumbent, who is seeking re-election. It is stated that the development of the Panhandle oil fields has brought thousand of new voters into that district and inasmuch as many of them are from Oklahoma and Kansas it is taken for granted that they are affiliated with the Republican party and will vote for Fish.

H. H. Haines of Houston, Republican nominee for Governor, has been waging an active campaign for several weeks and he stoutly maintains that he is going to defeat Dan Moody, the Democratic nominee for the office. Haines's claims in this respect, however, are not taken seriously in Texas, even by leaders of his own party.

THE SOUTH

MEMPHIS (Tenn.) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—With all Democratic primaries out of the way the entire south is awaiting Tuesday to confirm its selection and choices for Governorships and for places in the Senate and House of Representatives. Throughout the entire belt nomination is equivalent to election.

Arkansas will return T. H. Caraway to the Senate. He is opposed by Robert A. Jones, Republican. The State's delegation in the lower house will be the same as it is at present, all seven being candidates to succeed themselves.

Alabama will return Senator Hugh L. Black. He is opposed by E. H. Dryer, Republican. The State will return its entire representation in the lower house.

Florida will return Fletcher to the Senate. He is opposed by two Republicans, Lindsay and O'Neal. It will send Drane, Gree and Sears, representing the First, Second and Fourth Districts back to the lower house. Thomas A. Yon will be the new member from the Third District. All four have Republican opposition.

Georgia will return Senator W. F. George for the six-year term. It will have two new faces among its representation in the lower house. They are Leslie J. Steele from the Fifth District and Malcolm C. Traver from the Seventh. The ten incumbents from the other districts will be returned. L. G. Hardman, Democrat, has no opposition for Governor. The entire Democratic ticket is unopposed.

Louisiana will return Broussard to the Senate. His Republican opponent has withdrawn. It will return the entire delegation to the lower house.

Mississippi will send its entire delegation back.

North Carolina will likely have no upsets and will send a solidly Democratic delegation. Senator Overman is opposed by John J. Hayes but Hayes is considered to have no chance. Its entire representation in the lower house will go back.

South Carolina's delegation is unopposed.

Tennessee will return its entire delegation. Incumbents are unopposed except in that Mrs. W. Thompson is seeking the place now occupied by Congressman Cordell Hull in the Fourth District. Austin Peay will be re-elected Governor. He gave the State its "antievolution" statute.

Virginia will return its present delegation to the lower house. No other contests are scheduled.

NEW MEXICO

ALBUQUERQUE (N. M.) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Election day will end for New Mexico a political campaign that has been almost without an open issue.

Gov. A. T. Hannett and Congressman John Morrow, Democrats, are asking re-election largely on the strength of their records. Hannett is opposed by R. C. Dillon of Encino, merchant and sheep man, Morrow by Juan A. A. Sedillo, clerk and reporter of the State Supreme Court and member of the 1926 State Legislature.

NEW RUSSIAN RULER PLANS OVERTURES TO AMERICA

Stalin, Free of Old Red Leaders, Begins Establishment of True Republic

BY EUGENE J. YOUNG

[Copyright, 1926, by Eugene J. Young]

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—We shall hear a lot t Russia in the next few months. The great conflict be- the radicals led by Leon Trotzky, and the moderates d by Joseph Stalin, has come to a showdown and Trotzky d his Reds have been thrust out of places of power. Stalin w free to proceed boldly with his program of rehabilitat- the country. Part of that program is a settlement of dif- with America and a drive for our recognition of the w government. Powerful elements in and out of Con- s will support the plans for closer relations in diplomacy d trade; and there will be widespread discussion of the ad- ity of healing the breach of nine years.

t is well that Americans should themselves with the facts the recent conflict in Russia the meaning of its outcome. It possible to treat all the in- of a great situation in a brief but certain vital elements made clear. As I was among first to tell American readers of of Stalin, almost three years and have accurately guaged the from time to time since, I venture to attempt such clariof all, Stalin has not gained victory by dictatorship but ership which has the confi- of the Russian people. It is hion to call him the new dic- of Russia, but the fact is that lini or De Rivera are much dictators than he. His power s in his ability to gain the of the peasant masses the great country; and his confidence at his back he been able to advance steadily his chosen path for the last years despite strenuous oppo- from most of the leaders city workers.

has never really dictated. He ply carried out the will of the Congress of Soviet Re- a body composed of dele- from vastly separated regions which could not be under the will of any one He has a rare political genius has solidified the 140,000,000 of Russia ever since he or- the Soviet Union, but that has been interpretative of the of the people rather than of them.

the final conflict with Trotzky, Zinovieff, Lenin's widow, most of the old powerful lead- of the Communist party, he has methods of coercion. were permitted to carry their to the voters of the Communist They held great meetings of and their delegates. An- elements who wanted to against them were sternly in check. Victory was given to the voters of the party them- who in test after test over- defeated Trotzky and the and at last so thoroughly them that they had to throw on the mercy of the man had been attacking and prom- to repeat the attacks.

Lose Power to Interfere

, the old Red leaders, the of world revolution and , have now been ousted position of power in the gov- Trotzky and Leon Kamen- been permitted to stay in the Bureau, the executive pow- the Moscow government, after defeat last August in their first , but they have now been re- from that body. Gregory has been expelled from the Third International, the body he ruled so long as the organizer of the world revolution. Others in subordinate official positions have been censured for their activities against the executive and warned not to repeat.

Thus is completed a process which has been in progress for more than a year. Stalin and his associates have been gradually replacing all the old revolutionary chieftains with men of a different type, mostly from the peasantry and former middle class. Some of the old leaders like Tchitcherin have been retained, but they were never considered real Reds at heart.

So it will no longer be necessary for Stalin to compromise, as he has been compelled to do many times, with the extremists. He is free to permit the reorganization of agricultural life so that enterprising men may become employers of the less enterprising without making them serfs. He can encourage private enterprise in manufacturing and trading and take steps to assure outside capital. We may expect to see such steps taken in the near future.

CHANCE FOR REAL REPUBLIC

Thirdly, there is every indication that a real republic will be put under way. Stalin's whole record points in this direction. One of the reasons for the solidity of the Soviet Union, which has never had any real internal trouble since he organized it and brought it into being July 4, 1923, lies in its close touch with the people and their desires, as expressed by the voters.

Because of censorship and misrepresentation the world has never realized how much of a republic the present organization is. The Central Executive Committee, which meets once a year, is very much like our own Congress. It has a lower house of 414 members known as the Federal Council, whose delegates are chosen according to population; and an upper house of 100 members known as the Council of Nationalities. These bodies are not elected directly, as in this country, but by electoral bodies. The latter bodies are chosen by district soviets, which are elected by the people.

Congress elects the Central Executive Committee of twenty-one, which in turn elects the various high state officials. It is a cumbersome system, and, because of the ignorance and inefficiency of the voters, it has been subject to manipulation. But popular control is there to be used; and anyone who has watched the development of the Congress knows it has been used increasingly for the last three years.

At present the Communist organization with its 600,000 members and the all-powerful political bureau of that party overshadows the Congress. Stalin is the dominant member of this superconstitutional bureau, but one may doubt whether he will permit it to remain so strong now that he can work his will. The Communist party was not his creation. The Union of Soviet Republics is his very own and is the basis of his power. An indication of his bent was his action last year in throwing out many of the elections because the Communist party agents had coerced peasant voters or had manipulated the votes. If a man is to be judged by his acts, it seems safe to believe that Stalin not only is in favor of a republic, but in favor of real power for the people.

SEEK RECOGNITION HERE

Fourthly, there is to be a campaign for recognition by the United States. This was forecast several weeks ago when the "spokesman" for the Moscow Foreign Office (who can be readily identified as Foreign Minister Tchitcherin) told the correspondent of the Associated Press that Russia was prepared to send a special commission to Washington to discuss the question of the settlement of the Kerensky debt and compensation for the Americans whose property was siezed and nationalized by the Communists. All he wanted was assurance that such a commission would not be rebuffed.

Nothing has been done since along this line, apparently because it was thought necessary to wait until the internal row was disposed of. In fact one of the big points made by Trotzky and his associates was that the Stalin government was trying to curry favor with "capitalist America." It was undoubtedly necessary to dispose both of Trotzky and Zinovieff's before Washington could be approached, for Trotzky had attacked this country violently and Zinovieff's efforts to overturn our government had been cited more than once as a reason why we could not enter into friendly relations with the government which supported him.

There may be some further waiting until the soviet congress has had a chance to approve of changes in Russia's policies which will be designed to give assurances to America and other foreign nations. It will be necessary to furnish safeguards against future seizure of any property Americans may purchase or accumulate there, to assure proper protection of Americans in the courts. It may take a little time to accomplish such things, but we may expect progress before so very long.

STILL TROUBLE AHEAD

Yet, though the above favorable factors are found, we need not expect a millenium to start in Russia from the Stalin government. The world revolution is to be dropped, but not the expansion policies of the nation. Russia will remain Russian; and the Russians for centuries have been trying to push their way to ocean outlets and to domination of Asia and the Near East. Far from dropping these ambitions, Stalin has been working with all his skill to realize them. Just as the agents of the Czars tried to woo or conquer India, China, Persia, Turkey, the Balkan and the Baltic states, so the agents of the present Moscow regime are trying to woo and preparing to conquer.

Feng Yu-Hsiang, the "Christian General," has been in Moscow and returns to China filled up with ideas of promoting Nationalism and not Communism. In Afghanistan and Persia there are new arrangements for opposition to Britain. In the Baltic there is an attempt to form a union of the small nations under the wing of Russia. Everywhere there is a new and enormous pressure from this vast and powerful country for extension of her borders and her influence. The British Foreign Office is strenuously trying to meet it.

That feature, however, will present no obstacle to our recognition, if others are composed to our satisfaction. We recognized the Czarist government when it was trying the same thing; and quite a few other governments while they were engaged in imperialistic adventuring.

LONDON CONDITIONS CHANGED BY AUTO

LONDON, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Forty-five per cent of the traffic from the south side of London to the north side, in which is located the great business and theater area, is "bread-and-butter traffic," Frank Hunt, County Council expert, told the Royal Commission. The remainder he classed under "pleasure traffic." He found, following a survey, that the population on the south is outdistancing the north and that within a comparatively few years London will resemble American cities with an "uptown" and a "downtown." Increased travel on omnibusses was attributed to a "habit of mind" by Mr. Hunt, who asserted that walking was fast going out of fashion.

PLOWBOY HEADS RUSSIA

Michael Kalinin, Popular With Masses, Has Sense of Humor and Understands Common People

BY HILTON U. BROWN

MOSCOW, Oct. 6. (By Mail, Exclusive)—The head of the Union of Russian Republics is a plowboy. He was born a peasant. He goes back in season to work on the farm and to help gather in the crops. The peasants claim him and he stays in office because he is one of them.

But he is a peasant with a head as well as a heart. There are more influential men in the administration, more provocative types, and more orators, but none of them could fill the place that this man occupies, and fill it as he does.

KALININ

Michael Kalinin is a bewhiskered man, 51 years old. His title is "Chairman of the Central Executive Committee of the Soviets." When the Congress is not in session this committee has all authority.

Popularly the chairman is known as president. When the peasants want anything they go to Kalinin and they have been going to him since 1919, when he was first appointed. Since 80 or 90 per cent of the citizens of the union are peasants, it is evident that Kalinin has an influential constituency.

When he was appointed chairman of the presidium, there was civil war in Russia and the peasants were smashing things right and left. No party could be sure as to where they would land. Certainly no group could control without them. As Kalinin was a Communist, a revolutionary who had been repeatedly imprisoned for political activity, and was a worker, peasant born, the Communist party congress, seeing that the peasants had to be conciliated, and won over, selected this son of the soil of Tver village for a chieftain, and he has been in office ever since.

KEY TO POWER

He sees thousands of his comrades every year. He can tell them in language, they comprehend how stand the affairs of state, or how to treat a horse with the heaves. As long as Kalinin suits the peasants he will suit the powers that rule the union.

The union chose more than a peasant when it found Kalinin. He is not of the masterful type, but he knows how to get along with people and to be fair. He lives in the seclusion of the buttressed walls of the Kremlin, with the rest of the rulers of the union, but he has office in a public building in Moscow and a stream of people flows through the doors to counsel with him daily.

For one asset he has a sense of humor and he does not take himself too seriously. It is a relief to find a smiling face in this war-worn country. Kalinin can laugh and make a joke. He will offer you a cigar when you offer your cigarette case, and anybody who gives you a good cigar in Russia fills the full measure of luxurious hospitality.

"I would have brought you some real cigars from America," his caller said, "if your customhouse had not taken them away from me."

HOME INDUSTRY ENCOURAGED

"Well," he countered, "as America has shown the way, we are trying to force our people to raise good tobacco and make choice cigars so that we can have something fit to offer our guests.

"Moreover," he would add smiling, "we wish to have more foreign currency in our treasury than we have. That is why we take away from our guests what they bring along with them to Russia to compel them by that to buy our sovietic goods."

"How are you getting along with productivity in the farm regions under your present form of government?"

"Economically the peasants are certainly advancing, not as rapidly visibly perhaps, as we should like, yet certainly advancing. There is a larger sown area and the peasants have more cattle and horses than formerly. Politically the peasants have gone farther than economically, but even here they have not progressed as far as some of them pretend. These things are matters of growth, and as we are growing there is reason for satisfaction."

And trying to make clearer his statement, the president continued: "Politically our peasants progressed at least ten times more than economically. And, therefore, their claims to the government and their pretensions for a better life (in all respects) are also far above their possibilities."

Kalinin did not make any precise statement concerning the crops, but would speak only in a general way. Probably, after the failure of the forecastings for the crops of last autumn, the soviet statesmen prefer now not to base their economical plans on early data and statistics.

"We hope," said the president, "that the crops of this year will not be inferior to last year. Generally, the prospects are satisfactory, speaking about the south of Russia. We don't know yet what we shall have in the Oural region, for the harvest is not ripe there, and the yield will depend upon the weather."

These may not have been his precise words, but they represent the spirit of the comment. Kalinin is not a man to claim everything. He speaks with moderation.

Yet he does not yield in his belief in soviet government. He is a Communist of Communists, a revolutionist who did everything one man could do to destroy capitalism. He has been repeatedly deported, he has tramped from city to country, preached Bolshevism, stirred up factory workers, of whom he became one; befriended Lenin in time of need, and earned the confidence of those who are now trying to prove that they now have the kind of government that they want.

BOLT STUNS FARMER

ROGERS (Ark.) Oct 30. (Exclusive) During a storm, Mack Dennberry, farmer living south of town was knocked from a chair by a bolt of lightning. For several hours, he was partially paralyzed, but now seems none the worse for the experience.

Change in Sex Called Menace to Civilization

BERLIN, Oct. 30. (AP)—The masculinization of women by means of bobbed hair, mannish dress and participation in business and athletic pursuits requiring the physical stamina of men, soon may reach proportions of a menace to modern civilization, says Prof. Hugo Seilheim, sexologist of the University of Halle.

In an address which caused a sensation at the International Congress of Sexology, he described in detail one case of a woman who at 43 years of age, metamorphosed into a being with all the appearances of a man.

"She showed a growth of beard," Prof. Seilheim said. "Her voice changed from a clear soprano to a deep bass. The lines of her face and the development of muscles became those of a man. Even her Adam's apple took on a pointed prominence. Children of the neighborhood hounded her with catcalls of 'witch!' I have no doubt that she would have been burned at a stake had she lived a few centuries before her time."

The same masculine development is fundamentally possible in all women, he said. The man-like dress and activities of modern women may be just enough to overemphasize the growth of glands determining male characteristics at the expense of glands determining female traits.

Because of heavy cost of fuel caused by the coal strike, potteries of England have raised the prices of their wares.

Chamber Hawaii Excursion Party Comes Home

Move to Bring Pan-Pacific Parley Here Told

Leader Cites Vast Benefits Through Tours

Los Angeles as Romeo, the ideal lover strumming under Hawaii's moonlit balcony, and never as the flesh-extracting Shylock, was the personification given the Angel City by Arthur S. Bent, president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, as he headed the chamber's ninth excursion party, arriving home yesterday on the City of Los Angeles from the Paradise of the Pacific.

The party, consisting of more than 100 boosters of both sexes, carved their niches perhaps higher on the tower of mutual friendship than any previous caravansary had done, in the opinion of Bent, seconded by Clarence F. Matson of the trade department, and Charlie Bayer, in charge of the excursion.

"Through these tours," President Bent said, "there has come about this sense of interdependency and mutual helpfulness, which must link not only Hawaii to Los Angeles, but to the entire Pacific Coast, if we are to realize our fullest vision. That is the epitome of occidental culture and civilization. Our aims and our aspirations are identical; our goal so magnificent we cannot attain it alone, we must lean on and help each other to accomplish its full fruition."

"Uncle John" and Mrs. Daggett on S.S. City of Los Angeles

EIGHT DAYS ON ISLANDS

Eight full days were enjoyed on the islands, glimpsing breath-taking scenes, partaking of native feasts and formal banquets, riding surf boards and indulging in other tropical recreations. There was no thought of business, that is, other than in the mind of Clarence Matson, who never can resist making Los Angeles bigger and better commercially and industrially.

While others were attending social requirements, Matson set a movement in motion to bring the second Pan-Pacific Commercial Conference to Los Angeles in August, 1928. Before he sailed home assignments were dispatched to all the nations bordering the Pacific Ocean to make this conference the greatest clearing-house for ideas on Pacific trade, transportation, communication and development of resources ever attempted on western seas.

"The Pacific is destined to be the world's great commercial arena, as the Atlantic and the Mediterranean have been, and the bringing to Los Angeles of these leaders from all the countries bordering the ocean will be a big step in this direction," Matson stated.

Entertainment on the ship as well as at the islands was enhanced by "Uncle John," John S. Daggett, and his bride, and his troupe from KHJ, who made the round trip to the islands.

EXOTIC COLLECTION

Another direct return from the trip was the bringing by Dr. William A. Bryan, director of the Los Angeles Museum, of more than 1000 varieties of hybiscus, a continuous flowering shrub, which will adorn the borders of Hancock Park, the county property on Rancho La Brea. Almost every dweller of the islands has been a self-appointed Burbank, crossing and recrossing and developing remarkable blooms for the last twenty years, Dr. Bryan said, and his collection will be as exotic as it is variegated.

Dr. Bryan has traveled more than 300,000 miles through the Polynesian Islands with a naturalist's collecting proclivities in the last twenty-seven years, and his collection is regarded as the ultimate among floriculturists.

One hundred and twenty-five other passengers also arrived on the liner. There were five Japanese thespians coming to tour the United States with a repertoire of Nippon's plays; Miguel Gonzalez, Tia Juana brewer and capitalist, who never knew how to play poker until this voyage; Adolf Rettig, a seventeen-time globe circler, back from an eight months' commercial tour of Australia, and Andrew J. McIntosh, who organized the floating college recently here on a globe cruise, and who announces a similar tour next year.

The liner today is discharging cargoes of fresh and canned pineapples at her regular dock and will move early this week to Berth 232 to drop several thousand barrels of molasses, which is becoming a growing trade between the islands and the mainland.

CORNERO IN RUM NET AS RAID RESULT

Five Asserted Aides of Liquor Runner Also Taken in Federal Swoop

Frank Cornero and five asserted members of his rum-running gang were held incommunicado in the County Jail last night, having been arrested earlier in the day, at the points of rifles, in the act of landing a cargo of whisky at Balboa Highlands, near Balboa Beach, according to Federal prohibition agents. Four automobiles, two speedboats and 160 cases of whisky were seized, the agents declared.

The prisoners besides Cornero are J. Lawson, Frank Mason, a licensed chauffeur, Harry Young, Morris Pinerbeck and Ed Logue. They will be charged, it was declared, with possession of liquor and conspiracy to violate the Volstead Act.

When forced to surrender, the agents said, Cornero declared: "I've had bad luck lately; I lost ninety-two cases last Saturday." He referred, the agents say, to the arrest a week before of C. E. Edwards, a former policeman, at Twenty-fifth street and Maple avenue, with a truckload of whisky.

All the men arrested yesterday were armed, the agents said, but made no resistance. The raiders consisted of Federal agents under Chief Field Agent Sterling, Sheriff Jernigan of Orange county and a squad of deputies, and special internal revenue agents under A. H. Hamer. An early-morning fog aided them in approaching the rum-runners unseen and preventing them from making any effort at escape. Cornero, the officers declare, was in possession of a .45-caliber pistol that was sixteen inches long.

On the trip from Balboa to Santa Ana, one of the four cars being driven by a deputy sheriff, skidded and turned over in the ditch. The car was considerably damaged and some of the seized liquor was lost, it was said.

The officers believe that the whisky was landed from the rum-carriers Malahat and Hurry-On from Vancouver, now occupying berths on rum row beyond the twelve-mile limit.

Junk-Yard Fire Does Damage to Furniture Plant

Fire of unknown origin that started in a junk yard in the rear of 1528 Newton street and spread to the Kling Manufacturing Company plant, 1607 Fifteenth street, caused damage estimated at $5000 and tied up rail and automobile traffic on Hooper avenue for more than three hours early last night.

The $2000 loss of the Kling Company, furniture manufacturers, principally was caused by water that inundated the three-story frame structure when the sprinkler system was set in action by the heat of the blaze, as firemen had the flames under control before the building was endangered.

R. L. Jackson, owner of the rubbish yard, was absent from the premises when the fire broke out and is unable to account for the manner in which it started. His principal loss was a five-passenger touring car which was stored in the frame building that housed his business.

George T. Price of the Bureau of Fire Investigation, is attempting to determine the cause of the fire.

Dr. George H. MacNeill, president of the New England States Society invites all former residents of the six States to a social reunion Tuesday evening in the Veterans Hall at 246 South Hill street. Judge Frank S. Forbes and Col. F. M. Rublee will be speakers. Danney Scalley will sing Irish ballads and there will be community singing.

NEW SCREEN STAR DUE IN HOLLYWOOD

Emil Jannings to Arrive Today from Germany for Paramount Work

Emil Jannings, famous German screen star, will arrive in Los Angeles today to take his place in the steadily growing foreign colony engaged in making American films.

Accompanied by Mrs. Jannings and a score of motion picture notables, the actor is due on the Santa Fe at 2 p.m. A delegation from Hollywood, numbering many stars, will be present to welcome him and escort the party to the Ambassador.

Jannings's arrival is in connection with a long-term starring contract which he signed with Paramount some weeks ago. He came to America recently after completing his last screen vehicle with the Union on Film Alliance in Berlin.

EMIL JANNINGS

In the party coming from New York and from the Paramount convention held at French Lick, Ind., are Wallace Beery, a comedy star; Ernest Vajda, Hungarian playwright, and Victor Vadja, who have just returned from a four months' trip abroad; B. P. Schulberg, associate Paramount producer, and Mrs. Schulberg; Walter Wanger, general manager of production for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Erich Pommer, former producing head of UFA, now a Paramount featured producer; Monta Bell, director; Mauritz Stiller, director; Milton E. Hoffman, executive manager of Lasky West Coast Studio, and Mrs. Hoffman; William Fraser, of the Harold Lloyd Company; Monte Katterjohn, of the Paramount Long Island production department; Benjamin Glazer, author; Charles E. McCarthy, head of Paramount publicity; Arch Reeve, manager of Lasky West Coast publicity, and Carroll Peacock, manager of Famous Players-Lasky, Los Angeles Exchange.

Food Exhibit's Crowds Pass 100,000 Mark

Attendance at the third annual Food and Household Show in the Ambassador Auditorium had already gone beyond the 100,000 mark when, several hours before the exposition came to an end, Waldo T. Tupper, managing director, made a hurried tabulation of the week's crowds. The exposition was declared the most successful food show ever conducted in Los Angeles, and officials of the Southern California Retail Grocers' Association were reported enthusiastic about the results of their efforts.

Another food show will be held in 1927, making the fourth of the kind under association auspices, S. M. White, association president, said. He declared dates had not been settled upon, but that the event will take place earlier in the year than the 1926 show, that it may feature summer diet instead of winter foods.

Game of Dice Quarrel Ends With Stabbing

Marcus Wheeler, 39 years of age, 993 East Fifty-third street, mechanic in a garage at 1220 East Seventh street, was stabbed last night as the result of an altercation over a dice game being held in the rear of the garage, according to a police report.

Wheeler, when reached by the police, maintained that he did not know the name of his assailant, who escaped before the officers arrived.

Police Surgeon Goodrich pronounced the stab wound in the stomach as probably fatal, after an operation had been performed at the Receiving Hospital in an effort to save Wheeler's life.

The man who got away, Wheeler said, was the only one engaged in the game beside himself.

Mayor Vetoes Truck Weight Laws Change

Mayor Cryer yesterday vetoed an ordinance adopted by the City Council which would exempt truck owners from obtaining certified weight certificates for loads of rock, gravel and sand when these materials "have been taken from any excavation made in connection with the construction of any building or the improvement of any parcel of land. The Mayor said in his veto message that he can see no reason for making this exception to the truck weight ordinances and laws.

BERRY SHRUB SHOW AT PUBLIC LIBRARY

LANDSCAPE CLUB BACK OF EXHIBIT FOR BENEFIT OF GARDEN LOVERS

Any garden-loving Californians who like the gay and interesting berried shrubs now in evidence, and who are not sure which is which, should betake themselves to the Public Library, Fifth street and Grand avenue, November 2, 3 and 4, next, where there will be an exhibition of decorative berried shrubs. All are properly named—botanic name and common name, and all the shrubs present are those that will grow readily in Southern California and which anyone may plant in his garden.

The Landscape and Garden Club meets on the first and third Wednesdays of each month at the Public Library. Interest in gardening is the only requirement for admission to its meetings.

NATIONS' FETE TO OPEN DOORS

Presentation Will be Conducted Tomorrow

Makes First Attempt to Promote World Peace

Performers Included in Cast of Festival

When the curtain goes up on the presentation of the Festival of tomorrow night in the Poly- High School auditorium, Los will witness its initial dra- attempt to promote the cause world peace.

festival, which is to continue every night this week and Saturday matinee, is sponsored by the local Council on International Relations, of which Dr. Rufus B. von KleinSmid, president of the University of Southern California, is head.

Professional talent for the most part comprises the cast that will enact the chief roles in the six scenes of the festival. The first scene will be an allegorical prologue, followed by four scenes depicting the life, peaceful aspirations and arts of Russia, Japan, Latin America and China; the closing sequence will be another symbolic presentation—a grand finale emphasizing the world-wide desire for amity and understanding.

In addition to the dramatic phases of these six scenes, there will be many songs, dances and orchestral numbers typifying the national life and artistic endeavors of the peoples represented. Famous soloists, dancers and musicians have been engaged especially for the festival.

DANCERS ENGAGED

Among the dancers in the Spanish sequence will be seen Trinidad Goni, noted both as a stage dancer and teacher, and Betty Wickersham and Jose Diaz, Argentine tango dancing team. Mrs. Mary Bell Chapman, soprano soloist, is directing the Spanish numbers in the Latin-American sequence. The California Spanish Serenaders will play native airs.

Mme. Halperin is directing the Russian scene, which will include a number of noted artists such as Vasily Gromakovsky, concert baritone, in solos, and Yascha Borowsky, concert violinist, in several selections. A native Russian balalaika orchestra will play during this sequence. Vera Slavina and Micha Bass will present several Russian native dances as another feature.

K. Nambu, formerly of the Imperial Theater, Tokio, is directing the Japanese sequence, which will introduce to the audiences some unique musical and vocal presentations. So-Jin, noted screen character actor, will assist in the direction of this scene and will play one of the leading roles, as will Nambu.

The Chinese scene, under the direction of Peter Soo Hoo, will present some novel electrical effects in addition to exemplifying the national spirit and artistic life of the Chinese people. This sequence will be under the auspices of the Chinese fraternity of the University of Southern California.

Among the notable professional actors and actresses and others in the cast of the prologue and the finale will be seen Claire McDowell, Charles Hill Mailes, Lambert Baker, Carlyle Tupper, Leon Ramon, Dorneen Turner, Mme. Takane, Mme. Alma Real, Neale Pench, Mrs. Florence Dodson Schoneman, Countess Violet de Besa, Miss Novarro, Angelica Chacel, Adrienne Dore and Tobe Erb.

Chalmers Brooks Fithian, dean of the National Pageant Association, is directing the entire festival, while Kenneth S. Beam is executive secretary of the council and is assisting in the arrangements.

The allegorical story and lyrics for the peace festival are the work of Mrs. Ethelean Tyson Gaw, with musical setting by Mrs. Nellie S. Frizelle. J. Arthur Myers is directing the national chorus of 100 voices, and Miss Anne McPherson is in charge of the children's chorus of sixty.

The prologue and the finale will include the United States in the general "cast" of nations on the Pacific Ocean. This year's festival, destined to be the forerunner of others on increasingly elaborate scale every year, will exemplify the striving for peace and universal understanding in the hearts of America, Latin America, Russia, Japan and China.

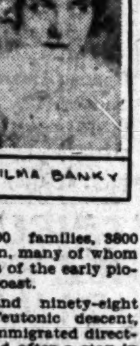
MANY RACES JOIN HEGIRA

Survey Shows Almost Every Nation Represented in First 10,000 to Enter Imperial Valley

Twenty-three different countries contributed settlers to California, according to a survey recently completed by Samuel Goldwyn, the motion-picture producer, who wanted data regarding the original settlers of the Imperial Valley.

According to Mr. Goldwyn's figures, the first 10,000 settlers to enter the Imperial Valley included representatives from nearly every nation on the globe. The figures were collected in order that there might be a proportionate representation in the cast of California's first truly representative photoplay, "The Winning of Barbara Worth," which Henry King recently completed and which is now playing at the Forum Theater.



VILMA BANKY

Out of the 10,000 families, 3800 were of English origin, many of whom were the descendents of the early pioneers on the east coast.

Four hundred and ninety-eight families were of Teutonic descent, most of whom had immigrated directly from Germany and after a stay in the East went on searching for new lands and surprisingly, there were 600 families of Scandinavians who came in a body from the vicinity of Oslo.

MANY OF SPANISH BLOOD

The percentage of Spanish blood in the original pioneers was high. Many of these had lost shares of the great California land grants. There were 1100 Spanish families in the original 10,000.

There were also about 400 French settlers who lived in a little settlement in East New York since the days when their ancestors had been ejected from Arcadia during the French and English wars. In addition there were about 900 families of mixed Italian and Portuguese descent.

As this was the period before the immigration laws had gone into effect, oriental races were proportionately rather highly represented, with a total of 700 Japanese and Chinese families.

The remainder of the 10,000 were made up of families of no known ancestry, although the Slavic races predominated.

Amazed by this discovery of the many races concerned in what he had thought to be a truly American hegira, Henry King determined that he would make the picture with a true melting pot of races who had gone into the making of the American of today.

Out of the 3000 inhabitants which made up the unique motion-picture city of Barbara Worth, Nev., one finds in the principals, the Hungarian represented by Vilma Banky, the English by Ronald Colman, the Scotch by Paul McAllister and E. J. Ratcliffe; the Irish by Erwin Connelly, and the native American by Gary Cooper.

Among the extras there were some 200 Germans, 200 Italians, 500 Spanish and Mexicans, 300 Swedes and approximately 950 native American types. At least a dozen Chinese and Japanese took prominent parts among the minor characters in the film.

POOL WORK AWAITS ON BOND ISSUE

Los Angeles Playground System Planned as Model for Cities of World

The Los Angeles playground system is to be a model for all the cities of the world and work will be immediately begun on "Olympic Pool" for the Olympic Games here in 1932 if the playground bond proposition No. 20 on Tuesday's ballot, carries, according to athletic leaders who have organized a committee for a campaign of education in behalf of the measure.

If the playground bond measure carries, the sum of $150,000 will be immediately available for the construction of the "Olympic Pool" and stands for the aquatic games in connection with the Olympiad. The site proposed by the City Planning Commission is directly facing the steel structure once used as the race course grand stand in Exposition Park. According to the plans drawn, the entire aquatic arena and pools will be the most complete swimming show place in the world.

The dimensions of the pool are to be 90 by 328 feet to correspond with the metric distances standardizing swimming events in European countries.

California athletic leaders who are aiding in the citizens' campaign in behalf of the playground bond issue have named the following committee: Homer B. Wright, chairman; Ford M. Jack, vice-chairman; Harry Williams, president Pacific Coast League; Adam Leonard, vice-president Football Association; Joseph Pipal, Occidental College, and Robert S. Weaver, president Recreation Association of California.

JUNIOR CLUB PARTY FULL OF THILLS

"Times" Juveniles Guests of Aunt Dolly at Jolly Event on Forum Roof

Aunt Dolly, sponsor of the hundreds of members of the Times Jr. Club, came through with that promised party last night at the Forum Roof Garden, 4050 West Pico street, to the unforgetable joy of the 700

There were no disappointments. The party was all that was expected and more. Refreshments and the jazziest of jazz music and the Forum's ballrooms transformed in a land of make-believe in which the grotesque and the beautiful ruled by turn, held spellbound the young and talented writers, artists and workers of The Times Junior Club some of whom came hundreds of miles for the occasion—from Texas, from San Francisco, from Redlands.

In all, the are a million members now of hThe Times Junior Club, in South America, in Canada and all over the United States, and if they had all been at the party last night there couldn't have been more fun than there was; as it was the joy was just more concentrated, that's all.

This is the fourth annual party that has been given, and some of the original 21-year-old members then everybody forgot their age anyway, so what's the difference?

ELECTRIC CLUB MEETS

M. D. Lack, vice-chairman and tax counselor of the California Taxpayers' Association, will be the speaker of the day at the meeting of the Electric Club at the Biltmore tomorrow noon. He will discuss the propositions to be voted upon at the general election November 2. President Sam E. Gates will conduct the meeting.

HOOVER LAUDS CHEST APPEAL

Secretary Indorses Aims of Los Angeles Campaign

Advantages Listed in Letter to Organization Head

Division Instruction Meets to be Opened Tomorrow

Herbert Hoover, United States Secretary of Commerce, indorses the Los Angeles Community Chest.

A letter from Mr Hoover, who visited Los Angeles recently, talking with leading local business men who are preparing for the forthcoming Chest appeal, November 9 to 23, was received yesterday by R. W. Pridham, president of the Chest.

In his letter to Mr. Pridham, Secretary Hoover listed nine specific advantages of the Chest plan, expressing the wish that the appeal starting November 9, which is for $3,220,114.25, would meet with "a great response from the people of Los Angeles."

LISTS ADVANTAGES

In his letter, he said: "The Community Chest idea has been developed and well tried out in many cities of the United States. It has been found that it systematically spreads the number of givers throughout the community. It increases the interest of the community in its burdens of public charity. It relieves the officers of charitable institutions of the time and anxiety which they must give to providing support for their institutions and thereby enables them to devote themselves to the primary work of the institution.

"It tends to decrease the overlap and waste among these institutions. It gives them a more assured and sounder basis of support.

"It protects the community from fraud and misrepresentation.

"It establishes once and for all the burden upon each individual in the community. It awakens public interest and support to the obligations of the stronger members of the community to the weaker.

"I feel sure that these advantages of the Community Chest system will again appeal to the people of Los Angeles and that it will meet a great response."

MEETINGS SCHEDULED

In preparation for the campaign, divisional instruction meetings of the volunteer workers are being held daily at Chest headquarters, 911 South Grand avenue. An intensive program of meetings will be under way next week.

Tomorrow meetings schedlued include: Division 22, Mrs. A. W. Meek, 10 a.m.; division 19, Harold J. Stonier, 12 noon; division 14, Mrs. Castor, 2 p.m.; division 5, Albert A. NEW CLUB WILL OPEN THIS WEEK

Elaborate Program Will Celebrate Dedication of Downtown Building

Completion of the elaborate program for the two-day celebration, which will mark the formal dedication of the new Commercial Club of Southern California, was announced yesterday by J. Ward Cohen, the club organizer. The opening will be celebrated Friday and Saturday evenings.

The first evening will be a "stag" affair and Manager T. B. Horner announces several hundred reservations have been made by members and their guests. The program for this evening will include two orchestras, five vocal soloists, four dancing soloists and several specialty teams. More than forty prominent citizens will occupy the speakers' table and brief talks by many of them will be given during the banquet. An informal inspection of the building will follow the festivities which will occur in the club's banquet hall.

On the following evening the members and their wives will attend a banquet and inspect the club. An elaborate musical program, as on the previous evening, will be given. The club will begin functioning on the day following the opening.

The Commercial Club is said to be one of the finest equipped and most beautiful clubs in the city. It is complete in every respect, having several dining-rooms, modern kitchen, main lounge, billiard rooms, a floor devoted entirely to women, gymnasium, swimming plunge, Turkish bath and six floors of sleeping rooms. The roster includes many of the business and professional leaders in the Southland.

Former Head of War Nurses to be Guest Here

All reserve hospital-unit nurses of this section are to honor Maj. Julia C. Stimson, superintendent of the Army Nursing Corps, Washington, D. C., who will arrive Tuesday in Los Angeles, at a dinner Wednesday evening at the Women's Athletic Club.

Miss Stimson, who was in charge of all army nursing work of the A.E.F. during the war, will be the guest, while in the city, of Miss Ethel Swope, director of the Nurses' Training School of the Methodist Hospital.

Maj. Stimson is to make several other speeches while in Los Angeles, including an address to a feminine group of the legal profession. She is a staunch friend and coworker of Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt at Washington, D. C.

NEW YORKERS CALLED

The president of the New York State Society, Dr. George H. MacNeill has called the New Yorkers for their first fall rally Thursday evening, November 4, in the Veterans' Hall at 246 South Hill street.

Cooper Culver, reader and entertainer of Inglewood, has been secured for the program and there will be community singing and dancing.

SEVENTH STREET FLOWER AND FIGUEROA

BOY TELLS OF RUM IN HAYSTACK

Lad's Condition Leads to Search by Officers and Fining of Uncle

If Melvin Eaton, 15 years of age, Newhall schoolboy, had not reported at the village school in an intoxicated condition, deputy sheriffs would probably not have found a bottle of potent liquor in the haystack on the dairy ranch of Charles Smith, near here. But he did, according to the report of Deputy Sheriff Daugherty and crew, who were detailed by Capt. Benton to investigate the unusual case.

Melvin is said to have been discovered by his teacher in back of the school, apparently ill. She summoned a doctor and he declared the youth intoxicated. While the boy could not talk coherently, investigating officers caught the words, "Uncle . . . Charles Smith . . . haystack."

They visited the Smith ranch, less than a mile from Newhall, and after prodding about the haystack uncovered a partially filled bottle of liquor. Smith was taken into custody on the boy's assertion that his uncle had informed him where the liquor was and told him to "help himself whenever he wanted to."

At a hearing before Justice Pickens of Newhall yesterday, Smith was fined $300 on a charge of Wright Act violation.

Apple Week Observed by Union Pacific

Millions of apples will be eaten during the celebration of National Apple Week, which began with National Apple Day, yesterday, and is to extend through to next Saturday The slogan this year will be "Apples Please."

Many of the large railroads, steamships, hotels, restaurants and resorts have entered into the spirit of National Apple Week and will serve apples in every conceivable way.

Among the large trans-continental railroads which will observe Apple Week is the Union Pacific system with its 140 dining cars and numerous hotels and eating houses scattering over 10,000 miles of territory.

In addition to serving apples on its dining cars and in its hotels, the Union Pacific has published several hundred thousand booklets containing 150 of the world's choicest apple recipes. These booklets are free.

TRAIN VICTIM DIES

LOS BANOS, Oct. 30. (AP)—Mrs. F. W. Hahn, who stepped in front of a Southern Pacific train yesterday after stepping off the track in answer to a warning whistle, died today. An inquest will be conducted Monday. Relatives are on the way here from Kansas City, Mo.

OVER 200 PEOPLE NOW TAKING FREE MUSIC LESSONS

Starr Piano Clubs Gaining in Favor As Many Get Free Pianos and Other Awards

Over 200 people are now taking advantage of free music lessons received through the Starr Piano Company profit sharing clubs. Every member receives an award valued to at least fifty dollars

Mrs. August Seibel, Mrs. Daisy Hayes and Mr. John A. Myers, all of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Luella Schmitt of Monrovia have received pianos during the past year at no cost whatever to them.

Mr. J. F. Lyon of Los Angeles and Mr. C. E. Gorham of Owensmouth have received cash awards of $150.00 each. Over one hundred other customers have greatly benefitted by the Starr plan of sharing profits with the public.

The quality of Starr Pianos lies in several unique features of construction. Among these are pin blocking, which makes it impossible for climatic conditions or moving to change the tension of the strings even one ten-thousandth of an inch, thus preventing variance of tone. The airplane spruce sounding board withstands the ravages of vibration throughout the years. The finest materials are used in the construction of all types of Starr Pianos.

Only a tremendous volume of business could make Starr's profit sharing plan possible, as the company gives one piano absolutely free with each club along with many other awards.

THREE INJURED IN COLLISION OF CARS

Mrs. Grace Moore, of 748-A East Esther street, Long Beach, was in General Hospital last night in a serious condition from injuries suffered, police said, when an automobile driven by her husband, Staye Moore, was in collision on the Truck Boulevard, Davidson City, with another vehicle driven by Albert C. Donohue, 427 South Figueroa street. Moore and another passenger, Mrs. Beatrice Rhubidaux of Los Angeles were removed to Seaside Hospital, Long Beach. Long Beach police said Moore was suffering from fractured ribs and severe bruises and that Mrs. Rhubidaux's arm was fractured.

SISTER PROTESTS BEQUEST TO NURSE

Laura Turk was induced to give away $15,000 with the result that her estate after her death amounted to only $10,000, according to a contest of her will filed yesterday by her sister, Elizabeth Strong. Mrs. Minnie Bowers, nurse and friend of the decedent, was named a beneficiary in the will, and was also the recipient of the gifts the contestant said she had influenced Mrs. Turk to make, according to the petition of Mrs. Strong.

NEWS OF SOUTHERN COUNTIES

FEW CONTESTS APPEAR IN TUESDAY'S ELECTION

Interest in Southern Counties is Centered in Small Number of Candidates is generally conceded that because of the many questions submitted to the voters the work of the election boards will be unusually heavy, so that anything like complete results will be slow in being determined. Following is a resume of conditions politically, gathered by Times correspondents in the various

The primary election in August definitely decided who will occupy most of the county offices in Southern California for the coming terms, hence there are few contests and little interest in the final balloting to take place Tuesday. In most of the counties one or two outstanding rivalries will bring out a representative vote at the polls but there will be little of general interest in the balloting. Local bond issue questions and interest in several of the State propositions have furnished material for enough political agitation to awaken voters' interest, but the magnitude of the ballot makes it impossible in most instances to even guess what the general results will be. It counties of the Southland.

VENTURA COUNTY

VENTURA, Oct. 30.—Nearly all local interest in the coming election, as far as Ventura county is concerned, centers about the outcome of what is known as County Proposition No. 29. This is a $900,000 county bond issue, which, if carried, provides that the money is to be used in improvement of county highways.

On the county and township ballot there is not a single contest with the exception of a scramble between J. J. Salcido, incumbent, and Earl R. Bell, police officer, for the position of constable.

Of the many State-wide propositions, perhaps the greatest interest attaches to the one for apportionment by the so-called Federal plan, a measure which is said to have originated in this county and which has the support of the many farmer organizations.

KERN COUNTY

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 30.—Interest in the general election in Kern county Tuesday is centered on the race for District Attorney between Rowen Irwin, who held that office for a number of years prior to the election of the present official; Harry E. Schmidt, who was defeated at the primary, and Ray Bailey, a young attorney, who is expected to make a fine showing at the polls.

The contest for Superior judge is causing considerable conjecture as to whether Judge J. W. Mahon, incumbent for thirty years, will win over his younger rival, R. B. Lambert.

E. Curtis Clarke, Democrat, is conducting a "write-in" campaign against R. L. Patterson, Republican, for a seat in the Assembly. Another "write-in" contest is to ensue in the Third Supervisorial District, where J. O. Hart, incumbent, is being opposed by Harry Rambeau, of Shafter, hopeful of securing the writing of his name on the ballot a sufficient number of times to defeat Hart.

Wardell will probably carry Kern county in the gubernatorial contest as many of the former supporters of Governor Richardson are rallying to his support. State proposition No. 4 is said to have few supporters here, but it is believed No. 8 will carry. An organization of college alumni is supporting No. 10. The vote will be fairly evenly split on the Wright Act measure, according to leaders on both sides of the controversy.

RIVERSIDE COUNTY

RIVERSIDE, Oct. 30.—Who will be superintendent of schools of the county, is the only question exciting much interest in Tuesday's election. In the August primaries, Ezra E. Smith and Perry A. Winder ran a closely contested race, with Smith having a slight advantage over his opponent.

Public sentiment here seems to be overwhelmingly against the repeal of the Wright Act. Service clubs and civic organizations have passed resolutions against the repeal. Concerning the amendment providing for the installation of the Bible in the public schools there is a grave difference of opinion. The Chamber of Commerce recently passed a resolution advising against the proposed amendment and the action immediately called forth criticism and organized opposition from the church federation. Reapportionment according to the so-called farm bureau plan is favored here, while the gasoline tax amendment seems to have few supporters.

ORANGE COUNTY

SANTA ANA, Oct. 30.—All contests for office in Orange county were settled at the primary in August, with the exception of that for Treasurer and Superior Court judge for the long term. James Livesey, Sr., of Santa Ana, is campaigning against J. C. Joplin for treasurer. Joplin has held the office for the last twenty-five years. James L. Allen and W. H. Thomas, Santa Ana attorneys, are contestants for the judgeship. Only a few hundred votes separated the two men at the primaries, at which time Homer Ames won one of the two full-term places over Allen, Thomas and Dist.-Atty. Nelson.

Chief interest concerning the State propositions is centered on the proposed repeal of the Wright Act. Dry leaders say that Orange county will roll up a big majority in support of the "little Volstead law." The same prediction is made as to the proposed horse-racing measure. Northern California politicians have been accused of flooding Orange county with propaganda in favor of Measure No. 4 in a deal to defeat Proposition No. 8 with a flood of votes in the north. The Federal plan of reapportionment as fostered by the Orange County Farm Bureau, seems to have little or no opposition. No. 3, proposing to tax oleomargarine, is the subject of much heated discussion, with the dairymen doing most of the talking

SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 30.—Except in the townships where many candidates are entered in contests for justice of the peace and constable, there are no contests for political office in this county to be determined at the election Tuesday.

Sentiment of the voters concerning the various State propositions submitted on the ballot is difficult to determine in most instances. Lyman M. King of Redlands, has been campaigning throughout the county against the gasoline-tax increase measure, and many organizations of the county have indorsed the proposal. The local Chamber of Commerce opposes No. 8. The Federal reapportionment plan, No. 28 on the ballot, will be carried by a large majority, it is said, while the so-called Los Angeles redistricting plan will be badly defeated. Veterans' Bond Act, No. 1, will be carried and the proposal to repeal the Wright Act, will be defeated by a heavy vote, it is predicted.

SANTA BARBARA COUNTY

SANTA BARBARA, Oct. 30.—At the election Tuesday Santa Barbara county voters are interested only in the State propositions and the election of justices of the peace and constables. All candidates for county offices were selected at the August primary, there being but one change in the official roster when B. F. Hunt, deputy County Clerk, was elected clerk. Charles A. Hunt, incumbent, retired.

Sentiment on State propositions is about evenly divided except on No. 3 and No. 23, which probably will be given large majorities. The Wright Act repeal measure is doomed to defeat here as the county has consistently voted dry for many years.

SAN DIEGO COUNTY

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 30.—There will be few contests here election day. After the primaries there remained but three contests that will bring out a spirited struggle. The constable race, in which two will be elected, will be fought out by George H. Cooley, Howard S. Jopling, Al E. Lambla and Harry E. Webber. The first two seemingly have the best chance to win.

Eugene Daney, Jr., and Johnson W. Putterbaugh will oppose each other for justice of the peace, and three Superior Court judges will be elected from the following group: C. N. Andrews, Charles B. Delong, Charles C. Haines, Shelly J. Higgins, Lewis R. Kirby and Spencer M. Marsh. Andrews, Marsh and Delong are named as favorites by the best political observers.

Sentiment on the Wright Act repeal is about evenly divided in this county, while the racing measure will bring out some lively voting, with the result very much in doubt. There is much feeling against the Water and Power Bond measure.

IMPERIAL COUNTY

EL CENTRO, Oct. 30.—All political contests to be decided Tuesday have been pushed into the background by the bitter fight being staged by Judges Franklin M. Cole and Marvin W. Conklin to retain their places on the bench as against J. S. Larew and A. C. Finney. The two last named candidates represent the Mark Rose faction of the county politics and have been accused of using $4000 secured in Imperial Valley last summer to further Colorado River legislation in their attempt to defeat Cole and Conklin.

Rose and other members of the board of directors of the Imperial Irrigation District were charged by two successive grand juries with misconduct in office and illegal expenditure of money. They are now awaiting trial. Friends of Cole and Conklin assert that the bitter fight made against them is due to their insistence that the Rose faction leaders must stand trial on the grand jury charges. Speakers for Finney and Larew accuse the two judges as being unfriendly to the Swing-Johnson bill and are making their campaign on this issue.

Local interest in the State propositions is largely confined to numbers three and twenty-eight. Farm Bureau members are making an active campaign in favor of the oleomargarine law and the so-called Federal plan of reapportionment.

FRESNO COUNTY

FRESNO, Oct. 30.—Local interest in the voting Tuesday is centered around the election of a district attorney and Sheriff and the contest for assembly in the Fresno city district. There are also contests for public administrator and that of Supervisor from the First district. All other major offices were either elected or appeared unopposed at the August primaries.

In the district attorney race George R. Lovejoy, incumbent, is pitted against Glenn M. Devore, city commissioner and high man in a field of six at the primary. Devore led Lovejoy by less than 100 votes and both factions are claiming victory Tuesday.

Sheriff W. F. Jones is asking re-election against Sam B. Williams and is conceded a victory as he came within a few votes of winning at the primary when he was opposed both by Williams and T. C. Walton, former United States Marshal for the southern district of California.

Z. S. Leymel, nominee of the Republican party for the assembly in the Fresno city district is opposed by Penn Cummings, Fresno attorney. Cummings was nominated by the Democratic Central Committee, after those who were candidates in the primary were disqualified.

In the public administrator contest Charles Shirreff is running against C. K. Wakefield who was winner in the pimary. Shirreff is the incumbent and was the appointee of the supervisors to fill a vacancy.

Chris Jorgensen, present supervisor from the First District has a run-off with J. Fred Shedd. Jorgensen came within a few votes of winning at the primary Fresno county is believed solidly behind the Federal reapportionment plan by virtue of an energetic campaign waged by the Fresno county Chamber of Commerce and the Fresno county Farm Bureau. A similar campaign has been carried on in behalf of proposal No. 4. Through a citizens' committee opposition to the proposed repeal of the Wright Act has been active. An aggressive campaign has also been carried on by several organizations in favor of the proposed bond issue for university and State buildings.

TULARE COUNTY

VISALIA, Oct. 30.—Two county contests will be decided at the polls here Tuesday, that of County Tax Collector and Supervisor from the Fourth, or Dinuba district. Oscar M. Ferguson opposes W. A. Fought for Collector, while the contest for Supervisor is between J. H. Larue of Dinuba and Ralph Prestige of Cutler. Contests for constables and justices of the peace provide interest in many of the townships.

The most spectacular campaign in regard to any of the State propositions has been waged in favor of the retention of the Wright Act. A parade participated in by the younger element of church workers from all parts of the county was staged here tonight in order to create sentiment opposed to the repeal of the law. Eleventh-hour interest is being shown in favor of Proposition No. 10 and is being directed by college alumni of the county.

Proposition No. 4 is expected to carry, and No. 8 to be defeated. The so-called Federal plan of reapportionment is a great favorite here, being actively supported by the farm bureau and many women's organizations, all of which means Proposition No. 20 is in disfavor in this county.

KINGS COUNTY

HANFORD, Oct. 30.—Two contests, that for Sheriff and Superintendent of Schools are the center of most interest in Tuesday's voting. A. F. Jewett, Jr., Republican, is opposed by L. P. Dapron, Democrat, for Assembly. The race is much discussed, but as the county is strongly Republican there is little doubt as to the outcome.

Sheriff Hine is being opposed for re-election by Maj. Francis Kimes, rancher and prominent member of the American Legion. In the race for Superintendent of Schools Miss M. L. Richmond, who now holds the position, is opposed by Mrs. Elsie I. Bozeman, well-known public-school teacher.

Farm bureau meetings for weeks past have devoted much time to the discussion of the State propositions vote will be cast on most of them. vote wil lbe cast on most of them. The "oleo" bill and the so-called Federal plan of reapportionment are both greatly favored here. The Hanford Board of Trade has placed posters in all the windows advocating support of the measures.

HENS' HILARITY HUNTER'S CLEW

Frolicking Flock Leads Dry Officers to Underground Booze Plant

ALHAMBRA, Oct 30.—Deciding that the cleverness displayed by Giovani Brugasco in secreting a still under the cement floor of a chicken-house merited special consideration, Justice William M. Northrup today fined him $600.

The evidence at the trial showed that the discovery of Brugasco's illicit liquor plant on his place at 1700 Zinfandel avenue, Temple, was the result of the actions of some chickens. Deputy sheriffs noticed the birds deporting themselves in a hilarious manner and investigated the premises.

Their efforts were unrewarded for a long time, until one day they removed a section of the floor in the chicken-house and found a tunnel leading to an underground room, where a well-equipped liquor plant was in operation. The arrest followed.

TOWN CELEBRATES

Inglewood Dedicates Building for Postoffice

INGLEWOOD, Oct. 30.—The greatest and most successful community celebration in the annals of Inglewood was the dedication and formal opening of the new Inglewood Postoffice this evening, attended not only by thousands of Inglewood citizenry, but also hundreds from other Centinela Valley towns and from various other Southland centers. A Halloween atmosphere was given by the presence of scores of masks and costumes.

Congressman John D. Fredericks of Los Angeles was the dedicatory speaker, introduced by Frank D. Parent, local member of the Republican County Central Committee, who officiated during the evening as master of ceremonies.

Postmaster P. P. O'Brien of Los Angeles in a brief address congratulated Mrs. C. P. Mosher, the Inglewood postmistress, and the city of Inglewood, upon the completion of the spacious new $325,000 building in which the postoffice is housed. Mrs. Mosher told of the realization of her dreams, the culmination of five years as postmistress here. She pointed out the unprecedented growth of the office in that time, beginning with less than 3000 population, to which mail was delivered, since which time Inglewood alone has had a 710 per cent growth, which, with the environs of the city and the present rural routes means mail distribution to more than 40,000 population.

BURBANK NOW HAS FULL-TIME DAILY

BURBANK, Oct. 30.—Next Monday will see the demise of the Burbank Pathfinder, which has been published here for the past five years. Recently the Pathfinder has been published in connection with the Daily Review as the Monday edition, but with the consolidation the Review will now be published as a six-day-a-week daily. The Pathfinder was established five years ago and was gotten out the first year by W. A. C. Greene, after which the publishers of the Review purchased it and have since been putting it out as a weekly.

TO BUILD BLYTHE BRIDGE

Legal Tangles Unraveled so That Work Will Soon Begin on Much Needed Span

RIVERSIDE, Oct. 30.—Obstructed for more than four years by legislative tangles at Washington and bitter opposition in several quarters, construction of a toll bridge across the Ehrenberg Ferry at Blythe, Riverside county, will start Monday, according to a telegram received today by Secretary Meyer L. Schoenthal of the local Chamber of Commerce. The telegram was from T. Mahncke, secretary of the Blythe chamber.

Since Congress finally authorized the bridge at its last session, Lyle Harrington, Kansas City engineer, has been negotiating for finances with which to carry out the undertaking, and these details are now arranged, according to the telegram.

The bridge will be 950 feet long, with six concrete piers and five steel spans. A twenty-foot roadway will be provided. The structure will cost approximately $200,000.

Discovery that bills authorizing the bridge passed by the Senate and the House, differed in several essential details, caused the last delay to the construction. The muddle was finally cleared up, however, and on May 5, 1926, President Coolidge signed the bill under which the project will be carried out.

The bridge will be completed in September, 1927, it is estimated.

BANKERS ELECT NEW OFFICERS

San Bernardino County Association Reports Increase in Business

REDLANDS, Oct. 30.—Jay C. Sexton of the First National Bank of this city, was elected vice-president of the San Bernardino County Bankers' Association at the annual meeting held today. Edwin T. Rhodes, president of the First National Bank of Chino, was named president; G. P. McCorkle of Cucamonga, secretary, and C. W. Curtis of Colton, treasurer.

Combined resources of all banks in San Bernardino county have increased nearly $7,000,000 during the period from June 30, 1924, to June 30, 1926, according to a report prepared by G. A. Marsh, cashier of the First National Bank of Victorville, and president of the bankers' association during the year just ended.

The combined resources totaled $29,737,000 on June 30, 1924; $32,157,000 on June 30, 1925, and $36,427,000 on June 30, 1926, Mr. Martin announced. Twenty-nine banks are operated in fourteen cities in the county, he reported.

R. M. Phillo, cashier of the Merchants' National Trust and Savings Bank of Los Angeles, addressed the gathering last night on "Free Service Given by Banks." Frederick R. Behrends, vice-president of the California Trust Company of Los Angeles, spoke on "Human Service and the Trust Company."

PLAN TO SELL DEPOT SITE IN VAN NUYS

VAN NUYS, Oct. 30.—Although it has been stated that negotiations have been closed for the purchase of the Pacific Electric depot site on Van Nuys Boulevard and Friar street, it is learned today that such is not the case and that the rumors are the result of a deal that has been on for a year or more. The last report is to the effect that the I. W. Hollingsworth Company of Los Angeles is making effort to buy the site, which is in the heart of town, for $100,000, and that the firm contemplates the putting up of a large building block. It is stated that the deal is being held up by a five-year lease on a spur track leading to a grain and feed company on the tract and that until this lease expires or is bought the transfer will be delayed. It has been stated that if the railway company is able to sell the site, the depot will be moved to another point farther south in the townsite.

LARGE FORTUNE IS BEQUEATHED BY JURIST

SANTA ANA, Oct. 30.—Naming his five children as chief heirs and including memorial bequests to the Sunday-school and the Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist Church, the will of the late Judge Z. B. West has been filed in Superior Court for probate. It involved an estate valued at approximately $125,000. O. M. Robbins named in the will as executor filed the probate petition. Attorneys for the estate are the two sons of Judge West, Z. B. West, Jr., and Franklin G. West. Besides a legacy of $500 to the Baptist Sunday School of which he had been superintendent for twenty-eight years, Judge West bequeathed $2000 to the Women's Missionary Society of the church as a memorial to his wife. Mrs. West, who had been one of the leaders in the church passed away nine years ago.

LAST TRIBUTE TO PROMINENT WOMAN

SAN FERNANDO, Oct. 30.—Funeral services will be conducted Monday morning for the late Mrs. Celie Flynn, 82 years of age, prominent resident of this city, who died yesterday after suffering a stroke of apoplexy. Services will be conducted in the St. Ferdinand Church, beginning at 9:30 a.m. Interment will be made in Calvary Cemetery.

Mrs. Flynn was the owner of the Porter Hotel and Flynn Hotel, and said to have been interested in much other property in the valley. Active in welfare work, she was a prominent club woman and a charter member of the San Fernando Woman's Club.

She leaves five sons, J. Leo Flynn, Merwin Flynn, Harry Flynn, Thomas Flynn and Francis Flynn, and one daughter, Cecelia Flynn, all of whom live in San Fernando.

MISSION ACRFS TO BUILD NEW CHURCH

MISSION ACRES, Oct. 30.—Three hundred residents attended a reception at the Mission Acres clubhouse in honor of Rev. J. H. Essig, newly appointed minister of the Community Church. The address of welcome was given by Mrs. L. B. Tilden, prominent woman realty dealer. Members of the church are interested in plans for a new church building on a lot owned by the organization at Sepulveda Boulevard and Rayen street. Half of the fund for the edifice already has been raised. As soon as the remainder is available construction will be started.

TO PLAY FLAPPER ROLE

VAN NUYS, Oct. 30.—The senior class of the Van Nuys High School will put on "Merton of the Movies next week. Laurence Bishop, will play the role of Merton. Virginia Keller, said to be the prettiest girl in the school, will play the part of the flapper girl, one of the leading roles of the play.

CAPTURE CASES OF BOOTLEG

Dry Raid at Balboa Nets Booze, Bootleggers and High-Grade Automobiles

SANTA ANA, Oct. 30.—Six men were arrested, three high-priced automobiles were confiscated and 150 cases of Scotch whiskey, valued at approximately $9000, were seized in a spectacular raid on Balboa Island, near the Channel entrance at two a.m. today by Sheriff's officers accompanied by three Federal men.

Of the six men arrested three are declared by officers to be well-known members of a Southern California booze ring. They are Frank Cornero, Morris Finnebeck and Eddie Logue. Others arrested were Harry Young, J. Lawson and Frank Marsh.

Young is said to be a former motorcycle officer of Seal Beach and is known to officers here according to Sheriff Sam Jernigan. The raid was conducted by Sheriff Jernigan, after information had been received from Federal agents that liquor was to be unloaded. Three Federal agents were present during the raid.

Santa Ana officers who participated were Joe Irvine, Jesse Elliott, Dan Adams, Don Mosley and H. W. McKague. When officers arrived at the head of the island they met a large car loaded with liquor coming out. The driver, Frank Marsh, was arrested, then the officers rushed to the water edge where they surprised the drivers of the two other loaded machines, seizing them.

Just as the liquor was confiscated, according to Dan Adams, a small coupe drove up: in it were Cornero and J. Lawson. They were promptly arrested. Cornero was said to have had on his person at the time a 44-40 revolver with telescopic sights and with a barrel fourteen inches in length. The six men were taken to the Sheriff's office here, also the liquor. The men were turned over to other Federal officers who had arrived in Santa Ana and were taken to Los Angeles where they will be booked on Federal charges, Sheriff Jernigan said.

Modern Maids Must Put Up Bond, Says Autoist

MONTEREY PARK, Oct. 30.—A time-honored custom will be thrown into the discard if the ideas of J. Mendoza, 2818 Michigan avenue, Los Angeles, are generally adopted. For he made the declaration today before Police Judge F. Gualano that next time he takes a girl out in his car he going to make her put up a deposit to cover any fines that may be imposed upon him as a result of the ride.

Mendoza was arrested for careless driving. In his case the charge meant that he was devoting only one hand to the guidance of the car. The other arm was being used for the comfort of his girl companion. He told the court that he had no idea he was breaking any law, but that he believed he was only being nice to the girl and adding to her pleasure.

He was fined $25 and then it was that he informed the judge that he would protect himself financially in future joy rides.

NEW BOARD GOVERNS RIVERSIDE CHAMBER

RIVERSIDE, Oct. 30.—Management of the Riverside Chamber of Commerce today passed from the hands of the board of directors which has been serving for the last year when the final session of the governing body was conducted to dispatch routine business before the advent of the new board November 3.

Appreciation was expressed to President Hiram P. Whitehead and Secretary Meyer L. Schoenthal for their work during the last year, and President Whitehead responded with a brief talk, in which he thanked the board for their co-operation.

Eight of the directors present yesterday have completed their terms in office, their places being filled by those chosen in the final election which closed last Tuesday night. Four directors hold over for another year.

SHERIFF WINS IN RACE WITH TRAIN

SANTA ANA, Oct. 30.—Sheriff Sam Jernigan raced a Santa Fe passenger train from Santa Ana to Fullerton yesterday to make the arrest of a San Diego man, Z. M. Foster, wanted in the southern city for alleged embezzlement.

Jernigan was notified by telegram from San Diego that Foster was on the train, bound for Santa Ana. Deputy Sheriffs Ed McClellan and Jesse Elliott boarded the train in Santa Ana while Jernigan raced his car to Fullerton. McClellan and Elliott had located their man by the time the train reached Fullerton and handed him over to the Sheriff.

JAMES FLIRTED WITH DEATH

Marine's Musket Cause of Rapid-Fire Explanation By Postoffice Janitor

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 30.—James Washington Turner nearly became the playground for a 30-caliber rifle bullet last night when he invaded the inner sanctum of Bakersfield's postoffice and was mistaken by an alert marine for a mail bandit.

Shortly before 8 o'clock, the package delivery window opening into the postoffice lobby was thrown open. Turner slid through from the lobby into the mail sorting room.

"Halt!" He stared into the business end of Marine Private Ivan's hair-trigger Springfield rifle. For the space of three minutes Turner did some tall explaining to the marine. First of all he wasn't one of these here mail robbers, no sir. He was only the postoffice janitor.

Dozens of times he had taken the same means of entrance to do some night work in the building. But the marine was new to his job, and he couldn't know that. The door had been locked so the janitor had taken the next easiest way into the mail room.

Private Ivan lowered his rifle, yawned and wearily continued his drear protection of Uncle Sam's mails.

Heavy Wind in Orange County Does Damage

SANTA ANA, Oct. 30.—Although a strong wind was blowing at a rate of from twenty-eight to thirty-two miles an hour over Orange county today little damage was reported from the various sections. Several Southern California Edison Company poles were blown down and power was off in the southern section of Santa Ana for a few hours this morning. A crew was sent and by noon all lines were repaired.

Slight damage was done in the county to citrus crops, according to A. A. Brock, county horticultural commissioner. The humidity dropped approximately 80 per cent in the county during the early-morning hours but if the wind does not last long the damage will be slight. According to Brock, most of the damage will be caused by defoliation of the trees and by the scarring of the fruit. Persimmon growers in the county also will suffer from the wind, although most of the persimmons already are picked. Avocados will be slightly damaged, according to reports. Walnut growers will be slightly aided as the wind will bring down all the nuts remaining on the trees.

According to Antar Deraga, weather observer at Newport Beach, the humidity dropped from 93 early this morning to 12 at about 7 o'clock. The wind velocity along the coast was reported by Deraga to be thirty-one miles an hour at 11 o'clock today. Several trees were reported to be down in various parts of Santa Ana but no serious damage done. A number of the large ornamental light globes in North Main street were blown off the posts and broken.

POPPY WILL BE USED AS LURE TO TOURISTS

VAN NUYS, Oct. 30.—Several hundred pounds of California poppy seed are being given away to individuals by members of the Van Nuys Woman's Club. Citizens are asked to scatter the seed over vacant lots and other barren places as part of the general beautification plan of the club, which is now in the midst of a drive to plant trees all over the Van Nuys townsite. "This spring," said Mrs. Estelle Moehn, president of the club, "numbers of tourists again will pass through Van Nuys. It is the plan that poppies and all other sorts of flowers will greet them as they come into San Fernando Valley. There is a lure about the poppy. The floral look may keep many of these tourists as permanent residents."

HAPPY THRONG VISITS ANAHEIM

ANAHEIM, Oct. 30.—A crowd of several thousand merrymakers last night thronged the streets of this city in observance of the third annual Halloween party of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association. Two blocks of Center street, in the main part of town, were roped off and the merrymakers, who dressed in grotesque costumes, spent the evening in dancing and watching vaudeville provided by the merchants of the town. A mammoth parade about the town added hundreds of people to the party. One entire block was turned over to a big street dance, while on a stage constructed in another block vaudeville was presented. Prizes for the best costumes and for the best floats were awarded.

EYE FOR AN EYE

PASADENA, Oct. 30.—"An eye for an eye—" is a rule of life that is favored by fowls as well as men, Mrs. A. G. Brown, 1938 Whitfield Road, learned today to her discomfiture.

When she was attempting to remove a foreign body from the optic of one of her barnyard hens, another chicken, mistaking her motive, flew up and pecked Mrs. Brown squarely in her own orb.

At the Emergency Hospital she learned that her eye is not permanently injured.

PLANT SITE SOUGHT

BURBANK, Oct. 30.—Burbank will become the site of a textile factory if land suited for the purpose can be obtained. Mrs. M. Reeves of New Philadelphia, O., in company with Ward Davies, an old friend, has looked over the city with this plan in mind.

San Diego Attorney Advises B of Supervisors Not to Pay Detectives

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 30.—Albert J. Lee, legal adviser to County Board of Supervisors, again holds opinion contrary to that of Atty.-Gen. U. S. Webb, and the Board of in their session Monday, will disallow the claim of the Detective Agency for services to the San Diego county jury, if they follow Lee's advice.

TRIBUTE TO RETIRING RAILROADER

Fellow Employees Pay High Compliment to Old Time Official

PASADENA, Oct. 30. — Col. T. C. Peck, veteran general passenger agent of the Union Pacific Railway, who is retiring after a half-century of railroading, was tendered a complimentary dinner tonight at the Hotel Maryland here by his fellow-employees of the Union Pacific system.

High officials of the road joined with lesser employees who have been Mr. Peck's friends for many years in a rousing tribute to the popular official.

The honor guest of the occasion began his railroad career in Indiana in 1867, and came to Southern California ten years later, going to work for the rickety line between Los Angeles and San Pedro which was the precursor of the Union Pacific in this part of the country. When it became the Los Angeles, San Pedro and Salt Lake Line, he was made assistant general passenger agent and then general passenger agent. He retained the post, with headquarters in Los Angeles, when the Union Pacific acquired the road.

Frank H. Adams, Union Pacific agent in Pasadena, was instrumental in arranging tonight's testimonial banquet here.

Reservoir Adds Large Capacity to Water Plant

ONTARIO, Oct. 30.—That Ontario will have nothing to fear in the way of a water shortage after the first of next December was the announcement made today by City Service Manager Otto S. Reen, who stated that the last batch of concrete in the city's new mammoth 10,000,000-gallon reservoir at Eighth street and Campus avenue was poured late last night.

As soon as the concrete has had sufficient time to properly set the concrete columns which will support the roof will be put in place and the big tank will be roofed over with a heavy grade of corrugated rust-proof iron. The service manager estimates that this final work will be completed within the next thirty days when the water will be turned into the new reservoir. Several days will be required to fill it, he states, but when the big structure is once filled it will hold an immense reserve that will be sufficient to care for the wants of the city for many years to come. It will be coupled with the other municipal storage reservoirs in an equalizing system which will provide all sections with an adequate water pressure at all times.

WANT JUNIOR COLLEGE

Northern Orange County Starts Fight for School

FULLERTON, Oct. 30.—Keen interest was being evinced in this city today following a meeting of the local Chamber of Commerce membership at which action was taken in favor of a separate junior college for the northern part of Orange county. The gathering went on record as supporting the move for an institution of its own in opposition to counter-agitation by Santa Ana for a county junior college and the abolition of the Fullerton Junior College.

Efforts are to be made to gain the support of Anaheim in the fight. The directors of the chamber of that city are to meet with Fullerton directors next Thursday and discuss the issue. The Anaheim chamber board at a meeting a few weeks ago went on record as favoring a site for a county junior college provided it was located north of the Santa Ana River.

In view of the fact that the Orange County Harbor bond issue will come up for another vote early in December and that the votes of the ranchers in the northern end of the county is needed, a warm fight is promised by those favoring the move for a separate junior college.

STUDENTS ARREST LOCKER BURGLAR

FULLERTON, Oct. 30.—Edward F. Sheldon, 32, Los Angeles, is held in the City Jail here on a second-degree burglary charge following his capture on the high school campus here by William Grafton, Anaheim, and other students at the junior college. Sheldon, according to Grafton, broke open his locker in the gymnasium and stole a watch and a small sum of money. The watch is alleged to have been found on the prisoner.

The students held Sheldon until police arrived. Three glass cutters, two small screw drivers and a pair of heavy wire cutter pliers were in Sheldon's pocket, police report.

SUES FOR MALPRACTICE

CLAREMONT, Oct. 30.—Dr. Frank Piersol, prominent physician, city official and club leader of this city, has been made defendant in a suit for $26,000 filed in the Superior Court of San Bernardino by James M. Rutledge, Ontario business man, who charges that unskilled surgery practiced by the local doctor resulted in his being crippled for life. Fred Duffy of San Bernardino is attorney for the plaintiff.

S WITH VIEW TORNEY-GENERAL

ttorney Advises Board ervisors Not to y Detectives

30.—Albert J. Lee, legal adviser to the rvisors, again holds opinion contrary to B. Webb, and the Board of Supervisors y, will disallow the claim of the Firman ervices to the San Diego county grand ee's advice.

Lee's opinions, adverse to those of the Attorney-General, have been upheld in the courts. In the present instance, Lee holds to the decisions of Atty.-Gen. Webb, that anyone named by Webb to advise the grand jury in matters from which the District Attorney is disqualified, is clothed with the same authority as Webb himself as a State officer, and in assuming the duties of a District Attorney becomes clothed with the authority of a District Attorney. Lee holds that Richard Kittrelle, who was sent by Webb to take charge of the grand jury investigations, and who is said to have authorized the employment of the Firman agency, was not, and could not be, a Deputy Attorney-General, or officer, but was only an employee.

Furthermore, in support of his opinion, Lee cites a Supreme Court decision that was concurred in by Judge W. A. Sloane, successor to Kittrelle, under appointment by Webb, when Sloane was an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Kittrelle's appointment was by virtue of Section 472 of the political code, as stated by Webb himself in his appointment and Lee quotes that section, "that whenever a District Attorney in any county of this State shall, for any reason, become disqualified from conducting any criminal prosecution within such county the Attorney-General may employ special counsel to conduct such prosecution and the attorney's fee in such case shall be a legal charge against the State."

Webb's letter of appointment to Kittrelle also is quoted by Lee, and it starts out with: "Pursuant to the provisions of Section 472 of the Political Code you have been selected and employed as special counsel."

Since Kittrelle was not made a public officer by the public or principal, and himself testified in court that he took no oath of office, and since his appointment was as an employee, Lee treats him as an employee who could conduct a "criminal prosecution" for which the District Attorney was disqualified, and proceeds to show that there was no case for prosecution when Kittrelle came to San Diego, and that the employment of Mrs. Firman and her operatives was not for prosecution of any specific case, according to her testimony and that of others at the Board of Supervisors hearing on her claim for $4500 Thursday.

When Kittrelle came here, he approved and authorized continuation of the Firman employment, it was necessary to make a case to prosecute. In the strict role of special counsel, Prosecutor Kittrelle did appear in Criminal Court to ask dismissal of indictments against Mr. and Mrs. George R. Daley, but left town when indictments were returned against Dist.-Atty. C. C. Kempley and C. G. Selleck, Assistant District Attorney, resigned his commission and left the prosecution in the hands of Sloane who had just been named by Webb to assist him.

"I have reached the conclusion," says Lee, "that special counsel employed by the Attorney-General to conduct a criminal prosecution exercises no official function in the matter of contracting for services of detectives to make a general investigation of crime."

Insurance Men Elect Officers at Convention

LONG BEACH, Oct. 30.—H. J. Tillen of Sacramento, was named president of the California Association of Insurance Agents in the closing session of the nineteenth annual convention of that organization at the Hotel Virgin's here.

Election of officers gave the following results: First vice-president, B. Sweet, Fresno; second vice-president, W. F. Ludington, San Diego; regional vice-presidents, Francis L. Dowell, Riverside and Thomas Chamberlain, Red Bluff. The secretary, will the by-laws of the organization, be named by the executive committee which in turn is appointed by the president.

The final hours of the convention were spent today by the delegates in a golf tournament at the Virginia Country Club, an inspection tour of the harbor and in attending the football game at the Coliseum at Los Angeles. The annual ball was held at the Virginia last night.

Delving into the political realm for a short time at its final business session, the insurance agents went on record as being opposed to proposition No. 18 on the November ballot, known as the Water and Power

The Sunday School Lesson

NOVEMBER 7, 1926

CTORY FOR THE YOUNGER GENERATION

(The International Sunday-school Lesson for November 7 is "The of Jericho"—Joshua vi:12-20.)

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS

we have an old story which passed into the knowledge of those who are not familiar with Bible. The dramatic fall of Jericho, when the walls of the great on the Jordan Plain collapsed after seven days of circumambulation by the Israelites, may be approached from a new angle. It represented the great achievement of the generation of Hebrews. Except only Joshua and Caleb, not a one of all those whom Moses had out of bondage survived to cross Jordan into Canaan. It was the generation that won the of Promise.

time I go to the marvelous Cairo Museum I look for the in a side corridor, containing famous Tell el-Amarna Tablets. resemble a dish of shredded. As is generally known, these tablets, covered with cuneiform, were found at Tell el- on the banks of the Nile, half way between Luxor and Cairo amidst the ruins of the city built by Ikhnaton (earlier called Amenhotep IV.)

These letters were written to Ikhnaton, the reigning pharaoh and great religious reformer of Egypt, by the governors of cities and districts in Palestine and Syria, asking help against various enemies. One of the foes against whom the governors sought help were the "Khibari" or Hebrews who, said the officials, were invading Canaan from the East. In Egypt last winter, I asked Dr. James H. Breasted, the historian, if in his judgment the "Khibari" of the Tell el-Amarna tablets were the Hebrews' under Joshua and he replied, "Not a doubt of it." Some sceptical youngsters will believe the clay tablets when they refuse to credit the Scripture.

SMASHING VICTORY AND NEW ERA

At Jericho manna ceased to fall for the Children of Israel. Thereafter they should live on the land. Over Jordan, they were actually in the Land of Promise. It was theirs; but it still had to be won.

Gen. Joshua had his orders from headquarters. This victory meant more than the conquest of Jericho; it would be an advertisement to all the other cities ahead of them of the might of the invaders and of their supernatural resources.

For six days the armies of Israel, led by the priests and the Ark of the Covenant—we fight in vain except the presence of the Lord go with us—walked in silence about the walls of Jericho, never firing an arrow at the jeering soldiers on the walls. That unoriental silence of the Hebrew host was as impressive as the final tumult of victory.

On the seventh day the march was seven times repeated. Then at a blast of the priestly rams' horns, and at a concerted shout from the besiegers, the walls fell flat. Jericho was conquered!

Reams of paper will be wasted, and hours of precious time consumed in the study of this lesson, to show that the miraculous collapse of the walls of Jericho was caused by ether waves, set in motion by the army's tread, by its great shout and by the blast of the ram's horns. Possibly so; God uses law and agencies which we do not yet understand. Whatever His method, it is enough to know that the great victory was won by spiritual as well as by material agencies; faith and works co-operated; which is the only way the Church's Jerichos are to be mastered today.

REPRIMAND IN SHIFT OF RUM CASES

Ignorance of Court Rules Pleaded in Explanation by Magistrate Chambers

Municipal Judge Chambers appeared before Presiding Judge Willis yesterday and explained his action in transferring liquor cases from one court to another by declaring himself in ignorance of the Municipal Court rules that decree no case shall be transferred from one department to another without the approval of the presiding judge.

He was reprimanded for his action by Judge Willis and cautioned against repeating his action.

Judge Chambers has been a judge in the lower courts of Los Angeles for twenty years. Judge Willis's action yesterday officially ended a three-day investigation of the irregular transfer of four rum cases recently from Municipal Judge Turney's department to Department 18, where Judge Chambers was sitting at that time.

These cases, involving E. W. Mitchell, charged with the possession and transportation of 195 cases of Scotch whisky; C. A. Lewis, James Ellison and William Martin, also charged with Wright Act violations, were taken from Municipal Judge Turney's court, advanced upon the calendar and disposed of with nominal fines by Judge Chambers and without the knowledge of Presiding Judge Willis.

The men had originally pleaded not guilty before Judge Turney, but Attorney S. W. Thompson, representing them, and who admitted that he "had noticed the leniency of Judge Chambers," asked that jurist to accept a changed plea from them and dispose of their cases.

Judge Chambers later consented to do so, in "ignorance," he said, of court rules regarding transfers, and J. W. Saunders, deputy court clerk in his department, at the request of Attorney Thompson, obtained the complaints from the criminal department.

Judge Willis yesterday declared that in his opinion "Judge Chambers, a man of established integrity, had not intentionally made the error," and that he had been cautioned against repeating it.

BAR SLOT MACHINES

SAN GABRIEL, Oct. 30.—Slot machines, where the element of chance constitutes the biggest attraction, are to be barred from San Gabriel, it was announced today by City Marshal A. E. Manzer. The marshal has notified all business places in the city that the devices must be removed.

Complaints have been made by parents of school children that the youngsters have been using their lunch money in learning the intricacies of the machines.

World's Greatest Service for Buying and Selling Real Estate

What Constitutes A Bargain In Real Estate?

Low price is not the only guide to bargains. The wise investor often chooses for vastly different reasons. He seeks the strategic location in the path of growing values. His selection may be uniform in price with others around it, and often this is an advantage—it indicates a strong market speedy development. The future worth, not the present price makes it an exceptional buy. Similarly, a home is a bargain when it really gives satisfaction and happiness — regardless of what you pay. Its accommodations for your family, its surroundings and conveniences, determine its value to you. Study The Times for bargains that apply directly in your case.

Over Two Billion Dollars Made By Real Estate Owners In Past 10 Years

The assessed valuation of real estate in Los Angeles county during the past ten years has increased over a billion dollars, as shown by the County Auditor's figures below:

10 Year Gain $1,000,715,475

Since real estate in this county is valued for assessment at approximately forty cents on the dollar—the gross estimated profit to real estate owners in the last ten years reaches the colossal total of over two billion dollars! The Los Angeles Times sells millions of dollars worth of real estate weekly; it has played a leading part in this great profit making.

BANK CLEARINGS AT HIGHER MARK

Total for October Greater Than Year Ago

Aggregate for Ten Months Larger Than in 1925

Improvement of Business in Territory Reflected

October bank clearings in Los Angeles, as reported yesterday by the Los Angeles Clearinghouse Association, showed an increase of 8.7 per cent over the corresponding month of last year, and reflect a continued improvement in business conditions in the Southwest territory. October was the twentieth consecutive month in which the total for the same month of the preceding year has been surpassed.

Clearings for October aggregated $766,240,705.15, as compared with $705,582,959.19 in the corresponding month of last year, an increase of $60,657,745.96, or 8.7 per cent. The October total also showed an increase of $13,423,928.15, or approximately 2 per cent, over the aggregate of $752,816,777 in the month of September, last. In only two months of this year, March and July, were clearings greater than in the month just closed.

ANOTHER RECORD

October also produced the greatest amount of clearings for a single day in the history of the Los Angeles Clearinghouse. On the 14th inst., total clearings amounted to $41,771,889.73, exceeding the previous high mark of $41,112,490.29, established November 13, 1925, by $659,399.44.

In the first ten months of the current year bank clearings amounted to $7,402,192,577.46, as against $6,529,978,653.63 in the corresponding period of 1925, an increase of $872,213,923.83, or approximately 13.4 per cent.

Should clearings in the remaining two months of the year continue to show corresponding increases over a year ago, the total for 1926 will be approximately $1,000,000,000 greater than the record total of $7,945,493,930.70, established in 1925.

SEPTEMBER EXPORTS OF NATION GAIN

Substantial Increase is Shown in Movement of Manufactured Goods

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. (AP)—The growth in exports of manufactured goods both in volume and in proportion to the nation's total foreign trade was strikingly illustrated today by Commerce Department trade figures for September showing exports of finished manufactures were $170,485,000.

This was 38 per cent of the total of export commodities, while for the same month last year manufacturing exports were $143,481,000, or 34 7-10 per cent.

The only falling off in the export trade during the period was noted in raw material intended for use in manufacturing, which amounted to $120,607,000 against $132,329,000.

The department analyzes the month's trade together with comparison for the same month of last year as follows:

Exports—Manufactured goods $170,485,000 against $143,418,000; partly manufactured goods, $55,450,000 against $50,143,000; foods ready for consumption $47,839,000 against $52,206,000; raw foodstuffs, $46,484,000 against $34,632,000; raw material for use in manufacturing $120,607,000 against $132,329,000.

Imports—Manufactured goods $73,873,000 against $65,137,000; partly manufactured goods $62,779,000 against $58,129,000; goods ready for consumption $32,588,000 against $33,278,000; raw foodstuffs $39,108,000 against $45,167,000; raw material for use in manufacturing $135,131,000 against $148,243,000.

NEW MARK IN TRAFFIC AT HARBOR

Exports and Imports in October Reach Highest Record in History

Foreign commerce in and out of Los Angeles Harbor during the month just closed broke all records for a single month in the history of the port, according to a statement made yesterday by Ernest N. Varnado, statistician of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

During the month of October a grand total of 603,372 tons of cargo with an aggregate value of $14,802,073 was handled at the local harbor in the foreign trade alone.

Foreign exports in October represented a total of 545,277 tons, valued at $10,348,453. This is an increase of 34,000 tons over the previous foreign export record. Foreign imports supplied a total of 58,095 tons with an aggregate value of $4,453,620, an increase of approximately 7000 tons over the previous foreign import record.

Final figures on port traffic at Los Angeles Harbor will be available this evening, and, as furnished by the marine exchange of the Chamber of Commerce, will be published in these columns tomorrow.

Says East Has Confidence in Business Here

Development in Southern California which will even surpass that of the last few years is being predicted in eastern financial circles, according to R. W. Phelps, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the American Can Company. Eastern confidence in the fundamental stability of this city has been established on the highest plane in its history, Mr. Phelps added.

He pointed to the fact that the directors of the American Can Company here, just authorized a $1,500,000 expansion of the local branch manufacturing plant as proof that the financiers of the East have sufficient faith in the future of this section to invest their money in improvements. In making this $1,500,000 investment, Mr. Phelps said, the directors of the American Can Company, are planning to make the Los Angeles factory the largest of their chain of plants on the Pacific Coast. A large manufacturing building, measuring 180 feet in width and 600 feet in length, a box factory and equipment comprise the improvements now being provided in the Los Angeles establishment.

BANK CLEARINGS OF NATION LOWER

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (AP)—Bank clearings throughout the country this week dropped 5.9 per cent compared with a year ago, a total of $9,248,923,016 being compiled by the Commercial and Financial Chronical, against $9,387,465,083. New York City showed a decrease of 8.8 per cent.

NEW ERA FOR GAS INDUSTRY

Success of New Refrigerator May Signal Period of Popularity for Stocks; Have Good Record

BY EARLE E. CROWE

Aside from the probable effect of the new gas-fired refrigerator on the business of the companies manufacturing the electrical type of refrigerator, certain speculative possibilities in the shares of gas companies are worthy of consideration if the device is commercially successful. Undoubtedly many of the gas companies, following the lead of the Consolidated Gas Company of New York, will seek to enter the market with refrigerators of their own in the expectation of profiting from both the sale of the device and from the increase in gas consumption.

Like the power and light companies, the gas manufacturers are continually looking for new sources of consumption that will provide continuous load. The power companies have been particularly successful in the development and sale of appliances for this purpose, while the gas manufacturers seemed to have lagged behind in the competition for new business from the appliance trade. Possibly the refrigerator will open the door to a volume that will signal a new era for the gas industry, since it is understood that the gas-fired refrigerator compares favorably in cost of operation with the electrical models.

SHARES AFFECTED

To the speculator the possibilities of success for the gas refrigerator are significant. Stocks like Consolidated Gas, People's Gas, Laclede Gas and others might conceivably enjoy sudden popularity similar to that which greeted the electrical refrigerator stocks. Moreover, the refrigerator publicity should attract attention to some of the sound stocks in the gas industry that have been overshadowed by more sensational developments in the power and light branch of the utility field.

Only in recent years have the gas stocks begun to regain the consideration from investors they once held. They were, in fact, one of the first media for the funds of investors, principally because of the stability of the illuminating gas business from 1800 until nearly the close of the century. Their popularity faded rapidly when cheap electric illumination appeared, and the industry was compelled to turn to other markets. That it has been successful in the development of the heating and cooking business has been overlooked to a certain extent by the investing public.

APPLIANCES GAIN

It has been the consumption from the appliances that has given the industry a new stability and placed the securities of gas companies in the category of conservative investments. But when the possibilities of the refrigerator are considered, it is evident that an entirely new cycle may lie before the gas manufacturers. With approximately 14,000,000 gas meters in service in the United States, the market for the refrigerator is particularly inviting.

Already the gas industry lists as customers a fair percentage of the households in the United States. The American Gas Association estimates that 6,400,000 domestic cooking appliances, 1,300,000 water heaters, 900,000 space heaters, and almost 10,000,000 incandescent mantel burners are in use. Last year the total sales of gas were approximately 421,800,000,000 cubic feet, compared with 405,000,000,000 in the previous year.

XVI.—"PAR VALUE" OFTEN A MEANINGLESS TERM

"I've owned a So-and-So car several years and I am thinking of buying some of the stock. What is the par value?"

The speaker was a middle-aged man. He was talking to a security dealer.

"The stock is no par, but what difference does that make?" said the dealer. "Almost every one who asks me about stock asks that same question. I'll answer you in such a manner that you not only won't ask me that question again, but also that you won't care what the par value of any stock is.

"I have 100 acres of wheatland. Suppose I offered it to you. The land might have been in my family seventy-five years. Would you ask me what the value of that land was at the time it was originally made into farm land? Could I easily find that out? And if I could, would it help you in determining its present-day value? Not a bit. Your judgment of a fair price for the land would not be influenced by what it was worth when my grandfather homesteaded it.

"You have exactly the same situation in a stock. The par value is simply a price put on it at a certain time. It represents the price at the time the property was originally devoted to its present corporate use. It is interesting but valueless in determining the present value.

"So, when I tell you a stock is no par, there is no confusion in your mind. If you wish to you can dig back and see what the company figured it was worth when it originally started.

"Is that clear? All right. Sit down and let's see if we can figure out what the stock is worth; what the company's record for earnings is, what it owns, what its obligations and its prospects are, and how efficiently it is managed."

PRODUCTION OF PORK LIGHT

Recent figures indicate that California is producing only 7.7 per cent of the pork and pork products required for local consumption, J. A. McNaughton, vice-president and general manager of the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, states in his week review of the live-stock situation. He states further:

"California required over 491,000,000 pounds of pork and pork products in 1925 and only produced around 37,000,000 pounds. It can readily be seen that with the population estimated at over 5,500,000 people and a per capita consumption of pork of seventy-seven pounds per annum the Western States have a worth-while opportunity in taking advantage of this outlet for porkers which is second to none in the United States.

"This fact, along with the differential between Middle Western prices and California prices, comprises what has been aptly termed a 'protective tariff;' for several months past a spread of around $2 per hundredweight having been maintained in the Coast's favor over hog prices at Missouri River points.

"The result of this has been that since 1919, when the hog population of California started to dwindle, the prices realized for California hogs at the point of production have been higher on an average than for any point in the United States.

"With prevailing price levels it has been predicted that production would be stimulated to a point where a lowering of prices might be expected during the coming months. This increased production hasn't materialized, and a factor in bringing about a continued short supply is likely to result from the cholera situation in the Middle West. A large number of breeding herds has been completely destroyed, and the effect of this will, of course, be felt throughout the country.

"Even with increased production and lowering of price levels the western hog producer still occupies a desirable position through his ability to utilize the outlets represented by the constantly increasing consumer demand on the Coast. He will always have the advantage of the differential in his favor in transportation expense, shrinkage, risk, etc., incident to shipping middle-western hogs to the Coast, regardless of the extent of production. This will apply, of course, only up to the point where western production will be able to meet western demand and this is unlikely for some years to come.

"With California supplying only 7 per cent of the pork and pork products required it can fairly be estimated that not over 25 per cent or 30 per cent of the hogs required to meet the Coast demand are produced west of the Rocky Mountains. This being the case, the likelihood of overproduction doesn't seem imminent.

"In developing hog production the selection of type is most important. We shouldn't turn to any particular breed so much as we should to selecting the bacon 'type' which is demanded for Coast needs. The local demand is largely for pork to cut up fresh or to be turned into hams and bacons, from hogs ranging from 160 pounds to 190 pounds.

"There are enough middle-western farmers now located in the Western States who have had broad experience in hog production, if they would raise hogs and apply their experience, a volume would result sufficient to supply the Coast demand."

THE INVESTOR

Laws Restricting Investments of Savings Banks Held as Operating Injuriously to Certain Class of Railroad Securities.

[Copyright, 1926, by New York Evening Post, Inc.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Agitation has been started for a change in the laws of some States relative to restrictions in the purchase of railroad bonds by savings banks. The Committee of Railroad Securities of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks of the United States began the discussion by declaring at the seventh annual convention of the association in Philadelphia that the dividend requirements now in force will always operate against the bonds of some carriers as investments.

Most bankers and other investment authorities in Wall Street have contended from time to time that the laws governing savings banks' investments have not proven entirely satisfactory in practice, but heretofore their efforts to change these laws have been directed primarily in the interest of public utility bonds. In pleading the case of such utility securities, they have oftentimes compared their investment qualities with those of certain railroad issues.

Savings banks are, by virtue of the nature of their business, large purchasers of bonds. The scope of their purchases naturally coincides to a certain extent with the market available to the investment banker. In other words, new selling fields are opened to the banker whenever restrictions on a certain type of security are raised.

On the other hand, being large purchasers of bonds in a limited field, places the savings banks in a position of bidding against themselves for securities and automatically forcing the price of such securities to unwarranted levels, which, in turn, reduces the yields which they can obtain on their investments.

The interest of the companies concerned lies in the fact that the value of their bonds or the price they must pay for new funds is affected either favorably or otherwise by whatever restrictions govern savings' investments.

The investor's interest in the situation is primarily due to the probable effect and change in the laws may have on the value of the securities which he holds and the fact that as a result of present laws governing savings banks' investments the yield on certain types of bonds which he might otherwise wish to purchase is reduced to a point at which they are no longer attractive.

It is doubtful if laws could be framed which would be satisfactory to all concerned, but it would seem that certain changes in those now existing could be made in the interest of fairness and sound investment practice.

The point raised at the Savings Bank Convention is worthy of consideration. It would appear logical to believe that dividends are sometimes continued on railroad stocks for the express purpose of maintaining the eligibility of their bonds for savings banks' investments. Such a practice would tend to weaken rather than strengthen the investment value of such bonds.

An effort is being made to introduce geese feathers from Russia into this country.

WEEK ON LOCAL MART SURVEYED

General Price Range Narrow in Fitful Trading

Oils Close Firmer Following Weakness at Start

Trio of Bank Issues Active at Higher Levels

BY FRANK L. GARDNER
(Banks, Huntley & Co.)

Desultory trading characterized last week's stock market on the local board with price changes generally small and unimportant.

The oils, during the fore part of the week, held close to their recent low levels, but some improvement was evidenced in prevailing prices toward the close.

Under a significantly small turnover, Union of California changed hands between 54 1-2 and 55, closing at 54 5-8, while Union Associates, for the first time in many months, moved within a similar range. Richfield displayed a heavy tone, selling off nearly a point to a new low for the movement at 23 1-8. There was a better demand yesterday around 23 1-2.

From early sales around 30 1-8, California Petroleum moved ahead to 30 5-8 and closed at the top, while Standard of California rose from 60 to 60 1-2 and sold finally at 60 1-4. Shell Union appeared strong throughout the week, selling between 29 3-8 and 29 3-4.

At 21, Rio Grande showed another point loss, while Bolsa Chica advanced from 6 3-8 to 7. Julian Petroleum preferred quieted down considerably and fluctuated within narrowed limits between 13 and 14, with most of the dealings around 13 1-4. The common rose to 2 7-8, but canceled the gain on subsequent sales around 2 1-2.

Fresh buying stimulated interest in United States Royalties resulting in a point rise to 16 1-2. On sales at 75, Superior Oil showed a 15-point gain and Marine, though dull, jumped forward from 1.50 to 1.63, bid. Gilmore was practically unchanged around 7, and Holly Development was quiet at 1.51 and 1.52.

California Delta Farms showed evidence of further liquidation and registered a new low and 1 1-2 points loss for the week at 3. Improved demand for Globe Grain common accounted for a point gain to 50, but closed at 49 and the preferred was unchanged around 99.

Goodyear Tire and Goodyear Textile Mills preferred reversed their market position last week with the latter selling at 96, a point over the Tire issue.

Los Angeles Investment was dealt in in only moderate volume between 3.05 and 3.10, with the closing sales around 3.07 1-2.

A strong demand in Security Trust carried prices forward another 5 points to 410 and Merchants' National Trust and Savings Bank made a new high at 367 1-2. At 408, First National had gained a point and Bank of Italy moved between 452 and 453 1-2 with Bancitaly Corporation fractionally easier around 80 to 80 3-8.

In the utility group Edison common sagged a half-point to 30, but recovered to 30 3-4 and closed there. The Edison preferred issues were unchanged at 28 for the 7 per cent and 24 7-8 for the 6 per cent. Southern California Gas preferred fluctuated between 98 1-2 and 99, and Southern Counties Gas preferred sold at 103 and 103 1-2. Pacific Lighting preferred at 96 1-2 and San Joaquin prior 7 per cent around 106 1-4 were firm. Los Angeles Gas preferred showed a steady tone around 99 3-4, dividend on, and closed around 98 1-4, ex-dividend, 1.50.

The bulk of the trading in the mining issues occurred in the low-priced stocks. Lucky Boy Divide changed hands in large volume on a declining market from 7 1-2 to 5. Big Jim registered a new top for the year at 37 1-2 then slipped back to 33 and sold finally at 35. Sunnyside advanced a point to 15, but closed around 14 1-2 and Western Apex gained 13 points on peak sales at 63 and sold yesterday around 60.

TO ADDRESS STUDENTS

Credit and Collection Class to Hear Reynolds and Neeson

Featuring talks by H. W. Reynolds of Haas, Baruch & Co., and L. J. Neeson, attorney in the collection department of the Broadway Department Store, the seventh meeting of the class in credits and collections will be held Tuesday night, at metropolitan college, University of Southern California, according to Emory E. Olson, instructor in charge.

Mr. Reynolds will talk on "Personal Interview from the Wholesale Point of View," while Mr. Neeson will approach the subject from the retail standpoint. They will discuss "Human Nature At First Hand," "Attitude of the Interviewer" and "Information to be Sought."

Full university credit is granted for this twelve-week lecture course, sponsored by the Los Angeles Credit Men's Association.

EXCHANGE WILL CLOSE TUESDAY

Election Day Will be Observed by Banks As Holiday

The Los Angeles Stock Exchange will be closed Tuesday, election day, and a legal holiday in California, according to H. H. Lee, manager of the exchange. All of the banks of Los Angeles will also be closed on that day.

RECOVERY OF PRICES IRREGULAR

Bonds Advance to Record High Levels With Money Rates Now Easier

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (AP)—An irregular recovery in stock prices, based on favorable earnings and dividend developments; a further advance in bonds to around the highest levels in several years, coincident with the successful flotations in New York and European markets of a $100,000,000 Belgian government loan; a fresh collapse in cotton prices to the lowest levels since 1921, followed by a partial recovery, and a reduction in time-money rates to the lowest quotations since last spring, were the high lights in this week's financial and commodity markets.

Stock prices failed to give indications of a definite trend, irregularity being due, in part, to the usual pre-election switching of speculative accounts. The excellent third-quarter earnings statement of the United States Steel and General Motors corporations temporarily checked selling pressure against those issues. Oils and rails gave the best demonstrations of group strength, with the chemicals presenting several points of weakness.

With Europe making steady progress toward economic recovery, foreign bonds found increasing favor among investors. The prediction of Dwight Morrow of J. P. Morgan & Co., that France and Italy would go on a gold basis next year stimulated the buying of those issues, while the new Belgian issue went to a premium of several points above the offering price of 94.

The ease in money rates set at rest fears entertained a few weeks ago of a rise in Federal rediscount rates and Wall street began to hear talk of a possible decrease to stimulate business, several lines of which have shown a marked falling off in the last quarter. Widespread efforts to finance the storage of cotton and restrict production of the commodity next year had a stabilizing influence on the futures market.

EARNINGS INCREASE

Western United Utility Reports Gain of $484,211 in Year

Western United Gas and Electric Company and its subsidiaries for the twelve months ended September 30, 1926, report gross earnings of $6,627,612, compared with $5,863,419 for the previous twelve months. Net earnings after operating expenses, maintenance and taxes amounted to $2,998,334, compared with $2,514,123 a year ago, an increase of $484,211.

In his letter to stockholders, A. E. Pitkin, president of the company, announces that for the nine months ended September 30 merchandising and job sales amounted to $514,402. September sales alone totaled $131,856.

O. REY RULE ON STAFF OF BANK HOUSE

Investment Concern Also Moves to New Home in Pacific Finance

O. Rey Rule, vice-president of the Pacific Finance Corporation, has been elected to the office of vice-president and director of the Elliott-Horne Company, and W. Matson La Force to the office of secretary, it was announced yesterday by L. L. Elliott, president of the company. The removal of the company's offices to its new home on the ground floor of the Pacific Finance Building was also announced, effective tomorrow.

Mr. Rule will succeed Clifford R. Horne to the office of vice-president, but Mr. Horne will continue on the board of directors in an advisory capacity. Other members of the board of directors are: L. L. Elliott, E. J. Nolan, president of the Merchants' National Trust and Savings Bank, and C. M. Seeley, director of the Citizens' National and Citizens' Trust and Savings Bank.

In commenting on their removal, Mr. Elliott said:

"The added facilities and conveniences afforded by our new offices make possible the rendering of a service to investors equaled by few places in the West. We will also maintain a free automobile parking service for clients, the first investment house in Southern California known to offer such a service."

Nearly All of Henderson Oil Stock on Hand

Of the 18,005 shares of $100 par value stock of the Henderson Petroleum Corporation outstanding, all but five holdings of 130 shares have been deposited for exchange into stock of the new Richfield Oil Company of California, according to a statement made yesterday by J. W. Henderson, president.

The exchange is being handled through the Merchants' National Trust and Savings Bank and the rapid time in which this stock has been received is thought to be a record. Of the 130 shares still undeposited ten shares are in the office of the company now.

Control of the Henderson company was recently acquired by Richfield through purchase of a minimum of 66 2-3 per cent of Henderson stock from a group of large stockholders. The same offer was made to minority stockholders, who are widely scattered.

ESTIMATE WESTERN UNION EARNINGS

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (AP)—Newcomb Carlton, president of the Western Union Telegraph Company, sailing for Europe today, estimated the company's net earnings for 1926 at about $15,500,000, which would be equal to around $15 a share. The company earned $15.21 a share in 1925. "Our southern business will show a $3,000,000 loss this year, but despite this shrinkage our business is running about one per cent above a year ago," he said.

LARGE ORDERS FOR RAILS ARE PLACED

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (AP)—Orders for more than 800,000 tons of rails have been placed with Chicago mills since the current buying movement started and it is estimated about 300,000 tons more will go to western mills for 1927 delivery. The Missouri-Pacific and the Chesapeake and Ohio each has ordered 45,000 tons, distributed among Tennessee Coal and Iron Railroad, Inland Steel and Illinois Steel.

Seven Important Factors

THERE are seven important factors contributing to the stability and exclusive investment advantages of Diversified Trustee Shares.

1. Stability of Diversified Trustee Shares is secured through the distribution of funds among 24 outstanding American corporations representing most of our basic industries with activities covering all of our 48 states.

2. Income is received twice a year instead of through 96 separate checks.

3. Detail involved in notifying 24 companies of every change of address is avoided.

4. It is unnecessary to attend to the execution and mailing of 24 to 48 proxies each year.

5. Diversified Trustee Shares make it possible to avoid tying up an estate from one to four years before it can be liquidated and transferred.

6. Inheritance Tax entanglements are escaped along with multiple taxation and the expense and work involved in the preparation and filing of numerous legal documents.

7. A savings, amounting to approximately 15 to 35% on Inheritance Tax, is made through the ownership of Diversified Trustee Shares as against the direct ownership of the securities included in the Trust.

The income produced by Diversified Trustee Shares is equal or greater than that offered by many other investments with only equal or less stability and failing to carry the important advantages of Diversified Trustee Shares.

We have prepared detailed information describing and analyzing the investment position of Diversified Trustee Shares, which will be forwarded upon request, without obligation.

The most interesting [illegible] of the day was the publication of an unofficial report that the [illegible] Railroad was to be dropped [illegible] the new Nickel Plate [illegible] This caused rather active [illegible] the Erie issues, which [illegible] treme declines of a point or [illegible] despite the fact that banking [illegible] ests identified the Van [illegible] later denied the report.

Chesapeake and Ohio, [illegible] of which are expected to [illegible] generous special dividend [illegible] near future, was bid up 4 [illegible] one time, but later sold down [illegible] 169 5-8, up 1 5-8 net.

A drop of 2 per cent in [illegible] ings in the principal cities of [illegible] country this week, compared [illegible] the week before, was used as a [illegible] text for a renewal of selling [illegible] sure by bear traders. United [illegible] Steel common and General [illegible] each yielded about a point at [illegible] and 148 1-2, respectively. [illegible] which was run up sharply [illegible] on private showing of the [illegible] ing picture of the company [illegible] from 75 to 72 on realizing, and [illegible] made partial recovery. [illegible] sions also took place in [illegible] Onyx Hosiery, Owens Bottle [illegible] United Cigars.

Fears that the widespread [illegible] tion to restrict cotton acreage [illegible] South next year would hurt the [illegible] tilizer business, brought about [illegible] er liquidation in some of the [illegible] cal shares. American Agricultural Chemical preferred and International Agricultural Chemical common [illegible] prior preferred, sank to new [illegible] levels for the year. Otis Steel preferred, also touched a new low.

Active buying of cotton [illegible] which sent quotations 18 to 21 [illegible] net higher, featured the [illegible] markets.

Trading in the foreign [illegible] was of the usual dull, half-holiday character, with quotations displaying an easier undertone. Demand [illegible] ling was again down to $4.84 [illegible] French francs held firm around 3 [illegible] cents. Italian lire were again [illegible] yielding over 1 point to around [illegible] cents. Other changes were [illegible]

The weekly clearinghouse [illegible] showed excess reserve of $17, [illegible] contrasting with a deficit in [illegible] of $23,079,460 last week. [illegible] reserve was $608,151,000. The [illegible] tailed statement of actual [illegible] this day showed gains in all of [illegible] principal items. Loans, [illegible] and investments increased [illegible] 000; cash in own vaults, [illegible] reserve in the Federal Reserve [illegible] of member banks, $40,000,000; demand deposits, $40,000,000, time deposits, $18,140,000.

NEW YORK BOND PRICES

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (AP)—The normally smooth surface of the bond market was ruffled today by a flurry of selling in the Erie Railroad issues, which followed the publication of unconfirmed reports that the Van Sweringens planned to eliminate this road from their Nickel Plate merger group.

Most of the company's bonds slumped 1 to 2 points in the early dealings, but scored an irregular recovery later when word was passed around in Wall street that banking interests connected with the Van Sweringens and officials of other participating railroads doubted that such a radical change would be made in the merger plans. Bonds of the other Van Sweringen roads were little affected, but the Erie issues were particularly susceptible to the reports because of large purchases based on the merger prospects.

Another turnover in the new Belgian 7s carried these bonds to a high record of 96 3-4, with the rest of the country's obligations also maintaining a strong tone. French government loans were moderately active, but several of the railroad and municipal issues moved up to the year's top prices. United States government securities worked higher in reflection of the recent easing of time-money rates.

An active demand for semispeculative railroad liens brought about substantial price advances for International Great Northern adjustment 6s and Denver and Rio Grande Western general 5s.

The quotations represent sales of bonds (in thousands of dollars,) and the high, low and closing prices in the order given. To expedite transmission, close is omitted when same as low, and both low and close when same as high.

Why We Recommend California Street Improvement Bonds to Investors

1. Bonds are secured by a Tax Lien on a specific piece of property and come ahead of all mortgages on the property, regardless of when made.
2. They are for only a fraction of the value of the property.
3. Serial payments of 10% of principal annually increases investors' equity.
4. Free from Federal Income Tax and Personal Property Tax in California.
5. Redemption price—minimum of 103½.
6. Yield 6 to 7%.

OUR SERVICE

SINCE THE INCEPTION OF OUR STREET BOND DEPARTMENT, IT HAS BEEN OUR POLICY TO CASH OUR CUSTOMERS COUPONS, BOTH PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST, WHEN DUE, UPON PRESENTATION, WITHOUT CHARGE FOR COLLECTION.

NEW YORK CURB STOCKS

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (AP)—The market on the curb exchange today performed in a manner expected at the present time for a half-holiday session with election approaching. Forces that had been dominating market action since the recent recovery were unwilling to permit any material alteration in quotations.

There was a firm tone maintained in the several groups with trading contracting markedly. Estey Welte again rose to new high figures and American Seating followed its recent upturn with an additional gain of 1 1-4 points. Durant Motor was an exception to the general trend and suffered a loss of a point on comparatively small sales. New York Transportation moved to a new high for the year, selling to 61.

Public utility issues were quiet and little of importance occurred in the oil department.

In spite of a general disposition to pursue a waiting policy pending election there were many important movements in the curb market in the past week. Some issues moved to new high records while others were established at new low records. Oil stocks came into special prominence chiefly because of impressive buying of Standard Oil of Indiana which had been in progress since the stock sold at 60½ a little over a week ago and which was maintained all through the past week forcing the price above 64 in yesterday's trading.

Doehler Die Casting and both classes of cities service sold at high records and a new high record was also made by Pantepec Oil of Venezuela. Tubize artificial silk and United Biscuit both made new low records and a new low record was reached by Indiana Pipe Line.

Vacuum Oil was one of the strongest of the Standard Oil issues, moving up over 5 points. Standard Oil of New York moved closely in line with Standard of Indiana and advanced about a point and a gain of a point was made in Prairie Oil. Continental Oil, after showing weakness in the early trading, moved up over a point. Tidal Osage was one of the strong features, advancing to a new high record.

Tropical stocks were generally strong, Carib Syndicate advancing over 2 points. Ford Motor of Canada on a decline of 8 points to 39½ made a new low record and was one of the weak features in the industrial group. United States Light and Heat and Ohio Fuel Corporation were among the strong features.

Utilities were irregular. United Gas Improvement made a gain of 6 points and then reacted, and American Gas and Electric yielded 4 points but also later became strong.

The bond market continued active, high records being made in Cities Service issues, and public utility bonds were in steady demand generally, some moving up a point. Foreign bonds continued active and strong, the heaviest trading being in State of Hamburg new 6s which rose to above 95, making a new high record.

The closing price is omitted when same as the low, and both low and close when same as the high.

BRIGHT DAYS IN MEXICO SIGHTED

Kansas City Man Impressed With Southern Land

Ties Between Two Nations Declared Growing Strong

Eighty Per Cent of Trade Now With United States

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 30. (Exclusive) "Industrially and commercially Mexico and the United States are fast becoming united," Delbert J. Haff, prominent Kansas City lawyer and frequent visitor to Mexico, says in an interview published here. Mr. Haff has just returned from a year in Mexico. He has been visiting the southern Republic representing American capital invested in copper, oil and rail projects for the past thirty years. He is a frequent visitor in Los Angeles and has business relations with Southern California investment undertakings.

Mr. Haff continued: "It is said that 80 per cent of the Mexican trade is now with the United States, and American goods are the leading foreign commodity in Mexico. Thus commerce, the great international educator, is linking the two countries."

Along with other persons who have first-hand contact with situations in their own and foreign countries, Mr. Haff observes a quickening of the nationalistic spirit as a World War fruit. It is apparent in Mexico. He reverted to the industrio-economic aspect:

"The future of Mexico can be nothing other than bright in this respect. Its natural resources are stupendous in quantity, ample in range.

"There are 767,000 square miles of Republic, divided into twenty-six States, all of which have resources to meet every need. Coupled with rich agricultural possibilities is mineral wealth to challenge the imagination.

"The policy of the Mexican government is that of developing of home industries through a protective tariff plan. More and more, Mexico is producing and manufacturing her own needs, and is entering the world markets."

Ancient Forms of Punishment Revived in China

PEKING, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Several ancient punishments are being revived in China under the stress of civil war. Yesterday, at a conference of military and police authorities here, it was decided to revive the punishment of "erchien" for all military stragglers, Red propagandists, or disguised soldiers of the enemy factions.

"Erchien" consists of having the ears pierced with arrows—six arrows for each ear. The victim is then forced to parade the streets, under police guard, so that the populace may know he is a bad character.

Ears which have been treated in this way look worse, after they have healed, than the "cauliflower ears" of professional pugilists.

WORLD NOW IS AN OPEN BOOK

Man Has Explored All Regions and No Secrets are Left

Within twenty-five years, writes James C. Young in Current History, man has arrived at the uttermost ends of his earth. Now that the North Pole has been reached by airplane and the Arctic traversed by dirigible, the vast area to the west of the pole is known to hold nothing but frozen seas.

Thus the romance of the ages draws to an end. The known world of four centuries ago has been expanded until all its parts are familiar. The long trek of the human herd has reached the limits of its range. The main trails are blazed, the degrees and elevations established. Those who follow in the steps of the intrepid pathfinders must be content to win the honors that come from lesser labors. Modern invention has made possible by steam power, motor car and airplane the completion of a conquest begun in remote ages by foot, trireme and sail. The twenty-five centuries of recorded discovery have culminated and reached fulfillment in twenty-five years.

Down the succession of the centuries the long roll of explorers has increased until the world of today lies exposed in its essential parts. Never again may we expect discovery to compare with those that have transformed the conditions of life everywhere. He who would take part in the civilizing of the wilderness had best hasten or there will be no wilderness left. It is a hostage delivered over to the forces of invention and hardihood. The age of mechanism has prevailed.

CANADA AWAKES TO VALUE OF TOURISTS

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Speaking at the Canadian Good Roads convention, J. M. Wardle, chief engineer of the Canadian National Parks, said that United States tourists spend at least $190,000,000 a year in Canada, that being the estimated total for 1925. This year's total will be larger, owing to increasing numbers of visitors. He estimated that this money is responsible for 11 per cent of the gross business done by business houses and people and stimulates trading here considerably.

LOVE-TOKEN NICKEL RETURNS TO OWNER

WAXAHACHIE (Tex.) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—In 1894 a young man cut his initials and Mrs. C. L. Kennedy's maiden name in full, on a nickel of 1883 vintage and gave it to her. After she was married to Kennedy in 1895 she spent the coin in Marshall, Tex. Recently Kennedy left some change on the table for his son's school lunch and his son discovered his mother's name and the initials on the nickel. His mother recognized it as the one given her thirty-two years ago and which she spent a year later.

WEEKLY CITRUS REVIEW

The weekly summary of citrus markets by the Elephant Orchards of Redlands says:

"Cool weather which has prevailed in the East the latter part of this week has had a decided effect in the orange market. The price the first part of the week opened steady at around $6 per box, but during the week dropped off 36 cents, which is noted in the auction index. With the few remaining cars yet to be shipped the market should gradually return to an average which was realized the fore part of October.

"In the 1924 season there were about 200 cars less to go forward than at the present time. Shippers are realizing from 15 to 20 cents a box less for the auction index than during 1924, with average daily shipments and the number of cars sold at auction a little heavier.

"The auction index on Florida fruit also shows a considerable drop over last week and a difference of more than $3 a box from the auction index one year ago.

"The estimate of the United States Department of Agriculture in Florida, which has been revised since the storm, is 15,000,000 boxes of citrus fruits, of which 9,000,000 will be oranges and 6,000,000 grapefruit. This is a reduction of 2,000,000 boxes from the September estimate of 9,600,000 boxes of oranges and 7,400,000 boxes of grapefruit.

"The cool nights of Tulare county, California, are aiding the maturity of fruit and it is now believed that shipments will be moving out of the north sometime during the first two weeks in November. Some export orders already have been filled.

"Most of the packing-houses in this vicinity have cleaned up fairly well on Valencias and the few remaining cars probably will be shipped next week."

Following is the price by size table of the best brands sold in New York auction, showing that while the difference is not as great as last week, there is still a slight decline:

	126s	150s	176s	216s	250s
October 25	5.30	5.95	6.42	6.76	6.74
October 26	5.60	6.04	6.40	6.76	6.88
October 27	5.63	6.12	6.53	6.85	6.64
October 28	5.39	5.96	6.37	7.01	7.00
October 29	5.35	5.90	6.50	6.95	6.90
Average	5.55	5.99	6.48	6.87	6.83
Last week	5.69	5.76	6.53	6.97	7.04
Difference	.14	.23	.05	.10	.21

The California 1926 Valencia orange crop will be cleaned up next week with shipment of about 200 cars. The Central California navel crop has been maturing slower than anticipated and there will not be much on the rails to the market before the 10th to 15th of next month, reports to the California Fruit Growers' Exchange revealed.

In general the eastern market for oranges has had a somewhat easier tone this week than last week, with the general average of all sales of California oranges in the nine auctions figuring 36 cents lower than last week.

Florida citrus moving into the auctions found low prices, due to immaturity of the shipments. The week's auction average of Florida oranges was $3.49 per box, compared with $5.83 for California oranges. Day by day during the week the auction averages, compared with last week and compared with Florida were as follows:

	California. This wk.	California. Last wk.	Florida. This wk.
Monday	5.91	6.49	3.29
Tuesday	5.99	6.31	3.42
Wednesday	5.67	6.05	3.81
Thursday	5.80	6.03	3.73
Friday	5.71	5.88	3.61

The week's average of California oranges in the auctions by each auction center, compared with last week, showed the following:

Auction.	This wk.	Last wk.
New York	5.93	6.16
Boston	5.87	6.48
Chicago	5.90	6.48

St. Louis	5.64	5.45
Baltimore	5.15	6.03
Cincinnati	5.30	6.24
General average	5.83	6.19

Citrus shipments to date this year, compared with total figures at this time last year, compiled by the government with complete reports from all shippers, follows:

LATIN-AMERICAN MILLING COMPANY

A California Corporation

Capitalization $125,000.00 125,000 shares $1.00 Par Value

HISTORY: The Latin-American Milling Company was incorporated under California laws in 1924 to acquire a 60% interest in the San Nicolas Mining and Milling Company, a Mexican Corporation, owning in fee and under lease various proven mining properties in the La Parilla district, State of Durango, old Mexico. Prior to Latin-American financing, more than $500,000 had been spent in building a 300-ton mill and in the development of only part of the properties. Operations were carried on at a time when the nearest railroad was sixty miles away and fuel had to be transported long distances. Operations were discontinued in 1906, since which time the mines and mill have remained idle. As a result of previous milling and mining operations, a minimum of 279,000 tons of tailings, as well as 250,000 tons of mine ores, blocked out and in sight, await present reduction. The National Railways of Mexico, now within seven miles of the property, insures cheap and adequate transportation.

PROPERTIES: Through its operating Company, the Latin-American Milling Company owns the San Nicolas group of 110 acres, consisting of the San Nicolas, San Geronimo, La Filipina, El Cuervo and California claims, and has under fifty-year lease the Vacas mining group of 260 acres, consisting of the Vacas, San Marcos and Quebradilla mines. These 370 acres comprise the most important properties of the La Parilla Mining District. Titles to all properties have been carefully examined and brought down to date. All taxes have been paid.

LOCATION: The mines are located approximately seven miles from the railroad station of Vicente Guerrero on the line of the National Railways of Mexico. A splendid wagon road connects the mines with the railroad station. Vicente Guerrero is located about sixty miles southeast of Durango, the capital and largest city in the state of Durango. The smelters of the Compania Minera de Penoles, S. A., at Torreon, and the American Smelting and Refining Company at San Luis Potosi, one specializing in silver-lead and the other in zinc ores, insure a ready market for concentrates, with minimum transportation expense.

INVESTIGATION: A thorough investigation of the holdings of the San Nicolas Mining and Milling Company was made the early part of this year by Mr. Simeon K. Dahl, metallurgical and mechanical engineer. Mr. Dahl spent considerable time inspecting the properties at our request. After a thorough sampling of the tailings and mine ores, approximately three tons of samples were forwarded to San Francisco by express for further tests. As a result of these tests Mr. Dahl's report states that there is a minimum of 279,000 tons of tailings, containing 1,591,720 ounces of silver, 12,539,000 pounds of lead, and 26,832,400 pounds of zinc. In addition to these known values lying above the ground, which will yield an estimated net profit of $500,000, Mr. Dahl estimates that the Vacas, San Marcos and Quebradilla mines have blocked out and in sight a further tonnage of at least 250,000 tons of good grade silver, lead and zinc milling ore. Assays of this tonnage show the Vacas ores to average 12 ounces silver, 5 per cent lead and better than 12 per cent zinc. The San Marcos averages 10 ounces silver, 5 per cent lead and 5 per cent zinc. The Quebradilla, [illegible] ounces of silver, 1 per cent lead and 1 per cent zinc. Modern metallurgical practice assures the successful and profitable separation of zinc and lead in these ores.

MILL AND EQUIPMENT: The San Nicolas properties are now equipped with a 200-ton daily capacity mill. During the past ninety days more than $75,000 has been expended in the installation and purchase of new machinery and equipment. New mill equipment includes Kraut Flotation Plant, a No. 56 Marcy Ball mill, Dorr Classifier, Oliver Filtration Equipment, Wilfley Concentration Tables, Link-Belt Conveyors, etc. Boiler plant equipment consists of five boilers, with a total capacity of [illegible] horsepower, of which about 300 horsepower will be used in connection with present operations. Boiler plant has been completely equipped with Hammel Oil Burners, in conjunction with Wilgus Oil Feed Pumps. Power plant consists of one 18[illegible] horsepower Corliss Engine. A 40-kilowatt generator has been installed. 18,000 feet of six-inch pipe line has been installed to connect pumping plant on the Graceros River with the mill, thus insuring unlimited water supply for any size mill. Pumping plant has been overhauled and equipped with oil burning equipment and new boiler stack.

OPERATING POLICY & MANAGEMENT: Company will immediately start to mill the tailings, with the idea in mind of setting aside a goodly portion of the profits derived therefrom, to be used in connection with the rehabilitation of the mines—particularly the Vacas—at an early date. It is estimated that a minimum of 100,000 tons of ore is already blocked out in this mine that will average 12 ounces of silver, 5% lead and better than 12% zinc. Milling of mine ores should double or treble profits. Mr. Simeon K. Dahl, the Consulting Engineer, will be in full charge of all operations, with office in Los Angeles. Mr. C. Allen Anderson is Mine Superintendent, with Mr. Henry P. Hanson acting as Assistant Superintendent. Mr. H. O. Tucker is business manager in Mexico. Messrs. Dahl, Hanson and Tucker speak Spanish, and are thoroughly familiar with operating conditions in Mexico.

CONCLUSION: The various mill and auxiliary units will be tried out November 1st, and actual milling of tailings will start on or about November 15th. With estimated profits of approximately $500,000.00 to be recovered from the tailings, after all charges, and with mining properties offering unlimited possibilities with further development, we have no hesitancy in stating that we believe Latin-American Milling stock is destined to prove much more than a profitable speculation. We earnestly believe the company has the necessary ore bodies and management to insure eventual success on a truly large scale.

treme heavies cleared from 5.50@7.25. A few lots of calves weighing around 450 pounds went out for stocker purposes from 4.25@4.75.

HOGS—Liberal receipts the past week, better than 3000 arriving, resulted in an unevenly lower market. All of the offerings were cleaned up in good season, with prices unevenly 75c to 75c lower at the close. The week's top was 15.25, paid Monday, while the top at the close was 14.85, with the bulk of 130 to 35-pound butchers going over from 14.50@14.75. Several lots of mixed butchers and medium weight offerings cashed from 13.50@14.25. Packing sows declined around 50c, the general run at the close clearing from 12.00@12.50, with rough kinds down to 11.00.

SHEEP—Only two decks of lambs were offered this week, and these sold readily with the lamb market being called about 50c higher. The two decks of lambs were good and choice 80-pound Californias at 13.00, with 25 head cut at 11.00. Strictly choice lambs were quotable up to 13.50. No sheep were offered, and medium to choice ewes were quoted from 6.00@7.50.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—The cotton market had a good rise of 18 to 27 points from yesterday's closing quotations in today's early morning. It was an agreeable surprise to the trade, bringing December, 12.60 cents; January, 12.78 cents; March, 12.99 cents; May, 13.20 cents, and July, to 13.45 cents. It was to an unexpected sharp rise at Liverpool where spot cotton went up 13 English points and futures closed firm at the top at 16 to 18 points advance on the day, when they were expected to rule about unchanged to have met our closing prices of yesterday.

This rise at Liverpool is due to covering of shorts, new trade buying and a sudden drying up of recent hedge and speculative selling, with the prospect more favorable for an end of the British mineral strike.

The rise here brought the market up to between 60 and 70 points from the low levels reached last Monday, when the government's record-breaking crop estimate was put out. December then sold at 12 cents; January, 12.10 cents; March, 12.35 cents, May, 12.56 cents, and July, 12.7b cents.

This good rise of over $3 a bale in prices from the lowest brought out a good deal of profit-taking in the second hour's trading and also some fresh southern selling. While prices reacted 10 to 13 points from the top reached at the opening there was still a good undertone to the market at the close.

The weather map was cloudy and rainy in many sections, with the forecasts for colder weather and showers in most parts of the belt tonight and tomorrow. Freezing temperatures are indicated for the Panhandle region of Texas and frost for Oklahoma tomorrow. Any protracted cold wet weather in the belt, with still 40 per cent of the crop either open in the fields or subject to heavy damage, could easily change considerably the present general cotton situation.

RAIN IN COTTON BELT DAMAGING

Grade of Crop in Field Said to be Lowered

Average is Declared as Far Below Middling

No Increase in Next Federal Estimate Expected

MEMPHIS (Tenn.) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Rainy weather over this section of the belt at frequent periods of late, and especially this week-end, undoubtedly will lower the grade of cotton remaining in the fields, which already is showing considerably poorer than that of thirty days ago. A great deal of cotton is coming in which is grading slightly under strict low middling. The average is far below middling, although naturally, there is a nominal amount of middling and even better grades still coming in, but this cotton was picked several weeks ago.

The slight evidence of strength in the future market recently has brought out a little more cotton in the South this week and the interior movement was rather free, despite of the growing inclination to desert fields ready to be picked, and both the individual and collective hauling movements in evidence.

The new cotton has about balanced the volume taken off the market. In addition, it is becoming evident that the indicated crop of 17,454,000 bales can be picked only with the utmost difficulty. Last year's crop was gathered largely because bolls were pulled along too, Scarcity of labor and the low price are expected to leave many bales in the field this season. Unless more favorable weather is felt during the next week, the next census report is not expected to show an increase over its last report.

HOPE FOR POOL

The general response of bankers in the cotton-growing States to the plan of Eugene Meyer, director of the War Finance Corporation, to pool 4,000,000 bales through financing of the Federal Intermediate Land Bank, has aroused considerable hope throughout the South that the movement will be successful. It must be done within thirty days to be fully effective.

Cotton reaching Memphis the past week shows a lower grade than formerly, due to lack of care in picking, the army worm and rainfall. The staple is averaging strict low middling or lower, and is very leafy. The best grades of cotton are becoming scarcer, especially in the shorter varieties. In the strict low middling cotton with inch and sixteenth staple is strong, much having changed hands this week at 13 cents or 50 points more than inch and an eighth of the same grade. Middling, seven-eights inch cotton is bringing the farmer about 11 to 11 1-4 cents on the streets, but, as the grade averages lower, the farmers are getting nearer 10 cents. In the longer staples, a fair demand has developed in Memphis for certain types of middling and strict middling, such as inch, full inch, and also inch and a sixteenth staples.

EXTRA IMPROVES

The extra-long staples have improved somewhat, too. Intermediate lengths and low grades of the longer staples seem to be neglected, according to the Memphis Bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture. Lower grades in short cotton seem to hold their basis pretty well in the face of large receipts. Low middling, seven-eighths inch is selling around 9 cents in the Memphis territory. The price has become so low that many farmers sell at first bids, being so discouraged that they want only a little small change to carry home.

Receipts of cotton at Memphis continued heavy this week in all varieties, but somewhat smaller than the previous week. So far this season Memphis receipts have been 414,000 bales against 308,000 last year. Shipments also continue heavy, 69,000 bales going out of here to spinners all over the world. The local stock of cotton has jumped to 274,000 bales, of which the factors unsold stock is 125,000 bales against 89,000 at this time last year. The demand from spinners seemed to be general the past week with sales reported in all grades. Total sales were 32,000 bales, of which 12,000 were actual spots. The remainder represented the f.o.b. cotton. Today's shipments were 11,320 bales, one of the heaviest of days.

FINANCE VIEWS IN LONDON

BY ARTHUR W. KIDDY

[Copyright, 1926, by New York Evening Post, Inc.]

LONDON, Oct. 30. (By Wireless)—To outward appearances the economic situation resulting from the coal stoppage could scarcely be worse. Unemployment figures and foreign trade are testifying to the devastating influence.

London nevertheless is still moderately optimistic, basing its outlook partly on the belief that realization of the situation will yet inspire workers to a different attitude and to intense effort. It is argued also that favorable factors should further increase such stimulus.

These factors include the good effect on our trade by the stabilization of the Belgian franc and the improvement in the French franc and Italian lira, in addition to which an abundance of cotton at low prices gives Lancashire an exceptional opportunity.

This optimism, however, ignores to some extent the Communistic influence and the apparent unwillingness of the government to deal firmly with the situation of unemployment. The insurance fund is now indebted to the treasury to the extent of £18,000,000 in connection with the unemployment doles of which £11,000,000 was borrowed this year.

It is impossible for this policy to proceed indefinitely without disastrous consequences. There is no reason why England should not soon recover her industrial prosperity, but not under a Micawber policy.

I discussed recently the European economic and Bolshevist problems with leading international financiers and traders and find a growing conviction that the League of Nations powers are too feeble and slow to deal effectively with Bolshevik influence, and it is considered that an indefinite alliance between great countries like Great Britain, Germany and France may yet be necessary to defend civilization.

In spite of the continued drain on England's gold reserves skillful cooperation between the central and reserve banks may avert an acute monetary stringency during the coming winter.

The general belief here is that the outlook in the United States is still optimistic. This is based on the great activities and prosperity there, restrained by a sober financial policy.

Nevertheless, there is a possibility of overproduction, with social as well as economic effects. An English banker, who recently returned from the United States, in a circular commented upon his impressions in terms generally flattering to America.

In referring to the intensive activity of production he said:

"This economic struggle will, in my opinion, only become more intense in the future because, if the United States cannot sell the whole of the surplus of its production to foreign countries, the sale price will drop and wages with them and the United States will in turn have an economic crisis."

As a possible far view, his opinion is interesting, but the market here does not anticipate any early fulfillment of such predictions.

The rubber market is keenly awaiting the promised statement to be made by the colonial office concerning the subject of unused coupon licenses for export rubber.

BOBBING A BIG AID TO BARBERS

Flappers' invasion of barber shops has pushed barbering close to the ranks of $1,000,000,000 industries in the United States, N. S. Sherman of the Boncilla Company of Indianapolis, declared at the annual national convention of barbers' supply men in Chicago.

"Vogue of the bob has added $150,000,000 yearly to the revenue of American barbers," said Mr. Sherman. "Five million women in the United States visit barber shops regularly to have their hair cut, curled and waved, and to take scalp treatments.

"But men are still the main support of the barber's trade. They leave an average of $750,000,000 a year in America's 170,000 tonsorial establishments. Expenditure for hair cuts and shaves by 40,000,000 males above the age of 18 is estimated at $500,000,000 annually. Hair tonic costs the nation $100,000,000 a year, while $50,000,000 more is spent on shampoos, hair singeing, and scalp treatments.

"Care of the face is becoming increasingly important to the American business man. This is indicated by the fact that $100,000,000 is invested in facial massages and application of clasmic clay packs every year by men barber shop patrons desirous of retaining the appearance of youth by eliminating wrinkles and softening the skin.

"Recent years have brought about a metamorphosis in the American barber shop. It is no longer just a place for a hair cut and shave and a haven for idlers. It has become a white-tiled, scientifically equipped business institution manned by experts."

REINDEER KING IS SLENDER, MODEST MAN

HE HAS A HERD OF 80,000 REINDEER GRAZING IN ALASKA

Among the credulous it is the belief that "the reindeer king" of this universe is a pleasant, rotund gentleman of the name of Claus, who wears white whiskers, a red suit and drives out only on the most religious of holidays.

Quite to the contrary, he is a slender, modest person, with not a whisker at all, who wears the more somber grays of our own business world and whose card reads: "Carl J. Lomen, president and general manager, Lomen Reindeer and Trading Corporation, Nome, Alaska." And he has arrived in New York without driving "Donner and Blitz" over anybody's rooftop.

Mr. Lomen, be it known, owns more than 80,000 reindeer that graze on six ranges which take up part of his and his family's 6,500,000 acres of Seward Peninsula. That's what makes him the reindeer king.

It was in 1900 that Mr. Lomen first went to Alaska. At the time he was reading law in his father's office in St. Paul, Minn., and planning to go to law school. A man from the Klondike wandered into the office one day and, while waiting for the elder Lomen, filled the junior's head with stories of Alaska.

The youth decided that before he settled down to law he would have a look at the Territory. He talked about it so much that he interested his father, too, and the pair mapped out a summer trip for themselves. They set out for a vacation, and they've been in Alaska ever since. Now the father is a Federal judge there.

The younger Lomen stepped into the reindeer business in 1914. The animals had been imported from Siberia some years before by the government in an effort to make the Eskimo self-supporting. And to keep the herds among these natives the Federal authorities had ruled that no Eskimo might sell a female reindeer to a white man.

But the government had also imported Laplanders to instruct the Eskimos in the care and use of the reindeer. And in 1914 the government's contract with one of those Lapps expired. Lomen learned of it and contracted to buy the man's herd. It was a start, and since then his holdings have grown to some 80,000 animals.

"Most of the reindeer in Alaska, however, are owned by the Eskimos," he says, "and the law which protects that ownership is still in force. They own fully 70 per cent of the animals there.

"The herds have grown amazingly. The first year the animals were introduced there 1892 were imported by the government. By 1905 this number had increased to 10,000, by 1920 to 20,000, and now there are fully 500,000 reindeer in Alaska.

"Strangely enough, the reindeer is considered a sort of mythical animal by most people. That, perhaps, is because it is associated by them with Santa Claus. But it is one of the oldest domesticated animals known to man.

"Some day, too, it may come to play an important part in the meat situation of the world, for it is an excellent animal for food. Beef is growing more scarce each year in America. Grazing lands in the West are decreasing because farmers can take more growing cereals. But in Alaska there are 120,000,000 acres valueless for crops and excellent for reindeer. They can support 4,000,000 head."

Mr. Lomen last year introduced live reindeer to many American cities for the first time. It was a Christmas stunt by which masquerading Santa Clauses were permitted to drive teams down traffic-crowded streets.

He says that the possibilities of the animal as a commercial proposition, are, like so many of Alaska's resources, undeveloped. Reindeer leather, he declares, is excellent for gloves, and its hair is so light that it is more buoyant than cork and will eventually be used for life preservers.

"The government is now appropriating $40,000 a year for the study and development of the reindeer industry," he says. "This money is being expended by the Biological Survey of the Department of Agriculture and the Bureau of Education of the Department of the Interior. It may lead to new possibilities."

And in the meantime, reindeer are on the increase. On Mr. Lomen's ranges they are cared for by Eskimo herdsmen with Lapp or American overseers.

And on American menus they have begun to make their appearance along with filet mignon and ham and eggs, not as venison, for that's wild deer, but as "reindeer steak." But that's all right. They say the fast-traveling Santa Claus has an automobile now, anyway.—[Mann Hatton in Philadelphia Ledger.

EXCESS RESERVE UP

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (AP)—The actual condition of clearinghouse banks and trust companies for the next week shows excess reserve of $17,666,240. This is an increase in reserve of $41,645,700 compared with the week before, when a deficit in reserve of $23,979,460 was reported.

BY HOWARD C. KEGLEY

The Shell Company registered its second completion of the week yesterday when it brought in its Edison No. 7 in the Ventura avenue field at Ventura with an initial production of 3500 barrels per day. The feature of this well, which is even more sensational than its large production is its output of 9,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day which makes it one of the largest gas producers in the field.

Edison No. 7 was completed at 6105 feet, more than 300 feet shallower than the Taylor No. 14, finished early last week with a production of 3500 barrels from 6413 feet, the deepest well in the field. Gravity of the well oil is 30 deg., and there is no cut, it is said. The well is practically in the center of the Shell Company's holdings in the Avenue field. It is located in the bed of the Ventura River.

Marland Sets Casing

Both the Marland Oil Company's Bixby No. 3 and Bixby No. 4 have set casing, and some time this week are expected to drill out and see how lucky they were in getting a water shutoff. Prospects are believed to be good, and if no more trouble is met with in solving the water problem on these two wells, than the Marland found in shutting off the water in its No. 2, Seal Beach is likely to have a couple of new producers within the next two weeks.

Bixby No. 3 set eight and one-half-inch casing at 4388 feet, after drilling to 4402 feet. No. 4 set the same size at 4424 feet, with the bottom at 4435 feet.

The Marland Oil Company's Selover No. 1, farther to the south is drilling at 4590 feet without showings, but is scheduled to pick up something interesting almost any day.

Down 2050 Feet

The Southern California Drilling Company's wildcat well in the El Segundo district is down about 2050 feet according to field reports. No important indications have been found, but none is inticipated for another 1500 feet.

Resume Work Soon

The Chanslor-Canfield Midway Oil Company expects to resume work on its Olinda No. 96, the deepest hole in the world, within the next few days. The well has been standing idle at 8046 feet for several weeks, pending the arrival of a specially constructed string of tools, with which to continue operations.

According to Chanslor-Canfield officials the well is to be tested at its present depth, with the probability that it will be plugged to 3500 feet where a sufficient showing of oil sand was found to warrant the prospect of getting production at that point.

Near Completion

The Shell Company has two wells nearing the completion stage on its Orange lease in the Brea-Olinda field. These wells are in the area where no two wells perform anything alike, the result being a total inability of operators to tell what any well will do when completed. The area around the Orange lease is badly faulted, and this results in 300 barrel wells and 3000 barrel wells being completed within a few hundred feet of each other.

Rig Up Rotary

The Miley Exploration Company is rigging up a rotary outfit in its Casitas well in the Red Mountain district of Ventura county.

This well has been drilling with cable tools since it was started several months ago, and has been making slow progress. Formations in this area are so hard that operators have difficulty in deciding just how to handle the situation. Rotary tools make fairly fast time, comparatively speaking, but the structure is so steep that the hole is likely to be crooked, so that sometimes difficulty is found in running in casing. On the other hand cable tools while they drill a straight hole, make such slow progress that the test is likely to be indefinitely delayed.

QUALITY AND OUTPUT IMPROVED AT ONCE

The demand for Chinese rugs, which has grown very considerably of recent years had not the slightest effect on the methods of production, which has grown very considerably of turies. A handicraft followed in the homes of the natives, the character and quantity of the work were necessarily limited, and it was not until some persons from the United States in order to increase the output, introduced factory methods. Although some may regret the passing of the handicraft stage, to others it is apparent that the best type of present-day Chinese rug is superior in texture dyes, weave and design to the article formerly produced on the home loom. The innovation means mass production, rather than limited home production. It is entirely unlikely that there will ever be any extensive installation of power looms, because of the cheapness of the native labor.

GENIUSES WHO GET NO CREDIT

Much of the truest and most dependable wisdom has never seen print. It finds best expression when two candid, intelligent and well-informed men discuss human conditions as they find them.

And everywhere discussions of this sort go on continually. I frequently hear practical men say wiser things than I read in books.

When two men talk confidentially and candidly, they are not disposed to talk scandal, but truth, whereas print is timid.—[E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Whence the Salt of the Sea

The sea was not always salty and, strange to say, it was made so through the action of the fresh water rivers. The earth is full of salt, and rivers, as they wind along, pick up a considerable quantity, hold it in solution, and tip it into the sea. None is evaporated, and that is why "the briny" is becoming more briny every year. The gold that is in sea water —extraction is too costly—got there in exactly the same way as the salt.

WOOL TRADE QUIET

BOSTON, Oct. 30. (AP)—Wool trading is of smaller volume than for the past few weeks. Prices abroad are still in buyers favor. Cheaper supplies of foreign wool are immediately available for domestic manufacturers. Buying in a few lines of domestic greasy wools have increased at recent levels.

A WINNER

A little more than two years ago it was our privilege to offer to local investors the stock of the Marbelite Corporation of America. The stock we then sold has, for the past year, been quoted usually around double the price at which we floated it. This increase has been based on the intrinsic merit of the stock and on the ever increasing, highly profitable business of the corporation.

Less than a year ago we undertook the financing of the Preston Rock Company of Pasadena, a concern with seven years of prosperous history back of it. Over a period of more than forty months the earnings of the corporation have been on a basis of practically two per cent monthly on a sum equivalent to the present outstanding capital. Dividends have averaged better than one per cent a month and earnings are now greater than at any time in the past. This corporation has enough business on its books to keep its plants busy twenty-four hours a day for the balance of the construction season.

We believe the stock of Preston Rock Company will, within a reasonable time, repeat the history of the Marbelite Corporation of America and we therefore recommend the purchase of the shares, not only for the prospective increased market value, but for the regular and well established dividend of one per cent monthly.

We shall be glad to send a circular relative to this corporation.

THREE HURT IN TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS

None of Drivers Held in Mishaps That Seriously Injure Two

Three persons were hurt, two critically, in yesterday's traffic accidents. All were pedestrians, but none of the drivers was blamed by police.

Mrs. Sarah Beshears, 89 years of age, of 916 South Hoover street, suffered internal injuries and shock when she was struck at Seventh and Alvarado streets by a car driven by A. D. Cajal, 236 North Robinson street. She became confused while trying to cross, it was said. Mrs. Beshears is a recent arrival from Vancouver. She was taken to Receiving Hospital.

W. H. Gardner, 74, 1528 West Twelfth street, suffered a left-shoulder fracture and shock when he was struck at Eleventh and Main streets. The driver of the car was C. L. Kingam of 605 Raleigh street, Glendale. Gardner was taken to Receiving Hospital.

Henry McMahon, 80, 168 North Edgemont street, suffered a broken right shoulder and shock at Beverly Boulevard and Kenmore street when he was struck by the car driven by Mrs. Emily Wentworth of 1332 North Hobart Boulevard. He likewise was taken to Receiving Hospital. All were attended by Police Surgeon Saverien.

Midwest Rail Veteran Dead at Home Here

E. J. Perry, veteran railroad man, who came here two years ago from Kansas City, Mo., died last evening of heart failure at his home, 534[illegible] Townsend avenue, Eagle Rock.

Mr. Perry was with the Frisco Railway for a period of forty-six years holding several responsible positions. Prior to the World War he was president of the Kansas City, Clinton and Springfield Railway for a number of years. He had established scores of friendships with railroad men from every State in the Union.

The funeral is to be conducted at 3 p.m. tomorrow at the Church of Flowers, Forest Lawn.

Besides his host of friends, Mr. Perry leaves a widow and daughter and a brother, C. A. Perry of St. Louis, who is now in Eagle Rock. The deceased was 73 years of age.

Young and Old at Odds Over Park Dancing

A petition signed by about 100 residents of the Echo Park district was forwarded to the City Council yesterday, asking for a separate dancing night for adults and for younger people, at the Echo Park Amusement Center. For twelve years until about two weeks ago, the petition declares, the adults have had the center on Thursday nights, the children another night. Then an order went into effect consolidating the two nights.

The youngsters and adults are not able to agree, the petition says, on the kind of music, length of dances and so forth, so that the weekly dance no longer is a congenial affair.

Self-Slain Man Leaves Scrawl Blaming Woman

When police, called to a hotel at 525 South Wall street last night, entered the room of J. H. Wilson, 40 years of age, they found his body ly[illegible] across the bed, the throat cut from ear to ear.

A photograph of a middle-aged brunette woman lay upon the floor and across its back was written: "This party to blame, one of Los Angeles's pickpockets."

Wilson, whose body lies at the County Morgue unidentified by relative or friend, registered at the hotel at midnight yesterday and was, according to the clerk, under the influence of liquor.

Hundred and One Will Testify in Mrs. Hall Trial

SOMERVILLE (N. J.) Oct. 30. (AP) One hundred and one persons have thus far been subpoenaed to testify for the State at the trials here next Wednesday of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her three male relatives, indicted for murder in the slayings of her husband, the Rev. Edward W. Hall, and Mrs. Eleanor Mills.

Inspector John J. Underwood, in making the announcement today, said more than a score remained yet to be summoned.

He died on the way to the Seaside Hospital.

Five-year-old Don Vanderford, 2338 Pasadena avenue, Long Beach, is the injured one. He was burned about the body when the candle in a jack o' lantern ignited the tissue-paper masquerade suit which he wore. He will recover.

LINER CALLS ON TOUR OF WORLD

Carinthia of Cunard Fleet Spends Day in Port

Delay in Arrival Held Due to Caribbean Storm

More Than 300 Tourists on Vessel at Departure

On her second tour, the Cunard liner Carinthia arrived at Los Angeles Harbor yesterday morning with 300 passengers, one day late on her 138-day cruise around the world for Raymond & Whitcomb. She sailed last midnight for the Orient and the Antipodes after taking aboard some additional passengers and 21,000 barrels of bunker oil.

The Carinthia, newest unit of the Cunard fleet, is in command of Capt. R. V. Peel, R.N.R. She is a 20,000-ton turbine steamer, built expressly for cruise service. Raymond & Whitcomb officials announced yesterday that the ship has also been chartered for the 1927 cruise.

Prominent among her passengers are Charles H. Thorne, former president of Montgomery Ward & Co., Chicago, accompanied by Mrs. Thorne and their daughter, Miss Leslie; Edward Inbusch, Milwaukee banker, and Mrs. Inbusch; Mr. and Mrs. Goelet Gallatin of New York and their daughter, Miss Beatrice, and Edward Aldrich, photographer, National Geographic Society.

In the Caribbean Sea on the 20th inst., the Carinthia was for twenty-four hours in the path of the hurricane which later devastated Havana. She was for seven hours hove to before the gale, which at times reached a 100-mile-an-hour velocity, but suffered no damage.

Attendance at Bon Temps Ball Put at 15,000

Fifteen thousand Halloween merrymakers danced into and out of the huge Shrine Auditorium ballroom last night during the Bon Temps ball. Keepers of the turnstiles declared there were streams of holiday celebrants coming and going throughout the evening.

The mammoth room had been converted into a land of witches and goblins by spectacular decorative and lighting effects, and the gorgeous costumes of the dancers blended into a colorful panorama which was accented by the multicolored lights overhead and reflected in the merry faces of the revelers.

A program of entertainment featured the evening including fifteen theatrical acts which appeared after they had performed at local playhouses.

Proceeds of the ball will be used for the final payment on the $50,000 pipe organ that has been installed in the auditorium. Roy H. McCray, president of the Al Malaikah Stage Club, sponsored the affair and was in charge of the ball. Prizes valued at more than $1000 were awarded wearers of the most striking costumes. The judges were Dave F. Smith, Al Malaikah Potentate; Louis M. Cole, Past Potentate, and F. J. Wadley, Shrine director.

DIRIGIBLE DESTROYED

Glendale Airport Hit by Heavy Gale; Model to be Reconstructed

After having seen a heavy gale, which swept down on Glendale yesterday, wreck his giant dirigible under construction at the Glendale airport, to the damage-amount of $300,000, Thomas Slate, Los Angeles inventor and government radio expert during the war, plans to start reconstruction of the huge ship immediately, and to include several new features which the destroyed machine did not possess.

Skeleton work on the 300-foot cigar-shaped body was about completed when the wind struck it.

The principle of operation was new in that power was to be generated by the creation of a vacuum by a propeller set in the ship's nose, which would tend to draw the body of the ship forward to fill itself. The work is being watched with interest by airmen the world over, it is declared.

Boarding House Keeper Told to Board Children

The boarders of Mrs. Georgia Goldberg are prospects for a new boarding place, by order of Judge Walton J. Wood.

Mrs. Goldberg was before Judge Wood yesterday to argue out with her husband, Ernest Goldberg, the matter of alimony and the custody of their children pending trial of their contested divorce suit.

She said she was eking out her income by keeping boarders, that her daughter was living with relatives in Minnesota and that her son boarded out. The children are both young, it was testified. The situation aroused Judge Wood's ire.

"If this mother must keep boarders, and if her children must board out, the proper arrangement is that they board with her," he said. "The husband will be ordered to pay Mrs. Goldberg $25 a month for the support of the son, and he'd better get the daughter back from Minnesota and in her mother's care."

Viajero que Predice Días Felices para Méjico

KANSAS CITY, Octubre 30.—Delbert J. Haff, significado abogado de Kansas City, y frecuente visitante de Méjico, dijo, en una entrevista publicada por la prensa de aquí, que Méjico y los Estados Unidos están llegando muy aprisa a una unión comercial e industrial. El señor Haff acaba de regresar a ésta después de haber permanecido un año en Méjico. Fué a nuestra vecina república en representación de capitalistas norteamericanos, que han invertido allá dinero por espacio de treinta años, en negocios de cobre, petróleo y vías férreas. Este abogado visita también con frecuencia a Los Angeles, y tiene relaciones de negocios con empresas capitalistas de Sudcalifornia.

El señor Haff expresó asimismo lo siguiente: "Dícese que un ochenta por ciento del comercio mejicano se hace ahora con los Estados Unidos, y los productos norteamericanos son las mercancías de mas importancia en Méjico. De esta manera, el comercio, ese gran educador internacional, está ligando estrechamente entre sí a ambos paises."

Al igual de otras personas, que han podido palpar directamente las condiciones políticas de sus paises y de las naciones extranjeras, el señor Haff hace notar que el espíritu nacionalista se ha exacerbado, y que es esto uno de los frutos de la guerra mundial. En Méjico se le echa de ver inmediatamente.

Hablando otra vez del aspecto económico-industrial de la vecina república, manifestó el señor Haff que "a ese respecto, no puede menos de ser brillante el porvenir de Méjico, pues sus recursos naturales son estupendos en cantidad, y diseminados en una gran extensión."

"El país tiene un área de 767,000 millas cuadradas, divididas en ventiséis estados, cada uno de los cuales dispone de recursos para atender todas sus necesidades. Además de su rica expectativa agrícola, tiene el país una riqueza minera que va más allá de lo que la imaginación puede concebir.

"La política del gobierno mejicano es la de desarrollar las industrias domésticas mediante el sistema de arancel protector. Méjico fabrica cada día en mayor cantidad los productos industriales que ha menester, y ya comienza a entrar con ellos en el mercado mundial."

Mueren Ocho en una Explosión en Pensilvania

WILKESBARRE (Pensilvania) Octubre 30.—Instantáneamente fueron muertos hoy ocho hombres en una terrible explosión minera en Nantihoke, punto cercano a ésta. Aunque una cuadrilla de rescate dió parte, dos horas después de la explosión, de que todas las víctimas habían sido ya traídas a la superficie, se siguen haciendo más exploraciones, a ver si se descubren otros muertos o heridos.

Las ocho víctimas estaban trabajando en la veta "George", de la mina No. 7, de la Compañía de Mantos Hulleros de Susquehannah, cuando ocurrió la explosión, que los aventó como el vendaval avienta las hojas caídas. La compañía no ha podido determinar si el siniestro se debió a la inflamación de gas o de pólvora.

Poco después del trágico accidente, se congregaron centenares de personas, en su mayoría deudos de los mineros, frente a las puertas de la mina.

Presúmese Cercana la Captura de Ormiston

Varios investigadores de Los Angeles, que trabajan bajo la dirección de Ben Cohn, jefe de la fuerza de detectives del fiscal, confían en tener en sus manos, dentro de unas cuarenta y ocho horas, a Kenneth G. Ormiston, ex-perifonista del templo del Angelus, y fugitivo de la justicia, que anda tras de él para que venga a responder de la acusación de perjurio que pesa sobre él, como sobre las señoras McPherson, Kennedy y Wiseman.

Los investigadores de Keyes se incautaron de una carta en clave dirigida al dueño del baúl ocupado en Nueva York, que se supone sea Ormiston. Keyes tiene ya en sus manos una copia fotostática de dicha carta, la que ha sido entregada al perito calígrafo Milton Carlson, para que la compare con escritos de la McPherson.

La publicación de la carta en clave por el fiscal Keyes ha provocado acalorada respuesta de W. I. Gilbert, jefe de los defensores de la McPherson, quien declara que Keyes está ventilando este asunto en los periódicos, y no ante el tribunal. Con igual calor redarguyó el primer teniente fiscal Davis, en representación de su jefe ausente, que el señor Gilbert y la evangelista están tratando de poner "una pantalla de humo", para distraer la atención pública de las nuevas, incidencias relativas a Ormiston.

La controversia de ayer entre los abogados gravitó alrededor de la carta en clave, que el señor Keyes asegura fué escrita por la McPherson. El hecho de que tanto esta declaración del señor Keyes, como la carta, fueran publicadas en los periódicos y no presentadas ante el tribunal que está conociendo de la acusación a la evangelista y sus conreos, equivale, según afirma el señor Gilbert, a una violación de los derechos constitucionales de la señora McPherson.

DEPORTES

Hockey

A la vez que crece rápidamente la popularidad del hockey sobre hielo, está pasando este deporte, en el este y el oeste central, por fases de desarrollo análogas a las que tuvo el baseball en los primeros años de este siglo, y si antes no había más que un equipo profesional, éste año vamos a tener cinco, según noticia recibida por Henry Siemer, encargado del Palacio de Hielo de Los Angeles, donde espera ofrecer una gran temporada de ese deporte en Sudcalifornia, que tan bien recibió en año pasado la introducción de ese juego.

New York-Paris Distance Made in Test Flight

PARIS, Oct. 30. (AP)—The feasibility of a Paris-to-New York City non-stop airplane flight is considered to have been proved by Lieut. Costes and Capt. Rignut, French military airmen, who have just made an aerial trip from Lebourgetan, France, to Jask, on the Arabian Sea in South Persia. The distance flown was 3415 miles. The time was thirty-two hours.

The aviators claim a record only for distance in a straight line between the Lebourget airdrome and Jask. The actual distance covered by them, counting deviation from this straight line, was about 3750 miles, which is greater than the distance between Paris and New York.

Costes and Rignut exceeded the feat of Capt. Weiser and Lieut. Challes of the French army, who, in September, flew about 3250 miles, the exact mileage between Brest and New York. They took off from the Lebourget airdrome and landed at Bender Abbas, on the Persian Gulf. The time of this flight was 27h. 20m. The flyers were handicapped by bad weather throughout the journey.

LIFESAVERS RECORD MORE THAN HUNDRED

LONDON, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Robert W. Drane, who lives at Yarmouth, has just made his 112th rescue from drowning, although he is 69 years of age. Already he holds sixteen medals and nine diplomas from the Royal Humane Society. His greatest rescue feat in a day was when he saved eight men from the sea when their boat capsized. He pulled one after the other ashore. He made his first rescue at the age of 14.

Prospective Bride's Plea Wins Mercy

All Miss June Mason did was smile and explain to Superior Judge Burnell yesterday that she and John W. Norbeck, strong man of the films, were to be married in a few days, and Norbeck was not only released from the County Jail, but a $200 fine that had been imposed on a contempt-of-court charge was suspended.

Norbeck failed to appear as a witness at the hearing of James S. Fox, asserted gunman and bootlegger, who was charged with slaying Harry Schwartz on August 4, last. Fox was acquitted of the charge, but the court took Norbeck into custody, nevertheless.

Last Friday, Norbeck began serving a sentence of five days in the County Jail; the $200 fine was still unpaid and if not remitted would have meant 100 days more in custody. Then Miss Mason went to Norbeck's rescue, and "everything is rosey now."

She explained that she had come to Los Angeles from Richmond, Ky., a few days ago, and that Norbeck and she had ideas marital. It was evident that a prospective bride should not be left without her prospective husband and the court relented.

RICH INDIAN SEEKS HELP FINANCIALLY

Jackson Barnett Appeals for Cash Advance on Oil Royalties in Oklahoma

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. (AP)—Help and advice from the Great White Father are sought again by Jackson Barnett, Creek Indian, who was raised by the Alladin's lamp of petroleum from a tepee and a blanket to affluence, but now finds himself embroiled in financial and legal difficulties.

An annual income of $70,000 is possessed by the Indian but he is unable to meet current expenses and seeks permission of the Interior Department, his guardian, to use part of his estate. Assistant Secretary Edwards said today that he believed arrangements will be made to advance funds to Barnett.

The estate is tied up in litigation at New York, where Barnett is under subpoena to testify November 15. But also he has been summoned to appear in Oklahoma before a grand jury, and wants the White Father's advice on which summons to obey.

The issue in the litigation is Barnett's right granted by the government, to give $550,000 to the American Baptist Missionary Society for a university at Muskogee, Okla.; $200,000 in cash to his white wife, and the establishment of a trust fund of $350,000 in a local bank, the income payable to himself and the whole reverting to Mrs. Barnett at his death.

Commissioner of Indian Affairs Burker said that exclusive of $550,000 in Liberty Bonds deposited in trust at New York; $200,000 in similar bonds here, or the probable value of his 100-acre allotment from which his oil royalty is produced, the Indian has nearly $500,000 in Liberty bonds, cash and accumulated interest in banks.

Uplifters' Club Elects Two on Director Board

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

SANTA MONICA, Oct. 30.—The Uplifters' Club, in Santa Monica Canyon, tonight elected Joseph Musgrove and Louis M. Cole as directors to serve for the next three years. They will meet with the rest of the directorate next Wednesday night to elect club officers, for the ensuing year.

The club's Halloween party was attended by more than 300 members and their families. The affair was one of the most pretentious ever held in the annals of the organization, and the richness of many of the costumes in which members were garbed excited comment.

The top photo at the left shows Manuel Laraneta carrying the ball on a dash through the Stanford line in the first period. McCreery, Stanford center, is stretched on the ground with his hand out. The face of Ted Shipkey appears just above the hips of Laraneta. Photo at the upper right shows Kaer (head down) with the ball. Biff Hoffman, No. 34, has a hand out to grab him. The narrow photo just below shows some excellent line play. There are ten men stretched on the ground. Bogue of Stanford has the ball, and he is flat on his back with two Trojans on top of him. The bottom photo is of Hibbs and Kaer (back to camera) riding Hoffman to the ground.

Cadets Take Advantage of Eli Fumbles to Run Up Lopsided Score

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) Oct. 30. (AP)—The Bulldog was no match for the Mule today and the Army's gridiron stalwarts ran roughshod over Yale to the tune of 33 to 0.

A capacity gathering of 75,000 in the Yale Bowl, including the corps of 1200 cadets, saw the powerful West Point eleven continue its unbeaten march by overwhelming the Blue in a battle punctuated by the erratic play of the Elis and a steady stream of penalties.

It was the first time the Cadets have conquered Yale on Eli soil and the first victory for the soldiers since 1911, when the Blue met defeat on the plains at West Point. It was also the most decisive triumph recorded by either team in the series which began in 1893 and had its twenty-fifth revival this afternoon in a colorful setting.

The Army won because it profited by Yale's mistakes and in spite of its own penchant for being penalized. The Cadets were penalized fourteen times for offside play in the first half alone, yet they had the punch to capitalize the "breaks" in their favor and score three touchdowns to gain a lead that the Elis never threatened. Yale was demoralized and put to

ILLINOIS DEFEATS PENN

"Frosty" Peters Kicks Field Goal in Last Period to Cinch Victory; Quaker Attack Fails

BY WALTER ECKERSALL

CHAMPAIGN (Ill.) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Taking advantage of a break late in the fourth quarter and pressing the advantage with forward passes, Illinois defeated Pennsylvania today, 3 to 0, in the presence of 60,000 spectators. It was a fitting climax to a hard-fought and cleanly played game. For three periods neither would open up with a forward pass. It was simply an old-style game of football with three attempts to gain followed by a punt. It was apparent each eleven was playing for the proverbial break and both teams had their chances in the final quarter.

Late in the third period, Penn forced the ball to the Illinois 21-yard mark and when a yard and a half was needed for a first down the Ben Franklins took a gamble. After Wascolonis was shot off the right side of his line, the sticks were called out for measurements and Penn failed to make the distance by two inches.

With the wind at his back Lanum gained steadily on the punt exchanges which followed. Finally Penn was in possession of the ball on its 40-yard line and Murphy's punt was partially blocked, the oval going to Illinois in midfield. Coach Zuppke's team then opened a forward-pass attack. Peters shot a pass to Daugherity which took the oval to the Penn 21-yard line. Peters hurled another pass to Lanum who was stopped on the easterners' 6-yard line. Rather than take any chances, Acting Captain Shively ordered Peters to make a field goal effort. The ball sailed squarely between the posts from the 17-yard line.

Penn elected to receive the next

Kutsch Stars as Iowa Wins From Carroll

IOWA CITY (Iowa) Oct. 30.—Iowa showed a slightly strengthened defense today against the driving, erratic attack of Carroll College, winning by a score of 21 to 0. Kutsch was the offensive mainstay of the Hawks, as usual.

Carroll used a varied line-smashing and forward-passing attack, making only one first down in the first half and in the second. Iowa failed to spring the passing attack that had been expected, but gained ground regularly on off-tackle smashes and runs.

Byers, sophomore quarter, and Bunn, sophomore fullback, starting their first game on the regular squad, also starred.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

BALTIMORE (Md.) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—The Navy squared up the rankling matter of that awful licking the sailors suffered at Ann Arbor last year when Howard Caldwell, a bulky young sailor of the dreadnaught type, torpedoed a gap in the Michigan line in their return game this afternoon and went through the hole for the first touchdown that has been recorded against Hustle-up Yost's young men since the fall of 1924. The Navy won the game, 10 to 0, and they actually swamped the team clustered around Benny Friedman, the greatest pitcher in football. You couldn't escape the impression that they smacked Michigan and smacked them proper. There was nothing in the nature of a fluke about this thing the Navy did this afternoon. And the victory had a particularly nice flavor to the student sailor men from Annapolis because they had heard reports that Friedman's team could not be licked just now.

So, when it was over, the whole regiment of midshipmen clattered down over the plank seats of the Municipal Stadium hurdled the low concrete wall and spread over the field to tear the goal posts up by the roots and break them into splinters with their hands for distribution as souvenirs of a very swell occasion in the athletic history of the Naval Academy. Fifty years hence this historic kindling will still be treasured on a sentimental par with the bowsprit of Old Ironsides.

Hamilton of the Navy had kicked a goal from the field in the third quarter which would have been enough to win the game as matters finally developed but there is a nourishing, satisfactory way in a touchdown that makes it desirable even when your game is won. This is especially true of a touchdown against a field that rolled you in the mud and made a sap of you in a nice, sporting way only a year ago and which has permitted no touchdowns to be scored against it in almost two years.

Caldwell started trouble for Michigan just after one of Benny Friedman's forward passes which were looping through the air all afternoon, landed plop in the arms of Tom Hamilton, the Navy's left half. Hamilton intercepted the pass about midfield, then ragged himself 3 yards through the Michigan line on an old-fashioned buck.

Caldwell made three himself in the same way and on the next play he hacked at Michigan's right tackle, broke through, and loped away for a 25-yard run. They fell in about 18 yards from Michigan's goal and Caldwell was thrown at the line twice more, gaining 5 yards on the first plunge and 2 on the second. A short pass failed and then Caldwell flipped one to Goudge, the Navy's quarter, who raced away on a slanting course and was just a stride short of the goal when he was run out of bounds. Having done so much to bring the ball that far, Caldwell was given the honor on the next play. He made half the distance in that plunge and when the next convulsion cleared away from the line, the referee discovered Caldwell's cleat marks behind Michigan's goal, where no alien cleats had scuffed the soil since the game with Iowa back in 1924.

Hamilton then kicked goal for the

CARDINALS WAGE UPHILL FIGHT TO BEAT TROJANS

U.S.C. Scores Twice Before Redshirts Get Started; Bogue's Goal Kick Gives 'Pop' Warner Win

BY PAUL LOWRY

The hopes of U.S.C. to beat both their big rivals, California and Stanford, in the same year, were blasted yesterday when the Sons of the Stanford Red rose to supreme heights and captured one of the best, bitterest and most desperately fought games of the season. The victory virtually assures them the Coast championship.

By the margin of 1 point, 13 to 12, Stanford won a thrilling struggle, which was decided before a crowd estimated at between 79,000 and 80,000 persons, said to be the largest crowd that ever saw a football game inside of a stadium in this country.

"BIFF" HOFFMAN

This pulsating battle—played on the greensward of the Coliseum—saw attacks and counter attacks, thrilling forward passes, spectacular runs, desperate line play, throbbing touchdowns and all the other elements that go to make the American game of football the best game in the world.

TOO BAD

The failure of Manuel Laraneta to kick goals after touchdowns cost the Trojans a victory. Bogue missed one goal, but he made the other, and this won the game for Stanford.

Twice the Stanford warriors came from behind to overcome a 12-to-0 lead, which the Thundering Herd piled up in the second quarter, and when they finally surged out in front with a furious attack in the third quarter they held their hard-won lead and repulsed the Trojan tornado.

It was the kind of a game you would go miles to see, and the teams were so evenly matched that they could be tossed together again today and no man's bet would be worth a thin dime.

U.S.C. men will say the breaks favored Stanford—Bogue's dash around end, for example, to the U.S.C. 5-yard line in the second quarter. Bogue was stopped cold on an attempted forward pass on fourth down and 5 yards to go. When he saw he was trapped he did the next best thing and ran with the ball. Eleven yards he carried it around Badgro's end.

RAH FOR BOGUE

It was a great individual effort and the wonderful part of it was that the Stanford linemen had the U.S.C. left side of the line dumped on the ground. But for their noble efforts Bogue's run would never have been possible, U.S.C. would have taken the ball on downs and Biff Hoffman would not have scored a few seconds later.

Bogue may never repeat such a run again, but he did it yesterday and that's the thing. It brought Stanford's first touchdown and put new vim in the whole Cardinal eleven.

If U.S.C. calls this a break Stanford will retort that Hoffman's fumble which Thomas plucked out of the air and carried 60 yards to a touchdown, was most certainly a break. But that's the way it went all day—something unusual, something sensational every minute. The Trojans made their first touchdown on a great 60-yard drive down the field. The Cardinals' last score came from a spectacular 35-yard pass to Hyland, who carried the ball 15 yards over the goal line.

The finish found everybody in the big bowl positively limp from excitement, raw-throated and wild-eyed.

LOST CHANCE

U.S.C. had a dying chance to score in the final period when Cravath recovered Hoffman's fumble, but McCreery and Walker smeared Thomas on a Statue of Liberty play, a forward pass was incompleted and then McCreery intercepted the next toss and U.S.C. never got close again. A field goal in those last few minutes would have won the game, but either the Trojans lacked a kicker, or the quarterback forgot the signal.

Although the Trojans made fourteen first downs to Stanford's six and totaled more yardage the desperate line play of the Cardinals staved off the seemingly inevitable on more than one occasion. McCreery and Swan were riots in the Stanford line and the runback of kickoffs by Hill and Hyland and the plunging of Hoffman offset the extra territory the Trojans gained from the scrimmage line.

On the opening kickoff Hyland very nearly got past the whole Trojan eleven. One man got a hand on him and brought him low. Then in the second quarter Hill ran back one of Taylor's boots 43 yards and when he was stopped by Kaer in the middle of the field there was no other man between him and the goal line.

TORNADO BREAKS

The Trojan tornado got off to an auspicious start in the first quarter. On plunges through the heart of the Stanford line and off-tackle slants Kaer and Laraneta alternated in carrying the ball fifty-eight yards to the Stanford seventeen-yard line. The last play which brought the ball to this point was a seventeen-yard dash between Poulson and Shipkey by Kaer.

At this point Kaer apparently decided the plays which had been bringing the yardage ought to be discarded, and he called a forward pass. McCreery rushed in so fast on Laraneta that the Italian half was unable to get the leather away and lost ten yards.

Right here it might be a good place to say that Pop Warner's boys broke up most of the U.S.C. forward pass formations which looked so good against California a week ago by the simple expedient of rushing the passer. They didn't give him a chance to get the ball away, much less pick out the man he was throwing to.

TRIES ANOTHER

Undaunted by McCreery's effort Kaer decided on another pass, and Hyland intercepted this one. Instead of kicking, Hoffman tossed a long pass down the field which was as good as a punt and which Thomas intercepted on the Trojan 45-yard line. U.S.C. started all over again, and reached the 35-yard line before they were stopped again. This march was for 28 yards.

The third march of the quarter was for 80 yards and resulted in U.S.C. reaching the goal line just as the period ended. Stanford held for three downs, but on the first play of the second period Kaer raced around Walker's end to a touchdown. Laraneta's kick was blocked by Shipkey.

On the march that closed the first period a forward pass from Kaer to Hibbs for 30 yards, the longest Trojan gain of the day from such a formation, was brought off through the simple marvelous effort of Hibbs who leaped up and took the ball out of two Stanford men's hands.

TOUCHDOWN FUMBLE

After an exchange of punts Stanford got the ball on her 38-yard line and worked it up to the middle of the field, where Hoffman fumbled going through the line and the ball bounced right into the waiting arms of Lloyd Thomas. He galloped to the left and with Bert Heiser running interference lit out for the goal line. Don Hill tried to head Thomas off, but Heiser brushed him off and while the two were battling Thomas slipped to the right and over the goal line. It was a heady run. Laraneta again tried to boot a goal, but missed. It was the one that lost the game.

Fighting mad Stanford came back to sweep the ball from their own 5-yard line on the kick-off back to the middle of the field on Hill's great run. Hill was tired, so Warner took him out and put in Bogue, and with Bogue and Hoffman smashing the line Stanford carried the ball to the Trojans' 16-yard line, one gain being a Hoffman-Shipkey forward pass for 11 yards. Then came the run by Bogue after three ineffectual plays, which were broken up by the giant Hibbs, who was easily one of the outstanding linemen of the day, and four plays from the 5-yard line, which finally resulted in Hoffman crashing over his own right guard for the score.

HITS THE POSTS

Bogue's kick for goal hit the uprights and bounced back. The tally was 12 to 6 in the Trojans' favor when the half ended a few minutes later.

After Stanford had hammered the ball up the field in the third quarter through the line-pulverizing of the blond giant, Biff Hoffman, the Cards were stopped and Bogue tried a field goal from the 33-yard line.

The attempt was wide and a few minutes later, after a weak punt by Kaer, Hoffman stepped back and shot a long thirty-five-yard pass to Hyland. Running forward at full speed, Hyland caught the ball in the far left corner of the field and rambled fifteen yards across the goal line with Kaer in hot pursuit. Kaer is a sprinter, but Hyland is a faster one and Hyland had the head start.

Bogue made sure of his shot this time and put the game on ice with a well-directed goal kick. Stanford 13, U.S.C. 12.

There was plenty of action in the last period, but no scoring, the play being featured by Hoffman's G.A.R. bucking and a fifty-two-yard punt over the goal line. The Trojans' big chance to score when they got the ball on the 25-yard line, went glimmering when the Card forwards busted up their passing attack and finally intercepted a toss, the game ending with the ball in Stanford's possession on their own 45-yard line.

MONTANA STATE IN WIN IN FAST TILT

BOZEMAN (Mont.) Oct. 30. (AP)—Montana State College won its second straight Rocky Mountain conference game here today from Colorado Teachers, 9 to 6, when Ivar Twilde of Glendive, substituting for Capt. Gregory, when the latter was forced out with injuries, kicked a short field goal. The kick came at the end of the last period when the Montana team had been checked twice within a few yards of the Colorado goal.

Santa Clara Eleven Beats Nevada, 25-0

SANTA CLARA, Oct. 30. (AP)—The fast University of Santa Clara football eleven defeated the University of Nevada squad, 25 to 0, here today.

The mission team completely outplayed the sagebrush contingent during the first two periods, but in the last half Nevada tightened up and held Santa Clara to one touchdown. Only bad breaks against them prevented the visitors from scoring during the last half.

Santa Clara scored twice in the first quarter, once in the second and once in the fourth. The first touchdown came when Nevada fumbled, and Connolly, recovering the ball, ran 25 yards to score. The most spectacular touchdown was made in the final period, when Bundy scored on a 35-yard pass from McKee. The other touchdowns were made by Cummings and Miller.

Swarthmore is Easy Prey for Princeton

PRINCETON (N. J.) Oct. 30. (AP)—The Princeton Tiger proved too much for Swarthmore in Palmer Stadium today and the Garnet was smothered 27 to 0. This was the first time in eight years that Swarthmore had failed to score on the Orange and Black and the first time this season that Princeton kept its goal uncrossed. The Tiger used straight-line plays along with forward passes. A late rally by Swarthmore in the final period had the Tigers on the run for a few minutes.

COLGATE WINNER IN MICHIGAN STATE TILT

HAMILTON (N. Y.) Oct. 30. (AP)—Playing in a drenching rain Colgate's team, minus its captain and field general, Nick Mehler, defeated the Michigan State eleven, 38 to 6, here today.

Bud Newell, Syracuse youth intercepted two of Michigan State's passes. He ran 30 yards in one and 35 yards in the other. He was the winners' chief ground-gainer.

PURDUE RESERVES WIN

LAFAYETTE (Ind.) Oct. 30. (AP)—Purdue's reserves held a field day here this afternoon, and ran rampant over the light Indiana State Normal crew to a final tally of 38 to 0.

OBSERVATIONS

BY THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER
BILL HENRY

THE OLD Bunker Hill pep that has pulled Stanford out of one hole after another for the entire football season—just as it has in a good many seasons gone bye—was too much for a U. S. C. team that had power enough to beat anybody. If the Trojans hadn't had it in their minds that they were the world's greatest forward-passing combination they would almost certainly have won that game but after making more than half the length of the field on straight football twice in the opening period, the Trojans felt that they just had to show that they could pass too, and a smart Stanford defense stopped in the air what they couldn't stop on the ground.

It is very doubtful if any football team ever looked better on a running attack than the Trojans did yesterday. They were almost unstoppable, the line opening up huge holes through which the interference and the man with the ball poured like water through a broken dike. In that branch of the game, and that alone, the Trojans were superior to the Cardinals and if they had stuck to it they would almost to a certainty have scored once, if not twice in the first period. But they didn't stick to it and the Trojan passes, with the Stanford line rushing the passer and a smart secondary defense to cover the receivers, were useless.

Stanford won because they were a more versatile football team. They could buck the line, run the ends, kick and pass. Their running attack wasn't as good as U.S.C.'s but it was good enough. Their kicking, passing and line bucking was very much better. In addition they played smarter football than the Trojans on the defense. Their passing defense was excellent and their defense on line plays was good and got better as the game progressed. Above all, they never gave up the ship and were in there battling as well when the score was 12 to 0 against them as when they were even at the start of the game.

The Stanford team played the same old Warner system with a few new wrinkles. Pop evidently has some kind of a system on the kickoff for out of the kicks the Cards received, they ran to the forty-yard line three times and did pretty nearly as well on one other occasion. Pop showed us a new wrinkle with Hoffman's long passes. If completed they were good for long gains, if incomplete there was no harm done, and if intercepted they were at least as good as a punt, the additional advantage in this case being that the ends were sure to be down because the defense couldn't interfere with them for fear of penalty.

There were plenty of individual heroes. Kaer, of course, will be voted a hero, although he has an advantage given him through the Jones system which enables him to shine far beyond his natural skill. Lloyd Thomas ought to be voted a hero because he made one of the slickest runs that anybody could make when he picked up Hoffman's fumble and followed his excellent interference to a touchdown. Cravath played a good game but nothing sensational. Hibbs and Gorrell stuck out of the U.S.C. defense like a couple of mountains looming out of the fog—they were great.

For Stanford Bogue will probably be a hero because his toe brought home the bacon while Hyland's brilliant all-around play is also worthy of considerable cheering. Hoffman's line-bucking was excellent and he played a fine all-around game aside from his fumbles. Capt. Fred Swan and McCreery however, were the two shining lights, the former being all over the field while McCreery was death on the Trojan passes.

DETAIL OF PLAY OF U.S.C. FOOTBALL TILT WITH CARDS

FIRST QUARTER

Taylor kicked off to Hyland, who received the ball on his 5-yard line and returned it to his own 40-yard line. Hoffman attempted a long pass to Hyland, the ball traveling 40 yards over Hyland's head. It was a great move by Stanford, attempting to catch U.S.C. flatfooted.

Running from punt formation, Hoffman gained 1 yard around his own left end. He was tackled by Cravath. Hyland punted and Kaer picked up the ball on his own 25-yard line and ran out of bounds on U.S.C.'s 35-yard line. U.S.C.'s ball—first down.

Laraneta slipped through his own right tackle for 3 yards. Kaer raced through right tackle for 7 yards and first down.

Kaer ran clear across the field to gain 4 yards around his own left end. Laraneta plowed into right guard for 1 yard. The Trojan line opened up a big hole in the left and Kaer crashed through for a first down on Stanford's 46-yard line. The gain was made through Stanford's left tackle.

Laraneta made 3 yards over Stanford's right guard. Kaer circled the other side of the line and slipped through for 4½ yards for a first down on Stanford's 35-yard line.

Laraneta made 4 yards through his own left tackle. U.S.C. has taken time out for a consultation. On the first play Kaer passed through Stanford's left tackle, running through for a first down on Stanford's 17-yard line.

Laraneta went back for a triple pass, but the Trojan line broke and Laraneta was thrown for a loss of 10 yards. Laraneta attempted another pass, but Hyland intercepted it on Stanford's 24-yard line. Stanford's ball.

Hoffman stepped back and threw a 38-yard pass, which Lloyd Thomas intercepted on U.S.C.'s 44-yard line. Hoffman's pass was just as good as a punt.

KAER THROUGH CENTER

Laraneta fumbled and recovered on the first play. Behind perfect interference, Kaer went through the heart of the Stanford line for 13 yards and first down. Laraneta bucked Stanford's left guard for 1 yard. Time out for Stanford. McCreery, Stanford center, injured.

Laraneta drove through Stanford's right tackle for a first down on Stanford's 35-yard line. Poulson, Stanford tackle, broke through and downed Kaer for a 5-yard loss. Kaer ran out to the right as if to pass and was again thrown for a 5-yard loss. Third down and 25 yards to go.

Kaer punted to Hyland, who received on his 7-yard line, and was run out of bounds on Stanford's 12-yard mark.

Running from punt formation, Hyland failed to gain. Hoffman threw a long forward pass, which was incomplete—the ball carried to U.S.C.'s 45-yard line. Hoffman punted to Kaer, who received the ball on his own 40-yard line. He returned five yards. U.S.C.'s ball on their own 45-yard line.

Kaer drove through Stanford's left tackle for 4 yards. Time out for U.S.C. Kaer lost 2 yards when his interference was piled up. Kaer threw a long forward pass, which Hibbs received in a spectacular catch on Stanford's 24-yard line. It was a great pass. Kaer ripped through left tackle for 9 yards. Kaer failed to gain through the same side on the next play. Laraneta wriggled through for a first down on Stanford's 12-yard line.

The Stanford line broke through and threw Thomas for a 3-yard loss. Kaer broke through right guard and ran 5 yards and was tackled but carried the ball to Stanford's 4-yard line. First down. Time out for Stanford. Kaer's run was for 12 yards, and the ball is on the 3-yard line.

Kaer drove into the middle of the line for 1 yard. Kaer crashed through left tackle and carried the ball to within 10 inches of the line. Time out for Stanford, Don Hill, Stanford half, was injured on the play.

Kaer again drove into the middle of the line as the quarter ended and the ball is within 6 inches of the line. Fourth down. One end of the ball is nearly touching the goal line.

SECOND QUARTER

Kaer carried the ball over on the first play, circling his own left end for a touchdown. The Stanford line broke through and blocked Laraneta's attempted goal kick.

Score: U.S.C., 6; Stanford, 0.

Taylor kicked off to Stanford, who received in the east end of the Stadium. Taylor's kick crossed the goal line. Stanford's ball on her own 20-yard line.

The Trojans were offside on the kick-off and the ball was brought back, U.S.C. penalized 5 yards, the first penalty of the game. Taylor kicked from his own 35-yard line to Hyland who received the ball on his own 5-yard line and returned it to the Cardinal 37-yard line.

Hoffman faked the ball to Hyland, but was stopped in the line when he tried to crash through. Stanford duplicated the play, except that Hyland attempted a pass which was incomplete. Hyland picked up a bad pass and punted to U.S.C. 44-yard line, where the ball was downed. First down, U.S.C.

Laraneta attempted to run Stanford's left guard, but was thrown for a 1-yard loss. Heiser failed to gain through his own left tackle. U.S.C. was penalized 5 yards for offside. Kaer ran clear across the field, but was forced out of bounds, losing 3 yards. The ball is now on U.S.C. 25-yard line. Kaer punted to Hyland, who received the ball on his own 37-yard line. He fumbled and recovered. Stanford's ball on her own 35-yard line.

THOMAS SCORES

On a reverse play, Hill gained 1 yard around left end. On a fake reverse, Hoffman hit the left side of U.S.C. for 2 yards. Hoffman's pass was incomplete, but the Trojans were offside and were again penalized 5 yards. Third down—2 yards to go. Hoffman fumbled the ball when he was tackled in the line. Lloyd Thomas recovered on Stanford's 48-yard line and raced across the line for a second touchdown.

Laraneta failed to convert. Score: U.S.C., 12; Stanford, 0.

Taylor kicked to Hill, who returned it to Stanford's 48-yard line. Hill cut through the entire U.S.C. team in returning the kick. Kaer finally brought him down.

Shipkey made 1 yard on an end-around play. Hoffman passed to Bogue, who replaced Hill, for a 7-yard gain. Hoffman crashed into the middle of the line for a first down on U.S.C. 41-yard line.

Hyland gained 1 yard around right end. Hoffman faked to Hyland, then made a yard through left guard. Hoffman dropped back and threw a long pass to Shipkey. Shipkey was brought down on U.S.C. 21-yard line.

Hoffman made a short pass to Bogue for a 3-yard gain. Bogue came around his own left end to plant the ball on U.S.C. 15-yard line. Third down—4 yards to go. On a triple pass back of the line of scrimmage Hyland was thrown for a 3-yard loss. Bogue dropped back to pass and the U.S.C. line failed to break through. After watching the play for a moment, Bogue carried the ball to U.S.C. 5-yard line and first down.

STANFORD SCORES

Hibbs broke through and threw Hoffman for no gain. Bogue attempted to outrun Behrendt, but Behrendt threw him for a slight loss. Millage replaced Post at quarter for Stanford. Third down—4 to go. Hoffman hid the ball behind his back and dashed through his own right tackle to U.S.C. 2-yard line. Hoffman drove through his own right guard for Stanford's first score carrying three U.S.C. men on his back.

Bogue's attempted kick hit the goal post and bounced back on the field.

Score: U.S.C., 12; Stanford, 6.

Hoffman kicked off to Laraneta, who ran the ball back 45 yards to his own 27-yard line. On a reverse the Stanford line broke through and dumped Thomas for a 4-yard loss. Fellman replaced Poulson at tackle for Stanford. Kaer made 3 yards through his own left tackle. Kaer punted and the ball was downed by Hyland on Stanford's 35-yard line.

Hoffman gained 1 yard while carrying the ball out of bounds. On a fake reverse Hoffman slipped through U.S.C. left tackle for 4 yards. On a reverse Bogue made 4 yards around his own left end as the whistle sounded, ending the first half.

THIRD QUARTER

Taylor kicked off to Hyland, who returned to his own 33-yard line. Stanford gained 4 yards on two reverse line bucks. On a third reverse Bogue skidded through and fumbled, but recovered. Hoffman crashed through his own right tackle for a first down on Stanford's 43-yard line.

On a fake reverse Hoffman smashed through U.S.C. left guard for 7 yards. Hoffman plunged into the center of the line for 2 yards. Gorrell stopped Hoffman for no gain. Hyland punted to Kaer, who was run out of bounds on U.S.C. 13-yard line. U.S.C. ball.

Laraneta went around his own left end for 5 yards. Fellman almost threw Kaer for a loss, but Kaer broke loose and made 5 yards. Kaer slipped through for a first down on his own 37-yard line.

Kaer fumbled and Freeman recovered on U.S.C. 35-yard line.

Hoffman went through right tackle for 4 yards. Hoffman again hid the ball behind his back on the play. Hoffman again plunged through the middle of the line for 4 yards. Hoffman carried the ball out of bounds without gaining. Fourth down—2 yards to go. Bogue attempted a place kick, but the ball was wide. U.S.C. ball on her own 20-yard line.

Laraneta made 4 yards through left tackle. Kaer failed to gain at right tackle. The Trojans were penalized 15 yards for holding. The ball is on U.S.C. 16-yard line. Heiser made 2 yards through left tackle. Kaer punted to Bogue, who downed the ball on U.S.C. 45-yard line.

HYLAND GOES OVER

Hoffman made 1 yard through the center of the line. On the next play he gained 3 yards through left tackle. Hoffman stepped back on his 41-yard line and threw the ball to Hyland on U.S.C. 15-yard line and ran for a touchdown without being touched. Bogue kicked goal.

Score: Stanford, 13; U.S.C., 12

Taylor kicked off to Hyland, who was downed on Stanford's 14-yard line. Hoffman failed to gain from punt formation. Shipkey was thrown for a 4-yard loss. Hyland punted to Kaer, who signaled for a fair catch on Stanford's 46-yard line.

Kaer made 2 yards at right tackle. The Trojans were penalized 15 yards for holding. Kaer ran around his own right end for 16 yards as the whistle ended the third quarter. It is U.S.C. ball on the 50-yard line.

FOURTH QUARTER

Laraneta failed to gain in attempting to run Stanford's right end. Kaer threw a long pass on fourth down and McCreery, Stanford center, intercepted the ball and returned to his own 44-yard line.

Hoffman broke through his own left guard for 9 yards. On an attempted reverse Bogue was thrown for no gain. Stanford was penalized 15 yards for holding. Bogue reversed and ran around his own right end, out of bounds on Stanford's 43-yard line. Moser replaced Behrendt at right end for U.S.C. On a fake reverse, Hoffman crashed through right tackle for a first down on U.S.C. 45-yard line. Hoffman was stopped for no gain. Scheeving, who replaced Cox at the start of the quarter, stopped Hoffman. Shipkey made 4 yards around right end.

Shipkey added 3 more through U.S.C. left tackle on the next play. Fourth down and 3 yards to go. Hyland punted over the goal line. U.S.C. ball on her own 20-yard line.

Capt. Swan broke through and stopped Laraneta for a 4-yard loss. Don Williams replaced Kaer at quarter for U.S.C. A beautiful triple pass from Laraneta to Williams made it a first down on U.S.C. 30-yard line. Williams ran his own right end for 9 yards. Thompson replaced Heiser for U.S.C.

Laraneta crashed through left tackle after reversing his field and carried the ball to the middle of the field, a gain of 11 yards. Williams was thrown for a slight loss when he attempted to run right end.

Laraneta passed to Thomas for a gain of 7 yards. Williams dropped back to pass and was thrown for a loss of 7 yards. Williams punted over the goal. Stanford's ball on the Cardinals' 20-yard line.

CRAVATH RECOVERS

Hyland gained 2 yards through center. Hoffman fumbled and Capt. Cravath recovered for U.S.C. on Stanford's 25-yard line. Lloyd Thomas lost 6 yards on a reverse. McCreery knocked down Williams's attempted forward pass. Williams passed again and McCreery intercepted the ball on Stanford's 20-yard line.

On a reverse, Bogue lost 2 yards. Wheeler replaced Thomas for U.S.C. Hoffman made a yard through the center of the line. Natcher again replaced McCreery at center for Stanford. Hoffman threw a long forward pass which was too far down the field for Hyland to reach. Hyland punted and Freeman grounded the ball on U.S.C.'s 45-yard line.

Williams's pass to Wheeler was incomplete. Wheeler's pass to Hibbs was incomplete and the Trojans were penalized 5 yards. Williams passed to Laraneta, but the Trojans lost 4 yards on the play. Elliott replaced Williams for U.S.C. Harder replaced Waler at end for Stanford. Elliott punted out of bounds on Stanford's 45-yard line. Hoffman failed to gain on a reverse. Shipkey gained a yard around his own right end. On a reverse, Hoffman gained 1 yard. Hyland punted and the ball was downed on U.S.C.'s 41-yard line.

Elliott lost a yard trying right end. He made 2 yards through the middle of the line on the next play. There are two minutes left to play. Elliott's long forward pass to Badgro was incomplete. Elliott punted to Hyland, who was run out of bounds on Stanford's 40-yard line.

Hoffman ploughed into his own right tackle for 2 yards. Hoffman made three more at right tackle. Bogue went around U.S.C.'s right end for a first down on U.S.C.'s 45-yard line.

HYLAND, BOGUE SHARE HONORS

Stanford Backs Heroes of Grid Classic

Kaer and Laraneta Stand Out for Trojans

Hoffman Almost Goat But is Saved by Fate

BY BRAVEN DYER

While the mighty Trojans lumbered first to one side of the line and then to the other in frantic attempts to stop Stanford's never-ending succession of reverses, fake reverses, double-reverses and sometimes even triple cut-backs, the greatest throng in the history of Los Angeles football crowded the Coliseum to the gunwales. The spectacle itself, unequaled in the annals of local football, will live forever in the memories of the 79,000 fans who jammed the Coliseum to overflowing. Several thousand, failing to gain admittance, stormed the gates of Zack Farmer's open-air theater, and approximately half of those without tickets saw the game because they rushed the main entrance and crashed through before a squad of cops could prevent the deluge. Those who failed to get in remained outside, yelling and hooting as the tide of battle surged back and forth.

DICK HYLAND

The spectacle of 79,000 persons jammed into one inclosure will be a picture forever, but it is doubtful if the mental photo of the vast assemblage will live any longer than the actual recollections of the struggle itself. No football game in these parts has ever been more spectacular, no contest has ever been marked by more intense effort on the part of those participating and no battle was ever fought in which heroes ascended to such heights only to be dropped with a thud because of their own mistakes.

The very tenseness of the titanic struggle seemed to permeate the atmosphere from the very moment the game started until the Trojans, in a last wild fruitless effort to retrieve a lost cause, tossed pass after pass toward the Stanford goal line. There wasn't a second of those closing minutes that the Trojans weren't dangerous, although the very silence of the U.S.C. rooting section seemed to indicate that the sons of Troy were engaged in a hopeless cause. One connection between the strong right arm of either Don Williams or Howard Elliott and some waiting Trojan receiver, and the game would have been U.S.C.'s. However, the passes lacked finesse and direction and Stanford's defense against an aerial attack was splendid, thanks muchly to the sterling work of one of the best linemen on the field, Hal McCreery, the Cardinal center.

HYLAND OR BOGUE?

Before the game we declared that U.S.C.'s heroes were likely to be Morton Kaer and Manuel Laraneta, while in the same breath we expressed the belief that Dick Hyland and "Biff" Hoffman would gather in most of the glory for Stanford. Of the four Laraneta and Hyland came through in the best fashion while an unsung warrior, one George Bogue, should really receive the laurel wreath for it was the power generated in his trusty right hoof that gave Stanford the thirteenth point of a 13-to-12 victory. Even Laraneta, who to us was U.S.C.'s most consistent back, failed in the crisis of goal kicking, missing both tries. So the palm really goes to Hyland or Bogue.

Kaer was superb in the first two quarters. His off-tackle smashes pulverized the Stanford line, the Red Bluff terror ripping and plowing his way through what had been called the strongest forward wall on the Pacific Coast. Poulson and Harris, "Pop" Warner's tackles, could do absolutely nothing with Kaer. Running behind devastating interference Morton rolled up a staggering total of yardage. His brain functioned beautifully at all times, his best piece of work occurring as the second quarter opened. On this occasion, with fourth down and a few inches to go, Kaer sent himself around his own left end for a touchdown. He evidently realized the futility of attempting to batter his way only a few inches through the heart of the Stanford line. It was the smartest play Kaer has made all season and it was so simple.

But to our mind Kaer flivvered terribly when he called that pass play with something like fifteen yards to go in the final period. It was U.S.C.'s ball in midfield. It was fourth down and by all the rules of football he should have punted or tried a pass over the goal line. Instead he attempted a short pass, not more than 15 yards. It was intercepted and the heart seemed to go out of the Trojans. Coach Jones, sitting on the U.S.C. bench, nearly collapsed. Kaer should have punted. No two ways about that.

FOUGHT LIKE DEMONS

Laraneta's twisting, wiggling jaunts through the Stanford line were equally as spectacular as Kaer's more powerful dashes. Both players fought like demons when tackled, frequently carrying two or three Stanford tacklers for a few extra yards. But "Larry" couldn't make good on either of those goal kicks, one going wide and the other being blocked. Of course, his line gets blamed for the one which was blocked, but it does seem that he should have made one of the two. Goal kicking was certainly a lost art yesterday, the percentage table reading but one out of four.

Hyland did practically everything that was expected of him. He didn't outspeed Kaer in straight line work for the simple reason that Hoffman carried the ball on about eight of every ten plays. But "Tricky Dick" made Stanford's second touchdown, catching a beautiful pass from Hoffman. He also intercepted many of U.S.C.'s passes and last but not least was given official credit for blocking Laraneta's first goal kick, thus averting what might have been a tie. Hyland didn't equal Kaer's yardage in straight plays, but he returned punts and kick-offs a grand total of 109 yards as against but 9 for Kaer.

To us either Hyland or Bogue should be crowned the day's hero. The latter was directly responsible for Stanford's first touchdown, the score which put the old Bunker Hill pepper into "Pop's" boys and eventually carried them through to victory. With the ball on U.S.C.'s 18-yard line in the closing minutes of the second quarter Bogue dropped back in preparation for a pass. He looked toward the left side of the field where his receivers were congregating. Most of the U.S.C. team galloped in that general direction. The Trojan linemen paid virtually no attention to Bogue and failed to rush him as they should have done. Seeing this and noting that the Trojan secondary defense was drawn over to his left, Bogue tucked the ball under his wing and galloped to the 5-yard line. It was a smart piece of work on the big fellow's part. He weighs 190 pounds, but has rightfully been called "the fastest big man on the Coast." Hoffman then brought the touchdown, carrying the ball over by sheer muscular football. Several Trojan linemen took a ride on his back. Bogue's attempted goal-kick struck the upright, but he made good the second time and will be famous for doing so.

ALMOST THE GOAT

Hoffman was almost the goat of the game. His first fumble resulted in U.S.C.'s second touchdown, Lloyd Thomas gathering the ball to his bosom and romping half the length of the field for the score. Which reminds us that Thomas might be listed as Troy's hero but for the fact that the pass on which Hyland scored went right over Lloyd's head and was certainly one on him. Hoffman's second fumble, coming in the fourth quarter, might well have resulted fatally had U.S.C. settled down to business. His bobble, recovered by Capt. Jeff Cravath, gave U.S.C. the ball on Stanford's 25-yard line. Instead of whacking away at the Stanford wall, which must have been tiring, Williams opened up with passes again and the ever-present McCreery intercepted and Hoffman didn't have to be the goat.

The unsung linemen who toiled through the hot sun certainly deserve their share of praise. Capt. Fred Swan and McCreery were probably Stanford's bulwarks, Ted Shipkey also playing splendidly. Jesse Hibbs, Ted Gorrell and Morris Badgro upheld the Trojan banner while Capt. Jeff Cravath was his usual battling self. Incidentally the catch which Hibbs made of Kaer's pass in the early part of the game was a wow. Jesse took the ball while high in the air with several Stanfordites seemingly hanging on his neck. Of course they weren't but it looked that way. The interference work of the Trojans in the early stages of the game was clean cut and destructive. When the Stanford reverses started functioning in the second half, the Trojan linemen got so dizzy trying to find the ball that they apparently had no drive left for offensive work when U. S. C. got the leather. Incidentally, Hoffman's "hidden ball" play, in which he carried the leather on his hip, was one of Warner's old tricks which he has used effectively in the dim, distant past.

Just as a guess it occurs that Morley Drury, than whom there is no whomer when it comes to booting goals, would probably have been the outstanding hero had he been in there. Instead "Ding" sat on the bench, his head in his hands and cussed the ill luck that kept him from battling Troy's rivals.

COLISEUM CROWD SETS NEW MARK

Zack Farmer, manager of the Coliseum, estimated that between 79,000 and 80,000 persons saw yesterday's game between U.S.C. and Stanford. Farmer believes this is a new national record for a football crowd inside a stadium, the famous 90,000 attendance at California-Stanford last year being possible because about 20,000 saw the game from outside the bowl. The jam at the last minute saw thousands of fans crowded into the general admission section yesterday, and several thousand ushers, attendants and workers swelled the total to approximately 80,000, in Farmer's estimation.

White Kings Trim Giants by 6-4 Score

Doc Crandall's White King Soapsters rallied in the ninth inning and put over two runs to break a tie and defeat the Philadelphia Royal Giants, 6 to 4, yesterday at White Sox Park. The victory put the White Kings on top of the Winter League.

Dick Moudy hurled for the Soapsters and had the better of the twirling argument with Lefty Cooper. Cooper yielded twelve hits while but seven were bagged off Moudy.

Ray Jacobs lead the White King attack with four hits, one a double. Art Jahn hit a home run and two singles, while Stats and Lindimore made two safeties. Joseph hit for the circuit for the Giants.

The same teams play today at White Sox Park, game starting at 2:15 o'clock. Score:

DAN O'LEARY TO WALK

Dan O'Leary, 83-year-old champion pedestrian, announces that he will walk around the bases twelve times at the Shell Oil-Pirrone All-Star game at Shell Oil Park, Long Beach. O'Leary walked all the way from Long Beach to "The Times" Friday to tell the sports department that he would perform. O'Leary doesn't believe in phoning when he can walk. It's much quicker, he says.

Lowly Oregonians Trample Golden Bear, 21-13, for First Conference Win Since 192

WEBFOOTERS IN GREAT VICTORY

Thrilling Air Attack Puts Over Winning Tallies

California Stages Comeback, But Fails to Even Score

Ord and Clymer Shine for Rival Grid Outfit

STADIUM, BERKELEY, Oct. 30. (AP) Bombed from the air and battered on the line, California's Golden Bears succumbed to the rushing attack of Oregon by a 21-to-13 count today.

It was a great day for the Webfooters of Oregon, whose followers saw the northern squad score its first conference victory since 1924, and at the same time tumble California's hopes with its third straight conference defeat of this season.

Opening with a flashing attack, Oregon pushed over three touchdowns in the first half, which the determined efforts of a Blue and Gold closing drive could not overcome. However, two times the Bear gridiron cohorts crossed the goal line of their opponents in the third period and drove the northerners back again in the last quarter, only to lose the ball when scoring opportunities arrived.

Oregon's touchdowns, all responsible from a deceptive aerial attack, were: One in the first period when Ord took Burnell's pass and galloped 47 yards down a broken field; again in the second period the Webfooters crossed up California's defense and Mimnaugh tossed 6 yards to Burnell, and near the end of the same quarter, when Jones intercepted Clymer's pass and zigzagged 35 yards to the opposition line for the remaining touchdown.

The Bear scores came shortly after the third opened, when Bob Green blocked Wetzel's kick and snaring the bouncing oval, ran 6 yards to score. A few minutes later, Evans, substituting for Blewett, intercepted Mimnaugh's pass and dashed 50 yards down the field.

Ord, the northerners' little 135-pound halfback, proved to be the star of his team's play. His forte was running the ends and crashing into the line for substantial gains, while Wetzel, fullback, followed a close second for honors.

For the Bears Clymer, with a display of remarkable kicking, stood out. On two occasions he booted the oval for trips of 72 yards. Niswander, playing in the line, also was a feature of the game.

The Webfooters chalked up a total of 259 yards from scrimmage, while California's total registered 142 yards.

Heavy Hitters Scheduled for Olympic Bouts

TOMMY O'BRIEN.

Although Matchmaker Joe Levy of the Olympic Auditorium has not yet completed negotiations for his six-round semi-wind-up, the rest of the card is one which cannot help but draw a capacity crowd to the fistic emporium at Eighteenth and Grand on the ten-round main event, Tommy O'Brien and Baby Joe Gans, two of the greatest lightweights on the Pacific Coast, if not in the world, will fight out their originally scheduled bout which had to be deferred from two months ago on account of a damaged paw sustained by O'Brien. This is all healed up now, and doing business at the old stand which means a tough session for the colored star.

Both are hard at work right now in their gyms. In the six-round special event, Dario Barron and Joe Bickey are lined up, a fight which is a cinch to give the customers all the kick they need, both having scored knockouts aplenty in their most recent fights. Patsy Flanagan of the St. Louis fame will take on Dick De Hong in the second spot, a great shot, while Perfecto Mendoza and Louis Contreras meet in the curtain raiser.

LONG-WINDED TIGERS START WORK FRIDAY

Although the cross-country conference races are slated for late in December, Coach Joe (Timberwolf) Pipal, Occidental track mentor, will stage his first day of tryouts for the team next Friday, November 5. The track squad this year will possess only two returning letter men, Hugh Miller and Rege Lavelle.

Rege Lavelle, captain, Hugh Miller, Paul Newell, Bob Eastman, Bailey Cook, Don Imler, Jimmy Campbell and Atwood Scovell are the group of candidates of whom much is expected by Tiger officials.

TWO-PLY SOCCER BILL ON TAP TODAY

A stirring soccer double-header is on tap today at the Los Angeles High School Field, with the Los Angeles Rangers versus the San Pedro Scandinavians occupying the limelight.

In the preliminary game at 1 p.m., the B'nai B'rith eleven will tangle with the Italian Club, for leadership of Division "B."

REISELT DEFENDS TITLE

Otto Reiselt of Philadelphia may defend his national three-cushion billiard diadem against a group of experts including Layton, Kelckhefer, Copulos, Hall, and Lappome and others in Chicago in February.

FIREMEN AND SAILORS CLASH ON MAIER PARK GRID TODAY

As special guests of honor, Rear-Admiral Phelps, commander of the naval base at San Pedro, and his staff will view the struggle between the Los Angeles Fire Department football team and a hand-picked eleven from the ships Relief, Medusa, Arctic and Procyon today at Maier ball park.

The naval base eleven last week met the pigskin wielders from Caltech, and held them to a 7-to-7 tie. In the past week, Coach Bill Blewett of the fire department has been working his men hard, and with Riegal, former Kansas Aggies star and considered one of the greatest broken field runners in the game, and "Dynamite" McCarter, star halfback, once more in the game after a long sojourn on the bench due to injuries, he expects to show a stronger offense than he has for some time.

Oregon Aggies Wage Desperate Fight on Gridiron to Crush Vandals by 3-to-0 Score

PORTLAND (Or.) Oct. 30. (AP)—A break late in the last quarter enabled the Oregon Aggies to win a thrilling and desperately-fought football game from the University of Idaho on the Multnomah Civic Stadium gridiron this afternoon, 3 to 0.

The brilliantly coached Vandal eleven, displaying unexpected power and exceptional ball-carrying ability, had carried the fight to the Orangemen almost intermittently for the first three quarters and were again making a goalward march with eight minutes left to play in the last period.

Then Jacoby, dashing red-headed quarter and field general, who had been directing the masterly attack, planned by Coach Charley Erb, was knocked unconscious and had to be taken from the field to a hospital.

Cheyne, a substitute quarter, signaled for a forward pass, which the shifty Howard Maples of the Aggie backfield, intercepted on the Aggies' 35-yard line and tornadoed back through the entire Idaho team to the Vandal 13-yard line before he was finally tackled and brought down from behind.

The Idahoans made a grim stand for three rushes, hurling back as many terrific thrusts at their line when Wes Schulmerich, Aggie fullback, place-kicked a goal for the lone three points of the struggle.

Statistics of the game showed that Idaho outplayed the Aggies in every department. The Vandals gained 148 yards from scrimmage to their opponents' 88 and the short forward passes from Powers to his receivers were deadly and good for yardage repeatedly, while Schulmerich's long hurls for the Orange team were invariably batted down or intercepted.

Powers not only got greater distance on his punts than his rivals for the Gem Staters, but his kicking was beautifully accurate and but for the almost uncanny ability of Maples, opposing safety, to catch the ball and return it from under the very shadow of his own goal line would have counted heavily in the final outcome.

The game was one of the roughest ever seen here, with the Aggies tackling and interfering like cavemen. Two Idaho players were knocked insensible during the savage fray, Red Owings, Idaho fullback, going down for the count from a punch that closed his right eye in the second quarter, and Jacoby, Vandal quarter, being laid out from a crippling crash that caused partial paralysis of the spine for a few minutes and made it necessary for the injured player to be taken to a hospital. He recovered nicely, however, and was reported in normal condition an hour later.

100,000 EXPECTED AT BEAR-CARD TILT

It is estimated 100,000 spectators may witness the annual Pacific Coast gridiron classic between California and Stanford at Berkeley Saturday, November 20. The big stadium will have a seating capacity of 78,000 by the addition of 8000 seats being erected along the rim of the structure. An admission fee will also be charged for the privilege of standing on the hill in the rear of the stadium and it is expected many thousands unable to obtain seats will avail themselves of this opportunity to witness the game.

LAFAYETTE NOSES OUT PRESIDENTS

Washington and Jefferson Eleven Defeated in Last Minute of Play, 16-10

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Lafayette's football team remains undefeated tonight as the result of its wonderful and thrilling victory over Washington and Jefferson here this afternoon by the score of 16 to 10. More than 20,000 people banked the huge stands to see one of the greatest games ever witnessed on Franklin field.

With less than a minute to play and the score 10-to-9 against it, Lafayette came through with a touchdown that downed Andy Kerr's legions and sent the gay throng home after the game of the age. This score came as the result of a wonderful forward pass.

HASKELL INDIANS IN EASY VICTORY

LAWRENCE (Kan.) Oct. 30. (AP)—The Haskell Indians today defeated Bucknell, 36 to 0, winning their great triumph in the new stadium which Secretary Work of the Interior had helped dedicate just before the kick-off. The Braves battered the Bison line to pieces.

CARD INFANTS CRUSH TROJANS

Stanford Yearlings Gallop to 27-0 Victory

Simkins Scintillates With Three Touchdowns

Jack Murphy Displays Class With Plunging

STANFORD STADIUM, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—William Simkins, erstwhile citizen of Manhattan Beach, Cal., almost within the shadow of the gates of Troy, from whose portals issue forth the football warriors of the University of Southern California, stole the thunder of the visiting herd of Trojan yearlings here this afternoon. Stanford freshmen, 27; University of Southern California freshmen, 0.

So read the scoreboard when Bill and his cronies had completed their depredations. By way of passing, it may be mentioned that William plays fullback for the Cardinal babes. Before this afternoon's unpleasantries, he was reputed to be a fine defensive player, but only an ordinary ball carrier. The U.S.C. frosh were reported to be in search of the practical joker who started that rumor, after the game.

Mr. Simkins contributed three of the red-shirted babes' four touchdowns and gained almost one-half of the 260 yards his team netted from scrimmage. His play on the defense was sparkling and his all-around work was nothing short of disgraceful in view of the fact that he is a son of the southern part of the State of California. The real estate men will try none of their wiles on Bill, for the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce can't consider him a desirable citizen.

And William was not the only man who did himself proud among the thirty-two players "Husky" Hunt injected into the fray at one time or another. Substitutions seemed to bother the Cardinal freshman less than none. Jack Murphy, former Los Angeles High School halfback, contributed heavily to the downfall of his fellow-townsmen as did Lud Frentrup, Berkeley High School star of last year. Walter Heinecke of Santa Ana, Warner Hobdy of San Francisco, Hal Templeman of Menlo school, Jake Fetzer of Lockeford, Tom Driscall of San Mateo, Kendall Albertson of Los Angeles and countless others. Hobdy, who had played fullback until two weeks ago, played a remarkably strong game at tackle.

Missouri Grid Men Win Over West Virginia

MORGANTOWN (W. Va.) Oct. 30. (AP)—The University of Missouri defeated West Virginia, 27 to 0, mainly by breaking up the Mountaineers' overhead play.

The westerners shattered the record of Mountaineer Field in which West Virginia had been undefeated since it was first used in 1924. It was the Mountaineers' first defeat in a home game since 1919.

Three of Missouri's touchdowns were direct results of intercepted forward passes and the other was the climax of a march begun when the Tigers got the ball on downs after West Virginia passes failed.

Harvard Runs Over Tufts in Frolic on Grid

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) Oct. 30. (AP)—Harvard's new football machine had a field day today, running ragged over Tufts for a final score of 69 to 6. The visitors' single scoring opportunity came in the first period when three forward passes carried the ball to the Crimson 9-yard line, and Ellis drove over for a touchdown.

Harvard started its first-string eleven, but after Miller's first touchdown substitutes became the order of the day and finally every member of the Crimson squad had seen action.

The Crimson's first, second and third-string backfields romped over Tufts, gaining on line rushes and long runs, almost at will.

kick-off and immediately opened a forward-pass offense which was smothered by the Orange and Blue. An exchange of punts and a Penn fumble gave "Frosty" another chance at the Penn goal from the 35-yard line. Just before the ball left Center, Reitsch's hands the gun was fired and the referee blew his whistle to denote the end of the game. Frosty, however, drove the ball between the posts but the score did not count because the ball had not left the center's hands before the pistol was fired.

Naturally it was a great victory for Illinois and a wonderful triumph for Coach Zuppke, who is deserving a world of credit for remodeling a team which was beaten a week ago by Michigan, 13 to 0.

The much-vaunted hidden-ball plays of Penn did not bother Illinois. In fact, the Penn elbow pads which resembled footballs were greatly overplayed. There was nothing deceptive about them and the hidden-ball formations which Penn used were employed by teams as many as twenty-five years ago. Even Foster Sanford, a former Yale player who has coached in the East for many years, asserted Yale used similar formations in the early nineties.

The Penn backs, however, faked their plays nicely and if the Illinois line had not played so well and charged with a determination which could not be denied the sturdy Penn backs would have made plenty of ground.

EXCELLENT ATTACK

In stopping the Penn attack, Coach Zuppke had an excellent defense. He permitted Reitsch, his center, to play in a roving position. Nickol and Wilson, the ends, played close to their tackles, while the Illinois defensive line was much tighter than usual. This prevented any delayed straight attacks from weaving through the Illinois forward wall. The Orange and Blue defensive halfbacks, which Zuppke calls lurking ends, played back and outside their tackles. Lanum and Daugherity played back of their halfbacks. In other words it was a 6, 2, 3 defense.

The Illinois ends drove in the moment the ball was snapped and the entire line charged. Reitsch, who is one of the brainiest centers in the conference, was quick to fathom the Penn attack and was in the thick of the fray. He stopped most of the visitors' line-through thrusts and at times made tackles on the wings.

In other words Zuppke had instructed his players to watch the ball and they did this to perfection. They tackled hard and clean and only on a few occasions did Penn show any indications of an attack which would be sustained long enough to result in a score.

Illinois was on the alert at all times and played a bang-up defensive game.

When Illinois had the ball, Penn was crossed several times. This was especially true on third downs when Butler, the Penn center, pulled out of his position in the line to help block on Illinois punts. Instead of punting Illinois pulled the quarterback sneak, with Lanum driving through center for choppy gains on several occasions. Illinois also used a few deceptive plays of the hidden-ball variety. On drives off the tackles, the ball was faked to one back and then given to another with the former taking an important part in the interference. Illinois backs drove with plenty of power in this style of offense, which was not effective long enough to work the oval into scoring positions.

In the second quarter, Penn, by taking advantage of the north wind, gained enough ground on punt exchages to permit P. Scull to make two field goal attempts. One was blocked and the other went wide of its intended mark.

BROWN THUMPS DARTMOUTH

Bears Convert Blocked Kick and Intercepted Pass Into Touchdown and Field Goal to Win, 10-0

HANOVER (N. H.) Oct. 30.—Brown's big grizzly bear licks his chops this evening over another satisfying meal and gazes still hungrily in the direction of Harvard. The same eleven youngsters who last week gave Brown its first victory over Yale in ten years today knocked down the Dartmouth Green and came through with a slate still clean, 10 to 0.

But the slightly dazed look in the eyes of the Bear tonight was [illegible] due to any overeating. Brown [illegible] only after one of the hardest, most keenly fought games of football that eastern fields have seen.

Twenty thousand jammed every corner of Dartmouth's stadium in the Hampshire Hills this afternoon and watched the alert, springy eleven in the brown jerseys convert a blocked kick in the second period into a touchdown and an intercepted last-minute Dartmouth pass into a field goal in the final.

They watched, between those scores, an even and inspiring fight of lines and backfields as tehy could have asked for.

Crimson Tide Sweeps in to Inundate Louisiana State, 24 to 0

UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Behind the brilliant play of Winslett, Caldwell and Pickhard, the Crimson Tide of Alabama came back into its own against the Louisiana State Tigers and defeated them, 24 to 0, before a homecoming crowd of about 7500. Two of the Crimson touchdowns came as a result of punts blocked by Freddie Pickhard, the giant Alabama tackle.

Alabama had little trouble with the Tiger offense. The Louisiana boys made one first down in the first half and one in the second.

Bear Freshmen Trample Antler Gridders, 33-0

The San Francisco Antlers' Lodge football team was pushed all over the gridiron today by Clint Evans, California freshmen, 33 to 0. Ben Lom, the star kicker and line plunger of the frosh, accounted for two touchdowns. The other Evans tallies were made by Louis Chandler, Bob Buzard and Leland Rice. The strongest defenders of the Antler standard were Jack Thuodes and Frank Burger. From the outset of the contest, it was simply a question of how many touchdowns would be shoved over by the Californians. The transbay aggregation made its best showing in the final quarter, when Evans ushered most of his reserves into the battle.

Badgers Lose to Minnesota by 16-10 Score

MADISON (Wis.) Oct. 30.—University of Minnesota defeated University of Wisconsin, 16 to 10, in a Western Conference football game today before a gathering of 42,000.

It was a nip-and-tuck fray which was clinched in the fourth period when Nydahl of Minnesota returned Barnum's punt 60 yards for a touchdown and a victory for the Gophers.

HUNTING AND FISHING NOTES

This week's hunting and fishing report issued by the B. H. Dyas Company is filled to the brim with timely bits of news on Southern California hunting and fishing. The reports were mailed to many hundreds of hunters and fishermen in this part of the State. Extra copies can be had for the asking at the Dyas Log Cabin. Anyone wishing to have the report mailed regularly each week, is invited to send in name and address to Dyas.

Following is this week's report:

DUCK HUNTING

In reports from Fred Raymer and Ed Finney at their respective clubs in Imperial Valley, it is learned that additional flights of ducks came in early this week and that good shooting should be had over the coming week-end.

Tade Fries, official hunter for the Los Angeles Investment Company, has returned from a scout trip along the shores of the Salton Sea and declared several more flights of ducks had come in and that ideal shooting conditions were prevailing.

In a report from Henshaw Dam in San Diego county, good duck-hunting reports have been received while limits are being bagged in the Wasco districts.

RESTOCKING AND PLANTING

Announcements are coming in thick and fast from the Citizens' Fish and Game Conservation Committee relative to the lakes and streams in Southern California being stocked with trout and bass. Practically every stream of any importance should have good fishing next May.

During the last month over 1700 Chinese Pheasants have been planted throughout this end of the State. Jack Hines, the committee secretary, declares that he has purchased a few guinea hens, which will be planted in the Chatsworth district as an experiment.

ANGLING

Only one or two reports on fishing at this late period have been received. Trout are still being landed at June and Gull lakes, also in the Upper Sespe, and even a few are still being caught in the upper reaches of the San Gabriel.

MINNESOTA DOWNS WISCONSIN, 16-10

MADISON (Wis.) Oct. 30. (AP)—Minnesota broke a three-year tie with Wisconsin by downing the fighting Badgers in Camp Randall Stadium here today, 16 to 10. Forty thousand spectators saw a thrilling fight culminate in the closing minutes of play when Mally Nydahl, a substitute Gopher halfback caught a Wisconsin punt and raced 65 yards for the touchdown that meant victory.

TROJAN BAND BREAKS MARK

When Hal Roberts trotted forth 130 tooters in the Trojan band at the Coliseum yesterday, he broke all existing collegiate records for music. Roberts's Cardinal and Gold musicians, famous throughout the country for their clever drills and masterful music, were in their usual good form, and the effective formations brought forth the cheers of the multitude. Stanford furnished a sixty-piece band of red-clad bandsmen, making 190 collegiate tooters in one afternoon.

Utah Registers Close Win Over Colorado Squad

SALT LAKE CITY (Utah) Oct. 30. (AP)—Utah's heavier and more experienced line, together with Howell's boot was responsible for the University of Utah's victory over the Orange and Gold Colorado Aggies football team here this afternoon, 10 to 6. Held scoreless and almost continually on the defensive for the first three quarters of the game, Colorado, by taking advantage of several breaks of the game, obtained its only score with less than five minutes to play in the final quarter.

A crowd of approximately 11,000 saw the Colorado Farmers' hopes of another Rocky Mountain Conference fade away with the setting sun, and at the same time rejoiced with the Ike Armstrong squad as the Utes' star of hope of the 1926 football title rose over the local university.

The visitors were outplayed at every stage of the game except the aerial pass.

UTAH AGGIES WIN AFTER CLOSE CALL

DENVER (Colo.) Oct. 30. (AP)—The Utah Aggies today provided a soul-searing football climax to an otherwise drab and uninteresting game by unleashing the full power in their attack in the fourth quarter and defeating Denver University, 7 to 3. It was an ordinary game, but the fourth quarter stood out as a singularly brilliant demonstration of offensive football.

On a third down with only 2 yards to gain for a touchdown, a Minnesota back fumbled on the Purple 1-yard line. The ball rolled over the counting mark and lay at rest for fully five seconds before it was noticed. Palmer picked up the ball, which had not been whistled dead, and started down the field.

Martineau was quick to grasp the situation. He immediately gave chase to the fleet Palmer and soon drew up to within a yard or less of the Purple runner. With Northwestern rooters urging their star to run faster and the Minnesota contingent screeching for Earl to tackle his man, the two ran the remaining distance with only three feet separating them. Palmer crossed the goal line and the goal was kicked, tying the score.

At that time there was a 5-yard penalty for a flying tackle. Whether this had anything to do with Martineau not leaving his feet for his man is not known, but how much better it would have been for Minnesota had Earl made the tackle anyway and brought Palmer down before the goal line had been crossed. The 5-yard penalty would have been inflicted from the spot of the foul and Minnesota still would have held the upper hand. As it was, that run of Palmer's gave Northwestern revived hope and the Purple outplayed the Gophers in the final period.

rout as the game wore on, contributing to two more touchdowns by the Army in the final quarter with a loose and erratic exhibition. The Elis were decisively whipped by a team vastly superior on offense and defense, an eleven that seems destined to make a strong bid for championship honors, but not in many a day has the Blue put up as ragged a battle as it did this afternoon.

So completely was Yale's attack checked by the powerful forwards that the Elis gained only two first downs by rushing, although they acquired five more through Army penalties. The Eli aerial attack, so deadly against Dartmouth, also was ill-timed and ineffectual for the most part, with only five out of twenty-three passes being completed.

The Army did not throw a pass or resort to any deceptiveness on attack. It didn't need to. All five touchdowns registered by the soldiers came as they capitalized the "breaks."

Eli fumbles led to three of the scores, a blocked kick to another and intercepted pass to the fifth, coupled with a slashing line attack led by the redoubtable Harry Wilson, Capt. Tiny Hewitt and Merrell, who alternated at the fullback post.

FUMBLES COSTLY

Twice Capt. Phil Bunnell of Yale contributed fumbles that led to touchdowns. The first of these mistakes came in the opening period when Born, alert Army end, picked up a punt that had bounced off Bunnell's hands and raced 18 yards to cross the Eli goal. Again, in the final period, Bunnell dropped the ball on a line play and this time Brentnall, a substitute Army end, was on the job to pick up the ball and plant it on the 6-yard mark, from where Gilbreth, Army sub back, later carried it over for the final Cadet tally.

In between these "breaks" the Cadets pushed over three other scores. Two of them came in the second period, each of them on drives begun at the 34-yard line. Cagle, on a 15-yard end run, carried the ball across after a fumble by Hiben had given the Cadets the ball. The flashy Wilson turned in another tally shortly afterward on a 1-yard plunge through center after Harbold had blocked a kick and Murrell recovered it.

The Cadets didn't score again until the start of the fourth period when Murrell took the pigskin across on a short plunge over the line, following interception of an Eli pass by Harding and a 15-yard penalty against the Elis for roughness.

Yale's nearest attempts to scoring came in the first and fourth periods, when the Elis got close to the Army 20-yard line. The first opportunity was due to a fumble and the last aided by a blocked kick but each time the Cadet defense held firm and Doc McGunigle missed attempts to drop-kick field goals.

Columbia Gets 17-9 Triumph Over Cornell

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (AP)—Emerging from the shadow of six straight Cornell defeats, a battered Columbia eleven snatched victory from the Ithacans in a thrilling last half rally before 40,000 spectators at the Polo Grounds today 17-9.

A spectacular rally by Columbia which netted two touchdowns and a field goal turned the tide after the Red and White ranks had been riddled and routed in the first two periods under a crushing line assault by the powerful and hitherto unbeaten Cornell machine.

Frustration of a belated Cornell overhead offensive was an outstanding factor in the unexpected Columbia triumph.

THORPE IN COMEBACK

Jim Thorpe is once more starring as a grid player with the Canton (O.) Bulldogs. In a recent contest with the Louisville Colonels all the ex-Carlisle Indian luminary did was score two touchdowns and kick a subsequent goal for the 13-to-0 triumph.

Presnell and Stephens Star for Winners

Ames Eleven Gets Lone Score on a Fumble

LINCOLN (Neb.) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—The Nebraska Cornhuskers reeled off four touchdowns and added 3 points on Stephens's 40-yard kick from placement to smother Iowa State of Ames today, 31 to 6.

Off-tackle plunges and sweeping end runs by Presnell and Stephens, Nebraska backs, featured a powerful and consistent Cornhusker attack, which took the ball over the Ames goal in every period of the game. Stephens's long goal kick was executed in the teeth of a strong wind. Presnell contributed the most spectacular feat of the day when he swung loose around Iowa State's right end and covered 60 yards in a scoring dash.

Iowa State made good on its only scoring opportunity when Smith, negro tackle, recovered a Nebraska fumble on the Cornhusker 20-yard line. A series of line drives, mostly through center, with Fisher carrying the ball on nearly every plunge enabled Weiss to dart through for Ames' only touchdown.

Pirrone All-Stars Upset Shell-Oilers

Joe Pirrone's Major-League All-Stars defeated Shell Oil, 3 to 2, in a Winter League game played yesterday on the Shell Oil lot. Wee Ludolph hurled great ball for the All-Stars up until the ninth, when he weakened and Fuzzy Hufft tripled, scoring two Oilers.

The All-Stars bunched hits off Blaeholder in the second, fourth and fifth rounds to score their three runs. Rawlings, Irish Meusel and Hughie McMullen drove in runs, the Giant catcher banging a homer. The same clubs meet again today at Shell Oil Park. Score:

CHICAGO TRAMPLED UNDER FEET OF OHIO STATE SQUAD

CHICAGO, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Forty-eight thousand folk, the largest crowd of record at Stagg Field, watched Ohio State crash through the University of Chicago team for an 18-to-0 victory this afternoon.

For the first thirty minutes Chicago held Ohio on even terms. But in the second half the Buckeyes cut loose and smothered the Maroons.

Ohio's line is powerful; its backfield featuring a constellation of stars, is versatile and dangerous.

Capt. Karow, a line-punching heavyweight, who dents a line for 3 yards or more at a whack, played the entire game for Ohio.

Both jabbed at each other without damage in the first quarter. The first part of the second they did the same.

Karow and Grim carried the ball from the 20-yard line to the 44-yard marker on end runs and line bucks in the third quarter. Capt. Karow found the Maroon line asleep and made 10 yards. Grim passed to Alber for 35 yards and McDonough tackled from behind to bring him down on the Maroon 13-yard line. Another pass, Grim to Alber, got another 7 yards. Grim and Karow carried the ball over.

The second Ohio touchdown came in the third quarter. Ohio had the ball on Chicago's 33-yard line when Karow found the Maroons off guard. He tore through Chicago's right tackle and raced almost unpursued to the goal line.

The last touchdown came in the fourth quarter. A pass by Marks was intercepted by Clark. He was stopped on the Chicago 18-yard line.

The line-ups:

Chicago.		Ohio State.

RAINBOW PLANTING OF TROUT ON BIG SCALE

The Rainbow Angling Club has carried on some extensive and exceedingly successful trout planting this fall, the results of which have been very gratifying to Leigh Garnsey, club manager and to the consignees.

Recently 3000 eight-inch trout and 3000 babies were sent from Rainbow to the Feather Hill Ranch at Santa Barbara, all arriving in fine shape. The shipment sent to the John Treanor for his private stream are all doing wonderfully well.

SOCCERITES MEET TODAY

Long Beach Opposes Mercuries at Loyola Field in the First Game of Double Bill

The Long Beach soccer football team invades Loyola Field, bailiwick of the city teams, this afternoon in search for points. The Seasiders play the Los Angeles Athletic Club entry in the second game of the scheduled double-header, with the kick-off timed for 3 p.m.

Long Beach will be without the services of Scott, left back. This player drew a suspension as the result of a mix-up in the Magyar game played at Long Beach two weeks ago. Manager Neal has not yet named the substitute for Scott, but it is not anticipated that he will experience much difficulty in filling the position satisfactorily.

The Los Angeles club eleven has trained faithfully for today's grind and, if condition were the deciding factor, the points are as good as in the club bag right now.

The game is likely to go the limit before the issue is decided. There seems little prospect that the Clubmen, although they are favored to win, will be able to roll up a big score and put the game on ice early in the exchanges. Rather do all indications point to a keenly contested encounter with the winner returned by a close goal margin.

The lowly Thistles will make another attempt to enter the win column when they meet the Scots in the preliminary game, which starts at 1 o'clock. The Wasps have fallen on evil ground since the start of the season, although considerable improvement was noted last Sunday. It would appear, however, that they have not yet reached the stage where they can be considered strong enough to stop the Scots, who are smarting under the partial reverse inflicted on them by the Sons of St. George last week.

ICE HOCKEY BODY IN MEETING TOMORROW

The Southern California Ice Hockey Association will hold its first meeting of the year tomorrow night at the Winter Garden ice palace. The governing body will act on several new applications for the local ice hockey league this year that should be one of the most bitterly contested affairs ever staged on the Coast.

LOYOLA LIONS READY FOR ARIZONA STATE

After a week of easy going, Coach Bill Hess will start driving his Loyola Lions hard tomorrow in preparation for their game with Arizona State Lumberjacks, which will be played Saturday afternoon on the local tanbark. The copper-State lads are a heavy lot and the Lions are facing the possibility of being tumbled for the first time this season.

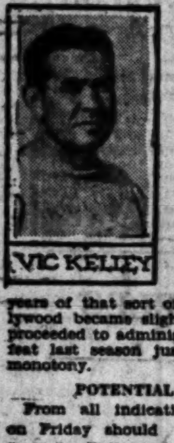
TOILERS TANGLE WITH REDSHIRTS IN COLISEUM

Annual Grudge Battle Tops Trio of City League Contests; Romans and Mechanics Favored

Just like Santa Claus, and Easter, and the Fourth of July, the annual grudge battle between Hollywood and Manual Arts has its big day. The rival institutions of learning will toss their football machines at each other in the Coliseum next Friday afternoon to furnish the feature for a triple City League grid bill.

It happened that some years ago, so far back that even the most rabid Toiler and Redshirt fans have a hard time recalling the exact date, the Crimson eleven unexpectedly upset a championship-bound Manual Arts team, and wrecked its title prospects. Ever since, that is, up until last year, the Artisans have taken unholy delight in pounding the Hollywood football hopes into the tanbark each year. After five years of that sort of treatment, Hollywood became slightly put out and proceeded to administer a 12-to-8 defeat last season just to break the monotony.



VIC KELLEY

POTENTIAL "WOW"

From all indications the contest on Friday should be a 22-carat "wow." Hollywood, while not as strong as had been expected, has developed a potent scoring machine that is capable of giving the Toilers a run for their money. Manual Arts appears, on the surface at least, to be slightly stronger than the Redshirts, but there is plenty of argument on that score.

The Toilers rate considerably more weight than Hollywood, but both lines stack up fairly even. Manual Arts probably has the edge, as the absence of Capt. "Red" Adkins at tackle greatly weakens the Crimson forward defense.

Manual Arts has a smashing, tearing backfield that has been improving with use. Hollywood will depend on speed and Neal McKay's line smashing for another win. Kelley has a neat outlay of reverses and crisscrosses adapted from Coach "Pop" Warner's Stanford outline of plays. So far Hollywood has been successful against even heavier teams, and may be able to outfoot the Toilers.

ROMANS FAVORED

Another contest that should be of unusual interest is the Los Angeles-Franklin game to be played at Los Angeles this year. Last season, the Romans trampled on the Printers by a 54-to-0 score, the largest of the year, and the Kiteflyers are seeking revenge. As a matter of fact, Coach Hess's eleven has an excellent chance of-romping on the Romans, and the game should be exceedingly close.

Coach Eddie Rich's eleven has shown constant improvement after the 34-to-0 pasting handed out by Poly at the beginning of the season. The 14-to-0 Lincoln win heartened the Romans considerably and after a week's lay-off, they should be in shape to play a bang-up game.

The light Printer outfit has been suffering from a long injury list, but the boys are gradually getting back into shape. Roland, the Kiteflyer phantom halfback, hopes to do some high-powered scoring against the Romans, and should rival Horgan as a ground-gainer.

POLY TITLE BOUND

Polytechnic continues on its way to the City League championship on the Jefferson gridiron. The Democrats have as much chance to defeat the Mechanics as a snowball has of existing in Hades, or what have you? Jefferson is equal to Poly in only one department, and that is beef. Noel Scott, the rangy Democrat quarterback, may keep down the score with his long punts, but Poly should cop by at least four touchdowns.

SAN DIEGO BEHIND IN GRID GAME

Fresno Squad Wins Over Aztecs by 28-to-7 Score in Fast Tilt

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 30.—Coming through with a powerful, ringing attack that swept aside all opposition, Fresno State College defeated the San Diego State College football eleven, 28 to 7, in a fast, hard game here today. Fresno was master throughout the contest, Coach Jones's squad of Raisin Pickers outdriving the State line, particularly on the left side, splitting great holes between end and tackle through which Andrews, Kurti and Mitchell in particular, galloped for long gains time and again.

Just how well Fresno mastered State College is seen in the fact that the visitors made a total of twenty-three first downs to two for State College. San Diego made its only tally in the third period, a brilliant dash of 70 yards through a broken field by Fox, halfback, accounting for 6 points with Mott's kick from placement bringing the extra point. One other scoring was lost in the opening period when a pass slipped from the hands of Garner, end.

Fresno tallied twice in the second quarter and once each in the third and final periods. Summary:

Fresno State.		San Diego State.
Ginsberg	L.E.	Garner
Caluson	L.T.	Robb
Moore	L.G.	See
Weldon	C.	G. Smith
Loftin	R.G.	Avery

SAN DIEGO BABES SWAMP CALTECH

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 30.—Outplaying the visitors from every angle, the San Diego State College freshman football team scored its second straight conference victory here today, defeating the Caltech frosh, 41 to 0.

The Aztec babes ran wild in the first quarter, chalking up four touchdowns. In the second period Caltech put up a great fight and prevented any scoring, but in the third period the Aztecs got going again to tally once then and again the final quarter.

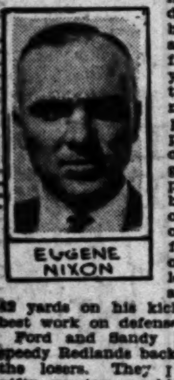
Tenny Johnson, diminutive quarterback of the State eleven, did the big ground gaining for his team, his flashy running and driving accounting for many long gains. L. Peterson, fullback, also displayed power, particularly in line driving, putting over three of the tallies. Johnson scored twice and McClain the other touchdown, this on a fumble. Caltech was unable to make any serious scoring threats.

SAGEHENS WHIP REDLANDS

Blue and White Parade Tramples Bulldogs Into Tanbark; Cowan and Merritt Star

POMONA COLLEGE (Claremont) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Pomona defeated University of Redlands football team, 28 to 6, in a lop sided game on Alumni Field today. The Sagehens, were erratic as usual and Redlands profited by one of these moments to shove over a touchdown, otherwise, it was a Blue and White parade. Not a big parade, but none the less a one-sided contest. Redlands fought hard and by the simple method of following the ball, drove deep into Pomona territory more than once, but the Bulldogs didn't have much in the way of a defense.

Harold Merritt and Jack Cowan were the big guns in the Pomona offensive. Merritt in particular was having a good day, carrying the ball frequently and for gains of from 2 to 20 yards. He scored two touchdowns, made one more possible by his plunging and converted four goals. Cowan, playing in the backfield on Coach Nixon's new punt formation, tore off two or three long runs and averaged some 42 yards on his kicks. He did his best work on defense, however.



EUGENE NIXON

Ford and Sandy McGilbra, the speedy Redlands backs, stood out for the losers. They proved to be a nifty passing combination, working either way, and both had a lot to do behind the line on defense and both did it well.

Pomona scored a touchdown in the first quarter, Merritt driving down the field 40 yards on bucks after Redlands had kicked from behind the goal line. Merritt carried it over and kicked goal. Redlands was right back after the kickoff, scoring a touchdown on some five plays. McGilbra passed to Ford for 20 yards, giving Redlands the ball on Pomona's 40-yard line. They repeated the pass on the next play, this time for 30 yards. Ford bucked over on three tries from the 10-yard line.

Following the kickoff, Coach Nixon shoved in Lee Williams and that gentleman proceeded to make yardage in large chunks, but it was Jack Manildi's 47-yard run that really put the Sagehens in position to score. Manildi was hit by about two-thirds of the Redlands team and knocked off his feet a dozen times, but managed to twist along somehow until he was down on Redlands' 12-yard line. Merritt bucked over.

The line-ups:

Pomona (28)		Redlands (6)
Cowan	R.E.L.	Ehmhart
Packard	R.T.L.	McIver

FOUR HORSEMEN FROM BELMONT

Junior City League football champions of 1925, and headed for the title again, Coach Hollinger's Hilltoppers have gained an enviable record in a short time. Capt. Grodinsky rates as the best fullback in the loop, and Hollinger is depending largely on him to defeat Fremont, when the two schools battle for the gonfalon on November 19. Shambech is playing a great game at tackle, and Alonzo's game at center rates with the best in the Junior League. Coach Hollinger is the dean of coaches in the loop. COACH HOLLINGED

Jefferson Has Best Athletic Field in City

Now that Fulton Field, Jefferson's new athletic field, has been completed and dedicated to its principal, Theodore Fulton, there seems to be no reason why the Democrats can not be expected to make a much better showing in City League competition.

For several lean years the Democrat athletic teams struggled along without a field, no gym, and nothing much in the way of equipment to speak of, but those days are gone and from now on the Green and Gold athletes will have no one to blame but themselves if they fail to get up in the money.

Fulton Field gives the Democrats the best athletic grounds in the City League for it is up to date in all respects. One of the best things about the new Jefferson field is the loud-speaker—the same big-league type as the one in the Coliseum—that keeps everyone in the stands posted on what's happening in football games and track meets.

To go with the amplifier and new field, the Democrats have bleachers on one side of the field seating more than 6000 fans and temporary bleachers taking care of another 2000 on the other side. Training quarters have been built in under the bleachers.

A quarter-mile track has been put in around the football field and to make things even better the Democrats have a straightaway longer than 220 yards that will take care of six lanes of hurdles. The new track should lift Jefferson out of the weak-sister class on the track and field.

And not only that but Fulton Field has an effective fence around it and a gymnasium, in which basketball games may be played, is also added to the list. Top this off with the tennis courts and it will be seen that the Democrats have the best athletic field in the City League, so if they don't step out and cop a championship every now and then it will certainly be their own fault.

WHY NOT PAY POOR FIGHT FANS TOO?

The California State Boxing Commission has just ruled that referees must be paid $25 for their services, whether they work in one bout or half a dozen. Fighters must be paid at least $35 a round in the future and when a manager is suspended his entire squad of pugilists will also be out of work.

JUNIOR LEAGUE GROWING

Younger Set of Los Angeles High Schools Seek Equality With City Loop; Belmont Strong

If the Junior City League continues to grow at its present astounding rate, the younger set of Los Angeles high schools will soon be knocking on the City League door for admission, or at least equal recognition. While that possibility is still a few years off, it is bound to manifest itself sooner or later.

Already, Belmont, winner of last year's football championship, and conceded a good chance to cop again this season, is straining at the leash. Two new buildings are going up on the Hilltopper campus to take care of the rapidly increasing student body, which is now near the 2000 mark. Fremont, Harding, Fairfax, and Roosevelt are also seeking city-wide honors.

Now that the Junior League is composed of schools giving a complete four-year preparatory course, the students are getting noisy about the name "junior," and believe that they should be known as City League No. 2, or some other name that will put them on par with the City League.

Last season, Belmont fizzled in a big chance against Jefferson, and lost by a respectable score. The game was played at Southern Branch, and the Hilltoppers were a bit nervous. Nevertheless, the Belmont eleven was completely outplayed, which showed that the "juniors" are not yet ready to become "seniors."

This year's Belmont squad is a big improvement over the team last year, and should give a good account of itself with any of the weaker City League teams. No provision has been made for the Junior City League champion to play a City League team, but such a game might be arranged, and would benefit the two leagues. In the near future, an annual championship contest between the winners of both leagues could easily become the outstanding prep event of the season.

SET DATES FOR PREP PLAY-OFFS

Divide Southland Loops Into Three Divisions; State Tilt in North

Now that the Southern California high-school grid leagues are half way through the season, interest is being manifested in the order of the annual championship play-off. A recent letter from Harry J. Moore, football manager of the C.I.F., furnishes the rules for play-off contests, those governing home grounds and other minor details.

The minutes of December 18, 1924, read as follows: To decide who shall be the home team with the choice of grounds, the team having the fewer number of home games or choice of grounds shall be the home team. Where both teams have an equal number of home games, the toss of a coin shall decide the home team.

As in past years, Southern California schools will be divided into three districts. In the north Santa Barbara will play San Luis Obispo on November 13: the winner to play the champion of the San Fernando Valley League. The victors of that contest will play the Ventura League titleholder for the right to play the winner of the central division on December 11. The northern division draws a bye on December 4.

The winners of the Marine and Imperial leagues will in turn play the Southern League champions, who clash with the Bay City League pennant winners. The victors in the Coast League clash with the central division winner for the right to meet the northern representative in a semifinal game.

Starting one week later on November 20, the inland schools forming the third division get under way with the Orange county champs clashing with the Tri-County winners. The victors play the Citrus League champs, who in turn tackle the San Gabriel Valley league representative. The inland division draws a bye while the Coast and northern elevens tangle on December 11. December 18 has been set for the Southern California finals.

JONES CALLS 'EM HIS OWN WAY

Lincoln Signal - Caller Does Away With Numbers; Just Says Where He's Going

According to a referee who worked in one of Lincoln's City League games, Winston Jones, who directs the Railsplitters' play, has a very unique but effective way of calling signals. Instead of calling out a flock of numbers when the players come back to huddle, Jones simply tells the rest of the Railsplitters where he's going with the ball.

"Ah's goin' around left end. Hip!" said Jones one one occasion and on another he announced that he was going to pass to Casey. However, the one that gave the official the real laugh was when Jones simply said, "Ah's goin' to fool 'em. Hip!"

SAGECHICK CAGE TEAM POWERFUL

Peagreener Grid Eleven to Furnish Nucleus for Strong Squad

POMONA COLLEGE (Claremont) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Inasmuch as most of his freshmen football men are basketball players also, Coach Earl Merritt predicts a strong Pomona peagreen casaba squad this year. Merritt turned out a team that won six out of its seven games last year and should do a lot better this time, with a whole lot better material.

Practically every one of the five or six gridders from Pomona High School are basketball stars, according to Merritt. Poke Hartman, Bishop, Baynham, Allen and Bright are all good players. Bright starred on the strong Pomona J. C. team and should be a mainstay with the Sagechicks. Dyer and Judy from L. A. High and Polytechnic look good for berths.

No schedule has been arranged for the Pomona frosh as yet. Last year, they played three conference and four high school games and it may be safely assumed that they will play that many again this time. Trips to Fillmore and San Diego are being planned by Merritt.

POETS FOR 16-TO-6 VI

TUCSON (Ariz.) Oct. 30.—The Arizona Wildcat, which has never lost a homecoming day game, maintained its record here today and clawed a victory off the Whittier Poets by a score of 16 to 6. A threat of rain and light showers made the early going slippery but the steady breeze quickly dried the field and after the first quarter the weather held dry and cloudy.

WISE and OTHER-WISE
by Bill Wise

Very few favorable answers to the question of a site for the $10,000 Los Angeles open tournament, here next January have been received from local clubs capable of handling the major event in West Coast golf.

Many local organizations have offered their club and golf course facilities to Emerson Spear, president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the body sponsoring what will be the second annual affair. To date, none of the several clubs in position to stage the event in a proper manner have seen fit to request the play.

It has been stated many times in these columns that El Caballero and Lakeside offer the best golf tests in Southern California. While they are vastly different in construction, there is little to choose from between the golfing worth of either, especially since El Caballero fairways have been softened and Lakeside fairways have been finished.

The gallery is one of the most important factors in the coming event, and few courses are equipped to cope with a crowd that will range from 5000 to 10,000 fans. Entrants themselves will number several hundred, and must be accommodated at the club staging the play, which presents a serious problem to club managers.

The $10,000 Los Angeles open is just as much a matter of civic pride as it is of tee and greens supremacy. The event has been used to acquaint the entire world with the sporting facilities of this State, and particularly of this city. A civic affair should have the entire support of the community and the event should be thrown open to the public—and the aforementioned public should not be forced to gallery such play over a private course—then rush away to a near-by public organization to recuperate.

Griffith Park, one of the oldest golf courses in the West, located in a perfect amphitheater, is the most practical and enjoyable spot imaginable for both gallery and contestants. Thousands would be able to follow the hole-by-hole play over the Warren G. Harding memorial links, where hundreds will be greatly inconvenienced when the event is staged over some local private course.

Uncle Eddie Tufts, dean of all that is golf in California, has stated positively that the Los Angeles Country Club, the only logical course in the vicinity to handle the affair—will not stage the event, and Griffith Park is more ideally located, from a gallery standpoint, than even the Beverly layout.

Griffith Park is in no shape to handle the event at present. The play is certainly a civic affair—Griffith Park belongs to the city, and the hundreds of golfers using the municipal course daily would benefit greatly if a few thousand dollars should be spent in whipping the layout into real championship form. It is very possible to imagine the crowd of thousands who would watch the play from the many advantageous positions and it is just as easy to visualize the improvements that could be done in the next few months. A committee of George Thomas, Max Behr, Duncan Dunn, Billie Bell and other leading local architects, and Herb Wilson, Lakeside greens keeper, could stiffen up Griffith in great shape, and stage the greatest event in western golf on one of the most picturesque courses in the country.

If publicity is to be considered, also, certainly Los Angeles, with a municipal course capable of handling one of the really big moneyed events in international golf—would benefit materially, even more so than through the use of a private course. The latter procedure will naturally work a great injustice on members of the club. Ask Uncle Eddie about the army of stars who daily cluttered up the Los Angeles course last year—and just as daily lifted divots enough to grass an entire new layout. The $10,000 Los Angeles open should be a city affair and surely the City Fathers would welcome an opportunity to assist in something that is so apparently for the entire good of this community.

The pineapple is a great aid in digestion. Sufferers from dyspepsia should eat it before retiring.

Very often much energy is required to free the system of foods that it cannot digest properly. You should aim to choose combinations that go well with each other in order to maintain your vitality as indigestion soon robs you of your reserve supply of energy.

Those whose digestion is weak should not eat nuts. They may get the same food value by using cheese instead and adding butter to their whole wheat bread.

A pound of apples contains over thirteen per cent of the sugar elements, and about one-half of the full nutriment of a pound of beef and in addition contains the valuable organic salts and acids that are so necessary for the maintenance of health. A pound of bananas contains within two per cent of the amount of nutriment in a pound of the best beef.

Remember, that oxygen is necessary, and unless you breathe properly and regularly, your food will not be oxidized, therefore, the food will not be fully utilized.

LEGION EVENT OPENS FRIDAY

Uniformed Golfers Attack at Santa Barbara

Greens and Social Program Draws Fine Field

Channel City Plans Great Card for Soldiers

More than 300 golfing members of State posts of the American Legion, warming up for Armistice Day, will start shooting in the first annual California association championship over the picturesque La Cumbre course, Santa Barbara, Friday and concluding Sunday. The event is open to all members of the Legion, Department of California, and all State and post executives will co-operate to insure the success of what promises to be a great week-end.

DR. PAUL HUNTER

Prizes will be awarded the winners of low gross and low net in the eighteen-hole qualifying play Friday, and also to winners and runners-up in all flights, starting match play Saturday morning. Players defeated in first-round matches will be eligible to play in the added eighteen-hole medal consolation round Sunday. There will also be beautiful trophies awarded in the medal affair.

A. G. Spalding, local sporting goods store—and other progressive State and Santa Barbara establishments also have donated trophies in addition to the score or more of cups and other prizes to be awarded by the Legion.

The social program, including club dances Friday and Saturday nights, has grown by leaps and bounds, and golfing legionnaires, friends and families, will be guests at a continuous round of enjoyable entertainment. Members of many posts who have never seen golf clubs expect to spend the week-end in the Channel City, turning the first annual competition into a regular home-coming, reunion, get-together, or what have you?

Santa Barbara hotels have offered special rates during the tournament, and everything is set for just about the biggest confab of the respected order has ever known. Entries will still be accepted and reservations arranged by communicating with a member's post adjutant or communicating direct with the golf committee, room 17, Daily news Building, Santa Barbara.

GREAT PLAY IN TOURNEY AT MEADOWS

Home Club Stars Collect Lead in Invitation That Closes Today

Marvin Moss, one of Mountain Meadows' famous "golfing five brothers," scored a 77 to win Class A low gross in the fast first-day field medaling for silverware in the annual eighteen-hole medal invitational of his home club, that drew a fine play yesterday.

R. E. Gray, also of the home club, with an 81, tied T. S. Kattel, Victoria; W. E. Willey, Ventura; E. R. Canterbury, Hacienda; L. Berner, Mountain Meadows, and Frank Miller of Midwick, for second.

Fay and Lester Coleman, playing with Russell and Harold Thompson, will make up one of the fastest foursomes imaginable in the eighteen-hole medal invitational of the Mountain Meadows club, that will conclude with an estimated field of more than 100 entrants, today.

Golfdom Dubs Elected for Greens Glory

Polf dubs are to have their day. An inter-motion-picture studio golf tournament for players who never have been known or expect to break a 100 was set in motion today, when entry blanks were circulated among all of the studios of the film capital.

A valuable trophy has been offered by Bert Glennon, cameraman for Pola Negri, who admits that inasmuch as championship low gross and low net are beyond him, he is anxious to win his own piece of sterling by establishing his right to the title of the dubbiest of the dubs.

Elimination tournaments will be held by the players of each of the studios entered, and from these representative teams will be selected. The finals will be played over the Lakeside course.

Pola Negri will present the cup to the winning studio team t a banquet to be held when the play is completed.

GUEST TACKLES SAMPSON TODAY

Charlie Guest, Lakeside professional and S.C.P.G.A. champ will atempt to pick up the four holes he dropped to Harold Sampson, northern big gun titlist, at San Francisco last Sunday, in the final thirty-six-hole match for the west coast pro title, at Lakeside today. Guest is playing fine golf and has a great chance to overhaul the slender northerner and the play will be worth watching.

CHAMPS CHARGE WILSHIRE

Mrs. George M. Lewis, women's California State champion (top,) and Mrs. Gregg Lifur, Southern State titlist, will lend an added touch of royalty to the fast field already signed to play in the annual invitational tournament of the Wilshire club, opening informally with a two-ball mixed foursome event, today.

GOLF STRATEGIES THAT WON

Golden Plays Safe to Defeat Sarazen in P.G.A. Championship and Barely Misses Chance to Meet Hagen in Match With Diegel

BY "BUNKER"

The big surprise of the 1926 Professional Golfers' Association tournament was the defeat of Gene Sarazen in an early round by John Golden, the North Jersey Country Club professional.

Naturally there was some disappointment, too, among those who have the interests of the P.G.A. most at heart. The association's tournament does not command anywhere near the sentimental interest aroused by the national amateur championship. It does not draw the huge galleries that follow the amateurs, and profitable galleries are highly important to it, too. A finals match between Sarazen and Walter Hagen, the old rivals, would have been a big drawing card, but hopes that Gene would come through to the finish were laid low by Golden, who, in beating Sarazen, and battling Leo Diegel to the thirty-sixth green, really was the big thrill of the tournament—next to the inexorable Hagen.

Golden is a splendid veteran golfer, lacking perhaps that bit of inspiredness which makes the great links genius. He bears himself modestly and has a calm, even phlegmatic temperament. The galleries liked him very much, and would have been pleased to see him in the finals.

GOLDEN WAS GAME

John came mighty near obtaining that objective at the expense of Leo Diegel. His exhibition on the last three holes of his semifinal match with Leo was as game an effort as you could imagine. And a bit of winning strategy he pulled on the seventeenth green (thirty-fifth hole) encouraged the gallery to think that he was going to beat Diegel.

Coming to the tee of the 155-yard sixteenth, in the afternoon, Golden was 2 down with 3 to go.

"Too bad," groaned his friends in the gallery, when Johnny overclubbed his ball and put it in a trap behind the green, while Leo stopped his eight feet from the cup.

John played out of the trap, but a downhill roll carried his ball thirty-five feet past the cup. The match seemed destined to end right there, but quickly he thrilled the crowd by sinking his long, uphill putt for a 3, which halved the hole.

The seventeenth hole measures 560 yards. Both John and Leo were fifteen feet past the cup in three, with downhill putts ahead of them. Leo, putting first, laid his ball two feet to the side of the cup, on the left.

A halved hole meant victory for Diegel. There was one of two things that Golden must do. If he sank his putt for a birdie 4, he would win the hole and carry the match to the last green. This he must attempt. But, failing to hole his ball, he must stymie Leo.

Now a purposeful stymie may not reflect the highest sportsmanship. But the professional golf must, of necessity, be a business man. It is his business to win. In any P.G.A. championship stymies are frequent and often intended. It is not to be denied that they add to the strategic possibilities of the game and its interest. Golden didn't sink his putt, but he did lay Diegel a stymie. Diegel failed to get around John's ball and the veteran golfer won the hole 5 and 6, leaving himself only 1 down.

That strategy might have swung victory to Golden. On the last green he had an eighteen-inch putt for a 4 while Leo had to make a six-foot putt to halve, which meant victory. Nobody can say what might have happened if Leo had missed. He didn't and so won his way to the finals.

GOLDEN PLAYS BOLDLY

One might expect, in view of Golden's temperament, that he would be extremely cautious tactically. But he is not. He plays boldly. Only once in the whole tournament did he purposely do the safe thing and that came in upsetting Gene Sarazen.

HAM TO AID $10,000 OPEN

H. H. Ham, the hard-working secretary of the Brentwood Country Club and one of the greatest boosters of golf in Southern California, will again tell the outside world in general of the facts surrounding the $10,000 Los Angeles open, which will be held here in January.

HARRY H. HAM.

Last year, through the Ask Mr. Foster Service, of which he is vice-president, Ham had posters and circulars of the golf event sent to all offices, hotels and clubs where the service has branches, in order that tourists, golfers and the public in general would be informed of the big tournament. He spent $500 of his own money and put in much of his time to the work even after the tournament, which had originally been given to Brentwood, was taken away from that club and given to Los Angeles.

Clifford L. Rawson, business manager of the Los Angeles $10,000 open golf tournament, has written Ham in regard to placing posters this year in the various information bureaus of the Foster service, and asking him for any ideas or suggestions on the golf tournament or any other sport event for Southern California.

GOLF PURSES ARE GROWING

Sacramento Adds $2500 to Winter Prize List

Name Officials for Local $10,000 Open

Entry List Growing Fast as Stars Sign

There is $20,000 in prize money for golfers coming to California between December 10 and January 10, it was learned yesterday from Emerson Spear, former president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the "Big Six" committee.

Herman Politz

A wire received yesterday by Spear from Darsie L. Darsie of Del Monte indicated that $5000 has been placed in the bank for a tournament there between December 10 and 12.

Another $2500 has been added to the purse by Sacramento. J. H. Miller, secretary of the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, has wired that that city plans to stage a $2500 tournament on December 17. With this schedule Del Monte would open the winter season with its tournament December 10, then golfers would make the jump to Sacramento, December 17, and then to Southern California for the Long Beach open on December 31, January 1 and 2. The big climax would be the $10,000 open, January 5, 7, 8 and 9.

The "Big Six" committee, at its meeting decided to postpone the selection of a course for the $10,000 open until December 1. At the same time qualifying courses will be announced. The reason given by the committee for the postponement is that heavy play results by early selection of a course. In order to avoid a repetition of the heavy play of last year over the selected course, the committee has deemed it wise to delay the announcement.

Herman Politz was selected by the committee to be chief of scorers for the Los Angeles open, Jack Patterson, in charge of the scoreboard, Jack Williams, starter, and Chester Lyday, in charge of policing the course.

Early entries for the Los Angeles $10,000 open indicate the fastest field ever seen in the West, Southern California is preparing to play host to more than 500 golfers, who are expected to enter this huge event of the West, scheduled for January 5, 7, 8 and 9.

COLLEGE MEN TO RUN

Forty colleges and universities have been invited to enter teams in the National Junior Amateur Athletic Union cross-country championship to be run at the Philadelphia Sesquicentennial stadium November 11. The course will be six miles.

FIRST EVENT ON FEMININE CARD DRAWS FINE FIELD

Past, Present and Future Stars Ready for Rousing Assault in Down-State Classic

BY BILL WISE

Mrs. George M. Lewis of the Los Angeles club, women's California State champion, and Mrs. Gregg Lifur, of the California club, southern feminine titlist, will lead the greatest assault of fair stars in the history of the event, through the eighteen-hole qualifying play of the annual women's invitational tourney, officially opening at the Wilshire Country Club, tomorrow.

Practically the same field—several strokes better—that contributed to the overwhelming success of the State championship at Wilshire last April, will leave the first tee tomorrow morning and medaling over a vastly improved course, scoring will be even better than the qualifying results in the State affair that established a record for down-State women's events.

MRS. DAN JONES

The tournament this year should hinge around the efforts of Mrs. George M. Lewis, Mrs. Gregg Lifur, Miss Kathleen Wright and Miss Margaret Cameron, and picking a winner in that quartet would be very difficult. Mrs. Lifur is one of the greatest match players in this vicinity while Mrs. Lewis excels at both match and medal. Miss Wright strokes better than when she finished as runner-up to Mrs. Lewis in the State championship. Miss Cameron is also playing a very fine game and the final result will be very interesting.

Mrs. T. H. Pike and Mrs. Ted Haas of Wilshire, will have the assistance of Mrs. Harry Grossman, Hillcrest; Mrs. Harry Pressler, Hacienda, women's city champ; Mrs. Anne Wolverton, Los Angeles; Mrs. Willie Hunter and Mrs. Dan Jones, Brentwood; and certainly Mrs. W. W. Campbell of Beverly in striving to upset tourney favorites. There will also be other representative challengers in the play starting tomorrow and a new name may be recorded in the rapidly growing book dedicated to those who have won California golfing fame.

Few strokes will separate contestants in all of the several flights and while interest will naturally focus around the title bracket, matches in all flights will be hotly contested and many will travel over-time to a decision.

Mrs. Harry Belden, Wilshire tourney chairman, in charge of the event, paired all qualifiers and allotted starting times yesterday. The two-ball mixed foursome tourney today, will find more than fifty teams engaged, offering tourney titlists a last chance to limber up and familiarize themselves with the Wilshire course. Play in the mixed event will get under way at 11:30 this morning and entries will still be accepted by "Woodie."

Boy Promoter Threatens Tex Rickard's Place in the Sun as Leading Pugilistic Ca

FUGAZY PLANNING GREAT EVENTS FOR NEXT YEAR

Promoter Who Rose From Obscurity to Rickard's Rival Intent on Exceeding Achievements

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—With the outdoor boxing season at an end Humbert J. Fugazy sits in the office high in the Woolworth Building laying his plans for next year, when he hopes to do some things that will make his achievements of 1926 pale into insignificance. The worthy signor, who, in a little more than a year, has risen from obscurity to be Tex Rickard's rival for the various fistic plums, has plans that involve the investment of millions of dollars in his sporting projects.

TEX RICKARD

Boxing is Fugazy's chief love, but he also hopes to break into big-league baseball. It is no secret that he is in the market to buy the Brooklyn ball club. Already he is interested in professional football, being proprietor of the Brooklyn Horsemen of the American Professional Football League.

The biggest show of the summer season in New York was that staged by the signor at Ebbets Field, with Jack Delaney and Paul Berlenbach in the feature number. His Columbus Day program, headed by Jack Sharkey and Harry Wills, also attracted a large gathering.

Fugazy overcame almost impossible obstacles in making the match between Delaney and Berlenbach, but his feat in packing more than 42,000 persons, representing $460,000, into a ball park with a normal seating capacity of 24,000, was still more remarkable.

OPENS THEIR EYES

However, unless Fugazy acquires control of the Brooklyn ball club it is extremely unlikely that he will stage any more shows in the Flatbush ball yard. His success in attracting large crowds in Brooklyn, a feat which many believed to be impossible, has opened the eyes of the proprietors of the two New York baseball parks, with the result that he will have entry into at least one of them next season, if he cares to avail himself of the opoprtunity.

However, the signor has discovered, as have others, that baseball parks are far from the ideal setting for boxing matches. His present plan is to erect a huge stadium within a short distance of Times Square, an arena which will be available for football and other sports as well as for boxing shows.

He also is making plans for an indoor arena in the "Forties," which will have a seating capacity in excess of Madison Square Garden. If this arena is built, as he says it surely will be, the signor is likely to break into hockey also. This arena, however, will not be finished in time for use this winter.

It happens though, that Fugazy does not intend to remain out of boxing until next summer. He has several prominent boxers in line to work for him this winter and before the end of the week expects to announce that he has taken over a large arena in the upper part of the city.

UNDER CONTRACT

Jack Sharkey, conqueror of Harry Wills, is under contract to box for Fugazy within ninety days. Fugazy also holds a contract with Paul Berlenbach. Jack Delaney, light-heavyweight king, also is pledged to perform for the signor. Still another is Pete Latzo, the welterweight champion.

Latzo is jointly managed by Paddy Mullins and Mike Latzo. Mullins makes no bones about saying that Fugazy has first call on the services of any boxer over whom he has control.

Mike Latzo is in town, snooping around to see what is what about a match between Brother Pete and Joe Dundee. A merry battle between Fugazy and Rickard is in sight over this bout. Fugazy has the edge with the champion leaning in his direction. Dundee has been developed as the leading contender in the Garden but no doubt will be glad to go where the champion goes.

If Fugazy succeeds, as he hopes, in landing a big arena for shows this winter he will not stage more than four entertainments, having no intention of putting on anything but the very highest class of attractions, featuring the four boxers already named.

AMONG THE FANS

It has been definitely decided to hold the next State tournament in the Tourist clubrooms of Pasadena, beginning Monday, February 21, 1927.

The Tourist Club has excellent clubrooms for an event of this kind, and it should stir up a lot of interest in that section. Prizes, manner of holding tourney, etc., will be announced later.

The Kansas State Fair Association has added a checker tournament to its attractions. The fair is held in September of every year at Topeka, Kan. The prize winners and the amount of their prizes this year were: Charles Munson of Ellsworth, . . Jim Marshall of Haverhill, $30; John R. Meek of Topeka, $25; Frank G. Farmer of Wichita, $20; J. Horrel of Liberal, $15; Tom Marshall of Eldorado, $12; Perry Weber of Fredonia, $8, and W. Bloxom, $5. M. D. Teetzel of Kansas City, editor of the American Checker Monthly, was allowed $50 for acting as referee, and Harry Leiberman, who was not allowed to compete in the tourney, was given $50 for a blindfold exhibition.

Robert Stewart, world's champion, has declined a place on the team Great Britain is bringing over for the International Match which is scheduled to be played in New York City next March. It is sincerely hoped he will change his mind and accompany the team, as his absence would detract considerable interest from the match.

S. Cohen won the London championship by defeating H. J. Fricker in the finals of a recent tourney by a score of 1 to 0 and 5 draws.

MUSHY IN GO WITH TIPLITZ

Meets Philadelphia Boxer in Vernon Ring Tuesday

Boxers Will Fight at Welter Limit, 142 Pounds

Newsboy's Opponent Has Been Trial Horse

Mushy Callahan returns to Vernon—the same ring in which he won the junior welterweight belt from Pinkey Mitchell—Tuesday night in a ten-round fight with Joe Tiplitz of Philadelphia.

The match is a welterweight—not a lightweight contest. The weight is 142 pounds.

Callahan probably will not scale over 138 to 139 pounds, however. Mushy, while holder of the 140-pound championship, will so regulate his heft so he can box lightweights as well.

MUSHY CALLAHAN

There are two very important money battles waiting for Callahan in the lightweight ranks. They are with Baby Joe Gans and Ace Hudkins. Either of these matches is likely to pop before the holidays.

Toplitz has the most weighty record of any fighter Callahan has yet faced in the boxing game. In several instances they have fought common opponents. Callahan boxed Jimmy Goodrich twice and won both decisions. Tiplitz holds a verdict over Goodrich.

Tiplitz fought Pal Moran twice. He lost the first start, and all but stopped Moran in the last. Callahan first sprang into national prominence by being the first man to knock Moran out. Moran had fought for thirteen years and not even Benny Leonard could knock him down.

TENDLER'S BUFFER

Tiplitz for several years was the buffer for Lew Tendler. It was his job to be the trial horse to take out Tendler interference. Tendler was held for the big shots with Benny Leonard.

Later Tiplitz and Tendler separated as stable mates. They were promptly matched for a grudge fight in Philadelphia. The show turned them away for blocks. Newspapers were divided on the decision. Some gave it to Tendler by a shade and others gave Tiplitz a shade.

Tiplitz is known as the iron man. He throws gloves like a Harry Greb and he keeps coming the same every round.

Callahan will be 22 years of age Wednesday. Tiplitz was 27 on the 3rd inst. Mushy has had but fifty scraps, while Joe has had over 300 battles. Tiplitz has been boxing since he was 13 years of age.

PRELIMS GOOD

The supporting card features Nick Antonio vs. Young Sam Langford. Antonio is a hard puncher and keeps shooting gloves. Langford rates as one of the "big three" colored boxers who are now sweeping things in California rings. Baby Joe Gans and Young Jack Thompson are the other dusky stars.

Joe Bell, who recently defeated Joe Guerrero, known as the Emaco Boy, makes his first start at Vernon. He meets Battling Ward.

Two Japanese boxers, originally scheduled to box a month ago, are back on the card. Tokichi Kawata is paired with Battling Dotey and Kazuo Takahashi boxes Artie Alveras. Both bouts are fours.

Tiplitz is the best easterner Callahan has boxed since he whipped Moran and Goodrich.

BUSY DAY FOR THIRTEEN

Bill Riley, star end on the Wake Forest College team, arrived for a game against Wofford College with the mileage of his auto at 13,013. He was assigned to room No. 313, ate dinner at thirteen minutes of twelve and trotted onto the field at thirteen minutes to three. On the thirteenth play of the second period, he scored a touchdown and in the fourth quarter, with thirteen seconds to go, made a 45-yard run for another goal, closely pursued by a player bearing the numeral thirteen on the back of his jersey.

COMES 3000 MILES TO HELP MUSHY CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY

Mushy Callahan (left) will be 22 years old on November 3—the day after he boxes Joe Tiplitz (right) of Philadelphia at Vernon Tuesday night. Please count the candles on Mushy's birthday pastry. Tiplitz is said to be pretty handy with pastry and is quite a carver, having drawn with Joe Dundee and stopped K. O. Chaney. Callahan knocked out Pal Moran just a year ago on his 21st birthday. He wants to celebrate the 22nd by doing the same thing to Tiplitz.

FAST PACE HELPED TO KILL GREB

Harry's Constitution Was Weakened by Hard Living and Accidents

BY TOM ANDREWS

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 30.—"The Pace the Killed." This had much to do with the death of Harry Greb, Pittsburg boxer and former holder of the middleweight and light heavyweight championships of the world, following an operation on his nose for broken bones, sustained in an automobile accident at Pittsburgh two weeks previous.

Harry Greb had been through scores of hard-fought battles in the ring, having the heart of a lion, but fast living had weakened his constitution and when the final test came he did not have the vitality left to withstand the drain on his heart action.

It was "the pace that killed" all over again and Greb was the victim.

About eight months ago the writer saw a great deal of Harry in Los Angeles when he went out there to fight Ted Moore. The night before the contest with Moore, Greb was doing the cabarets and it was about 5 o'clock in the morning when he turned in at the hotel. Harry insisted on running the elevator at the time, stating that he needed the exercise to "tune up" for his fight with Moore.

He could not have been in very good shape, but he went into the ring and danced in and out from Moore like the niftiest ballet dancer imaginable.

Meeting Greb later on the question was put to him as to the best method of keeping in shape; in fact he was asked point blank how in the world he kept in shape when he ignored all rules pertaining to training.

"Oh, that's easy," said Harry. "You know I do road work every morning and do all my boxing in the ring."

TENNESSEE GOB MAY TAKE ALL-NAVY BELT

There is a lightweight on board the U. S. S. Tennessee, who has not even been mentioned as a possible winner of the all-Navy belt this year. Yet, considering his past record it appears as though he will be the one to whom the admiral will present the coveted pants holder after the other aspirants have been thrown in the discard of defeat.

We refer to Paddy Mullen, the "Tennessee Terror." Paddy won the all-Navy featherweight title last year, and none of the other feathers advanced any alibis.

This will be one of the most hotly contested weights in the eliminations. Joe McKenzie of the Oklahoma and Frankie Tondorf of the California also have a mighty good chance of walking off with the laurels.

"Had they been six ounce gloves I believe he would have knocked Reyes out." That is what Lieut. Jess Kenworthy of the Medusa, one of the Navy's best arbitrators, said after "Half-Pint" Marraclough, the California's flyweight, was awarded the decision over the Idaho boxer, at a recent ship's smoker.

"Half-Pint" and Jimmy Lucas of the Mississippi, the present champion, are the only white boys in the flyweight class in the fleet. Barraclough has only had one fight, but the manner in which he disposed of the old master, Reyes, convinced those present that he is in for a very successful career in the manly art of flattening noses.

"Tiger" Marvin Shector of the California, the present all-Navy champion, at last has his wish. He will meet Jack Roper at the Pasadena Armory next Thursday night. Ever since their last bout was postponed, Shector has had it in for famous Capt. Bob Roper's kid brother. This was because Jack said something to Shector that did not meet the latter's approval.

"I'll make him apologize for that dirty crack next Thursday," says the "Tiger."

RED GRANGE POPULAR WITH SCHOOLBOYS

Red Grange, leader of the Yankees football eleven of the American Football League, is increasing his popularity among young football fans by instructive talks on the sport to high school students at the Yankee stadium every Saturday morning. Grange, unquestionably one of the most colorful and popular figures in football, intersperses his talks with practical demonstrations, as far as possible.

CAVLIFLOWER ALLEY NOTES

Charley (Chesterfield) Keppen, prince of announcers, is now on the job at the Olympic Auditorium. Charley has a simple, straight-from-the-shoulder, style of oratory that catches on with the gang. His announcements are terse and to the point. This style wins its way with the gallery spoilers and is delightfully pleasing to the bugs in the upholstered sections. Keppen, old boy, let the good work continue.

Joe Levy, paramount matchmaker, has taken on a mess of new gray hairs in the last few nights. The low down of the frost on the coco lies in the worry of taking care of the thundering herd that will swoop down on the old Olympic November 9 when those sturdy gladiators, Tommy O'Brien and Baby Joe Gans clear the decks for action. The atmosphere threatens to be drenched with malignant gloves and, oh boy, oh boy, how the adherents of the dark lad up around St. Peter's gate will tear the ozone to shreds in case Joseph lands for a goal on Tommy's sirloin reducer. One of Levy's expedients to accommodate every one with a coign of vantage will be to sell rafter seats up among the clouds so high.

Si seems once more to be master of the situation at the Vernon Coliseum (this is not a pu.n) He brings Mushy Callahan and Joe Tiplitz together next Tuesday night for an assault at arms that should test the arena's capacity and bring oodles of joy to the heart of Tommy Doyle. Many expert fight fans are of opinion that Mushy will have his work cut out for him to subdue the festive Joseph. Then there will be a mix-up between Nick Antonio and Young Sam Langford. Sam will take an awful thumping before he strikes his colors and this alone should insure a mountain of a scrap. Joe Bell takes on "Battling Ward" who throws as many arms as a cuttle fish and always puts up a "wow" of a battle. Several bouts between Japanese sluggers complete one of the best bills that Si. Masters has furnished forth in some time. It looks like a banner crowd.

Some fussed-up king let out a sulphurous flow of poisoned patter near the ringside last Tuesday night during the La Barba-Nationalista affray. His embittered and thundering gush was dashed now and then with "kill him Brown Boy—kill him. He's a cheese champion." He also devoted Referee Freddie Gilmore to the kingdom of Old Nick. He never let up in his vicious tirade—not even when his blood pressure dialed around the 240-mark. What a barker this blithering maniac would make for a Main-street leg show, or better still—let loose his frenzied steam in the bosom of old ocean.

Paddy Smith—brother of the famous Denver Ed. Smith of yore—played bopeep at the Manhat. last Tuesday. It was not long before Paddy was the center of a cluster of old timers, and how they whaled away at the reminiscent stuff! In the midst of the chatter now and then, Smith would let slip a moaning, "We came too soon," and the gang chorused, "Amen."

FLEET CHAMP REAL BOXER

"One of the greatest middleweight prospects the Navy has yet produced." That is what some of the ring experts said of Bobby Near of the Pennsylvania, the present battle fleet middleweight champion, after his second-round knockout victory at the Hollywood Legion last Friday.

Bobby is not a flash-in-the-pan fighter, and is well entitled to this compliment from the gentlemen in the know. He has cast into the pugilistic discards of defeat every middleweight in the battle fleet that has attempted to wrestle the crown from his brow for the past two years.

His only defeat in two years came at the hands of Tex Coolidge of the Wyoming for the all-Navy belt. It was a close decision and although "Tex" won his margin was not very great. In the scouting fleet they think that Coolidge can whip "Tiger" Flowers. And he is a wonderful piece of fighting machinery. When he fought Near for the belt the odds were 8 to 5 that Near would not answer the gong for the last round.

Although he is shown here with a discolored optic, he received that from running into a telegraph pole and not as the result of being on the receiving end of a wallop, as you may think.

CITY BOSS WANTS TWO SUPERVISORS

Elect Cogswell and Graves to Keep Parrot's Hands Off County Government

The outstanding feature of the contests for Supervisor in the First and Third Districts is the attempt of Kent K. Parrot, the City Hall boss, to extend his political sway to the county government through the present series of attacks on the Board of Supervisors. By discrediting the incumbents he hopes to put in his own men and thereby to dominate county affairs as he now does the city's.

To defeat this and to serve the county's best interests, The Times recommends the re-election of Supervisor Prescott F. Cogswell in the First District and the election of Sidney T. Graves in the Third.

The position of Supervisor is nonpartisan, and the term extends for four years. Next Tuesday's election will be final, and the leading candidate in each district will be declared elected.

Supervisor Cogswell lives in El Monte, where he settled in 1883. He planted the first walnut orchard in that region, and since that time has been closely associated with the agriculturists of the district. He organized, and now is vice-president, of the El Monte National Bank. He was elected to the 1907 Assembly, and in 1911 was chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of that body. In 1913 he went to the State Senate, and was chairman of the Taxation and Revenue Committee. He was elected Supervisor in 1918 and re-elected without opposition in 1922.

The roads and bridges department of the county government is under his direct supervision. In the past year he has expended $1,630,000 upon roads and bridges in his district. He has been very active in putting through the comprehensive viaduct-building campaign, which has connected his district with the western part of the county.

His opponent is Fred T. Beaty of Montebello, the candidate of the city machine and a certain element of union labor. Mr. Beaty was for several months Mayor of Montebello. He is the publisher of several community newspapers in that district.

Sidney T. Graves was born in Los Angeles and educated in local schools. He first fired a locomotive and then engaged in the contracting business with his father.

He was elected to the Assembly from the Sixty-third District in 1917, and has represented that district for eight years. He is chairman of the Assembly Fish and Game Committee. He was very active in the fight for reapportionment. As the present location of the University of California, Southern Branch, is in his district, he is intimately identified with the success and expansion of that institution.

Councilman Barnes is part of the Parrot administration, but split off from it and defended the Plaza site for a union depot at the insistence of his constituents. Mr. Barnes is a real-estate operator and is chairman of the Street Opening and Widening Committee of the Council.

At the primary Graves led Barnes by nearly 7000 votes, failing to score a majority by less than 2500, as there were two other candidates in the race.

G.O.P. HAS A WALK-AWAY ON TUESDAY

Republican Nominees for State Officers Assured of Easy Victories

The entire Republican ticket seems assured of easy victory next Tuesday in the State offices, which include Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney-General and Surveyor-General.

C. C. Young, who was nominated by the Republican party as its candidate for Governor, has the normal California Republican advantage over the Democratic nominee, Justus Wardell, and the Socialist, Upton Sinclair. Mr. Young is the present Lieutenant-Governor. He lives in Berkeley and is in the real estate business. Wardell lives in San Francisco, and represents the Al Smith wing of the party in California. He is a wet, and he and former Senator Phelan, who have been campaigning together, have been making faces at the dry Democratic candidate for Senator. Sinclair lives in Pasadena, is a well-known Socialist writer.

Many observers believe that Buron Fitts, Republican nominee for Lieutenant-Governor, will lead the entire ticket. He is very well known throughout the State, being active in veteran welfare work and the American Legion. He lives in Los Angeles and was chief deputy Dis-

TWENTY-FIVE PROPOSALS ON THE CITY'S BALLOT

Five Bond Issues Total Nearly $5,000,000; Three Ordinances, Sixteen Amendments

Twenty-five Los Angeles city propositions appear on the ballot at next Tuesday's election, and votes will be cast on them at the 1363 city precincts. Of these propositions, sixteen are charter amendments, three are ordinances, five are bond issues totaling $4,750,000 and one is a straw vote. The bond issues to be authorized require a two-thirds favorable vote of the total cast on each issue. To distinguish the city propositions from the State and county measures the municipal propositions are numbered, each number being followed by the letter "A;" thus, Proposition 1-A, 2-A, etc., up to and including Proposition 25-A. The city propositions will be found on the last right hand column of the ballot headed "Special Municipal Election." The total number of registered voters in the city entitled to cast ballots on these propositions is 388,099.

A summary of these propositions, together with the recommendation of The Times on each, follows:

1-A. CHARTER CHANGES

1-A. These are technical and incidental changes in the charter, and are minor corrections of the text, in no way changing the spirit or intent of that instrument. The Times recommends a "Yes" vote on this proposition.

2-A. LICENSING ENGINEERS

2-A. This is a proposed charter amendment sponsored by union labor and justly opposed by the Chamber of Commerce to retain in the now illegal Board of Mechanical Engineers the licensing of elevator operators and steam and hoisting engineers. It was the intent of the framers of the charter that boiler and elevator inspection and the licensing of elevator operators and stationary en-

ELECTION RESULTS BY RADIO!

The Times will broadcast local, State and national election returns over KHJ, The Times radio station, next Tuesday evening as rapidly as the figures are received. Arrangements have been made for the expeditious gathering and assembling of returns on all candidates and measures. The Times will also give election returns by telephone to all who call.

STATE MEASURES WHICH WILL BE VOTED ON

Brief Analyses, Recommendations on the Twenty-eight Proposals on General Ballot

Herewith The Times presents in boiled-down form the results of a long and careful examination into the merits of the State propositions on Tuesday's ballot. There are eighteen constitutional amendments, eight initiatives, one referendum and one bond issue on the ballot. All the important issues have been extensively discussed editorially by The Times and this review is intended merely to summarize the recommendations of The Times and the reasons for them.

NO. 1. VETERANS' BONDS

The Veterans' Welfare Bond Act of 1925: Would lend the credit of the State to the extent of $20,000,000 to the Veterans' Welfare Board for the purchase of homes and farms for veterans who were residents of California at the time of their enlistment in the wars of the United States. This proposal merely provides for a system of loans permitting a veteran to borrow $5000 for the purchase of a home or $7500 for the purchase of a farm, the State retaining title to the property until paid for over a term of twenty years. It will cost the taxpayers nothing. This measure is submitted as a continuation of the program instituted with the approval of a $10,000,000 bond issue in 1925. The Times recommends its approval.

NO. 2. MOTOR TRAFFIC TAX

This measure provides for taxing motor vehicle transportation lines and was submitted by the State Legislature after careful consideration. Applying the same principle of taxation to highway transportation companies as that used for the taxation of steam and electric transportation agencies. Prop. No. 2 is designed to create a uniform and equitable tax for this type of public utility. The rate of taxation established by this act is subject to revision by the Legislature. The Times recommends its approval.

NO. 3. OLEOMARGARINE TAX

Proposition No. 3 is a referendum upon the act of the Legislature imposing a tax of 2 cents a pound on oleomargarine. It is supported by dairying interests on the assumption that oleomargarine constitutes a menace to producers of butter. From an investigation of all aspects of this matter The Times is convinced that the referendum should be defeated. Existing laws adequately protect the public from misrepresentation as to the contents of products in which vegetable oils are used. Taxation of food products, never undertaken in this State, does not seem advisable. The Times recommends a negative vote on this proposal.

NO. 4. GASOLINE TAX

This measure, which is an initiative, was inspired by Northern California interests and involves the raising of the present gas tax to 3 cents a gallon. Save for the Hearst newspapers it is vigorously opposed by Southern California as a continuance of the unfair system by which Southern California motorists pay for the construction of "pork barrel" highways for the north. Nearly two-thirds of the gasoline tax comes from Southern California motorists, while Southern California receives but 35 per cent of highway funds. No. 4 would continue and aggravate this condition. Proposition 8 on the ballot is designed to overcome existing evils in the highway financing problem. Approval of Proposition 4 would tend to increase rather than decrease the undesirable conditions that now exist. The Times recommends that Proposition 4 be overwhelmingly defeated.

NO. 5. SALARY INCREASE

This measure proposes an amendment to the State Constitution increasing the salaries of certain State officers other than Governor and Lieutenant Governor. The Times believes the suggested increase to be fully justified and recommends that this amendment be approved.

NO. 6. RACE-TRACK GAMBLING

Should this measure be approved, gambling on horse racing would be legalized in California. Horse racing is permitted under the California law at this time and the sole purpose of this initiative is to permit betting under the pari-mutuel system. Experience in California and other States has demonstrated the dangers and undesirability of legalized gambling and The Times recommends that this proposal be defeated.

NO. 7. SHORT-LINE TAXATION

Known as the "short-line amendment," this proposal was approved by the State Legislature and submitted to the electorate for ratification. It would relieve the smaller railroads in California from paying taxes on the basis of rates charged to the main-line roads. It has been approved by State authorities and by economic experts as equitable and sound. The Times recommends that it be approved.

NO. 8. HIGHWAY FUNDS

Submitted after a careful survey of the entire State highway system, Proposition 8 is advanced as a measure calculated to serve the best interests of the entire State and eliminate the existing condition under which Southern California pays the bulk of taxes and receives less than its proper share of revenue for road purposes. This measure, which appropriates $5,000,000 annually for twelve years for highway construction, put into effect the principal of paying cash for new construction, thus avoiding bond interest and selling charges. Although opposed in Northern California as a scheme for the benefit of Southern California, it will, if enacted, prevent political interference either north or south in highway development. The Times recommends that Proposition 8 be approved.

No. 9. WRIGHT ACT REPEAL

This measure, which has the enthusiastic support of the Hearst newspapers, the bootleggers, rum-runners and others, would repeal the Wright Act under which the 20,000 local peace officers of California cities and counties help to enforce prohibition. Its repeal would remove these officers from this field and leave the gigantic task to the forty Fed-

If HERO medals went always to the right people, they would be dangling from a lot of queer coats.

One shining medal, for instance, would be pinned this morning onto the breast of a young friend of mine—aged 4.

He is undergoing pain and torture in a children's hospital. No soldier of the Legion ever bore pain more heroically.

"O.K. WITH ME"

And for sheer "guts" there is a little girl in another hospital.

She has had so many operations that her little body is scarred like a war map. But the last time she went under the anaesthetic, the last conscious move of her little frail fingers was to write on a bit of paper—in a sleepy, scrawling hand, these words: "Don't let poor mother worry. Whatever happens will be O. K. with me."

STERN ANCESTRY

And yet, I wonder if, after all, there isn't a good deal of heredity behind these things.

This little boy's ancestry reaches back, through dim ages, to the knights of Bohemia who stood in the path of the Huns with great two-handed swords, drenching Eastern Europe with their blood.

And this sweet little girl's story goes back to the half-wild Highland chiefs who hacked up the mighty Roman legions—until the invaders were glad to remember that they had a pressing engage-

"Times" Review of Candidates and of City, County and State Measures on Ball

CITY PROPOSITIONS ON NEXT TUESDAY'S BALLOT

"Times" Recommendations on Five Bond Issues, Three Ordinances, Sixteen Amendments

gineers should be in charge of the Department of Building and Safety. For some unexplained reason, the Board of Mechanical Engineers, which had this authority by ordinance in the days of the former charter, continued to function although it was generally known at the City Hall that the ordinance under which it was created was automatically superseded by the new charter provisions. In order to legalize the ordinance creating the Board of Mechanical Engineers, this charter amendment was placed on the ballot. If the amendment is approved by the voters, the Council will have the authority to designate by ordinance the department or board which shall have charge of this boiler and elevator inspection and licensing work. It is generally agreed that, should this amendment be approved, then union labor will force the Council to permit the Board of Mechanical Engineers to continue doing this work, and that the real purpose of the amendment is to legalize the ordinance by which the board was created years ago. Those interested in keeping the city government departments open shop and out of the clutches of the unions, have had more troubles with the Board of Mechanical Engineers than with any other department of the city government. Nonunion elevator operators and stationary engineers have experienced great difficulty in securing licenses from the board, and it has been no secret that the board has refused to license Japanese as elevator operators. In the opinion of The Times, this licensing of elevator operators and stationary engineers should be vested in the Department of Building and Safety, as the framers of the charter intended, and therefore a "No" vote is recommended on this proposition.

3-A. ANNEXATIONS

3-A. By this amendment the charter is to be corrected to provide that in case of annexation to the city of county territory which is already organized as a special district, such as a fire district, the charter provisions applying to the annexation of municipalities shall apply to the employees and public property of those districts and shall be taken over by the city of Los Angeles. A "Yes" vote is recommended on this proposition.

4-A. PRECINCTING PETITIONS

4-A. City Clerk Domingues has proposed this charter amendment in the interest of economy in the conduct of the city government and of saving the taxpayers many thousands of dollars a year in checking the signatures to initiative and referendary petitions filed with the city government. By this amendment those filing these petitions must have placed after the signature and address of each person who signed the petition the number of the precinct in which the signer of the petition resides. The City Clerk has pointed out that the framers of the charter clearly intended that those interested in the circulation of petitions should bear this expense. As these petitions, when filed, often bear 40,000 or 50,000 signatures, the expense of precincting them before they can be checked is large. The expense of precincting is now borne entirely by the city, but under the provisions of this amendment the petitions must be precincted before being filed with the City Clerk. As this is a measure in the interest of efficiency and economy in the conduct of the public business and a check on the constantly increasing cost of the city government, The Times recommends a "Yes" vote on this proposition.

5-A. ELECTION OFFICERS

5-A. This is a charter amendment also suggested by City Clerk Dominguez to save useless expenditure in the handling of city elections, and if adopted by the voters, will save $60,000 in the cost of city elections next year, will save $84,000 in the cost of elections held in 1929, will save $108,000 in the cost of the 1931 elections and an additional $24,000 every two years thereafter. The amendment provides that the number of election officers at each polling place shall be reduced from six to four, thus saving the expense of two officers at each polling place. The estimated savings are based upon the present increase each year in the number of polling places. The amendment provides for the elimination of duplicate poll lists and other forms at the polling places, and this will make unnecessary the employment of two election officers at each precinct. This is an excellent proposal to eliminate wasteful expenditures without impairment of efficient service and The Times recommends a "Yes" vote on this proposition.

6-A. ALIEN LABOR

6-A. Strongly opposed by the Chamber of Commerce and the Associated General Contractors of America, this charter amendment directly strikes at the pocketbooks of all Los Angeles taxpayers and property owners by prohibiting the employment of aliens on municipal work. A similar antialien bill applying to all State public work was proposed at the last Legislature and defeated. The effect of the amendment would be to increase the cost of all street paving, sewers, storm drains and other public improvements and would delay their construction until the contractors could find American citizens to do the work now done by aliens, an almost impossible task. Contractors in Los Angeles give preference to American citizens, but often, especially in sewer work, only aliens are willing to accept the jobs. Should this amendment be adopted, then the construction work will be delayed until American citizens can be found to work on these projects. Delays and unnecessary restrictions on contractors and public officials as to the employment of labor cost money, and the taxpayers and property owners will pay the extra cost imposed upon by this antialien charter amendment. The Times strongly recommends a "No" vote on this proposition.

7-A. TRAFFIC PLAN FUNDS

7-A. The purpose of this amendment to the charter is to provide a fund by means of a special tax of 9 cents on each $100 property valuation for five years from which contributions will be made to the twenty street opening and widening projects in the second unit of the Major Traffic Street Plan.

This plan was adopted by the voters two years ago, and a bond issue of $8,000,000 authorized at that time for contributions to the projects in the first unit of the plan. The first unit projects are all well under way as to plans, proceedings and ordinances, and the speed made in carrying out this work has been largely due to the allocations to the assessment districts of funds from the $5,000,000 bond fund, averaging 11 per cent of the cost of each improvement.

The present tax proposal, therefore, is for the purpose of carrying out the will of the people expressed two years ago that great needed arteries of travel should be created in Los Angeles as recommended in the Major Traffic Street Plan. The plans, proceedings and ordinances for the twenty street opening, extending and widening projects in the second unit of the plan cannot be started until the allocations are known, and these allocations cannot be made until a second unit major traffic street fund has been created. This fund will be created by this tax. While the tax to each taxpayer is small, and temporary only, the fund to be created by this tax in the five-year period will be $8,000,000, thus assuring the consummation of these projects while not impairing the unused bonding capacity of the city. The opening of Hill street south of Washington and the opening and extending of Beverly Boulevard to the ocean are striking examples of the value of street openings and widenings to the growth and prosperity of Los Angeles as well as permanently curing the city of its most serious ailment—traffic congestion. To carry out the recommendations of the Major Traffic Street Plan and to bring to an end street traffic congestion which is a drag on the forward march of Los Angeles, The Times recommends a "Yes" vote on this proposition.

8-A. POLICE-FIRE PENSIONS

8-A. This is a charter amendment to revise the police and fire pension provisions of the charter in the interest of the taxpayer, and was voluntarily proposed by the firemen and policemen in appreciation of the increases in salary given them at the special election held on April 30, last. The police and fire pension fund is now entirely raised from taxation and other city revenues. By this amendment the policemen and firemen entering the service after the amendment takes effect will contribute 4 per cent of their salaries to the pension fund. On a basis which an insurance company is conducted, the police and fire pension fund shows today a deficit of $11,000,000, but this contribution by the policemen and firemen to their pension fund will wipe out this deficit over a period of years. The present pension provisions for policemen and firemen permits them to retire after twenty years' service. This amendment raises the service retirement period to twenty-five years. The present pension provisions fix no maximum pension, while this amendment establishes a maximum pension of $1800 a year. The amendment should probably have gone further than it did in relieving the taxpayer of the pension burden, but as a step in the right direction, The Times recommends a "Yes" vote on this proposition.

9-A. DEL VALLE'S SALARY

9-A. Under the former city charter, the president of the Board of Water and Power Commissioners received a salary of $300 a month, as the president of this board is required to devote much of his time to the duties of this office. Under the new city charter no salary was provided for the president of this board, despite the fact that the water and power departments transact a tremendous business amounting to many millions of dollars a year. This amendment provides that the department be empowered to pay to the president of the board, now R. F. Del Valle, a salary from departmental revenues. On account of the great responsibilities of the president of this board, The Times recommends a "Yes" vote on this proposition.

10-A. NAMING ASSISTANT

10-A. This is a technical correction of the present charter whereby boards and commissions which appoint heads of departments may also appoint assistants to those department chiefs. The purpose of the amendment is to enable boards and commissions to designate assistants who shall have charge of departments during the absence of the heads of those departments. This will add nothing to the salary rolls. The Times recommends a "Yes" vote on this proposition.

11-A. BUREAU LOANS

11-A—When the new charter was being drafted The Times opposed that provision of the charter which placed the Department of Water and Power in a preferred class among city departments and gave the department authority to secure "short-term loans." In other words, the charter permits the water and power department to go into the money market and to borrow money. While these loans are to be paid from departmental revenues, if there are any available, the loans constitute a pledge of the credit of the city government and, of course, back of the government, of the people of Los Angeles. So far the department has not taken advantage of this provision. There seems no sound business reason why any department of the city government should be permitted to enter into loan transactions except by the method provided for other departments; that is, to ask the people for a bond issue, and tell in detail what the money is needed for. It is the people's credit, and they should say when that credit is to be extended. It cannot be forgotten that the Power Bureau asked for bond issues under promises to pay all interest and sinking-fund charges. When these fell due the Power Bureau had no money to pay them, and so the taxpayers paid to the tune of more than $1,000,000. The money has not been repaid, although the department is now paying all interest and sinking-fund charges on its bonds, as is mandatory under the provisions of the new charter. This particular amendment removes one of the restrictions on marketing these Water and Power Department certificates of indebtedness, as these short-term loans are called, and makes it possible for the department to pay the interest on these loans in the same manner as the payments are made on bonds. As a protest against the water and power department being given this authority to secure independent departmental loans. The Times recommends a "No" vote on this proposition.

12-A. WATER DISTRICTS

12-A. This amendment is to correct an injustice in the charter to the water and power users of the city and to the Department of Water and Power, and eliminates the provision of the charter making it mandatory upon the department to pay all interest and sinking-fund charges on district water and power bonds. Subdividers and developers of land have strongly indorsed this amendment, for as a result of the mandatory provisions of the charter the water and power department has been financially unable to approve the installation of power lines and conduits and of water-distributing systems in districts and new territory, the owners and developers of which were willing to pay the interest and sinking-fund charges on the district bonds issued for these improvements. As a result of the present situation installation of these district water and power facilities has been held back until this amendment to the charter can be approved by the people. Under the former charter the districts authorized these bonds with the full knowledge that the districts were to pay the interest and sinking-fund charges on these district bonds. The new charter made it mandatory upon the Department of Water and Power to take over these district obligations and to pay district bond charges from water and power revenues. The new charter also made it mandatory upon the Department of Water and Power to pay the interest and sinking-fund charges upon general water and power bonds, and this was a wise, sound, business-like requirement, but to add to the department the burden of paying off the district bonds laid an unjust burdent upon the department. If the owners of great areas of land desire these water and power lines and systems and are willing to bond the districts for them, then the districts should pay off the bonds. This amendment provides that payments can be made from available department revenues after the department operating expenses and general bond obligations have been met. The Times recommends a "Yes" vote on this proposition.

13-A. SHORT-TERM LOANS

13-A. This is an amendment relating to the water and power "short-term loans," and all of the arguments set forth above in opposition to Proposition 11-A apply to this amendment. The Times is opposed in principle to giving authority to this or any other city department to borrow money directly without securing permission from the people. Hence, The Times opposes any method for making it easier for the department to market these departmental loan certificates. The charter now provides that these loans shall be for periods of not less than one year nor more than five years; this amendment extends the loan period so that the loans shall be for periods of not less than three years nor more than five years. Amendments 11-A and 13-A apparently are paving the way for the water and power department to go into the money market and borrow money on these certificates without having secured definite authority for each loan from the people. The Times recommends a "No" vote on this proposition.

14-A. WATER AND LIGHT BILLS

14-A. This charter amendment, which is opposed by the Chamber of Commerce, is a striking example of the failure of municipal ownership and operation of those enterprises which are essentially the function of private enterprise. By this amendment the Department of Water and Power will secure the right to charge the other city-goverment departments for water used in fighting fires, for electricity tested to illuminate the parks and playgrounds and to light the City Hall and other public buildings. Municipal-ownership enthusiasts who embarked the city of Los Angeles upon a hydroelectric power generating and distributing program, which has directly cost the taxpayers millions of dollars to pay off power bonds and in depletion of the city's bonding capacity, made glowing promises to the voters of the great benefits that were to follow the city's entering into the electric business. None of these promises was kept. It was only when the new charter was adopted that it even became mandatory upon the power bureau to pay the interest and sinking-fund charges on its power bonds. Among the most glowing pledges was the one that the municipal power bureau would furnish free to the people of Los Angeles abundant electricity to illuminate the streets, parks and, of course, to all public buildings and city departments. Faced with a chronic condition of poverty, the power bureau has repeatedly billed the fire, police, park, playgrounds and Board of Public Works in charge of city buildings for electricity used. Likewise, the municipal water bureau is seeking payment for water furnished for fighting fires and for the parks and other city departments. After having paid millions of dollars of the bond charges for the water and power department, surely the least the taxpayer has the right to expect from these municipally owned enterprises is that they should keep their promises to furnish service to the city government without charge. The request for this amendment is a type of the roseate promises and miserable failures of realization of the promises by the municipal-ownership advocates who plunged the city government into business enterprises. The Times recommends a "No" vote on this proposition.

15-A. COUNCIL CANDIDATES

15-A. This is a charter correction in the form of an amendment by which members of the City Council are declared ineligible for any other elected or appointive office during their Councilmanic terms. The proposed amendment places in the charter the text of the provision of the old charter providing definitely that Councilmen shall be ineligible to other city offices during their Councilmanic terms of office. It is designed to prohibit the appointment of a Councilman as Mayor or to other city office in the event of a vacancy occurring.

The Times recommends a "Yes" vote on this proposition.

16-A. TIME OF APPOINTMENTS

16-A. This charter amendment provides that an appointing officer shall fill positions from the lists of eligibles submitted by the Civil Service Commission within thirty days of submission by the commission. The purpose of the amendment is to prevent heads of departments from de-

BONDS NEEDED TO FINISH FLOOD-CONTROL WORK

Cash Also Sought for Beaches and Parks, Grade Crossing Work Civic Center Land

One of the proposals of first importance that the electors of the county will pass upon at the polls Tuesday is that for the issuance of flood-control bonds in the sum of $26,887,278. This is presented by the Board of Supervisors as the final financing of the complete flood-control program, already approved in principle by the voters.

Twenty-four projects are included in the proposal. These, together with the work now done or authorized under previous approvals, will afford all parts of the county adequate protection from the menace of flood waters, as contemplated by the enabling act under which the flood-control district was established.

Several months ago the Supervisors called upon the flood-control engineer to submit a report, showing what work must be done to complete the flood-control program. In making up this report, Chief Engineer Reagan consulted with Engineers Bell and Hawgood, retained by the board for that purpose.

The recommendations so arrived at are the basis of the bond-issue proposal. When the work called for in Reagan's report shall have been completed the Supervisors believe that not only will there be no further demand for construction funds, but that maintenance cost will be reduced to a simple matter of keeping channels cleared.

The twenty-four projects proposed, together with the sums to be expended on each, are as follows:

Western San Fernando Valley project	$ 481,733
Wilson Canyon project	235,979
May Canyon and Pacoima diversion project	315,944
Big Tujunga Dam project	7,695,50
Haines Canyon Project	334,000
Stough Canyon and Burbank Wash project	280,000
La Canada, Verdugo Wash and Sycamore Canyon project	2,436,000
Sierra Madre Canyon project	201,200
Sawpit Wash project	122,700
Duarte project	102,500
Fish Canyon project	18,000
Devil's Gate Dam project	75,000
Santa Monica storm drain project	335,000
Balloona Creek project	292,250
West Compton Creek project	3,718,330
Los Angeles River project	2,689,836
Lower San Gabriel River project	356,000
Lower Sycamore Canyon storm drain project	227,950
San Antonio Canyon dam project	590,144
Sawpit Canyon and Monrovia Canyon project	163,800
Lower Eaton Canyon Dam project	660,000
Saratela storm drain extension project	3,285,850
Slauson-avenue storm drain extension project	2,200,000
Jefferson-street storm drain extension project	118,620

The Times recommends a "Yes" vote on this bond issue to carry to a successful conclusion the great and necessary flood-protection program to which we are committed.

BEACHES AND PARKS

A system of public parks, beaches and recreation grounds, so located that every resident will have easy access to one or more of them, is envisaged in one of the items to be submitted Tuesday to the electorate—the county proposal for the issuance of $8,000,000 in bonds to finance the purchase of beaches and park sites.

This fund, if approved by the voters, will be split into equal parts. Four million dollars will be spent in the acquisition of beach frontage. The other $4,000,000 will be spent for land at interior points.

The acquisition of land for public beaches has, within the past few years, become a pressing matter, according to Supervisor McClellan, chairman of the board, and the member who has led in making plans for recreational facilities.

"So rapid has been the movement by private interests toward the acquisition of beach frontage for profitable exploitation or private use, that frontage for public use will shortly be unavailable or else available only at exorbitant cost," he said yesterday.

"The beach is strictly limited in extent, of course. Beach clubs, reservations by subdividers and other private enterprises are continually nibbling away at the amount of frontage with which the county has been provided by nature.

"For two years the board has been considering this matter. We have bought two parcels, one at Santa Monica Canyon by condemnation, and one at Manhattan Beach by private negotiation. At the latter point there is still available a large additional strip, at a reasonable price, if funds are provided for its purchase. In general, it will be the policy of the county to buy these lands, and turn them over to neighboring municipalities for administration as public beaches, thus obviating maintenance charges."

The fund for the purchase of interior parks will be handled somewhat differently. In these cases, the county will contribute half the cost, leaving it to local interests, who may advocate the purchases, to contribute the balance. Thus the advisability and need of any particular purchase will be, to a great extent, guaranteed.

The Times indorses this bond issue.

GRADE-CROSSING ELIMINATION

Provision for elimination, within the next five years, of some of the county's most notorious grade-crossing death traps is made in a proposal for the issuance of $5,000,000 in county bonds, which will appear as one of the items on the ballots to be handed the voters Tuesday.

This fund, if voted, will assure the expenditure of a total of approximately $10,000,000 on grade-crossing elimination as such work is paid for half by the public and the other half by the affected railroads.

The proposal will appear on the ballot as the result of two years' work by a commission, including representatives of the city, the county and the affected railroads. At meetings, held regularly every alternate Thursday, this commission has taken up, one by one, more than 150 problems of grade crossing, and has discussed the possibilities of early elimination of the worst.

The railroads have stated that within the next five years they will be in a position to contribute a maximum of $10,000,000 as their share of this work. The Supervisors had intended originally to propose a bond issue of $8,000,000 this fall, and look toward such funds as might be raised from current taxes during the next five years for another $2,000,000 so as to be able to match the railroads' ability.

It was decided, however, to limit the present bond issue to $5,000,000 and take up the question of further funds, when these, if approved, shall have been exhausted.

"The railroads, after careful study of the whole situation, are persuaded that grade-crossing elimination, at properly selected points, pays for itself in dollars and cents, without regard to the humane factors involved," Supervisor Cogswell said yesterday. "Loss of life, and property damage from grade-crossing accidents cost thousands of dollars per year—more than the carrying charges of such investment as must be made in elimination. The grade-crossing commission, on which I represent the county, is of the opinion, after careful consideration, that the county can at this time invest $5,000,000 in this work, with profit to the general public."

The Times recommends a "Yes" vote on this issue.

CIVIC CENTER LAND

As a result of an unusual situation, there will appear upon the ballot Tuesday a proposal that the county issue $5,000,000 worth of bonds to raise funds for the purchase of real estate in the district to become the new Civic Centetr.

Under ordinary circumstances, land desired by the county as building sites would not be purchased except as actually needed. But an opportunity for saving a large portion of the cost of land held certain to be needed within the next few years, has actuated the Supervisors in placing this proposal on the ballot. It provides, on its face, that the proceeds of the sale of the bonds may be expended to acquire realty within the area bounded by Main and Hill streets, to the east and west, and Sunset Boulevard and First street, to the north and south.

Behind this proposal, however, lies a peculiar situation which may be taken advantage of to allow the county to obtain title to a large portion of the needed land without cost.

Spring street soon will be straightened and extended to Sunset Boulevard. This will necessitate the abandonment of Buena Vista and New High streets, which the Spring-street extension will intersect at angles so acute as to make them unnecessary. The abandoned right of way will revert to the owners of fronting property.

If the county waits until after this has been done, then it will have to buy, by negotiation or condemnation, the very property which the city will abandon, enhanced in value, too, by reason of the great Spring-street improvement. If this should happen, the taxpayers would be giving away valuable realty with one hand, and buying it back with the other.

It is for this reason, more than any other, that the Supervisors propose that funds be made available immediately for purchase of this land, so that it may be accomplished prior to abandonment of adjoining public rights of way.

The Times recommends a "Yes" vote on this issue.

SEVEN SUPERVISORS

Whether the county is to have a Board of Supervisors consisting of seven members or will continue to get along with five, as at present, will be determined by the voters Tuesday.

A proposal to increase the membership of the board to seven, will appear on the ballot, technically as the suggestion of the Board of Supervisors. Members of the board have been careful to say, however, that the fate of this measure is a matter of indifference to them.

The history of the proposal has certain interesting angles. It started with and is principally the project of Long Beach. As the children of Israel called out for a king, Long Beach is crying out for a Supervisor of its very own.

As things stand now, the beach metropolis is partly in one supervisorial district and partly in another. Each of its "half Supervisors" has a large rural constituency, and Long Beach feels that under the circumstances some of its urban aspirations do not receive the unreserved support that would be accorded them by a Supervisor without other interests.

So the board was shown several weeks ago that a petition would most certainly be circulated calling for a special election on a proposal to increase its number to seven. This would entail heavy expense to the county, so the board agreed to place the proposal on the general election ballot by resolution, which it did.

Long Beach only wants one Supervisor, of course, but six would not do, because of the possibility of deadlock. Thus the proposal is for seven. The board has promised that if the proposition carries, it will so redistrict the county, if practically possible, that no large town or city will be divided by district lines.

But no member of the board has anything to say in favor of the idea. On the other hand, they say nothing against it.

The Times does not consider adequate the arguments for a larger board. The more members such a board has, the more costly and the less efficient it is. If necessary the county would better be redistricted. The Times recommends a "No" vote on this.

RUSH OF TRAVELERS HERE OVER WEEK-END

The closing of the summer excursion season and the Stanford-Southern California football game combined to give Los Angeles an almost unprecedented rush of travelers for the week-end, according to C. L. McPaul, assistant passenger traffic manager of the Southern Pacific. Residents who went East during the summer and early fall on the annual excursion tickets, expiring tonight, are arriving in a last-minute rush to reach Los Angeles under the time barrier. The Golden State Limited, the Sunset Limited and other transcontinental trains are operating to this city in extra sections and all other trains are carrying extra cars to handle the crowds.

GEORGE K. HOME FOR SHERIFF

Famous Officer Best Fitted for County Post

Remarkable Record as Police Agent, Executive

Ringing Declaration Against Wright Act Repeal

An opportunity to elect an internationally known detective and police administrator to the office of Sheriff at the general elections next Tuesday is offered the people of Los Angeles county in the candidacy of Capt. George K. Home.

The Times recommends the election of Capt. Home, believing that his many years' experience as a police executive and his remarkable record as an investigator exceptionally qualify him for the position. The record of Sheriff Traeger, the incumbent, during the five years he has held office has not been one of efficiency, nor has the best use been made of the men, money and equipment allocated to him. The numerous jail escapes and errors of omission which have occurred during his regime are still fresh in the public mind.

Capt. Home is primarily a policeman, and a policeman of a very high type. He has spent his life in enforcing the law, and he has pledged himself to enforce the law, and all laws, in the event he is elected Sheriff.

FOR WRIGHT ACT

He has announced himself as being against the proposed repeal of the Wright Act, Proposition No. 9 on the State ballot. The Wright Act is the State liquor enforcement law. Capt. Home says:

"If this measure (repeal of the Wright Act) is carried, California will be delivered bound and helpless into the hands of the great criminal syndicates which now operate the illegal liquor traffic. At one blow will be removed ninety-nine out of every hundred officers of the law who now help to hold in check these mighty forces of evil.

"Twenty-two years of active police work have convinced me that at least 65 per cent of all crimes and juvenile delinquencies are traceable directly and indirectly to the consumption of liquor. What a saturnalia of crime would follow this paralyzing of the prohibition forces of California staggers the imagination. What the inundation of our State with an unchecked flood of poison bootleg would mean to our young people is a thing to give pause even to the most ardent advocate of 'personal liberty.'

"The plan to repeal the Wright Act has the active support of every bootlegger, rum-runner, dope-peddler, crooked lawyer and other crime exploiters in the State. That it likewise enjoys the support of a few good, but misinformed and misguided citizens in no wise palliates its peril."

As the result of Capt. Home's stand, all the elements and agencies working for the support of the law have united behind his candidacy.

HIS RECORD

Capt. Home is 47 years of age, is married, and has four children. He has lived in Los Angeles forty-four years. His father was a policeman before him, and the young man entered the department when Los Angeles was nothing more than a town. His first assignment was the "Temple-street beat;" then he was assigned to Chinatown. From the first, his brilliancy was discerned by his superiors, and one promotion followed another.

In 1910 he began the career of crime detection which has made his name known on two continents. The list of murderers, bandits, highwaymen, gangsters and burglars whose arrest he has caused is a lengthy one and many are the internationally famous mysteries which Capt. Home has solved.

He successively became a detective sergeant, then captain of detectives, then Chief of Police. He resigned after a year, but later returned to the department as head of the detective bureau, which he reorganized and placed upon an efficient basis. In addition to his ability as a detective, he has demonstrated the highest qualifications as an executive.

The Times believes that Capt Home, as Sheriff, would administer the office in the best interests of the public.

Sheriff Traeger was born in Porterville. He attended Stanford University, where he was noted as a football player. He came to Los Angeles county and coached several football teams. He was a deputy sheriff and a turnkey at the jail, and was also a deputy United States Marshal. He was appointed Sheriff in the spring of 1921, and was elected to that position the following August.

The office of Sheriff is nonpartisan and the term is for four years.

eral agents allocated by the Federal government to this State. The effect would be to turn the State over to the bootleggers, to invite them and a horde of other criminals in their train to come to California and operate unmolested. By passing this measure California would repudiate her pledge to uphold the Constitution of the United States. Vote "No" on No. 9.

No. 10. STATE BUILDINGS

This is a Senate constitutional Amendment 39. It provides $8,500,000 in State bonds for the erection of buildings for the University of California, Southern Branch, at the Westwood site; for the erection of a State building at Los Angeles; for the erection of buildings at the University at Berkeley, and for the completion of State buildings at Sacramento. These buildings have long been desired as they are urgently needful. The Times recommends that this measure be approved.

NO. 11 SCHOOL TAX EXEMPTION

If enacted, this measure would exempt from taxation the property of private secondary schools in California. In behalf of this measure it is urged that the total tax now paid by such institutions does not exceed $3500. Inasmuch as the taxpayers of the State must pay for the maintenance of public schools, to which all are eligible according to age and residence, The Times does not believe that the tax burden of private educational institutions, even if such institutions are not conducted for profit, should be shifted to the general taxpayer and, hence, recommends that Proposition No. 11 be defeated.

NO. 12. VETERAN EXEMPTION

The principle of exempting from taxation any individual or group of individuals is, in the main, unsound and if carried to its logical limit eventually will impose an intolerable and unjust burden upon a portion of the citizenship. Although affecting a comparatively small number of individuals and organizations, The Times believes that this tax-exemption is not justified from the standpoint of public policy, and recommends that Proposition No. 12 be not approved.

NO. 13, ABSENTEE VOTING

Submitted by the Legislature as a Constitutional amendment, this proposition would extend the privileges of absent voting in such fashion as to permit, if not to invite, irregularities in election returns. While of possible convenience to a small number of individuals, this measure does not appear to be desirable at this time. The Times recommends that it be rejected.

NO. 14, CORPORATION STOCK

This Assembly constitutional amendment was approved by the State Legislature almost unanimously, only two votes being cast against its submission to the people. It proposes that an increase in the capital stock or bonded indebtedness of a corporation shall be voted by two-thirds of the stockholders, instead of a majority as at present provided, and dispenses with the requirement that a meeting of stockholders be held for such consent. The Times recommends approval of this proposition.

NO. 15. SCHOOL DISTRICTS

Prepared by those interested in educational affairs of the State, this measure is submitted in order that existing school laws may be clarified and co-ordinated to permit all school districts, whether large or small, to meet their individual problems. The Times recommends approval of Proposition No. 15.

NO. 16. JUDGES' SALARIES

In order that adequate salaries may be paid to judges in the smaller and less wealthy counties of the State, this measure would repeal the law requiring the State and the several counties each to pay half of the salary of a judge and would fix the amount to be paid by the State at $3000. This measure has the approval of thoughtful leaders of the bench and bar in California and The Times recommends its adoption.

NO. 17. BIBLE IN SCHOOLS

Authorizing, but not requiring the reading of the Bible in the public schools, this initiative measure is urged by those who believe the youth of California should be permitted to obtain the moral teachings which the Bible contains. Adequate safeguards against the introduction of sectarian or denominational doctrines have been written into the act, under which a teacher may read without comment such portions of the book as may appear desirable. The Times believes objection to the reading of the Bible in the public schools arises from a misapprehension. Such reading is a part of the daily program in the public schools of a majority of the States of the union. This proposition, in the opinion of The Times, should be approved.

NO. 18. WATER-POWER ACT

Despite the fact that the people in 1922 rejected the so-called $500,000,000 water and power act by a majority in excess of 350,000, and again defeated this Socialistic proposition by a majority of more than 430,000 in 1924, the scheme has again been placed on the ballot. This measure would establish a board of five members appointed by the Governor and not answerable to any agency of the State with regard to the expenditure of the proposed half-billion dollar bond issue. The Times recommends that the voters discourage any further agitation in behalf of this radical proposition by defeating it in next Tuesday's election by a majority greater even than that of 1924.

NO. 19. JUDGES' PENSIONS

Proposed as a measure designed to encourage able and experienced men to seek judicial office and devote themselves to a judicial career, Proposition 19, supported by bar associations and representative attorneys and judges, would establish a pension system permitting a judge who serves twenty-four years on the bench to retire at the age of 60. Provision is made for calling retired judges back into active service when needed. The Times recommends approval of this amendment.

NO. 20. REAPPORTIONMENT

This initiative measure was placed on the ballot to enforce provisions of the State Constitution relating to the method of apportioning representation in the State Legislature. Deliberate violation of the Constitution by successive legislatures since 1921 has robbed Southern California of its proper share of the membership of the State Senate and Assembly. Proposition 20 proposes the creation of a commission authorized and instructed to enforce the constitutional apportionment plan if the legislature fails or refuses to do so. The Times recommends approval of this proposal.

NO. 21. DEBT ACTS

This is an Assembly constitutional amendment providing that when two or more propositions incurring indebtedness are submitted at the same election the votes on each proposition shall be counted separately. The adoption of this amendment will eliminate confusion and will simpli-

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO LOS ANGELES COUNTY CHARTER. Shall the Charter of the County of Los Angeles be amended by amending Sections 4, 5, 6 and 7 of Article II thereof to read as follows: Sec. 4. The County of Los Angeles shall have a Board of Supervisors consisting of seven members, each of whom must be an elector of the district which he represents, must reside therein during his incumbency, must have been such an elector for at least one year immediately preceding his election, and shall be elected by such district. Their term of office shall be four years (except as provided in Section 6 hereof,) each shall hold office until his successor is elected and qualified, and they shall each receive a salary of $5,000.00 per year payable from the County Treasury; provided, however, that until noon on the first Monday in December, 1928, the Board of Supervisors shall consist of five members, who shall receive the above salary and possess the above qualifications as to the five supervisorial districts from which they are elected. The members of the Board of Supervisors shall devote all their time during business hours to the faithful service of the public. Sec. 5. The Board of Supervisors in office at the time of the approval of this provision of the Charter by the Legislature shall, not more than one hundred and twenty (120) days after such approval, adopt an ordinance dividing the County into seven (7) Supervisorial Districts, the boundaries of which shall remain as so established until changed as provided in this Charter; provided that the five Supervisorial Districts existing at the time this provision takes effect shall continue for all purposes, except the election of supervisors, until noon on the first Monday in December, 1928; and provided further that the First and Third Supervisorial Districts shall be so established hereunder as not to affect the incumbency or term of the supervisors representing said districts at the time this provision takes effect. Sec. 6. At the general election to be held in November, 1928, supervisors shall be elected from the Second, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Seventh Supervisorial Districts. The terms of the supervisors elected from the Second, Fourth, Fifth and Seventh Supervisorial Districts shall begin at noon on the first Monday in December, 1928, and end at noon on the first Monday in December, 1932, and the term of the supervisor elected from the Sixth Supervisorial District shall begin at noon on the first Monday in December, 1928, and end at noon on the first Monday in December, 1930; provided that each shall hold office until his successor is elected and qualified. At the general election to be held in November, 1930, supervisors shall be elected from the First, Third and Sixth Supervisorial Districts, whose terms shall begin at noon on the first Monday in December, 1930, and end at noon on the first Monday in December, 1934; provided that each shall hold office until his successor is elected and qualified. At each general election after November, 1930, there shall be elected either four or three supervisors as the case may be, for terms of four years, beginning at noon on the first Monday in December next after their election, and ending at noon on the first Monday in December four years thereafter, providing their successors are duly elected and qualified. Sec. 7. The Board of Supervisors may, by ordinance passed by a five-seventh vote of its members, change the boundaries of any Supervisorial District. No such boundaries shall ever be so changed as to affect the incumbency in office of any supervisor. Any change in the boundaries of any Supervisorial District must be made within one year after a general election.	YES

WORLD SERIES

One fine thing about the world series in baseball is that the championship is yet retained by the United States.

MASTODON TEETH

Two eight-pound mastodon teeth have been dug up in Indiana. How did Los Angeles come to overlook these?

WHY THE MARINES?

Why do they pick on the marines to guard the mails? Are they, like Gene Tunney, better known for their fighting qualities?

ROD RULE

Hygeia publishes an article on when and how to punish a child. It does not discuss where. Possibly it is unnecessary to name the spot.

CLASS BABY

The home economics class of Lake Forest College has adopted a ten-month-old baby. The schools are certainly getting down to business.

HELLO, QUEEN

What has the Queen come to see? Americans trying to ape her own court. Or has she come to see us eat corn on the cob? Why not be natural?

SEARCHING QUESTION

New York has a new searchlight that has 2,000,000,000 candle-power. A newspaper may be read forty miles away. Is Tammany hunting for an honest man?

HOW COULD HE?

Report comes that the barber of Mussolini, who has shaved the Premier for four years, has not spoken a word in that time. Another triumph for the "duce."

ABOLISH HELL

Bishops of the Church of England are said to have started a campaign to abolish hell. We wish them well in their vast endeavors; too many are trying to raise it.

AUTO EXCUTION

Secretary Hoover says the automobile kills ten times as many as does the locomotive. Can this be because the train is hampered by rails and can not turn out to get them?

"PULLMAN'S PRIDE"

The poultry department of Washington State College boasts of a hen bred and owned by it that has laid 337 eggs in 365 days. Evidently it pays for even a hen to go to college.

HAIR CUT

Jackie Coogan recently got a hair-cut in San Francisco in which 500 feet of film were used up. Is the length of that film a prophecy of the linear measurement of the future male's hair? Will a little child lead them?

A HUNCH

The Crown Prince of Germany has received a prophecy from an Italian soothsayer in the mountains beyond Locarno that he will some day be proclaimed King of Germany. Macbeth also received a similar hunch from the witches.

MR. WEEVIL

The boll weevil is a gentleman, after all. And yet he has been a sadly misunderstood citizen. They have sprayed him from the earth and bombed him from the sky. And now they have a bumper cotton crop that is an embarrassment.

DIETED TO DEATH

The Baroness de Rothschild, one of Europe's most beautiful as well as richest women, died recently from the effects of reducing. In order to retain her husband's affection she has been dieting for the past ten years. An autopsy showed that her stomach had shrunk to the size of a lemon and was no longer able to function. There are husbands' affections that are not worth a lemon.

ADAM NEGLECTED

Poor Adam! His birthday, which, according to John P. Brady of Baltimore is on October 28, was not celebrated this year, owing to the death of the man who figured out the anniversary, erected a monument to Adam in 1909 and observed the day regularly for seventeen years. Well, the monument still stands, and anybody who wants to resume the annual celebrations will find no law against it.

"COMMONER'S" COLLEGE

The Bryan Memorial University at Dayton, Tenn., has had a library given it by a Chicago minister and an oil painting from the "Commoner's" daughter. That does not seem much to start a university, but when it is recalled that Harvard was also begun by a preacher's library it seems a good omen. John Timothy Stone, Presbyterian clergyman of Chicago, recently said, "Science and religion are the oxygen and hydrogen which, working together, create light."

EDISON AND IMMORTALITY

Thomas Alva Edison has spoken again about immortality. Back in 1910 Mr. Edison delivered himself of his findings on immortality and they were not at all reassuring.

Being the scientist that he is, his word carried weight. Many wondered whether the dream of the world was real or whether humanity had been chasing a mirage through all the years.

Any man who could baptize a wire with lightning and make it shine steadily through the night and also make steel and wax talk is a seer to conjure with.

Then came and passed Luther Burbank and his views offered no further help. He had married plants which begot many strange forms of life. He seemed to be one of the genii loaned from "Arabian Nights."

He ventured his opinion on immortality and, after he had spoken, science seemed as dumb a Sphinx as ever upon the supreme question.

A. Conan Doyle sent Sherlock Holmes into the other world to ferret out the secret of spirit life and reports came back that matter is but a shell and souls do live immortal in another world.

However, it was all so fantastic that the world was credulous. Dr. Watson, Sherlock Holmes's inseparable companion, was a scientist, but he did not seem to be able to hold Sherlock Holmes level when it came to seeing things in the dark.

Dr. Millikan and Michael Pupin are scientists of equal celebrity with Edison and Burbank, but they are devout in their faith in the here as well as in the hereafter.

But quite recently Mr. Edison expressed opinions on immortality, after sixteen years of silence on the subject, that completely reverse his original finding. Now he concludes in the November Forum:

> I say that even evidence that science now possesses tends to favor belief in immortality; that there is nothing necessarily shocking to practical intelligence about immortality.
> By immortality I mean what the spiritualists mean, persistence of the undefined "soul" after physical death. A little illogically, I cite the 4000-year-old California sequoia trees as suggestive of a possible after-life for that part of a man which is separate from his body.
> Then I switch to religion, saying that I believe Christ, Buddha, Confucius and Mohammed to have had greater influence on mankind than any material scientist.
> I qualify my regard for Mohammed, who believed in war. I discount Christian ritual, holding for the Sermon on the Mount, the Golden Rule.
> I declare there are sermons in thunderstorms, wild flowers, oak leaves, snowflakes, squirrels. I advise religionists to adopt the methods of the scientists; obtain irrefutable, concrete data proving immortality.
> Then men will have to believe, if the score is only fifty-two points to forty-eight points in immortality's favor. I declare an educational church will save the world.

THE FLAPPER SURVEY

It is to be hoped that immediate and serious study will be given by our leading sociologists and reformers to the survey of the likes and dislikes of California high-school and grammar-school girls which was recently completed by the State Department of Education.

The survey tends to confirm some of the worst forebodings of parents of so-called flappers. The intelligence is conveyed that our girls do not like to wash dishes, get breakfast (service in bed preferred,) set the table, make beds or milk the cow.

Households containing specimens of the modern girl have suspected some of these things for some time. An official announcement on the subject should put an end to doubt. Now that the worst is known we can set about looking for a remedy.

The situation is not as black as it appears. There is a silver lining. The survey discloses that girls will bake, mow the lawn and work in the garden, take care of the children, sometimes do their personal laundry and, if in a particularly benevolent mood, that of other members of the family. This information doubtless will come to certain families as a far greater surprise than the announcement of objectionable pursuits.

We hesitate to speak positively on the question of getting girls to do what they don't like to do. Recently a Los Angeles court ordered a mother to see that her young daughter washed the dishes for a year. This may do in individual instances, but so much other business confronts our judges that it is not to be commended as a general practice.

Of course, it is easy to say that the objectionable occupations should be made more attractive. A degree of interest may be attached to getting breakfast, an element of adventure may be introduced into the prosaic business of milking the cow; tickling the animal, for instance. But how the job of making beds or washing dishes is to be rendered fascinating is a tough nut to crack, although it might be possible to work out a Charleston accompaniment.

Judging from the nature of the sex, however, the likeliest outlook is that the husbands of tomorrow will wash the dishes, get breakfast, make the beds, set the table and milk the cow.

PUTTING IT OVER

The charge has been frequently hurled that prohibition was "put over" while the doughboys were in Europe. And the phrase, "put over," has been used in its worst sense.

Was prohibition "put over" on the American people? Did not the majority of States ratify after the return of the armies from France? Even then were not most of the boys from the homes of the majority and consequently possessed of the same ideals? Is it not a wet slur on the American Legion?

Dr. Lyman Beecher preached six famous sermons on the abolition of the liquor traffic in January of 1826, just 100 years ago.

The events leading up to the Civil War shadowed the temperance question for almost fifty years. In 1873 the Woman's Crusade came and the next year crystallized into the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

This organization has the credit and honor of securing State legislation requiring scientific temperance teaching in the public schools. The present generation was going to school then.

Local option began to express itself in various communities in different forms. The Anti-Saloon League was organized in 1893 as the united movement of the Protestant churces. Its enemies declared it to be a connivance to save the Republican party.

"When the league was organized thirty-three years ago there were but six dry States. Three of these later repealed their laws, leaving Kansas, Maine and North Dakota as the only outposts of prohibition," says Boyd P. Doty in the Church School Journal.

The number of dry States had increased to seven in 1913 and in thirty other States local option was rapidly taking in more territory. About 46,000,000 people, or about half the population, were living under the dry regime.

The first resolution for Federal prohibition was introduced in Congress in 1876 by Congressman Blair of New Hampshire. It was defeated. The same Congressman, now become Senator, joined with Senator Plumb of Kansas and introduced a second resolution in 1885, only to have it meet a similar fate. A third resolution bombarded Congress in 1914 and another in 1915.

The fifth resolution, which resulted in the Eighteenth Amendment, was offered in 1917. Within a year and twenty-eight days three-fourths of the States had approved by the necessary majority. Ten additional States swung into line later, and only two, Rhode Island and Connecticut, failed.

But fourteen States ratified before Armistice Day. Thirty-two ratified after November 11, 1918—Florida on November 27, 1918; twenty-nine States in January, 1919; and New Jersey, the forty-sixth, in 1922.

There was no fluke about it. It was overwhelming. It is difficult to see where anything was "put over." Nothing has been done in a corner.

overwhelming. It was done largely after the boys had returned home. It is difficult to see where anything was "put over." Nothing has been done in a corner.

If the wets had been able to control either house in but thirteen State legislatures the Eighteenth Amendment would have been defeated. But three out of the ninety-six branches of State legislatures voted against.

The Volstead Act was passed by a two-thirds vote in 1919, and the supplemental enforcement act was also passed by a two-thirds vote in 1921. The boys had all been home several years.

The wets will now have to win Congress and thirty-six States to change. They have yet to win one. Their only present opportunity lies in nullification. Referendums such as are being held in New York and Illinois are wholly gratuitous. "Nullification" is one of the most hateful words in American history!

THE LOTTERY EVIL

London newspapers are recalling the fact that the last British national lottery passed out of existence 100 years ago—October 18, 1826—after being an official and public feature for over 300 years. The practical extinction of the evil in this country is of more recent date. The last of the large American schemes of this kind was the Louisiana State lottery, which was killed by Postmaster-General John Wanamaker thirty-five years ago, when he denied the concern the use of the mails.

The lottery was imported to this country by the early colonial settlers. One hardly can reconcile their rigid principles with the fact that they used lotteries for religious purposes, such as building churches, as well as for endowing educational institutions, but so it was, and it was many years before the evils of the system so obtruded themselves that it was agreed to abandon it. The aid of the lottery was invoked by the Massachusetts Legislature to rebuild Faneuil Hall in Boston, when that historic structure was burned. In 1793 a lottery was organized at Washington to raise money for the Capitol buildings, the sum of $350,000 being realized by the sale of the tickets.

While in Europe what were known as "lottery loans" were commonly floated to aid a crippled government, such a scheme never was employed by the United States save on one occasion. This was in 1783, when the national Treasury became depleted, and in this quandary the government resorted to a "lottery loan," arranged in connection with Dutch bankers, and thus a surplus was created.

The Louisiana State lottery, killed by Wanamaker, came into existence in 1869 to aid the State in recovering its finances after the Civil War. For a time it defied the Wanamaker edict, but had to give up the ghost. This was salutary, as its officers had begun to control politics in Louisiana, and a scandalous condition had arisen.

Save on a small and surreptitious scale, the lottery may be said to be dead in this country, and its death is not lamented by those economists and moral agents who always have seen in it a pernicious and wasteful system so closely akin to gambling that it hardly is to be distinguished from that monstrous evil.

JAPANESE GENEROSITY

A Japanese newspaper reports the raising of a fund of $43,000 from its readers to aid in the relief of the sufferers from the Florida hurricane. Other agencies in Japan raised and forwarded other large sums for the same purpose. This evidence of the sympathy of the people of far-off Nippon for Americans in distress should disarm intolerant American critics of Japan who see an ulterior motive in nearly every deed she performs with reference to this country.

There were those who held that we were too liberal in our contributions to the sufferers from the great Tokio earthquake in 1923. Japan's gracious expressions of gratitude for our offerings were, however, in the opinion of generous Americans, full liquidation for them. That she should now be moved to make some return for our beneficence shows, more than aught else, how greatly she appreciated our gifts.

In a greatly overcrowded country, inhabited by people who, for the most part, live on rice and fish, and where the average workman receives less for his daily wage than many an American mechanic spends for his cigars, one does not look for lavish contributions in aid of suffering foreigners. But Japan's offerings to Florida, though reported at less than $100,000, probably represent more self-denial on the part of her people than ten times that amount raised for such a purpose in California.

The generosity of Japan to Florida will be recognized by all discerning people as new evidence of her growing civilization and sympathetic humanhood.

THE DEPTHS OF WICKEDNESS

By James J. Montague

A hen in England has been taught to lay her eggs in a crate where they need only to be boxed in and sent to market.

We never have, at any time,
By word of mouth or with our pen,
In any style of prose or rhyme
Extolled the conduct of the hen.
But though we knew there was no gleam
Of sense behind her squawking beak—
Till recently we did not dream
That she was base as well as weak.
We did not think that she would lay
Her unhatched babes inside a crate
So that they might be borne away
To meet—well, you can guess what fate.
We did not think a fowl alive,
Of any sort or kind or brood,
With any farmer could connive
To make her children breakfast food.
No doubt, when thus her eggs were lain,
To better serve her master's need,
The hen in question would remain
And bolt an extra bit of feed.
Her heart to mother love was dead,
No twinge of conscience did she feel,
Although she knew the while she fed
She'd sold her babies for a meal.
Had she possessed the veriest dregs
Of feeling, had her heart been right,
She might have hid away those eggs
Until her chickiets saw the light.
Not she forsooth—she needs must bring
Half-way to market her own brood!
Would that we had the words to sing
Our loathing of such turpitude!

GOD OF THE PRIMI

BY HARRY BOWLING

Violent convulsions of nature in many parts narked the fall months of the present year. The truction of property have far exceeded the tions of the power of the Creator have come at a not without reason—was pluming himself on the he was taming and domesticating natural forces. or design that ambitious humanity was reminded Superior Being at the acme of material progress?

September and October, whatever the reason, have witnessed an unusual number of the catastrophes generally characterized as "acts of God." Tornadoes, floods, earthquakes and hurricanes in many places have played havoc with the works and lives of men. The culmination has been the frightful destruction wrought by the earthquake in Armenia on the night of Friday, October 22, and the two West Indian tornadoes that crushed Cuba and crippled Southern Florida.

These were the high spots of disaster, but nature has been out of the reservation with appalling frequency ever since the summer solstice. An earthquake in Sumatra killed 400 in July, while a more terrific shock laid waste the town of Horta in the Azores on the last day of August. Milder evidences of the instability of the solid ground have since been felt in the south of England, Missouri and Northern California.

Hurricane and flood damage has been excessive throughout the months of autumn. The first week in October floods in Sonora drowned twenty people and left hundreds of families homeless. Illinois suffered more serious material loss from storm and flood in this same period, the town of Beardstown bearing the brunt of the fury of the waters. All through September our Middle West States were visited with unseasonable rains and windstorms. Mazatlan in Mexico also experienced destructive inundations, while floods on the Yangtze River wiped out 3000 Chinese lives. Central Europe has had crops and homes and even villages washed away by almost unprecedented downpours.

The tornado has been no less active. A Paraguay tempest in September accounted for the loss of 500 lives. Near Vera Cruz a Mexican village was leveled by a hurricane. Typhoons have been exceptionally active in Chinese and Japanese waters. Louisiana, Ohio and Nebraska have experienced out-of-season cyclones. A stray twister even found its way into the heart of New York. In Europe hail and snow and gales and thunderstorms are still following one another with ceaseless inclemency.

Since the dawn of creation this little planet has been rocked and ravaged by forces beyond the intelligence of its highest inhabitants to regulate or control. Science may account for the phenomena by natural laws, but deep in the human heart the voice of the prophets of old still speaks to us and tells us, "The Lord hath His way in the whirlwind and the storm." "The earth shook and trembled, the foundations of the hills were shaken because He was wrath."

Isaiah warned Israel, "The Lord shall come with fire and with his chariots like a whirlwind, and the slain of the Lord shall be many." With greater vehemance He told the people, "Ye shall be visited of the Lord of Hosts with thunder and with earthquakes, with storm and tempest and the flames of the devouring fire." The Psalmist saw God in all the convulsions of nature. "He maketh the deep to boil like a pot." "The Lord on high is mightier than the noise of many waters." "Thou turnest man to destruction; again thou sayest, Return, ye children of men." "The voice of the Lord shaketh the wilderness."

Christ Himself told His disciples that all these things must come to pass: "For nation shall rise against nation and kingdom against kingdom; and there shall be famines and pestilences and earthquakes in divers places." Such passages sound ominous. Yet from the Bible we can gather hope when these unavoidable disasters overtake us no less than from the means devised by science to prepare us against their perils.

From the fire and storm that rocked Sinai came the Ten Commandments, the foundation of our present moral code. When the Lord spake to Job out of the whirlwind it was to tell him that his years of trial were over and his reward at hand. And who cannot see the blossom of hope in the story of Elijah as he wrestled with despair in the wilderness?

"And behold, the Lord passed by and a great and strong wind rent the mountains, but the Lord was not in the wind; and after the wind an earthquake, but the Lord was not in the earthquake; and after the earthquake a fire, but the Lord was not in the fire, and after the fire a still small voice."

Perhaps we hear too fearfully the roar and rush of tempests and the thunder of nature in rebellion and so our ears are closed to the still small voice that brought courage and consolation to Elijah.

THE NEW ORDER IN GERMANY

One may taxi all over Germany nowadays—over the roads I used to walk with knapsack and staff years ago—and fly from practically any large city to another, or mail a letter by air post, following a well-standardized daily schedule, but other evidences of post-war efficiency are slowly and surely killing the romance that once made Germany foremost in art and story. There is a large percentage of die-hards, too, among the older residents of the former empire, who are still heedlessly hindering the new generation of progressives in all walks and stations of life from establishing what will be undoubtedly one of the finest republics in history.

One of the most drastic changes I observed throughout Germany, from Wurzburg to Hamburg, is that no soldiers are on the streets now. The former ever-occurring tramp of platoons on every principal street is nowhere to be heard, and empty sentry boxes all over the former Kaiser's realm are mute witnesses of a new order of things that have come to stay—[Outlook.

COLLEGIATE — and what else?

Study of College Students Shows Men More Intelligent Than the Women; Girls Get Better Grades

By N. Bradford Trenham, M.A.,
Secretary of Commission to Study Costs of Education in California.

YOUTH, whether of the flaming or garden variety, is the most interesting and important thing in the world. It has always occupied the forefront of discussion, but never until the present age has there been an attempt to study it psychologically and really to try to understand the phenomena of being young. One seldom talks for long nowadays with thoughtful people without the subject of conversation turning to modern youth, especially to that of high-school and college students. They receive infinitely more attention than the League of Nations, or the Bolsheviks and compete with the Eighteenth Amendment as a popular subject of discourse.

Get Attention

It seems ever to have been thus and each generation has seemed more hopeless and frivolous than its progenitors. This is undoubtedly due to the short memories of the critics, but today there is more scientific thought applied to the problems of the proper education of the next generation than has ever before characterized civilized nations.

This is as it should be, but it is not enough for educators, publicists, leaders and parents to be interested in the future citizens of the country. They must know something about them before they take action. Heretofore opinions concerning young people have been formed mostly by the methods of hearsay, guesswork, gossip and poor memories. Today the scientific attitude so permeates American life that an opinion not backed up by research, conscientious study and a sincere effort to get at the truth of objective means bears little weight with educated people. We are not content to imagine; we demand to know. What people said generations ago has little weight with us today unless their pronouncements can be substantiated by evidence that is valid under present conditions.

This article is based on the experiences and data collected during a year's time as statistical assistant to the educational secretary of the University of Southern California. It is a sincere attempt to gather accurate information in regard to college freshmen that policies might be shaped on the basis of facts rather than hearsay, tradition and prejudice. Some seven hundred freshman students were studied and the most important facts revealed by the investigation are discussed in the following paragraphs.

Time Given to Studies

The conventional idea that students spend, on the average, twice as long on preparation as on recitation was shattered by the questionnaire returns when it was shown that the average number of hours devoted to the scholastic program per week was 37.7 for men and for women 39.2. Had they devoted twice as much time to preparing lessons as to reciting them they would have spent on the average forty-eight hours per week since nearly all of them were carrying sixteen units of work. The figures given above include recitation, preparation, laboratory and all work connected with studies themselves. The range of hours was from ten per week to [illegible]-four per week for men and [illegible] to eighty for women. Those students with the very low time allotment to studies are special students not carrying full courses.

Students and Self-support

Far from being a rich man's university we find that 59.2 per cent of the men students of U. S. C. in the freshman class are at least partially self-supporting and 244 of them work from two to sixty hours per week besides carrying their academic work. Sixty different kinds of work are engaged in by these young men who are getting an education besides supporting themselves. Of the working students many are doing a full day's labor outside the university and the average for all of them, including those who do only a few hours a week of self-support work, is twenty hours. More of them do manual labor, work in stores and service stations than other kinds of work. But there are a few who own their own businesses, one is a detective in the Los Angeles police department, one a street car conductor, one a mail carrier, one a [illegible] cutter, several are electricians, several auto mechanics, one a Japanese servant, several wait on table, some "jerk" soda, a few deliver papers. Apparently the student body of the university is drawn from every class of society. One sees on the U. S. C. campus every type of vehicle from the lowliest to the highest product of the great Detroit manufacturer! Besides the male students who work one finds that 15 per cent of the women students are partially or wholly self-supporting. There can be little doubt that many of these students are taking time from their studies to earn a living but one cannot help admiring those who work from necessity rather than be denied a university education. Furthermore, it is very doubtful if having to earn a living handicaps the really worth-while students to succeed in academic lines.

Boys Help With Home Duties

So domestic are the boys and men of Los Angeles that while 63.6 per cent of the women of this study assist with housework at home 57.8 per cent of the men do likewise. The men average 8.5 hours a week of home duties while the women average 9.7 hours of housework. If we eliminate the quarter of the students who do the most home work and the quarter who do the least we find that the middle 50 per cent of them do from four to ten hours a week in the case of the men and from five to twelve hours in the case of the women. Boys who wash dishes, cut lawns, beat carpets and generally help out around the house are by no means rarities among the most successful students in the university.

Men Have More Intelligence

For four years the Thorndike Examination for high school graduates has been administered to entering students at the University of Southern California. This psychological examination is widely used in all the better universities of the United States and the results have become so standardized that they form as good a basis for prognosticating college success as any other. The scores of the group of students herein considered show the average of the men students to be about 7 per cent better than the women students. Since the scores themselves mean very little to anyone but a trained psychological tester they are not appended. The idea prevalent in some quarters that the test is unfair to women students will not bear careful scrutiny. It is based on the experiences of the high school course and there is about as much in it that favors the female as the male student. Apparently men students make a better showing when confronted with a stiff examination requiring intelligence rather than memory than the women do.

Women Prove Better Student

One of the startling revelations of the study is that, while men demonstrate that they have better mental equipment than the women students they do not make as much use of it for the marks received by the women students the first semester in college are far superior to those achieved by the men students. The women make about 25 per cent better grades than the men students do and they tend to be more consistent than the men do. The very best and the very worst grades are received by men, showing that we can expect most of the genius to be masculine as well as most of the dumbness. The women tend to cluster about the averages but they manage to maintain a better group average than the men. There have been many theories advanced to explain this seeming inconsistency between accomplishment and intelligence but none is satisfactory by itself. The discrepancy may be due to the fact that women are more industrious and make better use of their lesser mental powers, it may be due to the amount of time the men have to work to support themselves, or it may be due to the fact that professors favor women students and have not as accurate methods of measuring accomplishment as have the psychological testers for measuring intelligence. The contention that, while intelligence may be the most important factor in success, it is not the only factor is amply borne out.

Athletics Are Not Overdone

Far from substantiating the prevalent idea that college students do nothing but play the study shows that only a few of the students are getting anything like enough athletic activity. Of the 412 men only 176 participate in any kind of organized athletic activity and only sixty-seven of the 261 women find time for organized sport. Of the 176 men half spend more than 5.5 hours a week on sport and half spend less hours. The median woman of the group of sixty-seven spends three hours a week. At Oxford and Cambridge students spend every afternoon except Sunday in some kind of sport. Special interests such as drawing, debating, music, dramatics, journalism, etc., are included in the weekly program of 58.3 per cent of the men and 76.2 per cent of the women. The average time spent by those who have these interests is about five and one-half hours per week. Despite academic work, self-support, sleep and other distractions 93.4 per cent of the men and 96.6 of the women students find time during the week for some sort of amusement. The average is about five hours per week for the men and about seven hours for the women. The amusements consist largely of movies, dancing, parties, card playing, visiting and motoring.

Women Students Great "Joiners"

About 60 per cent of the men students studied belong to some sort of social fraternity while about 65.5 per cent of the women have fraternal connections. Each sex averages something under five hours per week devoted to these activities. Very large numbers of the men students are members of De Molay and those who have reached their majority frequently have lodge memberships to occupy their time as well as the college fraternities.

Religion Plays Part

Before making this study the writer would have been astonished to hear that 51.7 per cent of the men students and 59.4 per cent of the women students were regular church-goers but the facts seem to bear it out that more than half the students keep up their church connections in college. Of course every student attends the compulsory Wednesday chapel, but over 50 per cent also attend some sort of Sunday service. The men average about two and a half hours a week and the women a little under three hours. Ten per cent of the students spend over five hours a week on religion, mostly in such organizations as the Epworth League, B. Y. P. U., Christian Endeavor, League of the Sacred Heart, the Junior Jewish Societies, etc. The modern college student is by no means adverse to religion, but he asks to have it served a little more sympathetically, tolerantly, intelligently than his ancestors did.

Students Prove to Be Healthy

Every freshman student at the University of Southern California receives a thorough physical examination by the Department of Physical Education. There is practically no difference in the health of the two sexes as revealed by the study in that 92.9 per cent of the men students claimed good health and 92.3 per cent of the women were likewise healthy. Less than 8 per cent of the students claimed to be in only fair or poor health. But although the students are generally in good health, they are far from being in perfect physical condition. Physical defects were found in 37.5 per cent of the men of this group and in 37.1 per cent of the women. This is probably no worse than in the population at large but reveals the need of corrective physical exercises on the part of about a third of the students. The women students show more concern for their physical conditions, however, than do the men students for only 75.3 per cent of the men had taken steps to correct their defects after three months, while 91.7 per cent of the women had taken corrective steps. The percentages of students with physical defects appears high because all defects from being over or underweight to such serious defects as loss of limbs or poor eyesight were counted.

Students Sleep Eight Hours

The middle 50 per cent of the students sleep from 7.30 hours per night to 8.25 hours per night. This shows that the majority of the students do not deviate far from the conventional amount of sleep generally believed necessary for good health. However, there are both men and women students who receive but five hours sleep per night, and 8.4 per cent of the men receive less than seven hours per night. The case of a Filipino student is a case in point. One little brown-skinned brother, intent on securing an American education, works as a bell boy forty-eight hours a week in one of the Hollywood hotels, sleeps five hours a night, and still finds time to take an active part in the Filipino Christian Mission Church activities. Such assiduity might be at least in part emulated by some of our native-born students who frequently have more money than ambition.

Bring Outside Experiences

About twice a year cartoonists and humorists break out in a rash of pseudo-humor and draw or write about college students as though they were all callow youths and shy little maidens. The majority of the students do come to college directly from high school, but in the group here studied 38.1 per cent of the men had been out of school for at least a semester before coming to college. Some of the men had been out of high school for eight or ten years and large numbers for three or more years. In the case of the freshman women only 23 per cent had been out of high school for a semester or more but some of them, two in fact, had been out of school for twenty-two and ten years respectively. These are exceptional cases but they tend to show that people are continuing in college to a greater extent than they used to. Because a person has passed thirty years of age and has been unable to secure a college education because of financial difficulties does not mean that he must give up all hope of ever securing more education. There are students from 15 to 75 in college and the 30-year-old freshman is not such a rarity as one might expect.

Main Factors for Success

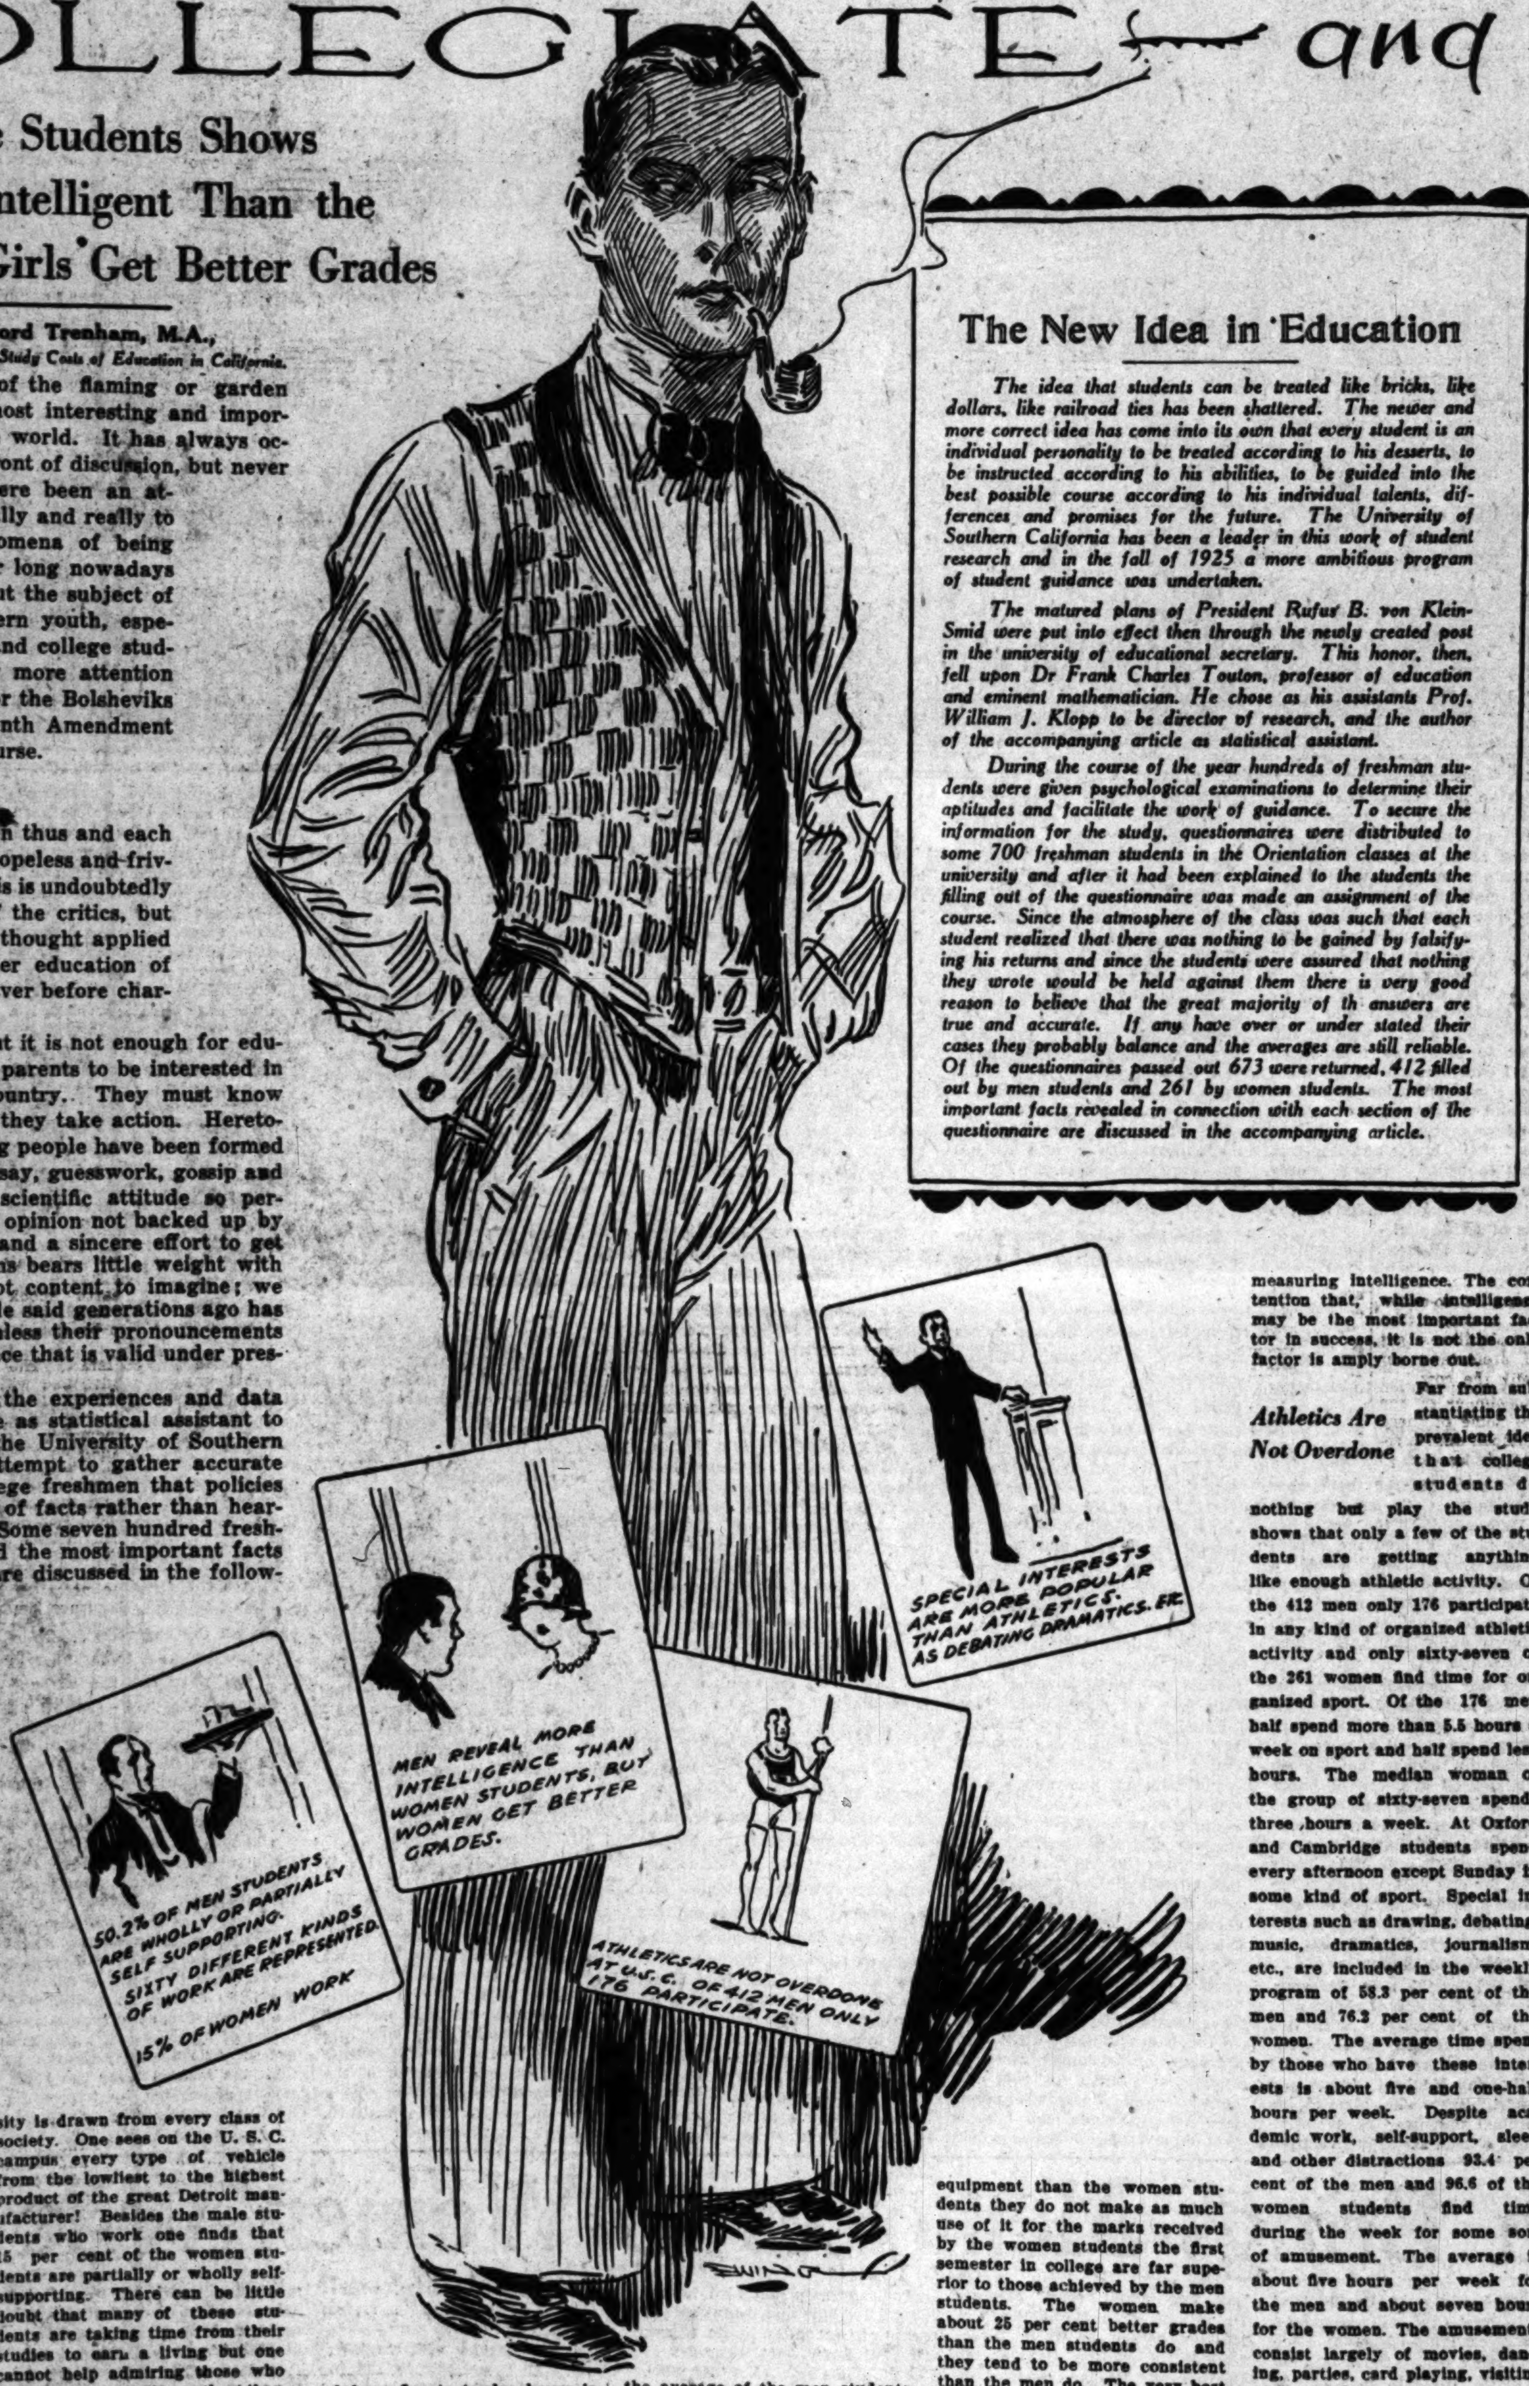
Correlations tables were drawn up in this study to determine what, if any, was the relation between intelligence as revealed by the entrance psychological tests and first-semester scholarship. The formulae used are rather difficult to understand and no explanation will be attempted here. However, it is interesting to note that there is a higher degree of correlation between intelligence and first-semester accomplishment in the case of men than in the case of women. Other correlation tables showing the relationship between time devoted to academic work and first-semester scholarship revealed a higher degree of correlation for women than for men. In other words men make grades the first semester more in proportion to their intelligence than women do, but women make grades the first semester more in proportion to the amount of time they devote to their work than men do. This would seem to indicate that men are not as dependent on hard work to get through college as women are but depend more on native intelligence. Incidentally it was pointed out above that the women surpass the men in scholarship although they do not come as well prepared to do college work as the men do. Another correlation chart was prepared to show the relationship for men between having to spend time on self-support and spending time on academic preparation. The results showed that there is no appreciable danger of self-supporting students neglecting their academic work. Those students who have to work seem, some way or another, endowed with sufficient intelligence and strength to do both. Apparently the loafing in college is done by those who "toil not neither do they spin."

Reactions to College

The last section of the questionnaire allowed the students to make any comments they wanted to on other factors influencing their scholastic record. Many and various were the answers and the material collected will be of use to the guidance department during this and succeeding years to show the workings of the minds of first-year students, their problems, fears, hopes and ambitions. There follow a few comments made by the freshman students in answer to the question, "Is your scholastive record influenced by other factors than those mentioned above? . . . If so, what?" "Speech impediment—climatic change." "Trouble with eyes." "I find great difficulty in concentrating" "One parent dependent upon me." "I am helped by associations formed especially at my fraternity." "Time consumed by going to and from college." "At times I have financial worries." "Procrastination" . . . and so on showing that all of these hundreds of students have their problems, small some of them may be, but to them they are at times mountainous and it is one of the greatest remunerations of the adviser and counsellor that he can help to straighten out these tangles and help each one of these students to achieve in proportion to his abilities.

New Day in Education

The day of mass production in education are rapidly drawing to a close. Educators have seen the light that students are individuals, that no two of them are alike, and that every one of them needs special treatment. The intimate contacts existing between tutor and pupil in such universities as Oxford and Cambridge must, in some manner, be established with us, lest we lose an undue proportion of the latent ability that is somewhere to be found in every student according to his intelligence and character.



50.2% OF MEN STUDENTS ARE WHOLLY OR PARTIALLY SELF SUPPORTING.
SIXTY DIFFERENT KINDS OF WORK ARE REPRESENTED.
15% OF WOMEN WORK
MEN REVEAL MORE INTELLIGENCE THAN WOMEN STUDENTS, BUT WOMEN GET BETTER GRADES.
SPECIAL INTERESTS ARE MORE POPULAR THAN ATHLETICS. AS DEBATING DRAMATICS. ETC.
ATHLETICS ARE NOT OVERDONE AT U.S.C. OF 412 MEN ONLY 176 PARTICIPATE.

The New Idea in Education

The idea that students can be treated like bricks, like dollars, like railroad ties has been shattered. The newer and more correct idea has come into its own that every student is an individual personality to be treated according to his desserts, to be instructed according to his abilities, to be guided into the best possible course according to his individual talents, differences and promises for the future. The University of Southern California has been a leader in this work of student research and in the fall of 1925 a more ambitious program of student guidance was undertaken.

The matured plans of President Rufus B. von KleinSmid were put into effect then through the newly created post in the university of educational secretary. This honor, then, fell upon Dr Frank Charles Touton, professor of education and eminent mathematician. He chose as his assistants Prof. William J. Klopp to be director of research, and the author of the accompanying article as statistical assistant.

During the course of the year hundreds of freshman students were given psychological examinations to determine their aptitudes and facilitate the work of guidance. To secure the information for the study, questionnaires were distributed to some 700 freshman students in the Orientation classes at the university and after it had been explained to the students the filling out of the questionnaire was made an assignment of the course. Since the atmosphere of the class was such that each student realized that there was nothing to be gained by falsifying his returns and since the students were assured that nothing they wrote would be held against them there is very good reason to believe that the great majority of th answers are true and accurate. If any have over or under stated their cases they probably balance and the averages are still reliable. Of the questionnaires passed out 673 were returned, 412 filled out by men students and 261 by women students. The most important facts revealed in connection with each section of the questionnaire are discussed in the accompanying article.

California's First Annexation Didn't "Take" Very Well

Comic Opera Warfare Staged at Los Angeles Becomes Grand Fete

By George W. Kirkman

AMONG other unique distinctions that California can boast of is that of having been annexed to the United States not merely once, but twice—first in 1842, and then in 1846 "for keeps." Also, she can claim the shortest annexation on record—one lasting for only a day—but even that was quite long enough to raise a large and tumultuous commotion all over the globe, and incidentally make the name of Los Angeles heard clear around the world, for the first time in the history of our city.

All Europe was appalled, Mexico flew into fits of rage, the British Bulldog bared his teeth in wrath, the whole United States went off into fits of laughter, but Los Angeles laughed loudest and longest of all, at the amusing opera bouffe proceedings of this comical coup d'etat, that began here with Gov. Micheltorena's cholo soldiers frantically throwing up intrenchments around Los Angeles, and finally culminated in a perfectly gorgeous manner, with grand festivities and stately ceremonies that dramatically closed this strange historical episode in a blaze of glory, gold lace, waving plumes, and the alluring flash of beauty's eyes, that illumined that year of 1842, in our colorful city.

Rich Prize

Although this first annexation of California did not "take"—though it showed that the patient (like Barkis) was quite willin' and the entente cordial was outwardly established again, yet behind this extraordinary event there was more than met the outward eye. Behind the shifting scenes of war and peace, one sensed the mighty workings of vast hidden forces, of dark intrigues, and the sinister plans of great world-powers, maneuvering for position, and only awaiting an opportunity to seize upon the richest prize of the whole Pacific—the defenseless, unarmed Mexican Province of California.

Three great powers had fixed their longing eyes upon that beauteous, highly desirable, and much-sought-after lady called California; and even bold Texas, the Lone Star State, then an independent nation, made sheep's eyes at her, and introduced a bill into the Texan Congress extending its boundaries so as to corral that coy and fair Spanish-American senorita within its ardent midst. France's minions had recently come hither several times, to give her the once over, much as one would a piece of property that he was thinking of acquiring. (British intentions were well known, and recently the Hudson's Bay Company had established a post in California—a commercial step that startled Europe and aroused the suspicions of the United States.

Four Nations

Four nations were thus seeking to kidnap California, more or less clandestinely, from a fifth nation, Mexico, whose gay tricolor still waved over it; but the advent of the Hudson's Bay advance-agent of Great Britian had greatly alarmed the Americans resident in our State, who were intriguing like all other foreigners here, to gain this desirable region for our country; and so they asked President Tyler for adequate naval protection. Tyler and his Secretary of State, grand old Daniel Webster, acceded to this request, and promptly increased the strength of our Pacific Squadron, sending out as its commander, Commodore Thomas Catesby Jones, a real hero if America ever boasted of one, although our California histories have never yet awarded him his rightful need of praise, for his patriotic and self-sacrificing devotion to our country, in his attempted annexation of California.

Jones arrived at Callao, Peru, aboard the U. S. Frigate United States, and found there a much superior British squadron, and a French fleet almost equal to both British and American squadrons. France's intentions were suspected, Britain's also—though more cleverly camouflaged—and Jones eyed them both belligerently. Affairs with Britain, due to recent occurences, and the Oregon Question, were still at high tension, and Jones probably had orders to see that the British squadron did not seize California. He was in the confidence of the administration, and knew that Texas was certainly going to be annexed to the United States; that this step would surely lead to war with Mexico; and he was expected to instantly annex California, on the outbreak of hostilities with Mexico.

French Were Ahead

The first thing that Jones discovered, on arriving at Callao in May, 1842, was that in March a large French fleet had sailed from Valparaiso, for an unknown destination, which he thought might have been California. Had I been on this station, I might have considered it my duty to follow this expedition, and propound certain interrogatories to the French commander, touching upon the object of so formidable an expedition, fitted out with so much secrecy as to have eluded the observation of even Great Britain, her ever-watchful rival," Jones reported, in a letter to the Secretary of the Navy, asking for news and further orders as to what to do in certain eventualities. One cannot but long to clap on the shoulder, approvingly, this gallant gamecock of our navy, who would thus coolly swagger up to the shotted guns of a Frenchman double or triple his own strength, and call on him to stand and deliver—an explanation as to what his intentions might be as to California.

If any gobbling up of that prize-package was to be done, the bold commodore intended that Uncle Sam should be the boss turkey-gobbler on the job. And so he was up in arms at once, on September 3, when, on returning to Callao from a cruise, he saw the British rear-admiral, Thomas, suddenly sail from Callao with three British warships, without saying whither he was bound, under the sealed orders that he had just received from England. Jones had also just obtained a Boston newspaper of April 19, 1842, saying that Mexico had ceded California to Britain for $7,000,000. Also, he received from the Consul at Mazatlan, Mex., a letter, saying that war between the United States and Mexico was imminent.

Into Action

The commodore at once consulted with our charge d'affaires and the high officers of his squadron, and decided to sail instantly for California and forestall the British squadron, if the latter intended to try and annex California. He, therefore, at once sailed for California, a prey to painful doubts, but determined to do his duty, regardless of the fact that he was still without the written orders he had asked Washington for, to cover such an eventuality.

The gallant commodore, old sea-dog as he was, knew that if he made a mistake, Washington would make him the scape-goat; knew that "if so, I may forfeit my commission and all that I have acquired in seven and thirty years' devotion to my country's service," he wrote. "Terrible as such a consequence would be to me and my family, it was not sufficient to deter me from doing what I considered to be my duty, when a concatenation of unforeseen and unforeseeable events required prompt and energetic actions for the honor and interests of my country." Brave words from a patriotic American, and worthy of being inscribed on the walls of Annapolis!

One can picture this gallant seaman, seated in his cabin, gazing fondly at the old-fashioned daguerreotypes of his beloved family with moist eye, but putting them aside, to buckle on his sword, and tread the stern deck of duty and devotion to his country.

Annexed

Swiftly he sailed across the tossing seas, entered the harbor of Monterey, Cal., on October 20, 1842, obtained the surrender of the place, hoisted the American flag over it and issued a proclamation annexing California to the United States, as he did not dare to wait, lest the British squadron enter the harbor and forestall him.

Next day however, finding papers and documents here that showed that Mexico and the United States were still at peace, he restored the town to the Mexican officials, fired a salute of honor to the Mexican flag, and wrote to the new Governor, offering apologies and explaining matters. This annexation, therefore, only lasted for one day, but its repercussion created a world-wide sensation, as it showed the world just what Uncle Sam's intentions were regarding California.

Meanwhile, the new Governor, the former Mexican Micheltorena, had left Los Angeles with his "Faithful Battalion" of cholo soldiers, whom he had recruited mostly in Mexican jails, and brought hither with him, to his own final undoing—for eventually they caused his expulsion from California. These ragged vagabonds of cholos had perpetrated all sorts of robberies and crimes in Los Angeles, even to the extent of carrying off, one night, a chest of valuables that they had been set to guard, during a large ball! Later on, at Monterey, not a clothesline was safe from them; they even fished over walls for chickens with corn-baited hooks and lines, during the daytime; and once when Mrs. Ord's cook had prepared dinner and stepped out of the kitchen for a moment, to cool her heated brow, these picturesque picaroons slipped in, stole the whole dinner bodily, and made off with it, without being detected in the act!

On His Way

Micheltorena had left Los Angeles, two days before, on his way to Monterey when he received news that Jones had seized Monterey, hoisted the United States flag there, and formally annexed California to our country. Appalled at thus losing his job as Governor before he could really get down to governing, he halted in perplexity, but presently took to issuing blood-and-thunder manifestoes in dispatches, in one of which he wished he were "a thunderbolt to fly and annihilate the invaders, but one hundred and ten leagues intervened between me and them, and my forces are all infantry"—and whoever heard of foot-soldiers thunderbolting? How fortunate for the American marines ashore at Monterey that they were not cavalrymen!

Fired with ardor, this "thunderbolt of Mars" next day thunderbolted twenty miles—to the rear—and took up a strategic position at San Fernando, emitting manifestoes at every mile, breathing war, garlic, and patriotic fire; and announcing his plan to establish himself at Los Angeles, concentrating all available forces there, and driving all cattle inland, so that the hideous invader would perish of starvation. "Nor shall I leave Los Angeles unprotected," he thundered—"Where I have arms and ammunition, which in the hands of the valiant Californians, united under my command, will serve to rout the enemy." And he demanded fiercely—"Are there Mexican bosoms that do not feel themselves boil with valor, at seeing this effort to rob us of our territory?" and me of my job, he might have added.

Whilst Mexican bosoms were boiling, per order, he ordered San Diego to send all of its cannon to "Angeles"—the Angelenos never forgave him for that—calling our proud if pequeno pueblo simply "Angeles," in all these blood-curdling bulletins from the front of war! Also, he ordered Santa Barbara to send all of its forces, arms and artillery to "Angeles," and invited its people to flock hither, to aid him "in a war so holy, so just, and so national;" urging one and all to rally round the flag, and defend "that dear independence, and all the rights of society and man"—quite a large contract, that!

Inspired by patriotic enthusiasm, he and his "Ever-Faithful Battalion" advanced rapidly upon the perfidious foe—backward, to Los Angeles—"marching two hours with my soul wrapped in ecstasies at the flattering prospects of victory"—possibly over the chicken-coops of Los Angeles, that trembled to its last pinfeather at the sight of his cholos, those classic thieves of the Erminie brand. At first, Los Angeles boiled, as per order, but when it read these bombastic dispatches, the Angelenos fairly bubbled over with delighted laughter, loaded their escapotas and camped in their chicken-yards, or else went out and watched the cholo soldiers frantically throwing up those intrenchments around our city, whose traces were, even in 1880, still to be seen in some places.

Grandstand Play

Los Angeles knew that Micheltorena had received, the day before, whilst still at San Fernando, Jones's letter saying that he had restored Monterey to Mexico, and offering suitable apologies and reparations. So everyone enjoyed these fiery flights of fancy of the Mexican Governor, who was making the champion grandstand play of his political life. The Governor wrote to Jones and asked him to come to Los Angeles for a conference, to which Jones assented; although it was some time before he was able to come down here, due to his investigation of the Graham exiles affair at Monterey.

Finally Commodore Jones sailed southward, sending on word from Santa Barbara to the Governor, and arriving on January 17, 1843, at San Pedro harbor, where he received an invitation from Micheltorena to visit him at Los Angeles. Next morning, the Commodore and six of his officers landed at San Pedro, and were entertained at a grand champagne dinner, prepared by Micheltorena's cooks, and served in Don Abel Stearns's big warehouse, then the only building in San Pedro.

In Real Style

At two p. m., the reception committee proudly brought forward the only carriage then in California—an "oak-ark-barouche," as one of our navy officers called it—just imported into California by the Governor, who unfortunately had forgotten to bring along the harness for his one-horse contraption. As there was then no harness in California, two California vacqueros lashed the shafts of the vehicle to their saddles, another horse with its rider was backed into the shafts and attached to this quaint equippage by ropes; and Jones, his officers, and Maj. Medina duly embarked in this three-horse power Noah's Ark, and the rest of the party climbing aboard horses, the gay cavalcade dashed madly on to Los Angeles, attended by an escort of twenty-five lancers from the garrison of Santa Barbara.

After a dusty voyage, Jones and his officers disembarked from the ark and their steeds, at the residence of that eminent local American, Don Abel Stearns, whose beautiful wife, Dona Arcadia Bandini Stearns assisted him in welcoming this distinguished party.

All Happy

Soon they were paid a formal call in state by the Governor, attended by fifteen or twenty Mexican staff officers blazing with gold lace and crowned with tall plumes. Courtesies and compliments were exchanged, our officers and theirs were mutually pleased with the polite attentions and gentlemanly behavior of the others, and the reception was a grand success, in the enthusiastic opinion of the Angelenos.

Next day, at noon, a conference was held at the Governor's headquarters here, drinks and refreshments were served, and stately and eloquent toasts were drunk to each other's countries. These fuss-and-feathers preliminaries over, the conference got down to brass tacks, and the thrifty Micheltorena, who saw a chance to try and get something for nothing, due to Jones's contretemps, presented a "convention," saying that everything would be all square, and the entente cordiale restored 100 per cent, if he was given: First, 1500 infantry uniforms, to replace those worn out by his cholos in their mad dash, backwards, to Los Angeles; second, a complete set of band instruments, to replace those worn out in this terrible campaign; and third, $15,000 to cover the expenses, presumably of those who had boiled over, blown up, or been otherwise damaged in this "war."

Jones was considerably irritated by these grotesque demands, especially as the Governor had only some 200 soldiers, all cholos, none of whom probably ever owned more than half of a uniform in all his depredacious chocolate-colored life; but he managed to smile pleasantly, and promised to let him know about the matter on the morrow.

Grand Ball

That night, the Governor gave a grand ball in his honor, attended by all the upper crust of Los Angeles, despite a torrential rain that fell upon the soldiers and civilians. As the Californian horses were not used to harness, and the barouche's triad team went on a strike, and refused to work in the rain, the Governor had his ever-faithful cholos haul the commodore and the ladies to the ball-room in his barouche, while the rest of the officers and the hoi polloi ran the gauntlet of the raindrops.

To prove to the American officers how patriotic the Los Angeles ladies were, the Governor had asked these fair ones to come to the baile dressed in white, with a large scarf made of the national colors of Mexico—red, white, and green. The ladies protested in feminine fashion over the short notice given, but by impressing all idle female hands on the job, they managed to get duly decorated in tricolor style; and the ensuing festivities were [illegible] enjoyed by one and all.

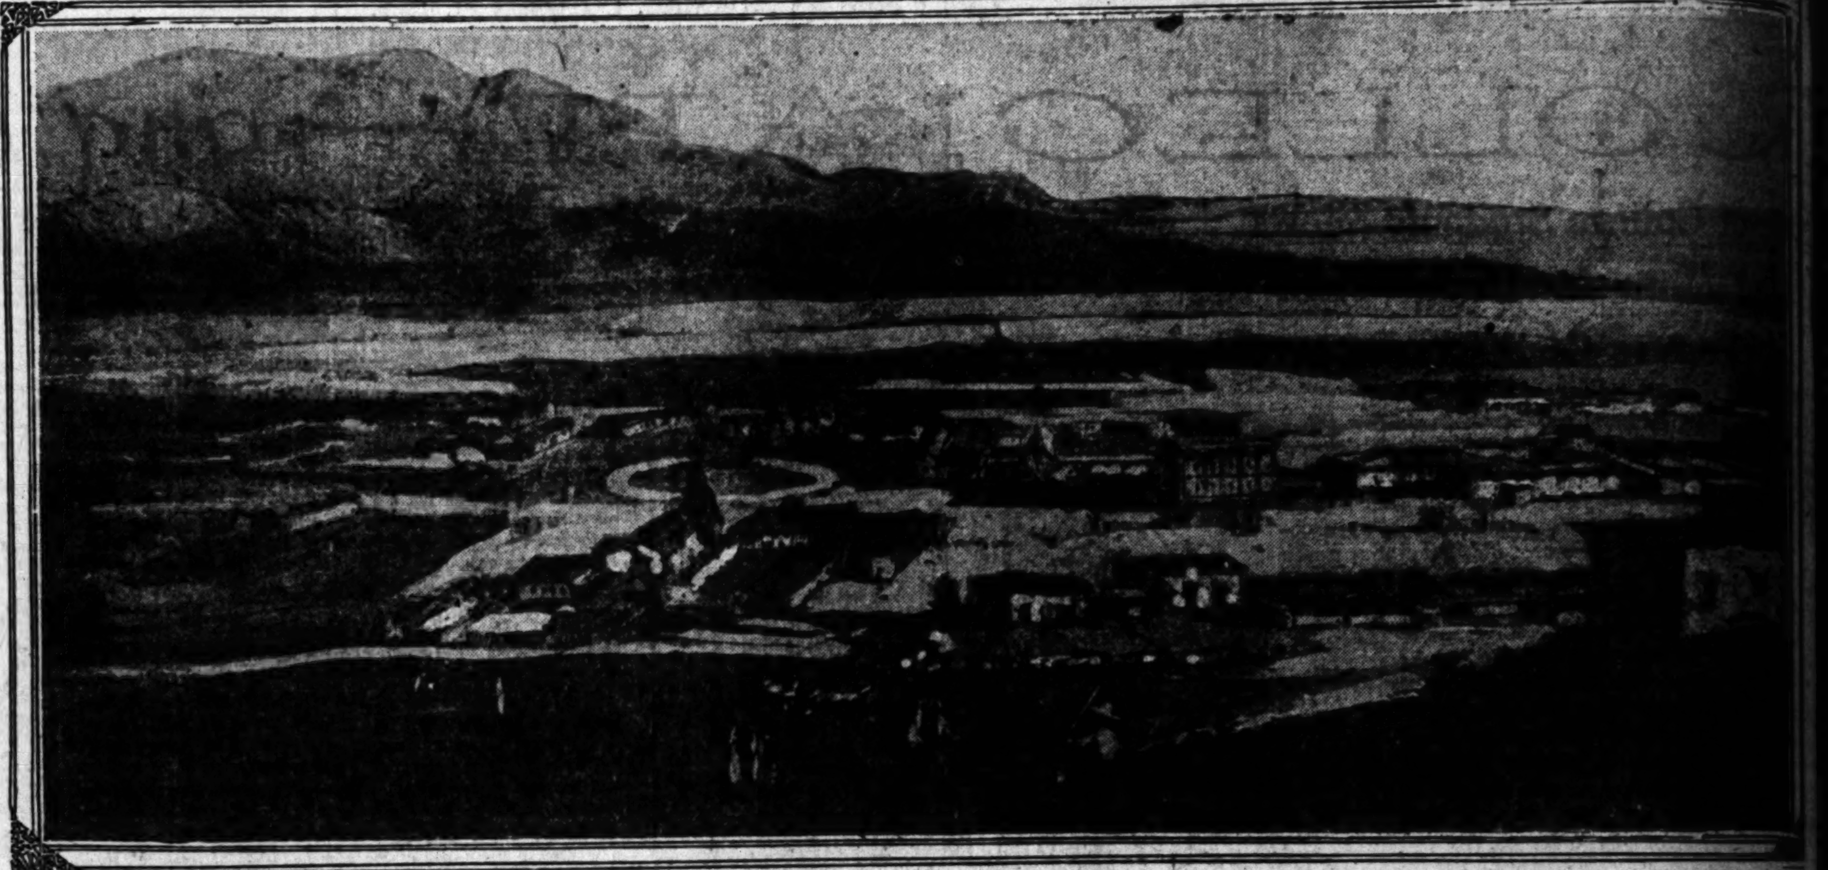
LOS ANGELES IN THE DAYS WHEN IT WAS PREPARING TO STAND SIEGE

There were very few indications in 1842, when Gov. Micheltorena feared an attack by the Americans under Admiral Jones, that the city of Los Angeles would attain the size and importance it now has. The "metropolitan district" as it existed at that time was little more than the Plaza with a few houses scattered here and there, but the local population was just as scared as though the city contained the millions of dollars worth of property that it now has. This reproduction of an old-time print shows the city a decade or more after the "invasion" of Admiral Jones.



Armistice Month Brings Memories to Women Who Served

By Grace D. Walker

NOVEMBER—Armistice month—fraught with special celebrations. Reunions, recollections and reminiscences—brings to mind not only the activities of the men who fought and won the Great War, but also the women who served and many of whom are now residents of Los Angeles. And, properly enough, these women, as the Los Angeles unit of the Overseas League, will celebrate tomorrow night with a combined French-and-Canteen-Dinner-Reception in Patriotic Hall at Eighteenth and Figueroa streets, new headquarters for the local W.O.S.L., Legion posts, auxiliaries and other patriotic groups.

As a memorial to the American men and women who gave their lives in the World War, and a tribute to veterans of all wars, Los Angeles county has erected and dedicated this beautiful building—Patriotic Hall—where members of veteran organizations and their friends may meet, play, plan and work for continued service.

A happy faculty of adaptibility was one of the prerequisites of feminine war service. The spacious and elegant new club quarters of the Women's Overseas Service League on the fourth floor of Patriotic Hall is the realization of the league's dream for a clubhouse since its organization six years ago. But during that time it "carried on" in peace-time service, since 1920 when the Los Angeles City Council urged and authorized it to establish, maintain and hostess the Soldiers' and Sailors' Club at 755 South Main street, where service and former service men of the Army and Navy find recreation facilities.

The Armistice Month Frolic of the local group of Overseas Women tomorrow night is its housewarming celebration. A reception from 6 to 7 o'clock will include an appropriate program with Miss Nanny Simmons, a W.O.S.L. member of the Radio World, doing black-and-white sketches. Miss Gladys Mary Smith, chairman of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Club, will accompany Miss Anna Timner, 'cellist. Sisters-in-arms from the Pasadena unit of the W.O.S.L. will join in the celebration with their Los Angeles comrades by presenting a suitable stunt, French cabaret style.

French and canteen costumes will be donned by girls who served in Army, Red Cross, and Y.M.C.A. canteen. In France, Belgium, England, and on Allied commissions. These will wait on a chow line composed of soldierettes who may have hailed from California, Tippecanoe, or Kalamazoo, but who now reside in Los Angeles and environs. Duplicating war-time service as the "regiment" consumes messkit hash, beans, doughnuts, coffee, and corned willie, former canteen women will hold sway in the commodious kitchen and banquet room of Patriotic Hall.

Heading the canteen contingent will be Mrs. Zorayda Lorimer McCulloch, who, although she now has two small sons, Masters David and Hugh McCulloch, will imagine herself as again Directrice of the Station Canteen at Chateauroux, France, where for eleven months she ladled out hot chocolate, hot soup, and her own particular brand of twinkling American smiles. Trained in Massachusetts as a school psychologist, practiced in Texas, enlisted from Colorado, her parental State, she finally selected the western coast as her home as the wife of Dr. David C. McCulloch of 727 North Las Palmas avenue.

"I wanted to go and fight," states Miss Katherine Blair Lake, of 4220 Clinton street, another feminine canteener of war days, "but that being impossible I served food to the soldiers, remembering what Napoleon said about an army marching on its stomach." Miss Lake gave eight months service with the American Red Cross in their station location at Marseilles, France, and later at Les Arc.

Serving in canteen work not only in France, but also in England, Scotland and later with the Army of Occupation on the Rhine, Mrs. Marion Wright Rice, of 5344 West Boulevard, Los Angeles, spent twenty-seven months in Europe during the turbulent period of the World War. Mrs. Rice enlisted with the Y.M.C.A. in New York City, where she was a music teacher in the public schools.

"I also played for the boys," said Mrs. Rice, "We sometimes carried our piano on a truck in order to reach the men quite near the front, and gave our concerts in the streets of little French villages, with the soldiers sitting on their helmets, attentively and appreciatively listening, but ready to leave for the trenches at a moment's notice.

"It was an unusual experience to do canteen work in Germany," she continued, "but the American Army of Ocupation which entered Coblentz in December, 1918, still needed nourishment when the khaki-clad Yanks guarded Old Glory floating triumphantly over Fortress Ehrenbreitstein, where the Rhine and Moselle rivers meet."

"Mobile" service with a rolling canteen at Tours, France, fell to the lot of Mrs. Margaret Connor, of 616 South St. Paul street, Los Angeles, who was organizer of the Brown County Illinois Red Cross Chapter, and an overseas member of the General Federation of Women's Clubs' Unit. "I must admit," states Mrs. Connor, who was later loaned to the Chinese division of the international Y.M.C.A. at Soissons, "that in spite of active and intense service with the rolling canteen in the Tours area and then in the Cannes leave area, I was guilty of several A.W.O.L. trips during my ten months 'over there' war experience."

Another local girl who will reenact her war-time canteen work as hostess at tomorrow evening's "Night in France" is Miss Celia E. Tucker, whose cradle county was Los Angeles, and who served at Base 35 before enlisting with "the greatest mother in the world," the American Red Cross, for overseas service. Miss Tucker, who lives at 1125 Westerly Terrace, broadcasted feminine smiles while she fed hungry Sammies at the A.R.C. canteen at Mars Sur Allier, France, for seven months of American participation in the World War.

Mrs. Lida F. Skinner, a local domestic science teacher before "going over," did a good deal of soldier feeding both at home and in France, being camp dietitian at Camp Kearney, and later at Brest, France, that port of entry so well remembered by many thousands of Uncle Sam's nephews. Mrs. Skinner, who lives at 333 South Benton Way, gave eighteen months' war service.

"Even though the work of a dietitian was particularly difficult I have long been grateful for the thrill of going over," states Mrs. Skinner. "At first mess officers, sergeants, and such traditionally 'hard-boiled' commandants of the kitchen police squad did not like having a woman [illegible] or under them [illegible] very diplomatic [illegible] them. Grati [illegible] and [illegible] ceries are [illegible] The work was [illegible] and the drudgery [illegible] For who really [illegible] duty? Civil War the were abandoned, and men found other fields. The Indians continued their warfare with more vigor, seeing that the pale face brethren were fighting each other. A coach crowded with passengers would be intercepted by a hand of savages who shot hot metal arrows, and then scalped the dying passengers. The Comanches and the Apaches practically ruled the country. It was in a state of war. The savages killed Confederates and Unionists with equal impartiality.

In addition, the Confederates were in the saddle in a part of New Mexico. They had raised the Confederate flag, and established a government at Mesilla, near Albuquerque. They had also taken possession of Tucson, Ariz., and raised the emblem of the Confederacy. Naturally, United States mail coaches were captured, and the property confiscated. That part of the route from El Paso to Los Angeles was also dangerous as there were Indians all along the route, and the government needed troops elsewhere. Besides, there was little or no travel, and that part of the route now became unprofitable. The loss was about $500,000. At the close of the Civil War the contracts were renewed and the several routes reestablished. The completion of the railroad in 1869 ended the old stage lines.

It is estimated that during the few years before the war and during the war, when the Indians were at their worst, about 2000 white men were killed on these southern routes by the red man. The number of station houses burned, and the number of horses captured and stolen was not estimated with any degree of accuracy. The Comanche Indians were the worst of all the horse stealers. It seemed to be an inherent trait—born in them. They were better trailers and more stealthy in their operations.

The drivers of these transcontinental mail and passenger stages were selected for their fitness for this dangerous and skillful work. They must be experienced, and agree not to be quarrelsome, drink nor gamble, as were required of the riders of the Pony Express line. They were real frontiersmen, quiet and unassuming, and not of the boisterous type of the Captain "Jacks" and "Hank" Monks who swaggered in saloons and bullied men who they knew would not fight.

About the time of the inauguration of the transcontinental mail stage routes, there were fifteen mail stage routes in California. These crossed the State in almost every direction, carrying the mail received from the East, and the local mail between points, and passengers who preferred a rickety four-horse buckboard stage to a horse. Each route had from four to twelve coaches, and from thirty-five to 150 horses, according to the distance and schedule of trips. Mules also were used, and they cost $400 or $500 a pair. These were preferred as some of the roads were rocky, and the mules would stand the rough usage longer.

In these short routes there was much danger, and some romance and tragedy. There was danger from the bandits that roamed through the State, singly or in bands, for these stages carried gold dust from the mining districts, and the passengers usually had belts of gold which they had received from the sale of cattle or horses, or intended for the purchase of stock or merchandise. Every one was armed, naturally, but the nine points were in the drop, or "hold up your hands."

Among these noted drivers of the early days was Jonathan Worth, whose route was from Los Angeles to San Bernardino, sixty miles. His best record was seven hours.

Two other drivers, equally daring, were "Curly Dan," and "Curly Jerry." Their other names were unknown. Unfortunately, they turned out to be robbers—in league with hold-up men.

A character known as Fred Amos quit driving and located in Los Angeles, believing that there was more money in holding up a stage than in driving it. He held up a buckboard with six passengers, but got only about $200. He was caught and brought before Judge King, who gave him ten years. Amos thought he would be more lucky at cards, and proposed to the Judge that they play one game of "seven-up," and thus decide whether it should be twenty years or nothing." The judge gravely decided that he knew little of that great American game, and that he would stand pat on the ten-year sentence.

There was some romance as well as tragedy in these "short lines." There were orders that the driver should not entrust the reins to any passenger, as confederates of bandits often selected an outside seat so as to get the drop on the driver. The order especially extended to women, as some of the pretended adventurous stamp desired to hold the reins so as to attract attention. These orders were violated in only one known instance, it is believed. George Smith, or "Smithy," drove the stage from Marysville to Stockton, and was weak on a character known as Lola Montes. She was a dancer, or entertainer, at Marysville, and occasionally took an outing with "Smithy," and held the reins. Finally, he was turned out to grass. Lola claimed to be a Cuban, but was half Mexican and half American. After dancing on the stage in New Orleans she went to Europe and there married a Count of Lensfield. She soon shipped him, and married a New Yorker named Hull, when they migrated to California.

But, these orders were violated in another instance, and herein is a romance: Charles Dudley Parkhurst, known as a "mysterious character," drove the stage from Oakland to San Jose. All that was known was that "he" was from Georgia. It was not etiquette in those days to ask many questions, and it was not the custom to answer many. This character was boyish in appearance, always spoke in a low, sad voice, but not talkative, and did not swear, drink or smoke. Hence, the title "mysterious."

After driving about two years Parkhurst quit the road and bought a small ranch near Santa Cruz, Here, the "mysterious" hermit lived alone—friendly to the few neighbors, but never confiding. The sad-faced youth loaned $200 to a widow whose ranch was mortgaged, and the gossips scented a marriage. When the "mysterious character" came to the end of life's road, it was learned that the supposed youth was a woman. She willed her small estate to charity and to the widow. Her body was buried in the cemetery at Santa Cruz, and on the plain wooden head was written "Parkhurst."

Her true name was never known—her secret was buried in the grave.

CALIFORNIA & SALT LAKE MAIL

THEN AND NOW.

There is a strange and romantic contrast to the lumbering stage coaches of the fifties and sixties which took weeks to bring mail and passengers across the Rockies and the planes of the Western Air Express which now take mail from Los Angeles to New York in two days. With the advent of the beacon lights soon to be installed between Los Angeles and Salt Lake it will be possible for mail to reach New York from Los Angeles with the loss of a single business day since the planes will leave here in the evening and arrive in New York on the morning of the second day.

OVERSEAS WOMEN HOLD CELEBRATION

Bourne played Calpurnia in the recent Hollywood Bowl production of "Julius Caesar," portrayed Lady Macbeth and Portia in Shakespearean productions, and is a former associate of Sothern and Marlowe and William Faversham on the New York stage.

At first a canteen worker with the Y.M.C.A. at Rolampont, France, then with the American Red Cross canteen at Vichy railroad station, Miss Bourne later became a nurses' aide at Hospital 1 at Neuilly, then at Military Hospital 5 at Auteuil. And when Paris furloughs became prevalent and soldiers on leave needed to be nourished she gave her help at a Red Cross canteen in the French capital.

"I was in Paris in June of 1918," remembers Miss Bourne, "during the twenty-nine air raids that threatened and damaged the city that month. I considered it a privilege to give up my career at its height to serve overseas, but when I came back my nerves were so shattered that I could not remember my lines when I attempted to re-enact my former parts. But after four years of discouragement following the war, I was able to re-establish myself. I do hope that my 'comeback' may help other 'veterans' both masculine and feminine, who have found the period of rehabilitation a difficult one."

Eight months' canteen service with the Fourth Division of the Army of Occupation at Coblentz will be recalled by Miss Marguerite Bryant, 2050 North Vine street, Hollywood, when she re-echoes her war service by canteening in the Armistice Month Frolic of the W.O.S.L. tomorrow evening at Patriotic Hall. Miss Bryant enlisted with the Y.M.C.A. at Chicago, and is now assistant to the dean of women at the University of Southern California.

Miss Maria Lopez de Lowther, of San Gabriel, Cal., a lecturer of Spanish in the University of California, Los Angeles, served in the American Red Cross as a food dispenser in canteen service, and in addition drove an ambulance, and also during her eighteen months overseas service, acted as a Nurses' Aide at Chateau d'Agnon.

Another wearer of the blue apron and white coif was Miss Katherine McCarthy, 4970 Fountain avenue, a former Chicago girl. Hundreds of doughboys with U.S. on their shoulders were told "the sandwich and coffee line forms here" by Miss McCarthy both at Issoudun and Le Mans during her thirteen months of war service, which she also will recall by serving canteen chow at tomorrow night's soiree.

Miss Margaret Gardner, now residing at 550 South Glassell street, Orange, Cal., was at the time of her enlistment with the American Red Cross deputy prosecuting attorney, city of Los Angeles. Crossing as a member of the Stanford University unit in canteen service, Miss Gardner, who saw two years of activity on European soil, became chief of the Bureau of Home Service, and later joined the A.R.C. commission to Poland during the Bolshevik invasion.

These are only a few of the one-hundred-and-one members of the local chapter of the Women's Overseas Service League who will gather tomorrow night to remember the Armistice. Canteen workers, hospital hut workers, nurses, nurses' aides, ambulance drivers, telephone operators, entertainers, doctors, bacteriologists, correspondents, secretaries, laboratory technicians, and other variations of war and welfare workers were detailed to tasks better done by American women than by any other group.

Those who are especially active in putting on the program commemorating Armistice Month include Miss Frances Eales, chairman; Miss Frederika Grosser, Mrs. Minnie Boston, Mrs. Nellie Parr-Maskey, Miss Harriett Hall, Miss Ann McLynch, Miss Katherine McCarthy, and Miss Florence Crosier, all active members of the Los Angeles W.O.S.L.

First California Mail Contract Brought Grief to the Man Who Had It

By A. M. Row

IN THE old wild days when Sacramento was nothing more than a long-drawn-out placer-mining camp, consisting of miles of tents and nondescript shacks, inhabited by the adventurous spirits who had come 'round the Horn, across the isthmus or over the desert, the vision lived that has made the Golden State great.

Isolation was as wearing on these virile men as was the labor in the placers. Simultaneously with the birth of Statehood sentiment, was born the demand for closer contact with the part of the world whence they came.

Among these men born to leadership was Maj. George Chorpenning, a stalwart Pennsylvanian. To his dauntless spirit must be ascribed the credit of successfully leading the movement, and for seven strenuous years keeping the new State's capital, San Francisco, Placerville and other camps which had sprung up like mushrooms, in touch with the populous East, through the only overlyand mail service to and from Salt Lake.

The service was by pack-train, beginning May 1, 1851, when the State of California was but six months old, and continuing to April 30, 1858 and up to that time it was the only mail contract in force in California except that by the Panama steamers.

During the winter of 1852 the only interruption occurred, though it did not interfere with the schedule. Owing to the impassable snows in the Sierras, the service was shifted south by steamer to San Pedro, and continued by way of Los Angeles and San Bernardino, to Salt Lake.

At the close of this seven years' service, Maj. Chorpenning was the successful bidder for the contract for an overland covered-coach service, in the name of the California and Salt Lake Mail, between Placerville and Salt Lake. This service began July 1, 1858, antedating the Butterfield overland service by nearly three months, which was put on the southern route September 15, 1858, but which, two years later, as will be shown, was shifted to the northern shorter route.

In 1849, among the horde of gold-seeking adventurers from east of the Mississippi was Maj. Chorpenning of Somerset, Pa., accompanied by Irvin Pile and Aaron Flick. They made the trip behind a span of miles from Kansas City, and over the old trail from Salt Lake, by way of Ogden and north of Great Salt Lake. Knowledge of this trail served Chorpenning in good stead when he undertook the mail contract, two years later.

He had a powerful friend in Washington, in the person of the Hon. Jeremiah S. Black, Attorney-General, who was likewise a native of the town of Somerset, Pa., and who did much for California in favoring the granting of service against strong opposition. For the first three years, Chorpenning received $14,000 a year and for the next four years, $12,500 a year. The figures are given for the sake of authenticity.

The hardships entailed by this pioneer undertaking were almost beyond human endurance. Maj. Chorpenning in person took charge of the first trip out of Sacramento, May 1, 1851, with a pack of thirteen mules and a half-dozen horses. At the end of the first day out, the men were compelled to dismount, divide the packs among the horses, and themselves break the way through the frozen drifts for the animals.

The Indians from the first resented this encroachment of civilization, murdered men and killed stock, but the first serious trouble with them came in the following November, when a man named Woodward, in charge of the mails, and all his men were murdered in the Carson Valley, the stock killed and the mails burned.

Makes a Lone Trip

At the opening of the second year, the depredations of the Indians were so great that the service was paralyzed for want men. Chorpenning had been East on business, and arriving at Salt Lake in May, 1852, he found that all his men refused to take the risk of making the trip to Sacramento. Starting June 11, 1852, he made the trip absolutely alone and arrived in Sacramento in fifteen days, without mishap, further than exchanging shots with Indians and swimming the Humboldt River. At Carson City he met the veteran scout Kit Carson, who declared he would not have undertaken the trip himself. At Sacramento he induced Irvin Pile, who was his brother-in-law, to give up mining and take charge of one end of the mail route.

The exciting story of the seven years covered by these two mail contracts, is punctuated with murders and fires, through which he lost thirty men, 300 head of stock and a number of mail stations with their reserve stock of supplies.

Chorpenning's contract for the covered-coach service, was for semimonthly trips between Placerville and Salt Lake City, and required that the coaches should be drawn by "four or six horses or mules." He immediately left for the East to secure equipment and enlist dependable men for the service. At Concord, N. H., he contracted for a large number of ornate coaches, swung on leather springs, and then went to his old home in Somerset, Pa., to enlist fellow-townsmen and trusted men of his acquaintance to help handle the undertaking.

On July 1, 1852, the first relay coach was started from Salt Lake with Irvin Pile on the box. The coach he drove that day is the same one in which Horace Greeley made his famous journey across the Sierras in 1859. The driver was Hank Monk, as famous since as a knight of the ribbons as Greeley then was as a journalist. Dr. Wake Briarly of Baltimore, was the other passenger in the coach with Greeley. All of these men are now dead, the last survivor being Irvin Pile, who died at his home in Somerset, Pa., June 23, 1924, aged ninety-three years, where two daughters and a son reside.

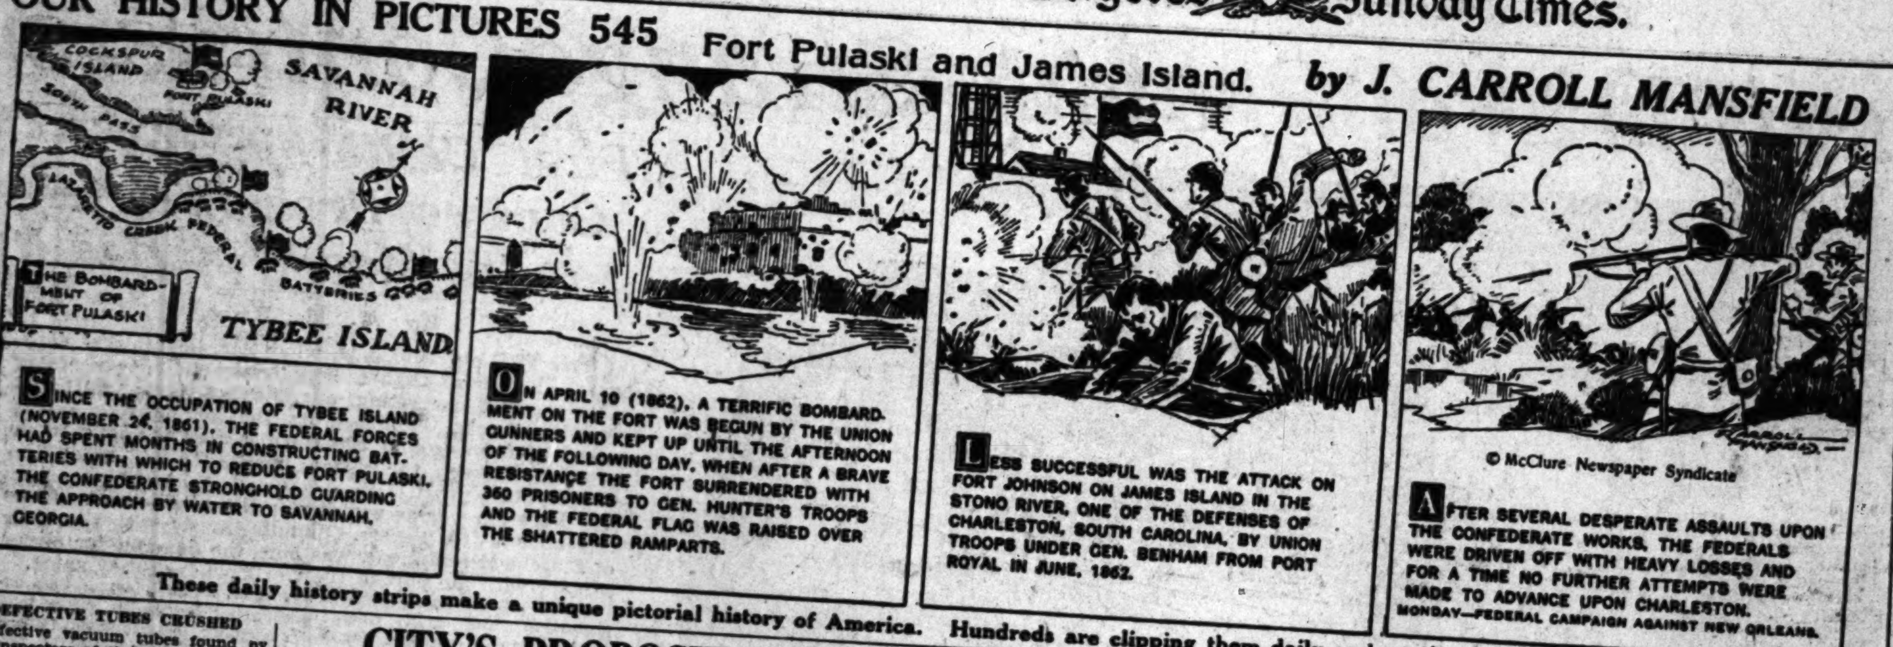
Trouble

The elaborateness of his equipment, the pony express innovation, and other extraordinary expenses, involved Maj. Chorpenning in disastrous debt. His compensation at first was but $34,400 a year, but in 1859 the department increased it to $130,000 a year, and he managed to execute two years of the contract. Depredations by the Indians increased alarmingly the latter part of 1859, and this together with trouble with his creditors influenced the Post-office Department to annul his contract, May 1, 1860, and transfer the Butterfield line to Chorpenning's route, at a saving of many hundreds of miles of travel and $130,000 a year. In 1862 Butterfield sold the line to Ben Holladay, and after four years of picturesque service the latter sold in 1866 to the Wells Fargo Express. Up to the period of the latter purchase every contractor, being successively reckoned as millionaires, lost every dollar they put into the enterprise.

After the close of the Civil War, Chorpenning pressed his suit against the government for damages inflicted by annulment of the contract, and in 1870, through the action of Postmaster-General Criswell and the passage of a joint resolution through Congress, he received a warrant on the United States Treasury for $443,000. Elated over this, he sat down to his dinner with the warrant lying in front of his plate, and the dramatic climax would have broken a weaker man. He crossed to the treasury and laid his warrant before the cashier.

"Payment stopped!" were the words that met his astounded ear, and when he fell ill and died many years later, he was still fighting to bring life into that dead warrant. His son Frank G. Chorpenning, a veteran of the Civil War, lives in Clearfield, Pa., and is heir to the troublous claim.

OUR HISTORY IN PICTURES 545 Fort Pulaski and James Island. by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD



SINCE THE OCCUPATION OF TYBEE ISLAND (NOVEMBER 24, 1861), THE FEDERAL FORCES HAD SPENT MONTHS IN CONSTRUCTING BATTERIES WITH WHICH TO REDUCE FORT PULASKI, THE CONFEDERATE STRONGHOLD GUARDING THE APPROACH BY WATER TO SAVANNAH, GEORGIA.

ON APRIL 10 (1862), A TERRIFIC BOMBARDMENT ON THE FORT WAS BEGUN BY THE UNION GUNNERS AND KEPT UP UNTIL THE AFTERNOON OF THE FOLLOWING DAY, WHEN AFTER A BRAVE RESISTANCE THE FORT SURRENDERED WITH 360 PRISONERS TO GEN. HUNTER'S TROOPS AND THE FEDERAL FLAG WAS RAISED OVER THE SHATTERED RAMPARTS.

LESS SUCCESSFUL WAS THE ATTACK ON FORT JOHNSON ON JAMES ISLAND IN THE STONO RIVER, ONE OF THE DEFENSES OF CHARLESTON, SOUTH CAROLINA, BY UNION TROOPS UNDER GEN. BENHAM FROM PORT ROYAL IN JUNE, 1862.

CITY'S PROPOSITIONS

"Times" Recommendations on Twenty-five Municipal Measures on Ballot

laying indefinitely the appointments in order to avoid making appointments of persons who have been certified as eligible. The Times recommends a "Yes" vote on this proposition.

17-A. DOG ORDINANCE

17-A. Opposed by the Chamber of Commerce, the American Animal Defense League and other organizations which work for the humane treatment of animals, this ordinance is an injustice to owners of dogs. It was adopted by the City Council and then was placed on the ballot as a referendum sponsored by the American Animal Defense League. The league has declared that the wording of the measure on the ballot is misleading in stating that the ordinance is one to prohibit the "running at large of dogs." The league in urging a "No" vote on this measure, has pointed out that there is, and has been, for years, an ordinance in effect prohibiting "the running at large of dogs upon any street, alley or other public places."

The ordinance on the ballot has many objectionable features. The chief one is that it gives authority to a dogcatcher or any other law-enforcing officer to go upon one's premises and take from it a dog that is declared to be not "under proper restraint." The league has declared that this is a violation of the constitutional rights of American citizens. Dogs, when not on the premises of the owner, by provisions of the ordinance, must be on leash. Persons violating the ordinance may be fined not exceeding $500 or sent to jail for six months or both fined and imprisoned. The Times strongly recommends a "No" vote on this proposition.

18-A. EMPLOYEES' PENSIONS

18-A. This is the city employees' pension plan, applying to all employees of the city government except policemen and firemen, who have their own pension system. The new charter provided that this all-city employees' pension plan must be prepared and submitted to the voters. The present plan was prepared by expert actuaries working under the direction of the Board of Pension Commissioners, and provides that the pension fund shall be built up by equal contributions from the city treasury or taxation and by contributions of the employees. These contributions by employees will average 7 per cent of their salaries. It may be said in support of the plan that is a scientific, business-like one. The annual city contributions to the fund would be, on a basis of last year's pay roll, $380,289 and for this year's pay roll would be nearly $400,000, with similar increases as the number of city employees increases. In support of the plan, it has been declared it will increase the efficiency of the city employees in that aged employees now in service can be retired and that the fear of old-age dependency can be removed from city employees. This, it has been said, will reduce the turnover in the city government and will retain efficient men in the city's service.

The Times is in thorough accord with the humanitarian principle underlying the pension plan. But there must be considered the interests of the taxpaying public which is constantly confronted with the increasing cost of the city government. Taxpayers and property owners are constantly denied public service to which they are entitled because of the lack of city funds. As the city increases in population the demands upon the city government for adequate police and fire protection, garbage collection, street cleaning and other service increases and the problem is to get money to pay sufficient men and equipment to do this work. If the city government had unlimited funds, the pension plan here proposed would be admirable, but such is not the case. Constant efforts are being made to increase city taxes and it will require the utmost vigilance on the part of the taxpaying public to prevent these tax increases. To add a constantly increasing pension fund to the demands upon the city treasury would be to provide just another large fixed charge which would grow from year to year. With the sole purpose, then, of preventing the addition of fixed charges to the city government that will bring no additional policemen, firemen and other needed employees and equipment to the municipal government, The Times recommends a "No" vote on this proposition.

19-A. FIRE PERSONNEL

19-A. This is an amendment to the fire-department personnel ordinance by which the rank of lieutenant is abolished, and the lieutenants will hold the rank of captains. No additional money will be required by this change, as the fire captains and lieutenants now receive the same salaries and perform the same duties. The Times recommends a "Yes" on this proposition.

20-A. PLAYGROUND BONDS

20-A. This is a $1,500,000 bond issue, proposed by the Board of Playground Commissioners for acquiring sites for neighborhood, district playgrounds and for constructing buildings and installing the necessary recreational equipment. When a city grows the necessity for these playgrounds increases as buildings encroach more and more upon the open air space remaining. A neighborhood playground provides a safe place for the children to play. The boy who must play in the streets soon gets into mischief, if he is not killed or injured by automobiles. Records of the courts show that where there are playgrounds juvenile crime is negligible. With the bond issue of two years ago the Playground Commission established more playgrounds, and in all of the districts where they are located the residents there are strong in their praise of these public recreation grounds. From other parts of the city where are no playgrounds the commission has received urgent appeals for them, and it is to meet these demands that the present bond issue is asked for. The Times, which has always indorsed the establishment of public playgrounds, recommends a "Yes" vote on this proposition.

21-A. RECEIVING HOSPITALS

21-A. The $250,000 bond issue proposed by this proposition will give to Los Angeles the new Receiving Hospital being built on Georgia street near Pico street and three branch receiving hospitals. One will be built in the Hollywood district, another for the Hollenbeck Heights - Lincoln Heights-Highland Park district, and the third in the Wilmington-Los Angeles Harbor district. From the bond issue, $75,000 will be required for the hospital part of the police station-receiving hospital building now under construction, and for equipping the hospital. The inadequate Receiving Hospital located in rented quarters at First and Hill streets has long been a disgrace to the city and it has been a source of wonder that Police Surgeon Goodrich and his able staff of surgeons and nurses have been able to give the city the splendid service they have with these inadequate facilities. The new Central Receiving Hospital will permanently end this condition. The branch hospitals have long been needed, as now ambulances must travel miles to answer calls for the relief of the injured and then travel many miles more through traffic-laden streets to the hospital at First and Hill streets. These three modern branch hospitals, which are to be built and equipped from this bond issue, will result in the saving of many lives, as the time lost in bringing the injured to First and Hill streets has often meant infection and death for an injured person. The new Receiving Hospital and the branch hospitals will function twenty-four hours a day for the protection of the life of every person in Los Angeles. The Times strongly recommends a "Yes" vote on this proposition.

22-A. CORRAL SITES

22-A. Under this $300,000 bond issue, the Board of Public Works will have control of the purchase of ten sites in various parts of the city for yards in which will be stored street-maintenance and repair equipment and other materials. To approve of this bond issue would be an indorsement of the management of this board, the majority members of which approved of Contractor Peter R. Gadd's $296,961 bill of extras for the West Adams storm drain over the protests of President Hugh J. McGuire of the board. There was also a great amount of "under-cover" maneuvering connected with the board's purchase of a site in the city of Vernon for the municipal incinerator for the city of Los Angeles. No urgent need for the purchase of these engineering-department yards has been shown. Until the board has been reorganized and made to function for the service of the taxpayers, The Times cannot indorse a proposal to hand the board $300,000 to spend as it pleases. The opportunities for rewarding friends of the "administration" in the purchase of these sites are apparent. The Times recommends a "No" vote on this proposition.

23-A. GARBAGE-LOADING SITE

23-A. This $200,000 bond issue for the Board of Public Works to be used in purchasing and equipping two sites as garbage-loading stations is open to the same objections as the preceding $300,000 bond issue. It is proposed to use the $200,000 to purchase and equip a site in the northwest section of the city and another in the southwest section of Los Angeles to be used at stations to which the garbage-collection trucks from these parts of Los Angeles can unload their trucks, and there the garbage can be placed on railroad cars and carried from the city by the company which has the contract for the disposal of the garbage. By the terms of these two bond issues (Propositions 22-A and 23-A) the Board of Public Works would have unregulated control of the expenditure of $500,000 for real estate, and until the board is reorganized and by its actions secured the confidence of the public, The Times cannot indorse measures of this kind. The Times therefore recommends a "No" vote on this proposition.

24-A. FIRE DEPARTMENT BONDS

24-A. This $2,500,000 fire bond issue has been requested by the Board of Fire Commissioners. Members of the City Council severely criticised the board when the request was filed in the last few hours before next Tuesday's ballot closed for the lack of definite information submitted as to the purposes for which the bond money was to be spent. The board's presentation of the matter to the Council showed an absence of careful estimates as to the exact fire protection needs of the city and the exact cost of each item in the vague budget presented. This budget stated that the $2,500,000 was to be expended as follows: For new building construction, $950,000; purchase of necessary real estate, $50,000; installation of fire hydrants, $500,000; new fire fighting apparatus, $680,000; new fire hose, $150,000; miscellaneous fire fighting equipment, $45,000; fire alarm extensions, $125,000.

When previous fire department bond issues were asked for the department submitted definite budgets showing the exact number of fire houses to be built and gave the names of the districts in which they were to be built, and other items were shown in detail. The budget of the present $2,500,000 issue contains no information of this kind. Another objectionable feature is that from the proceeds of the bond issue the commission proposes to purchase fire hose which will be worn out and junked in a few years while the taxpayers will be paying interest and principal on the bonds for forty years. Only capital, permanent investments should be made with bond funds. In every item of the $2,500,000 bond issue budget shows that it was hurriedly prepared and ill-considered. The Times is proud of the efficient Los Angeles Fire Department and recognizes that bond issues are needed from time to time to maintain the efficiency of the department and to keep pace with the growth of the city. But The Times believes that it will be better to wait until a definite program of necessities is formulated rather than to vote money on the general knowledge that it is likely to be needed for some purpose. The Times, therefore recommends a "No" vote on this proposition.

25-A. CITY INSURANCE

25-A. This is a "straw vote" proposition on the question of the city's discontinuing its policy of carrying fire insurance with companies on municipal property and instead, carrying its own insurance by setting aside in an insurance fund the amounts now paid as premiums on policies. In the last ten years, the city has paid more than $1,000,000 in premiums on property, exclusive of the water, power and harbor department properties, and the fire losses collected have been trivial. This record confirms the experience of other great corporations with numerous, scattered properties and which have found that it was much less expensive to carry their own insurance by means of a fund than to pay premiums on insurance policies. In the case of a owner of one, three or five buildings, experience has shown that the best form of protection for him is fire insurance policies, but where the properties are large in number and value, the insurance fund system has been found much less expensive with equal protection over a period of years. The Times, therefore, recommends a "Yes" vote on this proposition.

THE LANCER

ment somewhere else—and began to build walls of defense.

THE HELL OF CHILDHOOD

Don't often write about childhood. My own was too bitterly unhappy.

My school days were days of a tortured hell. I simply couldn't study. So I used to sit in the classroom—my hands wet with the perspiration of pure terror. I can remember how, as a child, I used to sit there and pray not to be called upon to recite. I used to say over and over again like an agonized litany: "God, please, please, don't let him call on me next."

THICK SKULLS

I don't know how it is now; but in those days, it had not penetrated the skulls of my schoolteachers that there are people who have to learn by implication—not by direct line.

Afterward I had an editor who understood this. If he told me in definite words that he wanted an editorial about France, neither of us ever got anywhere. But, if he shuffled papers around on his desk, answered the telephone unnecessarily, looked out of the window, jabbed pens into his office date book, I knew just what he meant. He meant that our relations with France are not to be laid out in straight lines. That there are matters which have to be adjusted from day to day; it is a pathway along which we have to feel our way cautiously.

THE USELESSNESS OF WORDS

There is nothing so indefinite as a definite man.

This is because words mean very little. There are no words that fit closely enough to any idea. Thoughts, on the other hand, are subtle things. There are better ways to deliver them than by words.

MUSIC AND LATIN

Schools have not, as yet, recognized the fact that many people learn also through emotion.

Some day music will have a great part in education. For instance, on a motion picture set, they even have appropriate music while "still pictures" are being taken. As a help to concentration, music is necessary to most people.

To come to some definite point, I know that music that fitted the cadence of the poetic meter would be an enormous help to the reading of the Latin of Virgil. "Arma Virumque cano" is almost music itself.

I'll bet a hat that music was running through Virgil's mind when he wrote it. And it will require the same music to release it.

CONGRESS AND LEGISLATURE

mittee on Naval Affairs, and secured an appropriation of $22,500,000 for California harbors. He has the interest of the Los Angeles Harbor and its development at heart. He believes the nation should maintain the fleet on the California coast.

Much of the credit for securing a favorable report on the Colorado River legislation from the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation, of which he is a member, has been accorded him by the committee chairman, Senator McNary. It was Senator Shortridge who brought the committee to the Southwest a year ago and showed them the situation. Senator Shortridge has promised his utmost endeavors to bring about a successful solution of the river problem.

All California is grateful to him for his efforts toward settling the community-tax question, success for which will mean hundreds of millions saved in taxes to Californians. He has been industrious in aiding the California mining industry. War veterans are particularly grateful to him, as he has consistently voted in their behalf.

Senator Shortridge is one of the leading figures at the California bar. He was born in the Midwest, but came to the Pacific Coast in his youth. He worked as a janitor in a school at Portland, Or., lighted the street lamps at San Jose, taught school, and studied the law at night. He lives at Menlo Park, is married, and has two sons, both Legionnaires.

Mr. Elliott lives in Los Angeles. For eight years he was Collector of Customs here. Before that time he was a newspaper man. He was a news writer for the Associated Press in Washington prior to his coming to Los Angeles. He is allied with William Gibbs McAdoo, and broke with the Al Smith wing of the party. In a hot fight he defeated Isadore Dockweiler for the Democratic nomination. Mr. Elliott has announced himself as a dry and another "Champion of Boulder Dam," and has recently written a letter to Senator Johnson appealing for aid, as Senator Johnson stumped the State against his colleague, Senator Shortridge, during last summer's campaign. Mr. Elliott is carrying on his campaign independently of the Democratic candidate for Governor.

FOR LEGISLATURE

Three State Senators will be elected in Los Angeles county this year. They are all Republicans and are unopposed. They are Charles W. Lyon, Frank C. Weller and J. W. McKinley.

The preponderance of the Republican vote in this county assures the Republican nominees for the Assembly of success.

In the Sixty-fifth District the sole nominee, Thomas L. Dodge, died after the primaries. The Republican County Central Committee chose as his successor Willis M. Baum. Mr. Baum has been active in politics in the Ninth Congressional District and is well and favorably known. He managed the campaign of Assemblyman Dodge and will carry on that man's work. He is listed on the ballot as Republican-Independent. There are two opponents, listed as Independents. They are Frank Cordano and William Francis Ireland.

In the Seventieth District, Long Beach, the line-up is approximately the same as it was in the primaries, due to the operation of the district primary law. Morgan Keaton won the Republican nomination against Wayne P. Bowen and Dana G. Boleyn. Mr. Bowen won the Democratic nomination and Mr. Boleyn the Prohibition nomination, and they will appear on the ballot under these designations.

The other districts are as follows: Sixty-first District, James C. Crawford, Republican, unopposed; Sixty-second District, Walter J. Little, Republican; Oscar E. Lawrence, Socialist; Sixty-third District, Clare Woolwine, Republican, unopposed; Sixty-fourth District, Harry Lyons, Republican, Frank White, Socialist; Sixty-sixth District, William M. Byrne, Republican, Fred Seymour, Independent, Harry Sherr, Socialist; Sixty-seventh District, Eleanor Miller, Republican, unopposed; Sixty-eighth District, Harry Sewell, Republican, unopposed; Sixty-ninth District, Jerome V. Scofield, Republican, unopposed; Seventy-first District, Henry E. Carter, Republican, Alick Anderson, Socialist; Seventy-second District, Willard Badham, Republican, Titus Alexander, Democrat, Charles Fredricksen, Socialist; Seventy-third District, Howard W. Davis, Republican, unopposed; Seventy-fourth District, Frederick M. Roberts, Republican, John V. Pitts, Socialist; Seventy-fifth District, George W. Rochester, Republican, unopposed.

The candidates in the other nine Congressional Districts in California who appear to be assured of election are: First, Clarence L. Lea, Democrat, incumbent; Second, Harry L. Englebright, Republican, who won the contest in the primaries for the unexpired term of the late Representative Raker; Third, Charles F. Curry, Republican, incumbent; Fourth, Florence P. Kahn, Republican, incumbent; Fifth, Richard Welch, Republican, who won the unexpired term of the late Representative Flaherty in the primaries; Sixth, Albert Carter, Republican, incumbent; Seventh, Henry E. Barbour, Republican, incumbent; Eighth, Arthur M. Free, Republican, incumbent; Eleventh, Phil Swing, Republican, incumbent.

GOOD MEN OUT FOR JUDICIARY

deputy District Attorney since 1918.

Harry A. Hollzer, 245 South Norton avenue. Judge Hollzer is an incumbent. He was born in New York and educated in San Francisco. He was appointed to the Superior court in May, 1924, and was elected in the fall of 1924. He came within a few thousand votes of being elected in the primaries last August.

P. E. Keeler, Long Beach. Judge Keeler is an incumbent. He is 57 years old and was born in Ohio. He began the practice of law in 1891, holding several public offices in Utah. He came to Long Beach in 1913, where he opened law offices. He was appointed to the Superior court last November.

Ruben S. Schmidt, 3442 Wilshire Boulevard. He is 44 years old and was born in Los Angeles. He was graduated from Los Angeles High School in 1898, the University of Michigan in 1903, and obtained his law degree in 1905. He began the practice of law in Los Angeles that same year. He has acted as judge pro tem.

Robert H. Scott, 3510 Larga avenue. Judge Scott is a municipal judge. He is 34 and was born in Michigan, but has lived here 23 years. He was a lieutenant in a machine gun company during the war. He served three years in the Public Defender's office after admission to the bar. In 1922 he was elected justice of the peace and assumed his present office on conversion of the position last February.

Myron Westover, 357 South Wilton avenue. Judge Westover is a municipal judge. He is 55 years old and was born in Kansas. He was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1895 and began the practice of law the same year. He came to California in 1905. He has served in the City Attorney's office. He was appointed last February.

Walton J. Wood, 1617 Wayne street, South Pasadena. Judge Wood is an incumbent. He is 48 years old and was born in Oroville. He attended the University of California and Stanford University and began the practice of law in the Philippines. He has lived here 19 years. He was the country's first Public Defender, serving from 1914 until his election to the Superior court in 1920.

FOR SHORT TERM

Another short-term post is being contested by Dep. Dist.-Atty. H. S. G. McCartney and Municipal Judge Douglas L. Edmonds. Mr. McCartney lives at 1002 West Twenty-fifth street. He is 60 years of age and was born in Illinois. He was admitted to the bar here in 1895, and has been in the District Attorney's office for 21 years. He served eight years in the State Legislature.

Judge Edmonds lives at 2959 Adina Drive. He is 39 years old and was born in Illinois. He was graduated from the University of Southern California and admitted to the bar in 1913. He was appointed last February.

STATE PLANS TO BE VOTED

fy many elections, resulting in less cost for them. The Times recommends approval of this measure.

NO. 22. TREE-TAX EXEMPTION

A Senatorial constitutional amendment, providing that young timber (under forty years) shall be exempted from taxation. This proposition was conceived by organizations working for reforestation, and contemplates protection for our growing forests. The measure has safeguards to protect the forests from exploitation. The Times believes an affirmative vote should be cast for this measure.

NO. 23. ELECTION AT PRIMARIES

Senate amendment to Constitution. It provides for the declaration of election of candidates for judicial and nonpartisan officers who receive a majority of the votes cast at primary elections. It makes no essential change in the present law, but eliminates much red tape and materially shortens the ballot. The Times recommends approval of this amendment.

NO. 24—IRRIGATION DISTRICTS

A Senate constitutional amendment authorizing irrigation districts, in order to obtain water rights and other necessary property, to acquire stock in corporation owning water rights, and requires treasurers, upon resolution of their governing body, to transfer, temporarily, funds to meet the obligations incurred. This greatly simplifies the situation as regards administration of irrigation districts. The Times recommends adoption of this measure.

NO. 25—EXEMPTING GRAVES

This Senatorial constitutional amendment provides that property held for burial purposes shall be exempted from local taxation and assessments. The measure will not exempt property held by cemetery associations and others which is to be sold for profit. No revenue will be lost to the State if this proposition is approved. It is now against the law to exhume bodies, and it is to remove confusion that the present measure is submitted. The adoption of this measure is recommended by The Times.

NO. 26. APPELLATE COURTS

This is a constitutional amendment adopted by the Assembly, which offers a means [illegible] in litigation by permitting the Appellate Court to hear testimony in regard to cases brought before that body and to render judgment as the case may require without referring the causes back to the court where it originated. This will simplify court procedure, and The Times believes the measure should be adopted.

NO. 27, JUDICIAL COUNCIL

This is a Senate constitutional amendment, authorizing the creation of a judicial council, and is another measure fostered for the relief of present court-calendar congestion. The amendment authorizes the creation of a council to be headed by the chief justice of the Supreme Court and including ten justices selected by him. This council will have charge of procedure and will assign judges from various benches when the necessity arises. The Times recommends its adoption.

A Laxative to Rely On

Take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for Constipation. Mild and Gentle. Never Loses its Good Effect.

YOU know how much more difficult it is each year as you get older to avoid the ill effects of chronic constipation. The stomach and bowel muscles relax as age advances, and as you are naturally less active, in time they work only by stimulation. You try dieting and exercise,—then take medicine.

All medicines, however, are not suited to elderly people any more than to children, so you will be glad to know of a particular medicine that acts as near to nature as has yet been found. It is a prescription written thirty odd years ago by Dr. W. B. Caldwell and used most successfully in his practice. It is known today as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and you can buy it under that name at any drug store. A sixty-cent bottle will last an average family many months, and all can use it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin. It acts mildly,

POLITICS

THE WATCHMAN

Trend of Political Thought and Action

—BY THE SENTRY ON HIS BEAT—

Judge Curtis, associate justice of the Supreme Court of California, will continue to serve the people of this State in the position he now holds, for the next twelve years, if predictions from every section of California can be taken for granted.

After winning an overwhelming victory at the primary, Judge Curtis's friends rallied to his support with renewed energy.

S. W. McNabb, United States Attorney for the Southern District of California; Frank P. Flint, former United States Senator from California; Dr. George F. Bovard, president emeritus of the University of Southern California; Mrs. Allie Simmons Wheeler, president of the City Federation of the W.C.T.U.; Susan M. Dorsey, superintendent of Los Angeles' city schools; former judges Benjamin Bledsoe and Waldo M. York; W. G. McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury in Wilson's Cabinet; William Rhodes Hervey, executive vice-president of the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank, and Jeff P. Chandler are a few of the people of affairs in Los Angeles behind the candidacy of Associate Justice Jesse W. Curtis of the California Supreme Court.

Former Judge Waldo M. York has the following to say of the qualifications of Judge Curtis to succeed himself to the position he now holds at the polls Tuesday:

"I have known Judge Curtis several years and unhesitatingly state that he is a man of unimpeachable character, learned in the law, judicial in disposition, fair, frank and courteous.

"His experience as judre of the Superior Court, justice of the District Court of Appeal, and justice of the Supreme Court, combined with his natural ability, learning and judicial temperament, make him a valuable man to the State in the office he so admirably fills. Justice Jesse W. Curtis should be retained on the Supreme Court Bench."

Rescinding their earlier indorsement of Proposition No. 28 and swinging vigorously into line in support of Proposition No. 20, which guarantees reapportionment on a basis of population, the Pomona and Redondo Beach Chamber of Commerce organizations have launched an active campaign in their respective communities, urging their citizens to vote "Yes" on Proposition No. 20 and "No" on Proposition No. 28, which latter seeks reapportionment on a basis of acreage.

This announcement from A. G. Arnoll, secretary and manager of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce was made yesterday to the All Parties Reapportionment committee, with the statement that the action of these two representative civic organizations is in line with that of many other groups and individuals.

Another statement voicing a warning against the dangers involved in Proposition No. 28 was received from E. J. Sullivan, well-known advertising man, who declared that this measure threatened to "make serfs of the people," since it would leave them prey to the control of political interests which could gain power of rule through land-ownership.

The necessity of providing additional funds for the work of highway maintenance and repair makes imperative the passage of Amendment No. 2 on the ballot at next Tuesday election, according to public statements made by State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson and Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan.

The amendment is designed to adjust State taxes on commercial highway transportation, providing for a gross earnings tax on motor stages and trucks.

The proceeds of the tax will be required to go exclusively to highway maintenance and repair work, and it is the only measure on the ballot this year, the State officials pointed out, making such a provision.

Mayor Cryer yesterday issued an indorsement of the Bar Association campaign for better judges, sponsoring Judges Harry A. Hollzer, Myron Westover, P. R. Keeler, Charles S. Burnell and Ruben S. Schmidt, judge pro tem.

Indorsement of the candidacy of Judge Hollzer to succeed himself as Superior judge was announced yesterday by Leonard V. Wilson, former County Commander of the American Legion and prominent local attorney. Mr. Wilson stated his belief that Judge Holzer, would draw a heavy vote from the ex-service man for whom Judge Hollzer has always been a willing worker, having assisted in many of their undertakings.

Municipal Judge Westover is the recipient of letters of indorsement from Dr. Robert A. Millikan, president of the California Institute of Technology; Dr. R. V. von KleinSmid, president of U. S.C.; Dr. George F. Bovard, president emeritus of U. S. C.; Dr. Remsen D. Bird, president of Occidental; Dr. Walter F. Dexter, president of Whittier College; Dr. John Willis Baer, former president of Occidental; Mrs. George Herbert Clark, member of the Los Angeles City Board of Education; Mr. Arthur C. Brown, of the County Board of Education, and Mrs. Margaret J. Frick, former principal of the Los Angeles High School.

Indorsement by all of California's agricultural associations, such as the Farm Bureau Federation, State Grange and California Dairy Council, as well as the approval of sixty chambers of commerce has been given Proposition No. 3 on the State ballot, it was stated yesterday by Sam H. Greene, manager of the campaign in behalf of the measure.

John J. Hill, candidate for judge of the Superior Court, has won high praise from legislators whom he has interested in his plan to have the State establish an industrial farm for youths convicted of felonies. Plans are now under way, as a result of his activities, for an early consideration of the matter when the Legislature meets next January.

C. C. Teague, president of the California Fruit Growers' Association and chairman of the agricultural legislative committee, yesterday issued a personal plea for support of Amendment No. 5, which provides for the increase of salaries of State officials.

A separation of grades through the construction of properly built bridges and underpasses, is the only known method of making the crossing of a highway and a railroad "fool proof," according to David R. Faries, chairman of the grade crossing committee, who is urging the adoption of County Bond Proposition No. 2.

State Highway Commissioner Edwards yesterday declared himself emphatically favorable to Initiative Amendment No. 8, "State Highways," as it will appear on Tuesday's ballot.

Mr. Edwards stated that his experience of nearly four years as a State highway commissioner, justified the statement that neither the present nor any future highway commission would in any manner be hampered by the definite provisions for expending California's State highway funds, but on the contrary that the State Highway Commission would be relieved of the one great obstacle to a businesslike management of a vast enterprise, the political wire-pulling and manipulation that too often prevents a governmental agency from doing effective work.

More than $200,000 in educational costs are being saved the State of California each year by private secondary schools, it was pointed out yesterday by Dr. Millbank Johnson, chairman of the board of directors of the California Taxpayer's Association, in a discussion of the merits of Proposition No. 11.

The proposition provides for the exemption from taxation of about twenty-nine private schools having a total student enrollment of about 5000 pupils, Dr. Johnson said. He declared he obtained his figures from the report of N. Bradford Trenham, who was engaged to make an exhaustive survey of the secondary school situation by the California Taxpayer's Association.

Through an error in an announcement sent to The Times, it was stated that the directors of the Citizens' Committee of Ten Thousand approved proposed Charter Amendments No. 8-A and 18-A.

It should have read that "the directors of the Citizens' Committee are opposed to these two pension measures because they desire to obtain a pension measure which will treat all employees alike and which does not involve the city in unknown, indefinite liabilities."

Winding up its campaign to defeat the passage of Proposition No. 3 on the ballot which taxes oleomargarine 2 cents a pound, the Anti-Food Tax Association through Warner O'Brien, chairman of the Los Angeles division, asserts that there is an apparent attempt to cloud the real issues as contained in the bill.

"The real issue is whether California housewives shall be forced to pay 2 cents tax on every pound of oleomargarine that they use," said Mr. O'Brien. "Advertising material presented by the opposition asserts that the issue is 'to regulate the manufacture, advertising and sale' of margarine. As a matter of fact the manufacture, advertising and sale is now under strictest regulation. It is impossible for any woman to enter a store and ask for butter and be given oleomargarine without her being instantly aware of it."

Dudley M. Robinson, chairman of the committee to elect Judge Edmonds to the Superior Court, short term, has issued a pre-election day statement urging a heavy Edmonds vote on Tuesday.

trict Attorney. Lena Morrow Lewis, Socialist of San Francisco, and Charles O. Dunbar, Democrat, oppose him.

Frank C. Jordan of Auburn is the Republican nominee for Secretary of State, the position he has held for several terms. Jordan is certain of election over Milton Bryan, Democrat, and James P. M. Jensen, Prohibition. Ray L. Riley, the incumbent, and Republican candidate for Controller, will run far ahead of his opponents: Julius Levitt, Socialist, and Louis H. Mooser, Democrat.

State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson, the nominee of the Republican party, is opposed by Noah L. Levering, Democrat, and is expected to win handily. Atty.-Gen. U. S. Webb and Surveyor-General W. S. Kingsbury are unopposed for their positions, as is H. G. Cattell, Republican, candidate for member State Board of Equalization, Fourth District. Will C. Wood is unopposed for Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Cross, Feverish Child is Bilious or Constipated

Look, Mother! See if tongue is coated or stomach sour

"California Fig Syrup" can't harm tender stomach, bowels

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Fig Syrup," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless, "fruity laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When the little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, sold by "California Fig Syrup Company."—[Advertisement.

FUTURE OF BROADCASTING IN LEGISLATIVE BALANCE

Dill and White Bills Come Before Congress at November Session; "Uncle John" Welcomed

BY MAE PRYCE BROOKS

The future of radio is in the balance. The outcome of the situation is largely in the hands of the great listening-in public. Those directly interested in radio—manufacturers and dealers—are doing all they can to bring about legislation which will be absolutely fair, but without the help of the vast radio audience, adjustment will be difficult.

Two bills are to come up before the next session of Congress early in November, the Dill bill which contains some ridiculous provisions, and should be killed, and the White bill, which has great merit, but needs two important changes.

The Dill bill, which has already been passed by the Senate, would establish a Federal Radio Commission with absolute control of all stations except those owned by the government. This commission would consist of five members, each with a salary of $10,000 a year, and each having a secretary at $5000 and a clerk at $3600 a year, to say nothing of the entourage of the necessary technical assistants, clerks and legal advisers. It provides that no radio man, who, during the preceding year has had any financial interest in any radio company or station, is eligible for membership. This provision alone should kill the bill with the thinking radio public, for it would mean that these appointments on the commission would be held as political plums to be handed out to those having absolutely no radio knowledge. This bill provides no control for nonradio sources of air disturbance which cause much radio interference. These are but a few of the "high spots," but enough to show you that your influence is needed to help kill it before it becomes a law.

WHITE-BILL FAVORED

The White bill, which has already passed the House, has much of good in it, in that it would keep radio control under the Department of Commerce, where it rightfully belongs. Under the Secretary of Commerce there would be an advisory commission of five members, to which might be taken any appeal from decisions given by the Secretary of Commerce. The cost of the White bill commission can be only from $5000 to $15,000 a year, depending upon the number of days they are in session, but a maximum has been set at 120 days as the limit.

The bill needs two amendments to make it fair, and to cover present radio conditions. It is known by radio experts that there are but eighty-nine possible channels in the broadcasting bands, and to try to apportion these among some 1000 applicants would be a bewildering task. As a legal basis for the Secretary to stand on, a clause should be inserted directing that the selection of stations should be made on "priority of service." Those who have served the public long and well, in giving authentic news and informative material, good music, programs of merit, and have complied with existing regulations as pertaining to radio, should take preference over "fly-by-night" stations.

The second change: The clause prohibiting radio men from serving on the commission should be stricken out, for the men best fitted to serve are those who have given their time and talents to the mastering of radio technique and should have preference over those whose knowledge of radio and radio conditions is absolutely nil.

There is very little time in which to accomplish the results which are imperative for the good of radio. Use what influence you have with your Congressman and Senator that he may know the provisions of both bills, and vote intelligently. Use what influence you have to kill the ridiculous Dill bill. Wire your Congressman and Senator. Do not put it off, for but a few days are left.

This is your fight. It is up to you whether or not radio is to go forward in a fair and legitimate manner, or whether it is to be throttled by unfair legislation and the air cluttered up with undesirable material.

WELCOMED HOME

The return of Uncle John and Mrs. Daggett, and the Music Box from their cruise to the Hawaiian Islands was the occasion of much rejoicing.

The studio was festooned in elaborate Halloween decorations, and a noisy shout went up from the KHJ wonder children who had gathered to greet the travelers. It was quite a task to get down to the business of the evening concert.

The program given you last evening by the Automobile Club of Southern California reflected much credit upon the performers. Within an organization of such size, much fine talent is available. Their opening numbers by the orchestra were full of life and snap, and gave just the keynote for their entire concert.

Miss Louise Martinez has a soprano voice of beautiful quality. Her songs were received with much enthusiasm.

John Arant gave a concert solo, playing the "Kashmiri Song," by Amy Woodeford-Finden. His tone was clear and ringing and his number was much enjoyed.

An excellent trio, violin, cello and piano, added greatly to the enjoyment of the hour. Their ensemble is splendid. A "Serenade" by Widor was beautifully done. Members of the trio are Miss Frances Knight, piano; Frank Byard, violin, and Morris Rathbun, cello.

A short talk was given by Ivan Kelso, general counsel of the Auto Club of Southern California. He spoke briefly of the gasoline-tax measures on the November ballot, also of the State highways measure. The talk was to the point and of vital interest at this time.

On the ensuing hour, the Los Angeles Railway Hawaiian Quartet played selections in honor of Uncle John and the Music Box, that they might feel a little of the island atmosphere in their own land.

Karl Brantdenburg sang his usual quota of requests, and delighted his large following. Conrad Steiner plays the harmonica unusually well, and gave several selections.

The Scripture reading was given by Mr. Hollis J. Backus, first reader of the Second Church of Christ, Scientist.

CHILDREN IN WELCOME

The children gathered around Uncle John to welcome him. Queen Titania and the Sandman arranged a little welcome, into which the children entered with enthusiasm. The regular children's program was rather upset in the excitement, but the following youngsters were scheduled: Nona Clapp, Dolly Wright, Arthur Stevens, Cheryl June Lowe and Marjorie Genevieve Lowe, pupils of Bernice Seay, Audrey Sussman, and Evelyn Schwartz in piano duets, Eileen June and Arthur L. Sisson. It was a joyous occasion.

The White King Male Quartet broadcast their regular Saturday-evening program for Mr. Steve Brodie, first vice-president of the Los Angeles Soap Company, who listens in each Saturday evening at his home at Catalina Island.

The noon program presented J. Walter Leopold, composer-pianist, author of such popular songs as "Is It A Sin," played and sang his own compositions. It was a pleasure to have Mr. Leopold with us. Ed Robinson with his ukulele and Madge McConnell in popular songs aided in making the noon hour a rosy one.

A great honor has been bestowed upon one of KHJ's faithful friends. In fact, he was called "Old Faithful." Prof. Walter Sylvester Hertzog, who for more than 300 nights stood before our microphone, giving his talks on American history, has been honored by Lafayette College, his Alma Mater, with the degree of Master of Letters. This was given in recognition of the research work Prof. Hertzog has done.

Only once in 100 years has this degree been conferred upon anyone, and it comes as a distinct honor to this distinguished historian of our city.

Prof. Hertzog is to leave in the very near future for Pennsylvania, where his degree will be conferred upon him by President MacCracken of Lafayette College.

KHJ feels it has been honored in the selection of its historian as the recipient of this unusual honor.

ANNOUNCERS PANNED

Announcers come in for a panning by the Grobo Daily Globe, which says, in part: "Some announcers who claim to be wedded to their art, have good grounds for divorce. Radio will never satisfy everybody until announcers adopt the telephone operator's line: 'Excuse it please' When an announcer learns he is not the whole show, he is on the right track."

RADIO TURNS NAVIGATOR

Direction Finder Guides and Locates Vessels at Sea Regardless of Weather

"Unable to give position—last bearings taken three days ago—we're lost!" Thus reads the terse, but dramatic, message from a ship in distress.

"Keep sending us test signals," flashes back our operator. "Will locate by direction finder." And so the latest wonder of marine radio and the newest aid to modern navigation is brought into play.

LOOP GIVES DIRECTION

Just as the dog turns his ears in determining the direction of sounds, so does the radio direction finder turn its loop to get a bearing on a given transmitter. This ingenious radio device operates on the principle that a signal of maximum intensity will be received with a loop so placed that its plane is pointing at the radio station which is transmitting. The position at which the signal drops out or so-called minimum, is well defined and is employed in reading the direction of the transmitting station from the compass card that forms part of the apparatus.

The standard marine direction finder, as now installed on many ships, is entirely self-contained and occupies less than two square feet of floor space in the pilot house or chart room. On the deck above the pilot house or chart room is the sturdy tripod frame supporting the loop. An eight-tube superheterodyne receiver is employed in connection with the radio direction finder, neatly installed in the metal cabinet which forms the base of the equipment.

BEACONS ERECTED

So important is the direction finder in navigation that radio beacons, like lighthouses and lightships, have come into existence along our coasts as infallible guides to coastwise and transoceanic and lake navigators. These radio beacons, operated by the United States Lighthouse Service, now extend up and down the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, along the Gulf of Mexico and on the Great Lakes, as well as in Alaska and Hawaii.

Operated on regular schedule, the radio beacons are also pressed into service when weather conditions warrant steady operation. They are likewise started on request. Operating on 1000 meters wave length, assigned for such radio transmission by international regulation, the ICW, or interrupted continuous-wave transmitters employed send out signals that vary in note and in character, so that each beacon may be readily identified.

RADIO GOODNIGHT

Clyvus Holland

Goodnight, my friends, goodnight!
May the sun or stars shine
With KHJ on the air—
'nd draw to their height
And brilliant light,
The Hope your brave hearts wear—
And the Faith and Courage

MIAMI STATIONS ON AIR

WIOD and WMBF of Miami are again on the air with their regular programs. In fact WMBF began broadcasting the Saturday following the storm, with an improvised aerial and was soon reported as heard in Portland, Me. WIOD was also early in its return to the air.

RADIO AIDS CROPS

A study of the possibility of increasing the growth of crops by subjecting them to radio waves is being made by Prussian experts, and tests are under way at two adjacent fields near Potsdam. So far the crops being raised under the radio wires are said to be the better.

'B' BATTE ELIMINA IN DEM

Troubles Due to Cells Overcome by Radio Accessory

[illegible]

The first Balkite "B" is still in service

The New Balkite Charger

MODEL J. Has a low trickle charge rate and a high rate for rapid charging. Can thus be used either as a trickle or as a high rate charger. Noiseless. Special model for 25-40 cycles. Price $20.

Balkite Trickle Charger
$10.50

MODEL K. With 6-volt "A" batteries can be left on continuous or trickle charge thus automatically keeping the battery at full power. Converts your "A" battery into a light socket "A" power supply. With 4-volt batteries can be used as an intermittent charger. Or as a trickle charger if a resistance is added. Rate about .5 ampere. 200,000 in use. Price $10.50.

Balkite Combination

Supplies automatic current to both "A" and "B" circuits. Serves any set now using 4 or 6-volt "A" batteries and requiring not more than 30 milliamperes at 135 volts—practically all sets of up to 8 tubes. Price $59.50.

The first Balkite "B" purchased by a radio set owner nearly four years ago, is still rendering satisfactory service. It will continue to do so for years to come; it has no tubes. Since that time over 75,000 Balkite "B"s all based on the same principle as the first, have been purchased and are now giving satisfactory service. Of these, to our knowledge, not one has ever worn out. In a field only too full of unproved experiments, Balkite "B" stands out as the radio power supply which has stood the test of time.

Balkite "B" is offered in three models to serve any set: Balkite "B"-W for sets of 5 tubes or less requiring 67 to 90 volts—$27.50. Balkite "B"-X for sets of 8 tubes or less including power tubes, capacity 30 milliamperes at 135 volts—$42. Balkite "B"-Y for any standard set, capacity 40 milliamperes at 150 volts—$69.

KELLOGG
Radiant Reproduction
Radio

Licensed under application for letters patent of Radio Frequency Laboratories, Inc. (R. F. L.)

REPRODUCTION so perfect that it holds you—thrills you—with its warm, living realism! That's Kellogg Radio. Full, round volume on the low notes—clear, sharp fidelity on the high. Music that is complete in every overtone and harmonic—those elements that must be present if you are to have the feeling that an artist is "right in the room."

Kellogg, master builder of telephones for 29 years, has applied its vast experience to Radio and produced both a receiver and speaker that are distinct advances over anything previously known. You should see and hear Models 507 and 508, for, besides reproduction, Kellogg builds into these 6-tube sets other qualities for which you have searched.

There is the third stage of radio frequency that means satisfactory range and selectivity. Freedom from interference from local stations is assured by thorough shielding. Four circuits are controlled in exact unison with a single knob.

More important than any of these is the exclusive Kellogg system—Inductive Tuning—which gives equal sensitivity, for the first time, at all wave lengths—200, 310, 425, 550 meters!

Either table model 507 or console 508 will appeal to those whose sense of refinement demands furniture of quiet line and dignified workmanship. Matched walnut, carefully selected, has been given the justly popular dull, smooth finish that is easily cared for and does not easily mar.

The loud speaker in Model 508 has a 44-inch horn, carefully moulded in a new material, which brings out the accompaniments of bass viol and large saxaphone in their correct relationship with the melody-carrying violins, cornets and piano. The realism will convince you that Radio is now in a new era of its development.

RADIO DOCTRINE ASSAILED

Attitude of Some Broadcasters Over Troubles of Ether Found to Be Wanting

BY CARL H. PUTMAN

Some of the broadcasters who are hopeful that the broadcasting situation will clear itself up soon, without any effort on their parts, are evidently applying the Coue doctrine, asserting to themselves that day by day, in every way, radio is growing better and better.

This doctrine will never cure the troubles in the ether. The radio situation needs many things, but first some definite radio legislation; which will be forthcoming before many months now. What it will be is, of course, up to Congress, which has in conference two remedial measures. Some followers of the Dill proposal insist that it is unsuitable except the preamble, and that the White bill would tend to re-establish broadcasting where it was before the legal opinion of the Department of Justice took authority away from the Secretary of Commerce to assign channels and regulate broadcasting. On the other hand, there are many advocates of the radio commission plan of Senator Dill, who believes that public services, if not utilities, including radio, should be handled by an independent commission.

REASSIGNMENTS URGED

Another necessary step in perfecting our broadcast system will be the early reassignment of broadcast wave lengths, as standard channels, separated so as not to interfere with each other.

A third measure should be the elimination of weak and unnecessary stations, many of which are new and neither serve any public purpose nor bring profit or credit to their owners.

This undertaking will be a difficult one, whether the controling authority rests with the Secretary of Commerce or a new independent radio commission. Stations on the air, and there are now 584, will all insist that they have the right to continue broadcasting perhaps with some justice, but that depends.

TRADE-INS DISCUSSED

Suggestions as to the method of disposing of sets turned in as part payment on new outfits, include the creation of a central resale bureau in all principal communities. Most of those following or advocating this practice believe that an allowance of 50 per cent of the resale value should be made to customers buying new sets, admitting that overhauling and repairing are often necessary before the sets can be resold. Due to the fluctuation in prices of nearly all sets manufactured, and their ages, it is pointed out, that no standard scale of resale values or credits can be established. Home-made or "no-name" sets are also difficult to classify or appraise.

Once started and backed by the local dealers of the nation, it is felt that the establishment of a trade-in policy will aid the industry materially, and it is certain that fans and amateur set makers will co-operate readily.

HAITI STATION HEARD

A large number of radio fans are reporting the reception of HHK at Port Au Prince, Haiti. The Department of Commerce states that this is a government station opened recently, which operates on 361.2 meters and power 1080 watts.

Many Localities Early Reporting Poor Reception

Broadcast reception is getting worse, according to reports by fans in several localities, although it is still early in the radio season. In New England they complain that, since WBZ and WBZA began broadcasting simultaneously on 333.1 meters, they can no longer get WBZ, and that the transmission from WBZA is poor, due chiefly to noises on the land line connecting Boston and Springfield.

In Albany, N. Y., listeners say they cannot get WEAF and WBZ for some reason, although they pick up and hold both WGY and WJZ KOKA also comes in fairly well. Most stations are heard poorly in upper New York, having little volume and clarity. Practically all letters received recently point out the great interference between stations, many of them new ones, or those which have changed their channels.

A letter from Tulsa, Okla., states that reception for the fan with an ordinary receiver is getting steadily worse; there is so much whistling and distortion that audible reception is practically impossible. The situation between 217 and 400 meters is reported very bad, with so many stations located in that band.

Except for considerable station interference, reception in Washington is generally reported as fair, with little static and good volume from distant stations. Western stations and some in Canada and Mexico are heard, in some instances through the local station, but Coast stations do not come in well until late at night.

ARMY RADIO NET SPEEDY

The Army radio net, which includes the Alaskan cable, has become very speedy service, as the delivery of two recent mesages will attest. A radiogram from Fort Sam Houston, Tex., to the Washington Message Center was delivered in forty-five minutes, while another transmitted from Anchorage, Alaska, to Seattle via cable, was relayed by radio through San Francisco, and Fort Leavenworth to Washington in one hour and thirty-five minutes.

TEST TRUCK GOES SOUTH

The Department of Commerce radio testing truck has been ordered to Atlanta, Ga., from its home station in Detroit. Several tests will be conducted in the South.

FOUR NEW STATIONS LICENSED

Contemplated Jump to Interfere With Reception of KFI in East

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Four new stations were licensed to broadcast during the past week by the Department of Commerce and four changes in wavelengths were announced. The four new broadcasters are in Chicago, and Galesburg, Ill., Auburn, N. Y., and Orlando, Fla. They bring the total stations to 588, only three less than the largest number ever on the air.

Changes made in channels now number fifty-eight, most of them having been requested by old stations. All but two of the changes were to higher wavelengths. The jam is becoming worse in the channels above 300 meters, than it was sometime ago on the lower wavelengths.

The move of WLWL in New York to 384.4 meters is questionable, since this wavelength is already used by five stations in the States and two in Winnipeg, Can. The 384.4 meter wave was originally assigned to KJR at Seattle and WMBF, Miami, but is now also used by WWAE, at Plainfield, Ill., and WLWL, a 780 watter. Another station using it is WAAW at Omaha, a 5000-watt transmitter, planning to increase its power.

Reception of any of the above-mentioned stations will be difficult everywhere and impossible in many places.

Another jump in wavelength, contemplated by WJBT of Chicago, owned by John S. Boyd, will cause considerable interference it is feared. WJBT is now trying out and has applied for the use of the 468.5 meter channel, the one used by WRC of Washington, and practically the same as that of KFI at Los Angeles, one of the Pacific stations picked up reliably in the East. It is a question whether fans searching for WJBT will be able to get it and it is certain that in Washington at least, KFI is out now until WJBT signs off late at night. Reports from Chicago state that WJBT interferes with WMAQ and WTJ.

THREE NEW STATIONS TAKE PLACE ON AIR

Although the Department of Commerce has nothing to do with the selection of other channels by old broadcasters nor the opening of new stations, except to insert the channels desired for normal use in the licenses, it nevertheless announces the newcomers and the new wave lengths selected for the benefit of listeners-in.

This past week, three new stations of low power received their licenses; one each in Minnesota, Indiana and New Jersey. Only two changes in wave lengths were reported; and strangely enough they both showed a decrease in meters, probably because the upper channels were found too badly congested to make it worth while to jam more stations into that band. A clever change in call letters was made by the Baxter Launderers and Cleaners by Grand Rapids, whose station now broadcasts under the call name "WASH."

BETTER SETS INCREASE

Forty-two per cent of the receivers exhibited at radio shows on the Pacific Coast were made to use six tubes, 18 per cent seven tubes, or more, and only 7 per cent less than five tubes according to figures computed by The Times. This shows a marked tendency toward higher powered and better sets on the Pacific Coast.

You'll LIKE This Lamp Socket Reception

First—because a Willard "B" Power Unit is so convenient to hook up and use.

Once it is plugged into the light socket you leave it there, switching it on and off as you please.

The tubes in your radio set receive a smooth, unfailing supply of "B" power—as long as you care to listen.

And this very different Power Unit uses so little current that you'll hardly notice the difference in the light bill.

There are no tubes to be replaced at any time, and the solution is non-acid—harmless.

They all follow FARRAND

A score of imitative cones follow in the wake of Farrand leadership. If it were merely a matter of eye-value, your choice might well be confused. But the judgment of your ears will narrow the choice, unhesitatingly, to a Farrand. For Farrand tonal quality, while a delight to the listener, is the despair of the imitator! Hear. Compare.

Affairs of the Week
by Juana Neal Levy

ember with its approaching Thanksgiving season, always brings forcibly to one's mind the philanthropies or hobbies of miladi, these activities finding a foremost place in her day, as well as the social affairs which always have a place on her calendar.

The Community Chest drive which Tuesday includes each year officers numbers of our social who have in their divisions, lieutenant - colonels, majors, captains, who also have under their direction lieutenants and many of the young debutantes this year are adding their efforts to assist in "putting it over."

Another pet philanthropy of the younger set is the Junior League activities, this small coterie of young matrons and debutantes who several weeks ago opened the home for Convalescent Children, the little ones who are realeased from the Children's Hospital, but are not yet strong enough to be returned to their several homes, where comforts are scarce.

The home in Ingraham street at Lucas is maintained by the Junior League, several of it's members going for two or three hours each day, attending to the household, entertaining the little ones, or taking them out for rides in their automobiles, sometimes back to the hospital for further treatmen or to the beach or countryside.

This coterie is now busy with its latest activity, that of opening a smart shop at 641 Carondelet street, where gifts of exceptional and exclusive nature may be purchased by simply adding a small profit, and the whole run absolutely by members of the Junior League.

The results obtained by this league for the past several years, prove conclusively that they are quite capable of this new venture, and the shop is being decorated most attractively green painted furniture to be used and hangings of dainty apricot shades.

One of the features of revenue is to be the circulating library, where for a few cents a day, one may obtain a clean new copy of the latest books and this is to be run in connection with the shop.

The proceeds from the shop will go to support the home, and added to the proceeds from the horse show at Flintridge last June which, by the way, totaled something around $14,00. The Junior League is planning to soon build a permanent new home that will take care of all the children they are called upon to assist, instead of having to refuse all but eleven, the capacity of the present home.

Mrs. Charles Gardiner Bullis is president of the Junior League and the shop is to have as its "official family" Mrs. J. Clark Smith and Mrs. Charles Thomas, chairman of the shop, while Mrs. William Bradford Jocye, Jr., is to be "official" bookkeeper, Mrs. John O'Melveny is in charge of the sewing, and Mrs. Van Buren Jarvis will schedule the number of hours for each member to work in the shop.

Miss Margarita Schneider is to be in charge of operating supplies, and Mrs. William Flint will be the appraiser. Miss Mary Frances Milbank is in charge of the circulating library, while Miss Bernadine Murphy is the designer of the uniforms to be worn while on duty and Mrs. Edward Laurence Doheny, Jr., has been in charge of the interior decorations of the shop, while Mrs. Robert Newton is taking care of the publicity this year.

November will also schedule the first large social affair of the season when Friday evening, the Biltmore will be the setting of the assembly dinner dance, which, this year, will take the place of the three of four dinner clubs given the past three or four years.

No effort is being spared to make this one of the most brilliant events of the season. The young matrons who are hostesses include Mmes. Thomas Weeks Banks, Hancock Ban-

Hospitality Now Centers In the Dining Room

The entertaining season now before us presents a constant succession of festive occasions and social events in which the dining room will play the major role.

Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year's Day and all the in-between dinner parties and social evenings will bring the dining room before critical eyes.

Surely it is the logical time to give careful study to every detail of the furnishings of this important room.

At the "California" you will have the advantage of choosing from nearly one hundred different dining room suites, all personally selected; and you will have the sincere advice and co-operation of of men who are recognized as experts in the art of home beautifying.

The cost of an appropriate dining room set is so nominal compared to the enjoyment, satisfaction and pride assured by an attractive dining room that there can be no good logic in delaying the day of possession.

Here at the "California" you can secure an eight piece dining room suite of walnut and gum wood, of distinctive design and of splendid construction for as little as $210.

Selections and values were never more attractive here than right now. Your visit as well as your comparison of values is sincerely invited.

From now until Thanksgiving our windows will present interesting displays of dining room suites.

HOSTESS AT HOLLYWOOD HOME

Engagement Announced at High Tea

[Murillo for Western Press Service]

Miss Jeanette Toberman

MRS. C. E. TOBERMAN and her daughter, Miss Jeanette Toberman, entertained at their home in Hollywood several days ago with high tea, the occasion serving to formally announce the engagement of Miss Toberman to Charles Fletcher, son of Col. and Mrs. Ed Fletcher of San Diego. The news was told by means of small cards attached to bouquets of sweet peas. Two hundred and fifty guests were bidden. The wedding will take place in November in St. James' Church, Wilshire Boulevard.

Scarborough, Jr., Frank Simpson, Jr., Leo Smith, Edwin Stanton, George M. Wallace, Chandler Ward, Horace Wilson, Harold Brent Wrenn, Alfred Wright, Gerald Young and William Kenyon Young.

One of the lovely weddings of the month was that of Miss Helen Karns, attractive daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Franklin D. Karns, and Ensign William Christian Schulz, U.S.N., of the Maryland, now stationed in Los Angeles Harbor, the ceremony taking place the 16th inst., in St. Peter's Church, San Pedro, followed by a reception aboard the ship of the bride's father, U.S.S. Colorado. The decorations were carried out with a profusion of autumn-shaded chrysanthemums and ferns, tall candles being used to light the edifice. Following the ceremony the bridal party left the church beneath the archway formed by the crossed swords of the brother officers of the bridegroom.

The bridal gown was of white satin richly embroidered in rhinestones, with veil of tulle held in place by a Russian coronet of duchesse lace and she carried an arm shower of bride's roses and orchids.

Mrs. A. B. Leggott assisted as matron of honor, with Miss Katherine Crose as maid of honor. Other attendants included Mrs. Robert Campbell, Miss Helen Standley, Miss Elizabeth Jackson, Miss Margaret Pickles, Miss Virginia Svars and Miss Betty Chase. Capt. Karns gave his daughter in marriage at the chancel rail, while Ensign Franklin D. Karns, Jr., U.S.N., brother of the bride, served Mr. Schulz as best man. The ushers were Ensigns George Leahy, John Lewis, A. D. Thompson, Freeman Wright, Richard Larkin, George Dufex and William Hadden of the U.S.S. Maryland.

Two hundred members of the navy set were guests at the reception which followed the ceremony, the supper table for the bridal party being set in the captain's cabin. Dancing was enjoyed until the wee sma' hours on the quarter deck. Mr. and Mrs. Schulz went ashore about midnight in the captain's gig. They are motoring through the State on their honeymoon trip and on their return in a few days will be at home in Caroline street, San Pedro.

Another attractive wedding of the month was that of Miss Doris Fishburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Eugene Fishburn, and Lewis Sutherland Akerman, son of the late J. S. Akerman and Mrs. Akerman of San Diego, the ceremony taking place the 16th inst. at the home of the bride's parents, 2266 South Harvard Boulevard, in the presence of relatives and a few close friends.

Miss Elizabeth Akerman assisted as maid of honor, while Edward Lyman served Mr. Akerman as best man. Miss Katheryn Beynon and Miss Evalyn Hoss were bridesmaids and Thomas

THIS is the "Morinco" pattern—which has a particular appeal to lovers of simple designs in delicate colors. The ware is of imported Noritake china, excellent quality, glistening white. Daisies form the motif of the border, which is interspersed with panels of fruit baskets. Green, light blue and tan, black and a trace of purple are all the colors used. A line of gold on the inner rim and edge completes this interesting pattern.

Teas, Dinners and Receptions

Edward Gibbons, Jr., John Eugene Fishburn, Jr., and Cornelius Penberthy were ushers.

The bride was charming in a gown of satin and tulle embroidered in pearls and brilliants, the veil held in place by a band of orange blossoms. She carried rosebuds and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore pink crepe with ostrich plumes and trimmings of brilliants, carrying butterfly rosebuds, while the frocks of the bridesmaids were in two shades of green crepe-backed satin. They carried arm bouquets of Columbia roses.

The bride was graduated recently from Stanford University while Mr. Akerman is an aluminus of University of California, where he is affiliated with the Chi Psi Fraternity.

After their return from the wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Akerman will make their home here.

Mr. and Mrs. George D. Robertson, Jr., whose wedding was one of the events of the 21st inst., are enjoying their honeymoon in the East, visiting Chicago, Niagara Falls, New York, Philadelphia and Atlantic City, returning home about December 1. They will then go to Palo Alto where Mr. Robertson is a junior law student at Stanford University. They have taken an apartment in Kings Court where they will live until Mr. Robertson graduates, after which they will come to Los Angeles to make their future home.

Mrs. Robertson was formerly Miss Ernestine Mildred Warrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Warrick. The ceremony took place at the home of the bridegroom's parents in South Serrano street.

Miss Nita Warrick was her sister's maid of honor, while Mrs. T. R. Coles, another sister, was matron of honor. Miss Jean Robertson, Miss Dorothy Dehm, Miss Jemima Walters, Miss Norma Hunter were bridesmaids.

Miss Grace Barron was the hostess at a dinner given at her home in June street recently, the guests of honor being George D. Robertson, Jr., of Stanford University, and Jenner Warrick, who is a student at University of Washington. Covers were arranged for twelve guests and the "going away" motif was carried out effectively in the decorations and appointments.

Miss Barron and Miss Ellen O'Shea of Westlake avenue, are planning to leave the first of the year for a trip through the Panama Canal to be away for the winter months, returning to Los Angeles early in the spring.

All the attractive appointments of a naval wedding were carried out when Miss Concetta Di Giorgio, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rosario Di Giorgio, became the bride of Ensign Thomas James Ball, U.S.N., of the Nevada, the ceremony taking place at the family home in Wilshire Place with Rev. Father Joseph Tonnello officiating.

The improvised altar arranged at one end of the drawing-room was fashioned of autumn blossoms in the yellow shades, chrysanthemums predominating in tall baskets with roses in the same tones, ferns and tulle ribbons, while myriads of lighted tapers in tall candelabra shed a soft glow over the picture as the bride came down the ribbon-marked aisle with her father. Her gown was of white satin embroidered in pearls, fashioned with tight bodice and inserts of Valenciennes lace in the full skirt. The tulle veil fell in graceful folds from a cap of Duchesse lace and rhinestones, and she carried orchids, gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Vera Hibler was matron of honor in pink satin frock, embroidered in the pastel shades, beads and carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses. The four bridesmaids, Miss Vivian Foy, Miss Alicia Lee, Miss Malvina Pozzo and Miss Ann Di Giorgio, were frocked alike in gowns of orchid chiffon, with tight-fitting bodices, long full skirts and trimmed with velvet flowers in the purple shades. They carried lavender and pink sweet peas. Miss Theresa Di Giorgio assisted her sister as maid of honor, in a gown of green chiffon over satin studded in rhinestones and carried an arm bouquet of yellow rosebuds. Evelyn Di Giorgio was the dainty flower girl in orchid tulle.

Lieut. Frank Monroe served Mr. Ball as best man. The ushers, all brother officers of the bridegroom, who held their crossed swords to form the archway under which the bridal party passed, included Ensigns W. P. Tammany, R. E. Rose, Frank Tibbitts, Ben May, W. K. Goodney and F. J. Ball, brother of the bridegroom. One hundred and fifty guests were bidden to the ceremony and wedding supper which followed.

After a motor trip through California, Mr. and Mrs. Ball will return to Long Beach where they will make their home while Mr. Ball is attached to the fleet there. The bride was graduated from Marlborough School, while Mr. Ball was graduated from the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Reception-Tea

Mrs. Joseph H. Bohon is entertaining Wednesday afternoon with a reception and tea at her home, 1245 West Adams street, in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Edward Gaylord Miller (Henrietta Bohon,) a bride of July and also complimenting her mother, Mrs. Eleanor Page, and sister, Miss Decatur Page, who returned last month from an extended tour of the East

The tea was planned for the 1st of October, but was postponed until Wednesday of this week owing to an automobile accident to Mrs. Page, when she was confined to the house for several weeks.

For Bride-Elect

Miss Edna Louise Buwe entertained yesterday afternoon with a miscellaneous shower and bridge-tea at her home in Muirfield Road, the affair complimenting Miss Dorothy Soden Cooke, a bride of November 17. Miss Buwe is to be one of the bridesmaids at the wedding of Miss Cooke and Raymond Tremaine.

The guests included Miss Neola Meekins, Miss Frances Jamison, Miss Mary McAlister, Miss Elizabeth Mernin, Miss Eleanor Cinnell, Miss Elaine Carroll, Miss Ruby Hay, Miss Elizabeth Hay, Miss Loraine Noble, Miss Katherine McCahan, Miss Jeane Luton, Miss Virginia Deardorff, Miss Sara Lee Chapman, Miss Katherine Tilden, Miss Alva Woodhouse, Miss Mildred Finley, Miss Gertrude Kice, Miss Norma Ponton, Miss Marie Collison, Miss Bernice Rossner, Miss Gladys Crail, Miss Katherine Jean, Miss Eleanor Porterfield, Miss Louise Kelso and Mmes. Mrs. William W. Vaughn

AMONG the weddings of the month was that of the 20th inst., when Miss Josephine Sweigert, daughter of Mrs. L. J. Conroy, became the bride of William W. Vaughn, the ceremony taking place in the Little Church of the Flowers, Glendale, with Rev. John R. Atwell officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, A. K. Keller. Miss Tatty Vaughn was maid of honor and Mrs. Henry T. Winn, sister of the bride, matron of honor. J. Preston Vaughn was best man, while Henry T. Winn, Edwin Vaughn, Stanley Curtiss, Norman Jensen and Thomas Miller were the ushers. After a honeymoon in the northern part of the State Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn will return to make their home here.

Singer to Resume Studies in East

[Rayhuff-Richter Studios]

Miss Hortense Barnhart Jones

RETURNING to her old home for an extended visit, Miss Hortense Barnhart Jones is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pierce Jones at their home, 330 West Thirtieth street, and is being much entertained. One of such affairs of the last week was the dinner party given at her parents' home Monday evening, the occasion celebrating her birthday anniversary. Fall flowers and ferns were used in the decorations. The guests included intimate friends, who entertained in her honor during her visit here last year. Miss Jones will be heard in a recital in the ballroom of the Biltmore, November 12, her many friends having persuaded her to give them the opportunity of hearing her sing before she leaves for New York, where she is continuing her musical studies.

Diversions of Society

Moore, Lynville Hayes, Mark Finley, Donald Whittier, George Orme, Raymond Melin, Hildegarde Locke, Isabelle Childs Mahan, Alexander Bennett Cooke, J. J. Tremaine, the hostess and her mother, Mrs. Jack W. Ruwe.

Church Ceremony

Of more than usual interest is the announcement made this morning of the marriage of Miss Florence Frances Kays, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James C. Kays of this city, to Frederick Joseph Toole, the ceremony taking place yesterday at 11 a.m. in St. Basil's Church, Rev. Father Edward R. Kirk officiating. Nuptial mass followed the ceremony.

J. Walter Kays gave his sister in marriage while Miss Cecilia Kays assisted as maid to honor and Herbert Tietzen served Mr. Toole as best man. The ushers included Hugh Golden, Ray Tracy, John O'Melveny and Secondo Guasti, Jr.

The bride wore a becoming gown of Elizabeth crepe beaded in pearls, her veil of tulle held in place by bandeau of rose pointe lace and she carried an arm shower of lilies of the valley and white orchids.

The maid of honor wore a gown of shaded chiffon in the golden and brown shades, with large picture hat of brown and carried an armful of yellow rosebuds and orchids.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served the bridal party and immediate relatives after which Mr. and Mrs. Toole left on their honeymoon trip. After December 15 they will return to Los Angeles to make their future home.

Halloween Dinner

One of the affairs of the week was the dinner dance with which Mr. and Mrs. Andrew L. Johnson of 4006 Ingraham street entertained Friday evening at the Los Angeles Athletic Club, honoring Adolph E. L. Johnson, brother of Mr. Johnson, who has come recently from Minneapolis to make his home here. Mrs. Fred L. Enderly was to have shared the honors of the evening with Mr. Johnson as she had planned to return Thursday from an extended eastern trip but was detained and will not reach Los Angeles for several days. The decorations carried out the Halloween motif in all of the appointments, the centerpiece being a broad low bowl of autumn flowers in the deep rich tones, surrounded by candelabra in Halloween colors of black, yellow and bronze holding lighted tapers in the same tones. The place cards and favors also carried out the Halloween motif. Those included were, beside the honor guest, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hickok, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Swan, Mr. and Mrs. Paul P. Paulson, Mrs. Gertrude Snider, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest E. Noon, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Bush, Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Frye, Fred Enderly and the hosts.

To Philippines

Mrs. C. M. Malcolm of 4947 Marathon Road is leaving Tuesday aboard the S.S. President Hayes from Los Angeles Harbor for an extended visit to Manilla, P. I., where she will visit her son, Justice George A. Malcolm of the Supreme Court.

For Bride-Elect

Among the prenuptial events in honor of Miss Mildred Moir, fiancee of Edward Dorreston, whose wedding will be an event of November 10, was the miscellaneous shower and bridge tea with which Miss Evelyn Kingston entertained at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Kingston in South Lucerne Boulevard, Tuesday afternoon. The decorations were especially attractive in autumn colors, chrysanthemums and foliage predominating. Those included were Miss Moir, Mrs. Wallace Moir (Phyllis Kemp,) a bride of the season, Mrs. Frank Payne, Mrs. Harold Morgan, Miss Ann Abrahms, Miss Miriam Reed, Miss Betty Harwood, Miss Lucia Soule, Miss Geraldine Birks, Miss Harriet Nevin, Miss Adele Brown, Miss Helen Chandler, Miss Janie Vandaleer, Mrs. Donald Syres, Miss Marjorie Simmonds, Miss Grace Louise Whiteford, Miss Charlotte Edwards and Miss Betty Wheat.

Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Wallace Moir entertained at her home in Santa Monica for her sister-in-law, the feature of the affair being a linen shower, while Thursday afternoon Miss Grace Louise Whiteford was the hostess at a luncheon and bridge at the Mary Louise with Miss Moir as special guest of honor. Miss Harriet Nevin gave a bridge party of twelve covers at her home in Gramercy Place in her honor Monday afternoon.

Bridge Mornings

Proving most conclusively that society, her sister cousins and aunts is more than ordinarily interested in bridge, most of the affairs of the calendar each day are bridge-tea, bridge luncheon, bridge dinner or at least bridge evenings.

Home Wedding

A quiet home wedding was that of the 23rd inst., when Miss Winifred Hazen Adams, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Adams of Rancho Pisa Flores, Covina, became the bride of Charles Carroll Toland of Los Angeles, the ceremony taking place at the Adams home at 5:30 p.m., with Rev. George Steed of the First Methodist Church officiating. Miss Mildred Jacobson of Glendale, a friend of the family, sang "O, Promise Me." The bride was given in marriage by her father.

After the ceremony a few intimate friends called to offer their congratulations and were entertained by a group of songs given by Mme Ellen Beach Yaw. After November 1, Mr and Mrs. Toland will be at home at 351 North Benton Way, Los Angeles.

Engagement Announced

Formal announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Glass of Woodleigh and Flintridge avenues, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Quintella Glass, to Roy C. Garner of Bell, the news being told to a coterie of friends at a recent luncheon. A color scheme of pink with touches of green was used. The wedding will be one of the events of New Year's Eve.

The decorations of the luncheon table included a centerpiece of flowers in the rose tones from which extended to each place broad satin ribbons to which were attached birds with the names of the betrothed fastened by the ribbons. Covers were arranged for thirty-six guests and bridge featured the afternoon's entertainment.

The bride-elect is a member of the Kappa Delta Sorority at University of Southern California.

Mrs. Howard Glass will assist as matron of honor at the wedding, while Miss Evelyn Snavely and Miss Doris Sutherland will be bridesmaids.

Luncheon Party

Mrs. Cecil Frankel, chairman of the women's committee of the Philharmonic Orchestra, announces that much interest is being manifested in the luncheon to be given at the Biltmore, Wednesday, at 12 o'clock, by this committee, in honor of Mary Lewis, soloist, at the next symphony pair. This luncheon is open to friends of the Philharmonic Orchestra.

Miss Lewis is an American girl, born in Little Rock, Ark. In 1917, Miss Lewis ran away from her home with a musical show, and later starred in Ziegfeld's "Follies." Her brief life story has captured the imagination of thousands who go to hear her because of the romance connected with her sudden rise in less than a decade from a place in a small town church choir to the goal of all great singers, the Metropolitan Operahouse.

Members of the women's committee will first attend the rehearsal Wednesday morning at the Philharmonic Auditorium and then the luncheon, which is in charge of Mrs.

Miss Jean Luther

AMONG the members of the younger set who is being welcomed back after an absence of two years is Miss Jean Luther, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Luther of Winona Boulevard. Miss Luther has been making an extended trip around the world. An interesting event of the trip was the announcement of her engagement to Alfred Wells Noling of South Orange, N. J., the wedding to be one of the events of the near future, although a definite date has not yet been determined upon. Miss Luther before going abroad was one of the most active members of the Wellesley College Club, the college being her alma mater.

Hair Stays As You Wish

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Perhaps you like hair like mine, wavy, curly and abundant. I get that with my Wave and Sheen. I never have my hair Marcelled.

Perhaps you have a permanent wave, and wish to keep it. Then enhance at the same time the luster and color of your hair. Wave and Sheen will do that.

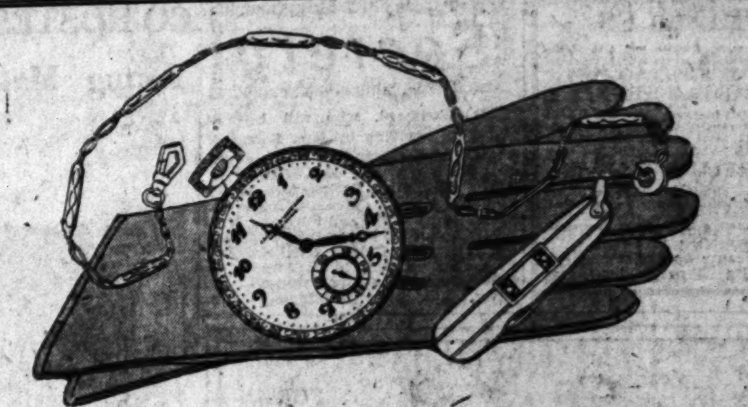
Perhaps you like sleek hair ever in place. Wave and Sheen will give that to you in the best way that men know.

This is the formula used in Paris for all forms of modern hair dress, men and women. It makes hair stay as you wish it, fluffy or curled or smooth. All modern women in Paris employ it, and the up-to-date must here.

My Wave and Sheen keeps hair fluffy or curly, if you wish. It keeps hair smooth and slick if you desire. It is the keeper of hair beauty.

After all my experience with my Wave and Sheen, I cannot conceive of a man or woman who would not delight to know it.

Get a bottle at any toilet counter today. Mark how it keeps your hair in place, without a particle of grease. Mark how it keeps the fluff or curl, or the permanent Marcel. Mark the new beauty it brings to your hair. I am sure you will always use it, as I do, when you see what Wave and Sheen does to the hair. The price is 75 cents.



Will This Be a Christmas Husbands Will Remember?

HE no doubt is like many men, he admires fine things—yet very rarely thinks of these things for himself. In other words a fine gift from you will become a greatly prized possession.

What a gift! A fine watch, a graceful creation, of beauty and accuracy. Here is a present of real merit, one that he will be proud to carry; and a gift that you will be proud to give.

Your judgment should lead you to this shop for his timepiece, for here you have assurance of only being shown representative watches of true worth. Such names as Vacheron & Constantin, Longines, Hamilton, Waltham, Gruen and Elgin stand for the finest in watchdom.

Then the personal guarantee and reputation of this house more than speaks the wisdom of your selection.

Around the World

Mrs. Edward H. Quinby is leaving shortly for a trip around the world planning to visit all points of interest in the Orient, India, Egypt and the continent of Europe. She will not return to Southern California for eight or ten months.

Evening Affair

One of the enjoyable affairs of recent date was that with which Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Ellsworth Rees entertained at their home Hawthorne Lodge, East Whittier, Friday evening. The color scheme was carried out in red and green decorations with Japanese lanterns hung in the living room. Cards and dancing featured the evening's entertainment, fifty guests being bidden. Mrs. Rees was formerly Miss Aida B. MacKenzie of Salt Lake City, and a niece of Countess Grace Goddard Eddington of London, Eng.

Luncheon Shower

The Rose Room of the Mary Louise was the charming setting chosen by Mrs. W. Earl Glenn of Fontana for a luncheon and shower Saturday afternoon with which she entertained in honor of Miss Irella Fly, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert J. Fly of San Diego whose engagement to Richard R. Crandall of Los Angeles was announced in the southern city recently. Pastel shades formed the decorations of the luncheon table and unique favors in the form of dolls in dainty crepe frocks marked the covers for Mmes. Edward Fletcher, Jr., J. Philip Wornble, Jr., of San Diego, Yates Owsley, Pasadena, Clark, B. Rude, George Lilt, O. H. Hall, Kellar Kellar, Walter G. Crandall, Ward Payne, Albert Carey and the Misses Fly, Zelma Arrasmith, Carolyn Crandall, Dorothy McGuire, Melba Byron, Edwina Richen, Mary Becky Dearing and the hostess.

The wedding of Miss Fly and Mr. Crandall will take place in Wilshire Congregational Church Wednesday.

Levy-Seiden

Formal announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. S. Levy of Rochester, N. Y., of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Sara Levy, to Charles Seiden, the ceremony taking place in the gardens of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Tauber 1527 Orange Grove avenue, Hollywood, last Sunday, with Rabbi Edgar Magnin officiating. Immediately following a breakfast was served in the Rose Room of the Mary Louise, the guests including Messrs. and Mmes. Michael Tauber, Edward Goldwater, Joe Goldberg, T. W Morris, Misses Lillian and Doris Pass, Bobby Levine, Minnie Levinson, Harriet Levine, Sylvia Levine, Betty Morris, Frances Feinberg, and William Levy, Max Seiden, Benjamin Jacobs, Louis Wyman, Louis Younger, Mr. and Mrs. N. Sperling, Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Weiss, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Arons and Mr. and Mrs. William Kellar.

After their return from their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Seiden will make their home in Los Angeles.

At Mission Inn

Among the season's weddings was that of the 20th inst., when Miss Marjorie Kratz, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Kratz of 1301 Martel avenue, became the bride of Henry Guy Little, the ceremony taking place at four o'clock in the afternoon in the quaint little Cecelia Chapel of Mission Inn, Riverside, with Rev. John E. Fry, D.D., officiating in the presence of relatives and friends. The bride given in marriage by her father, wore an exquisite gown of blue moire and satin with large picture hat of old gold lace faced with pink. She carried an arm shower of pink rosebuds and lilies of the valley.

Miss Catherine Van Tilburgh assisted as maid of honor in frock of coral blonde with picture hat to match and carried blush roses. Joseph Stedem served Mr. Little as best man.

A wedding supper followed the ceremony after which Mr. and Mrs. Little left on a honeymoon trip. On their return November 1, they will make their home in Hollywood.

The bride graduated from Hollywood High School and later from Universtiy of California, Southern Branch. Mr. Little also graduated from Hollywood High School.

Church Ceremony

Another wedding of much interest to local society was that of Miss Josephine Sweigert, attractive daughter of Mrs. L. J. Conroy, and William W. Vaughn, celebrated in the Little Church of the Flowers, Glendale, Wednesday, the 20th inst., with Rev. John R. Atwell officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle A. K. Keller and was charming in a gown of white satin period style, with trimmings of Chantilly lace and seed pearls. Her veil was of tulle held in place by orange blossoms and she carried an arm shower of bride's roses, gardenias and lilies of the valley. Miss Tatty Vaughn assisted as maid of honor wearing a gown of pink taffeta, bouffant style and carried an armful of lavendar sweet peas. J. Preston Vaughn was best man. The ushers included Henry T. Winn, Edwin Vaughn, Stanley Curtiss, Norman Jensen and Thomas Miller. Mrs. Henry T. Winn, sister of the bride, was matron of honor in gown of orchid taffeta, bouffant model and carried pink sweet peas. Only relatives and the bridal party were bidden to the wedding supper which was served in the Cocoanut Grove of the Ambassador, following the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn are passing their honeymoon in the northern part of the State and after their return will make their home here.

Halloween Bridge Party

One of the affairs of the month was the bridge party given at the Los Angeles Tennis Club, Saturday afternoon by Mrs. Duke Hancock, the decorations carrying out the Halloween holidays motif. The guests included Mrs. Donald Redwine, Mrs. L. A. Gilmore, Mrs. Floyd Schenck, Mrs. Harold Smith, Mrs. Sol Berrian, Mrs. Chester Taft, Mrs. J. Flannigan, Mrs. Forrest Underwood, Mrs. Edward Paine, Mrs. C. Stodder, Mrs. Edward Wormhoudt, Mrs. Marjorie Webber, Mrs. Edith Burbank, Mrs. Charles H. Connard, Mrs. R. S. Smith and Miss Marion Burbach.

Coming Home

John Hamlin, son of Mr. and Mrs Dwight Hamlin of Meadow Grove avenue, Flintridge, is expected home from Stanford for a week-end visit. Young Hamlin is a freshman at Stanford and is coming down for the Stanford-University of Southern California game. It will be his first visit to the new home of his parents in Flintridge.

Luncheon Bridge

Mrs. F. D. Burnfield was the hostess at a luncheon and bridge given Thursday afternoon at her home, 2154 Marathon avenue, those included being Mrs. O. C. Foster, Mrs. Alvin Wyckhoff, Mrs. Otto Dittbrenner and Mrs. A. Wilson of Los Angeles, Mrs. Frederick L. Wilke, Jr., of Carthay Center, Mrs. William Oates of Glendale, and Mrs. Allen Paull of Redondo.

At Westchester Apartments

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Nunus Cardoza (Lela B. Duncan of Kansas City,) whose wedding in June was one of the brilliant events of the eastern city, have just returned from their wedding trip and have taken an apartment in the Westchester, West Pico street at Westchester Place.

Mr. and Mrs. Charleton Ames have recently taken an apartment in the Westchester Apartments. Mrs. Ames was formerly Miss Mary Hampton, daughter of Benjamin B. Hampton of South St. Andrews Place.

Birthday Party

Celebrating the sixth birthday anniversary of her little daughter Barbara, Mrs. Dallas Speers entertained Friday the 22nd inst. with an affair at her home, the decorations carrying out the Halloween motif, even the ices being moulded in the shapes of small pumpkins and black cats. Those included were Janice Weiss, Gloria Clements, Bobby Jackson, Margaret Jackson, Martha Spring, Nancy MacFarland, Pel Supple, Billy Symes, Peter Probst, Jeannie Warne, Mary Jane Stewart, Patricia Bauer, Dickie Sheahan, Robert Sheahan, Patricia Lilly, Bobby Fiske, Rose Sheridan Taenzer, Jane Mason, Billy Robey, Bobby Dagget, Ruth Walters and Barbara Speers.

Sorority Bridge Tea

One of the interesting events to be held this coming Saturday at the Friday Morning clubhouse in South Figueroa street is the bridge tea and Barry Revue to be given by Delta Delta, the alumnae chapter of Alpha Chi Omega, and Alpha Psi, active chapter at University of California, Southern Branch, who are combining their efforts to make this affair a most worthwhile event. The proceeds will be added to their scholarship fund, and Alpha Chi bed which they maintain at the Children's Hospital. All of the models displaying William J. Barry's exquisite creations of art in silks and velvets will be Alpha Chi girls, as well as the hostesses at the tea. Those assisting Miss Jessie Cushman, chairman of the Alpha Chi Omega afternoon affair will be Mrs. Roy Botsford, Mrs. A. B. Wilson, Mrs. Ralph Sperry, Mrs S. S. Purviance, Mrs. Newton Vincent Alison and Miss Sylvia Hickey.

Church Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Catherine Newcomer to Truman Lettin was solemnized in St. Paul's Church, Pomona, Rev. Richard H. Gushee of Ontario officiating, assisted by Rev S. C. Clark, Jr., of Pomona. The bride wore a becoming gown of white satin with overdress of lace and net, the long veil of Chantilly lace being caught into a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried bride's roses, lilies of the valley and sweet peas. Miss Jane Newcomer in frock of green georgette with picture hat to match, assisted her sister as maid of honor, while the Misses Julia Higby of Pomona, Marcia Jean Church of Duarte, Nina Pancoast of Claremont and Lee Jones of Los Angeles were bridesmaids. They wore gowns of green taffeta fashioned alike and hats to match. Bay Robinson of Pasadena, was best man and Howard Wright, Hugh Wright, Jr., J. Carleton Black and Oscar Hammersley were ushers. A reception at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Newcomer, followed the ceremony. The bride graduated from Pomona High School and this year from Pomona College. She is a member of the Kappa Delta sorority at University of California, which she attended during her junior year. Mr Lettin, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Lettin of Pomona, graduated from the High School Class of 1921 and University of California in 1925. He is a member of the Abracadabra fraternity.

In the North

Mr. and Mrs. David Horowitz, Mr. and Mrs. Lew Rosenmayer and Mrs. Charles Spitz motored to San Francisco, where they went to attend the football games and visit for several days.

Wedding Announced

Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Cooper announce the marriage of their daughter, Eleanor Ruth Moore, to Norman Charles Marsh, the ceremony taking place August 14 in Santa Barbara, with Rev. J. H. Van Deerlin officiating at Trinity Rectory.

Home Again

One of the popular members of the younger set who is being welcomed home after an absence of two years abroad, is Miss Jean Luther, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George

The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have best cough medicine you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this famous home-made cough syrup. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. It tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, which has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Your Wrinkles Take Wings—in 15 Minutes

Want to have those unwelcome marks of age, illness or fatigue disappear in a few minutes, before your very eyes? Just dissolve a spoonful of Powdered Tarkroot in a spoonful of lemon juice, smooth this soothing emulsion over your face—then go to your mirror and see what happens! You will certainly have the surprise of your life. You will readily concede you have never seen or heard of anything that could cause so remarkable and so quick a rejuvenation of face and features.

While this simple home treatment has such a wonderful effect upon a wrinkled or saggy skin, it is altogether harmless. Its influence upon the facial tissues is decidedly beneficial. Tarkroot is not to be confused with any cosmetic or makeup, for it is to be washed off, leaving no trace of itself. A package from the druggist contains enough to make the cost less than 3 cents a treatment!

Activities of Hosts and Hostesses in Society's Week

H. Luther of Winona Boulevard. Miss Luther sailed for Japan and China in the fall of 1924, passing an interesting year in Peking before going to Europe by way of the Suez Canal, visiting the Dutch Indies, Ceylon and Egypt. She reached Europe last March, passed several months in Italy and the French Riviera and just recently found her way back to her home city.

During her absence abroad her engagement to Alfred Wells Noling of South Orange, N. J., was announced. Miss Luther met Mr. Noling in Peking, where Mr. Noling, also en route around the world, passed several months. The wedding will be one of the interesting events of the near future, although the exact date has not been settled. Miss Luther is a member of the Women's Athletic Club and before her departure was quite active in Wellesley College Club, the college being her alma mater.

Celebrates Birthday

Celebrating her birthday anniversary Miss Hortense Barnhart Jones, who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pierce Jones, at their home in West Thirtieth street, gave a dinner and bridge party Monday evening. Miss Jones, who for several years has been in the East studying voice culture in New York City, has been visiting here for several months and has been persuaded by her many friends to give a recital in the ballroom of the Biltmore November 12. Those included in the dinner party were a small coterie of intimate friends who entertained for her when she visited here last year. They were Mr. and Mrs. John T. Curtin, Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Stonier, Mrs. Holderness, Mrs. C. M. C. Raymond and the family.

Keller-Wright

One of the beautiful weddings of the month was that of Wednesday evening the 20th inst., when Miss Marie Wishard Keller, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Westcott Keller, became the bride of Harold Stephens Wright, the ceremony taking place at the family home in South Kingsley Drive with Dr. Frank Dyer officiating. The living-room was decorated in delicate shades of pink, white and blue, with button chrysanthemums, gladioli, dahlias and delphinium, while the improvised altar was arranged at one end of the long room in front of the fireplace.

The bride was attended by her aunt, Miss Ruth T. Doolittle, and given in marriage by her father, while Joseph McDonald Devin served Mr. Wright as best man.

The bride was dressed in a gown of white lace and pearl-embroidered georgette over satin and wore a bandeau of orange blossoms and pearls, carrying a shower bouquet of bride's rosebuds and lilies of the valley.

Miss Doolittle's gown was of seafoam green georgette over satin and heavily embroidered in silver. Her arm bouquet was of delicate pink rosebuds.

Goldenrod and chrysanthemums were used to adorn the library and dining rooms, where about seventy-five friends and relatives were served a buffet supper following the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright left at 10 o'clock on their honeymoon. They will motor north and after their return will be at home at 849 South Kenmore avenue.

Wedding Announced

Formal announcement cards are being received from Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Longenecker Bear, of the recent wedding of their daughter, Miss Zora, and Horace Van Norman Gibson, the ceremony taking place Wednesday the 20th inst. at Manhattan Beach. Mr. and Mrs. Gibson will be at home to their friends after November 1 in Nuevo, Cal.

To Introduce Cousin

To introduce her cousin, Miss Eleanor Terry, to her many young friends, Mrs. I. H. Preston gave an informal dance Friday evening the 22nd inst. at her home, 662 South Ardmore avenue. Mrs. Clyde Terry, mother of the young honoree and Mrs. George Clendenen assisted the hostess.

Halloween motif was effectively carried out in all the appointments of the evening. Those included were Miss Eva Haight, Miss Dorothy Capps, Miss Virginia Graves, Miss Genevieve Hall, Miss Glenlyn Hall, Miss Bernice Hallinen, Miss Katherine Porter, Miss Phillipps, Mrs. Avonelle Howlett, Mrs. Kate McHargue, Clyde Terry, George Morris, Collin Timmons, Jr.; Howard Hall, George Clendenen, William Withee, N. Trudson, Gordon Moss, Bob Bennett, Bill Whitney, Raymond Thursby, J. J. Cox, William Black, J. Dennis and William Howlett.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Terry, with their daughter, have come recently from Flushing, N. Y., to make this their future home.

At Country Club

Honoring Mrs. J. E. McMorries, who is leaving shortly for a trip to South America, Africa and Europe, Mrs. Louis Henri Vallery of South Catalina street, entertained with a bridge-luncheon at the Flintridge Country Club, her guests including Mrs. Charles Anderson, Mrs. E. F. Bogardus, Jr.; Mrs. L. M. Bown, Mrs. M. S. Burlingame, Mrs. M. M. Barnett, Mrs. James Campbell, Mrs. Joseph Lee Dabbs, Mrs R. V. Eberle, Mrs. F. X. Eberle, Mrs. L. D. Godshall, Mrs. A. E. Mayo of Pasadena, and Mrs. George R. Mayo of New York.

Honors Bride

Mrs. Leo Boddie Tyson, a recent bride of San Diego, was the honored guest at a very beautifully appointed luncheon given by Mrs. William Davis Edmonds at her home, 1417 West Forty-eighth street, Friday afternoon. An effective color scheme of salmon pink and apricot was carried out in the flower arrangements of the living-rooms as well as in the favors, tall candles and a basket of dahlias which formed the centerpiece of the luncheon table. Covers were laid for the honor guests, Mrs. Tyson, Mrs. Charles H Thatcher, Mrs. William E. Essick, Mrs. Sidney Holman, Mrs. William La Roque, Mrs. Dion Romandy, Mrs. Harry Horsman and the hostess.

Back to the Coast

Mrs. Henry Lamb of 2024 Wilmot street has returned from the East, where she went to take her young nephew, Carlyle Butler Lumsden, in Roxbury, a preparatory school at Cheshire, Ct. A visit to Louisville, Ky., the old home of her husband, the late Col. Henry Lamb, was especially pleasant. While in Louisville, Mrs. Lamb was the guest of her sister, Mrs. A. L. Lamb.

Bridge-Luncheon

Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Einar B. Arneson of Burnside Drive gave a luncheon and bridge party in honor of Mrs. Godfrey Hansen. The color scheme was of yellow with autumn flowers, candles and favors in the same tones. Those included were Mrs. Hansen, Miss Edith Sundeen, Mrs. Adolph Madsen, Mrs. Chris Lewis, Mrs. Reynolds, Mrs. Sivert Arnesen, Mrs. Alex Hansen, Mrs. Raymond Johnson and the hostess.

Series of Affairs

Mrs. Charles William Chech of 5433 Eleventh avenue has been entertaining this month with a series of elaborate bridge-luncheons at her home, in honor of Mrs. Herbert N. Carqueville of Miami, Fla., who, with her son Herbert, is planning to make Los Angeles their future home. Among those included were Mrs. John Ward Gibson, Mrs. Dollar Russell McBryde, Mrs. W. R. Boydston, Mrs. D. D. Mills, Mrs. F. R. Sloane, Mrs. Horace F. McBryde, Mrs. M. J. Sloane, Mrs. James Elliott, Mrs. E. A. Sutton, Mrs. D. J. McBryde, Mrs. J. A. WILLA CATHER AT HER BEST

"My Mortal Enemy" Analyzes the Soul of a Harried Temperamental Woman; John Erskine Rationalizes the Arthurian Legends; Ford Maddox Ford Ends the War

BY LILLIAN C. FORD

MY MORTAL ENEMY. By Willa Cather. Alfred A. Knopf, New York.

The problem of human relations is the most vital in life. The individual who can establish and maintain beautiful contacts with others is fortunate, happy, blessed. Usually a certain amount of placidity of temperament, along with a slightly lazy bent, is found in the person who manages to be peacefully satisfied with his family, his friends, his environment. Philosophy, which should help, seldom does. For the wisest theories of living, the best of intentions, the most altruistic point of view, often fall before the irritations of constant association with others and before the onslaughts of temperament. So the irritable saint, too high-keyed, too sensitive, too temperamental, often lives in an atmosphere of friction, where one with less T.N.T. in his make-up glides along easily.

Where there is a modicum of pure devil in the disposition, as there was in Willa Cather's Myra Henshawe, acidity instead of placidity, along with a nervous irritability and sensitiveness that turned vicious at a touch, the problem of how a woman is to be adjusted to her hurband and friends, is intensified. With Myra there were other complications that made her feel thwarted, driven, rebellious.

The story is told in the first person, ostensibly by a certain Nellie, who, as a high-school girl, first met the Myra Henshawe of whom she had heard so much. The high-spirited Myra had thrown away a great fortune in her youth by marrying Oswald Henshawe in defiance of her uncle's pronibition.

In the small Illinois town where she had lived stories drifted back of the volcanic Myra, who seemed to be living a free and satisfying life in New York, where her husband became a railroad executive. On a visit Nellie found her a feverish, seeking woman of middle age, with many friendships with actors and actresses, and always with a young man in attendance. She was jealous of her husband, whose devotion never flagged, though he was quite eclipsed by his wife.

So long as the income was reasonably large, Myra's life was not so disappointing, though we know that many a time she looked back at the great fortune she had sacrificed. But when Oswald lost his position and Myra her health, the real test came. Here Miss Cather rises to her best. Myra, broken and defeated, Oswald devoted, but wretched, with nothing to look forward to, is a picture which is not easily forgotten.

In those brooding days of pain, Myra thought of her husband as her mortal enemy, because he represented her own weakness, the triumph of her passion over her judgment, the incarnation of that which had made her life a failure.

A very short book, hardly more than a novelette in length, but one that gives us the very soul of a harried woman, too complex and too volcanic to cope with life. A distinct step in Miss Cather's progress.

GALAHAD. Enough of His Life to Explain His Reputation. By John Erskine. The Bobbs Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

The satiric author of "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" has again gone into the archives of the past for his characters. This time it is certain phases of the Arthurian legend that captured his interest. Arthur and Lancelot and Guinevere and some others are the characters, each presented with the clear-eyed cynicism that takes them out of romance and places them in the very center of reality.

Such a rationalization of the characters of romance requires unusual gifts, and these Prof. Erskine has. With a fine mock solemnity he tells his story or lets his characters tell it, and does it so adroitly that the reader is not always conscious of the sardonic glint in the author's eye.

As for Sir Galahad, his parents and his character, the boy whose "strength was as the strength of ten because his heart was pure," he is, after all, a mere side issue. The tale, as the author says, is built on "three women and a coincidence." The three women are Guinevere and two Elaines. The coincidence becomes clear to those who read the book.

John Erskine has for a decade been considered one of America's leading men of letters. Overnight he became popular with his amazing best-selling novel, "The Private Life of Helen of Troy." That America has become so interested in a keen, sophisticated piece of work such as "Helen" proves many things, the most important of which is that American readers are outgrowing Pollyana.

A MAN COULD STAND UP. By Ford Madox Ford. Albert and Charles Boni, New York.

This novel follows "No More Parades," in which we left Christopher Tietjens of "Some Do Not," in command of a battalion in a British base

RECENT BOOKS

TRUMPS. A Collection of Short Stories. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

These short stories were selected by the Community Workers of New York Guild for the Jewish blind, this being the third annual collection. The first was "Aces" and the second "More Aces."

Authors represented here include John Galsworthy, George Ade, Konrad Bercovici, Louis Bromfield, Willa Cather, Octavus Roy Cohen, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Zona Gale, Kathleen Norris, Mary Roberts Rinehart and H. C. Witwer.

WHALING NORTH AND SOUTH. By F. V. Morley and J. S. Hodgson. The Century Company, New York.

An account of whaling expeditions in Arctic and Antarctic, given in the form of a personal narrative of actual experiences placed against a background of whaling as an industry.

Full details are given of the how and why and where of whaling, with a history of the industry and much else of interest to those who respond to good pictorial narrative.

THE GREAT ISLAND. By Don C. Seitz. The Century Company, New York.

Don Seitz is like Dorothy Dix. He is a journalist who can and is always ready to tackle any subject which under his hand becomes one worth following. In "The Great Island" he turns his attention to Newfoundland and tell us in his own first-rate way of its history, its natural resources, its fish and game, its government and economics, and of some of its more interesting places, customs and peculiarities.

He assures us that for the traveler seeking novelty, the fisherman wishing to fill his creel, the hunter after quarry, and the investor seeking opportunity, Newfoundland offers splendid opportunities.

FIFTY FAVORITE OPERAS. A Popular Account Intended as An Aid to Dramatic and Musical Appreciation. By Paul England. Harper & Brothers, New York.

Mr. England is well known as a librettist and translator whose English versions of the operas have won recogntion. With the movement for more and better opera and much of it in English, and with the decidedly lively interest in all that pertains to opera here in Los Angeles, his generous volume should be popular here.

Following a short historical summary, fifty of the most famous operas are described, first historically, and then with the action as divided into acts and scenes.

Each opera is documented throughout, with critical and explanatory references to all the well-known numbers and leading musical features. The illustrations, showing various grand-opera stars in their most significant parts, are of interest.

SANCTUARY! SANCTUARY! By Dallas Lore Sharp. Harper & Brothers, New York.

Dallas Lore Sharp counts his readers by the thousand, for they know him as the essayist of parts, as a poet whose note is a calm optimism and as a naturalist who is informative as well as a philosopher as well as a keep observer and lover of nature.

In this volume he tells of the birds and animals that he has studied at his own home, Hingham, Mass., of an interesting bird sanctuary in Oregon, of the birds of California, of an accomplished toad, of yellow-billed magpies, of fishing and of other subjects dear to the heart of the author.

DOROTHY DIX: HER BOOK. Funk & Wagnalls, New York.

Here we have the well-known Dorothy Dix, a syndicate in herself, who solves domestic problems, heart problems, housekeeping problems, for all comers, upon request.

As "the most popular woman journalist in the world," because she "understands human nature, and, with her sympathy and broad-minded tolerance, she strikes a note that rings true in every heart." In the pages of her new book she has a message of cheer and of wit and wisdom for all men and women.

The book is full of interesting advice—"How a Husband Likes to Be Treated," "Queer Things About Marriage," "What Price Pleasure," "How to Catch a Wife," "Why Divorce is Common," "Should Women Tell?" "Women's Greatest Gift," "Keeping Young," "Why Our Families Rile Us," "To Marry or Not to Marry," "When a Girl Loves a Man," "Taking Husbands as Is," "Preparing for Old Age," "Spoiling a Wife," "The Mother-in-Law," "Don't Be Afraid to Let Your Husband See You Love Him," etc.

A LONDON BEST SELLER

London booksellers report George Macaulay Trevelyan's "History of England" (Longmans) among the four best-selling, nonfiction books of the month. The volume is dedicated to President Lowell of Harvard University.

Among a list of authors' names with correct pronunciation recently published in a circular of the Public Library of Haverhill, Mass., we find: Emerson Hough, author of "The Covered Wagon" (like "cuff;") Dean Inge, author of "Religion and Life" (like "sing;") Maria Jeritza, author of "Sunlight and Song" ("You're-it-sir;") Vachel Lindsay, author of "Going to the Sun," (like "Rachel,") and Andre Maurois, author of "Ariel-the-Life of Shelley" ("Ondray Mor-wah.")

WORKS OF THEODORE ROOSEVELT

THE WORKS OF THEODORE ROOSEVELT. National Edition. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

This is a subscription edition of the writings of Roosevelt, issued in twenty compact volumes at a popular price. Heretofore, the only complete edition has been one too expensive for the general public.

Each volume has an introduction by some person of note. George Bird Grinnell, Stewart Edward White, William Beebe, Carl Akeley, William S. Simms, Frank M. Chapman, Hamlin Garland, George Haven Putnam, Elihu Root, Albert Shaw, Henry Cabot Lodge, Brander Matthews, Gifford Pinchot, are some who write enlightening upon some particular phase of Roosevelt's work.

Herman Hagerdom in the general foreword points out that four main interests dominated Roosevelt's life—the world of outdoors, history, politics, and his own human relationships, and his writings naturally fall into four major groups. First come his books of adventure—his narrations of frontier life, of hunting and of animal life, and of his travels and explorations in strange places. The first five volumes of this set are devoted to these.

The second group represents his work in the field of history. Here we find "The Winning of the West," "Hero Tales from American History," the story of the Rough Riders and some historical and biographical essays.

Seven volumes constitute the third group, in which are included all of the literary, moral and political essays and addresses. Lastly are the two volumes of a more intimate, personal nature, his delightful "Letters to His Children" and his "Autobiography."

Reading here and there in these volumes, in order to "taste" them, the conviction is formed that if Roosevelt had been less a man of action, he might have won fame as a writer. As it turned out, his dramatic deeds overshadowed his writings, so that he is seldom spoken of as an author. And yet he had the gift of the written word. Take his foreword to "A Book-lover's Holidays in the Open," which William Beebe cites as his best work. Of its kind it is unsurpassed. "The beauty and charm of the wilderness are his for the asking, for the edges of the wilderness lie close beside the beaten roads of present travel. He can see the red splendor of desert sunsets, and the unearthly glory of the afterglow on the battlements of desolate mountains. In sapphire gulfs of ocean he can visit islets, above which the wings of myriad sea-fowl make a kind of shifting cuneiform script in the air. He can ride along the brink of the stupendous cliff-walled canyon, where eagles soar below him, and cougars make their lairs on the ledges and harry the big-horned sheep. He can journey through the northern forests, the home of the giant moose, the forests of fragrant and murmuring life in summer, the ironbound and melancholy forests of winter. The joy of living is his who has the heart to demand it."

George Bird Grinnell quotes a letter written to him by Roosevelt shortly before his death, in which he said: "You and I and the rest of our generation are now getting within range of the rifle-pits. We all of us have to face the same fate a few years earlier or a few years later, and I think that what really matters is that according to our lights we shall have borne ourselves well and rendered what service we were able to, as long as we could do so."

This might well stand as the man's epitaph. According to his lights, which were sometimes bright and clear, and at other times dim and flickering, Roosevelt did render what service he was able to. With this thought in mind one can read even his more partisan political essays, accepting here, rejecting there, but always feeling in every utterance of the man a vitality, a reality and a vigor that command admiration and respect.

INTERLUDE

How still my house this twilight!
No sound without or in—
Just the ticking of an ancient clock
Upon the stair.
My bedroom fireplace
Is black and bare.

Now come my little children
Creeping from their nest
In my heart.

Before a glowing fire
I hold a naked baby in my lap—
Happy baby,
Kicking free of day's attire.
Bright-Eyes at my knee
Asks a story.
The fire light on his hair
A shining glory.
From the bath come shouts and splashing.
Boys scrubbing toes
And making soapy billows;
Now down the hall
They're dashing,
Racing, scuffling,
Flinging pillows.

Quick, boys, a kiss!
Good-night!
Back into bed each one goes,
Into my heart, tucked out of sight.
Turn on the light!
The past is gone,
It's now again;
The front door opens . . .
Here come my men.

—[Sarah Bixby Smith in October Lyric West.

Charles Scribner's Sons announce a new book by Henry Van Dyke. "The Golden Key" contains stories of great variety, but with the common theme that a key may be found to unlock every difficult situation. Two earlier works of Dr. Van Dyke, "The Spirit of Christmas" and "The Friendly Year," are being issued in new editions.

It Sometimes Happens

One fellow lost control of his car the other day because he couldn't keep up the payments.—[Anderson Herald.

MR. AND MRS. HADDOCK IN PARIS

MR. AND MRS. HADDOCK IN PARIS, FRANCE. By Donald Ogden Stewart. Harper & Brothers, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Haddock and little Mildred felt sure that nothing that Paris had to show them could bring to their minds any comparison unfavorable to their home town, Legion, O. But they felt that, as prosperous Americans, they should see the sights in Paris. Four days seemed sufficient. Mrs. Jenkens had done it in that time, and so could they.

But they did not reckon on the effect of Paris cuisine on little Mildred's tummy, nor of the effect of certain French ways on Mr. Haddock. So, instead of following in the beaten paths, they had some unusual experiences, in which all learned something that it is good for provincials to know.

While Mr. Stewart's accounts of Paris taxicabs and porters and elevators may not make all readers guffaw, there is imbedded in his farcical writing a sly satire that reveals a wise appraisal of mankind. And the picture of the Americans, lost in Paris, but courageously pretending to be having a good time, is one that rings true, despite its exaggeration and, at times, labored humor.

As to how Americans are considered abroad, here is Mr. Haddock's conclusion:

"I've learned, for one thing, that no matter what the newspapers say, the French don't like the Americans, and the English don't like the Americans, and I bet the Germans and Italians don't either. . . . Sure," he went on as though the Bottin had denied it, "they say they like us—and they take our money gladly enough—and tell us we're great when it comes to donating funds for the Red Cross or some earthquake or war or something—but down in their hearts they despise us."

TRAVELS IN TROPIC LANDS

By Way of the Los Angeles Public Library.

Black Haiti. By Blair Niles. Putnam. A living story of the amazing little black republic that rises so fearlessly out of the Atlantic. A tiny island to which has been transported the people, customs and superstitions of mysterious Africa. An island whose dramatic history is filled with tales of revolt, treachery, and the clash of conflict. So vividly is this told that the reader relinquishes the book with a very real feeling of regret.

Through Wildest Africa. By F. Ratcliffe Holmes. Geoffrey Bliss, London. Written in a clear-cut, photographic style unencumbered by rhetoric, this account of an adventurous trek into the interior of the dark continent with its very graphic descriptions of the country and the people, constitutes an interesting, as well as entertaining book of travel.

The Venture Book. By Elinor Mordaunt. Century. The exotic islands of the south seas, saturated with warmth and color, form a brilliant and fascinating background for this chronicle of a true vagabond—a woman, whose insatiable curiosity and zest for adventure caused her to sail many seas, lured her into strange ports, and carried her through almost unbelievable adventures.

LITERARY GOSSIP

Robert Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy," to be reissued this fall by George H. Doran Company, will be edited by Paul Jordan-Smith and Floyd Dell. Mr. Smith, who is a resident of Los Angeles, is the author of a book of brilliant literary essays entitled "On Strange Altars," in which is to be found one of the most sympathetic and illuminating studies of James Joyce, author of "Ulysses." Other books of Mr. Smith's are "Cables of Cobweb" and "Nomad," two novels in the modern vein that solidly place him in the creative field.

A popular-priced edition of "The Recollections of Thomas R. Marshall" will be published soon by Bobbs-Merrill. The genial Vice-President, who died too soon, left behind him a delightful representation of his sparkling wit and kindly humor.

Add examples of perfect author-artist collaboration: Miss Lucille Douglas, who made the black and white illustrations for Mrs. Florence Ayscough's "A Chinese Mirror," has done the brush sketches for Mrs. Ayscough's new book, "The Autobiography of a Chinese Dog," which Houghton Mifflin Company published late in October. Yo Fei, the cultured, courageous, discriminating observer, has undertaken the story of his canine life and adventures, a task in which his missus, Mrs. Ayscough, has acted as amanuensis. As entertainment or as interpretative light on China this volume should find delighted readers. Miss Douglass herself, like Mrs. Ayscough, a long resident and intimate friend of China, drew the illustrations for "The Autobiography" at Mrs. Ayscough's home in New Brunswick under her personal supervision.

Irvin S. Cobb, in his introduction to "Over My Left Shoulder," by Robert H. Davis, published this week by Appleton, writes: "To not many men of this generation has been given the chance to sit in on such much of the passing show of our planet as Bob Davis has seen with his own eyes and recorded for future reference within the perfect card index of his own brain." That passing show includes years of newspaper work that threw him among prize fighters and prima donnas, artists and prospectors for gold, cowboys and actresses, men and women of all types and of all walks of life—years as editor of Munsey's Magazine that have brought him in contact with literary celebrities. Of all these people he now writes in his fluid, racy style.

"Thebes: The Glory of a Great Past," one of the most profusely illustrated of the fall, is to be issued shortly by Lincoln MacVeagh (the Dial Press.) Sponsored by the Queen Elizabeth Egyptological Foundation of Brussels, it is the work of Jean Capart, curator of the Royal Museums of Brussels and professor in the University of Liege. This house is also publishing "The Vespasiano Memoirs," the first English translation of this remarkable series of lives written in the fifteen century by Vespasiano Da Bisticci, bookseller of Florence.

The first item in the new series of American Pamphlet Poets—a selection of the most representative verse of Carl Sandburg—was bought at the office of the publishers by Will Durant, author of "The Story of Philosophy." A similar series of publication, the Augustan Books of Modern Poetry, have achieved wide popularity in England, where they are familiarly known as the Sixpenny Poets. They are brought out in America by Frederick A. Stokes & Co.

Hughes Mearns, general editor of the American Pamphlet Poets, who has made the selections with the aid of John Erskine, Joseph Anthony, Laurence Jordan and Louis Untermeyer, announces that the first six poets represented in the series are Carl Sandburg, Elinor Wylie, Walt Whitman, Nathalia Crane, H.D., and Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Floyd L. Darrow, author of "Through Science to God," was science instructor before taking up writing seriously. He is president of the school board in his city, Ashville, N. Y. His new book, "Miracles: A Modern View, is one of the new fall books.

Mary Eastwood of the book-information section of the New York State Library, heads off her list of six recent books worth buying for libraries with "Aricie Brun," the French Academy prize novel by Emile Henriot, which the Viking Press published last spring and which is now in its second edition.

Putnams have just published "The Seven Cities of Cibola," by Aileen Nusbaum. This book is composed of Zuni Indian myths and legends retold for children. The author, Mrs. Nusbaum, was born in New Mexico and has always been interested in the folklore of the great Southwest. She was brought up in France and remained there until after the war, when she returned to her native State. There she met and married Jesse Logan Nusbaum, who has since become superintendent of the Mesa Verde National Park, where much of the author's work was collected. Incidentally, her young son Deric published a book similar to "David Goes Voyaging" earlier this fall.

A NEW BIOGRAPHY OF FRA

Phillips Russell Gives Us a Splendid Portrait of "Poor Richard's Almanac" in the Light of and Letters Recently Discovered

BY THOMAS F. FORD

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN. The First Civilized American. By Phillips Russell. Brentano's, New York.

This is a new study of Benjamin Franklin, whom the author characterizes as "the first civilized American." The work is largely based on Franklin's autobiography, supplemented with new letters and other documents that have but recently been brought to light. In keeping with the modern passion for facts, facts and more facts, Mr. Russell has in this work attempted and largely succeeded in presenting Franklin as a very human man, wise beyond most men of his day and generation, deeply imbued with a passion for doing good. Old Ben was never obsessed with the idea of being good in the conventional sense, he had a complete abhorrence of the professional moralist. His view was that of the tolerant man who believed that men were born into an altogether imperfect world and that if, while enjoying life, he now and then transgressed the fixed and frozen rules that the apostles of gloom have prescribed, his error was to be condoned rather than punished.

Franklin was, like Paine, a freethinker. He was not in the least interested in formal religion. He was a sturdy patriot, a lover of mankind, and believed in the largest measure of individual freedom consistent with the general welfare. Like all men of strong personality, he was inconsistent in many things.

WILLA CATHER AT HER BEST

camp in France. After the flare-up that resulted from his wife's plot to wreck him, the persecuted but stoical Christopher had been transferred.

Christopher is a survival; he is the last of the English country gentlemen; a man who cherishes inherited standards and abides by them at all costs; one who will not divorce his wife, the mother of his son, however much he wishes to rid himself of her. Sylvia, the wife, is the vindictive wanton, driven to extremities in her effort to conquer his will.

In "A Man Could Stand Up" we have Christopher in the last scenes of the war, fighting blindly, heroically risking his life to save some of his men, rebuked and degraded by a commanding officer because of an ancient grudge, but steadfastly keeping his mouth shut, and doing his duty in the good old British way.

Back in England on Armistice Day, he is in shabby lodgings, thinking over his situation, longing for that Valentine Wannop, who had won his heart in "Some Do Not." Then Valentine reappears and the two have to meet the problem of what they are to do about their love.

There is much of Christopher's thoughts, much introspection in the book, which has many dull pages. But there is body to it, purpose, philosophy. It seldom rises to the dramatic climaxes which Ford knows how to create, and it presents the characters in less intense crises than do the other books. Ford knows the human biped; he knows his England and its trend and changes; he knows the horror of war, with its d"t and vermin and lust and pain; and he knows how to create his scene and to maintain it. But, I think, in this last novel he talks too much. Even good talk in a novel may tire those who are primarily interested in the story.

WALLACE EVOLVES DANCE

Earle Wallace has evolved a new ballroom dance which he calls the "Holly-Hop." It has already put the Charleston to rout in many of the places it has been demonstrated. Many of the large ballrooms and theaters throughout California are contracting for one of the several teams of Earle Wallace dancers who are now being coached both at the Los Angeles and Long Beach studios to demonstrate the ballroom and exhibition version of the Holly-Hop.

NEW BIOGRAPHY OF FRANKLIN

He preached vegetarianism and practiced it for many years, but as maturity came on he was a devotee of the good things of the table and his latter days were tormented with chronic gout. He was a lover of the ladies. This penchant for the fair—and there is ample ground for the suspicion that many of his fair friends were also frail—did not result in neglect of his own family. He was devoted to his wife and one of the great sorrows of his life was the fact that his favorite son was a Tory who refused to break his allegiance with the British crown.

He hated tyranny in all its phases. One of the most important elements in shaping his life and developing his philosophy was that he could not abide the exercise of power on the part of those who possessed it, merely because of that possession. He never quite forgave his father or his elder brother James for their tyrannical treatment of him as a boy. His passion was to write. His father scorned writers as men destined to failure. His brother James also mistreated him on this score. Not because of his contempt for mere scriveners, for he was a newspaper owner who had to depend on this class, but because he was shrewd enough to recognize in the precocious younger brother a potential man of literary ability, and he was small enough and mean enough to be jealous of the boy.

The greatest influence that operated in developing his clarity of expression and force in argument was his study of the works of Addison and Steele. His early writings are so saturated with these two great English writers that at times he unconsciously used not only the spirit of their works, but often the very letters, so to speak. As a mere lad he was employed in his brother's print shop. At this time he was deeply immersed in the Spectator, particularly in the adventures of Sir Roger de Coverly. He was fairly aching to write, but knowing his brother's feeling as to the competence of a youth of his age in so daring and lofty a field, he suppressed his urge and bided his time. Finally, having completed his first literary effort, he signed it Silence Dogood and slipped it under the door of his brother's office. When James found it he at once saw that it was a lively, well-written piece and published it. Young Ben almost burst with joy. He then wrote other pieces under the same signature. All were published and commented on favorably by the paper's readers. The regular corps of writers was speculating wildly as to the identity of Silence Dogood. Her work was discussed pro and con. Various persons known to have literary aspirations were thought of as the author. In the meantime Ben was having the time of his life. His pompous brother and other literary cockalorums were loud in their praise of the new literary light who so cunningly concealed her flame under a bushel of anonymity.

Finally the boy could stand it no longer. He felt that the work was so well received that he would be recognized, even by his brother. But nothing of the kind happened. When he blushingly confessed that he was Silence Dogood, instead of a slap on the back and a word of hearty encouragement, his small-minded brother glared at him and said: "What! You wrote those pieces? On my time, too, I'll wager. You think you're smart, don't you? The customer's waiting for that job. Silence Dogood, indeed! Your name ought to be Talkative Dobad."

In commenting on this incident in his autobiography, Franklin says: "I fancy his (meaning his brother,) tyrannical treatment of me might be the means of impressing me with that aversion to arbitrary power that has stuck to me through my whole life."

Franklin spent twenty-five years abroad in the service of his country. In the course of this long career at the courts of Europe, both in the service of the colonies and later in that of the Republic, he met practically every worth-while personage of the period. It is safe to say that he called the majority of the eminent men and charming women that he met, his friends. Very few men in history have been loved and respected as Franklin was in the courts of the old world. Among the women there was, of course, one whose place was pre-eminent. Mme. d'Hardancourt Brillon, wife of a French official, Juoy de Brillon. Mme. Brillon called him "dear papa" and once wrote to him, saying: "My heart loved you from the first moment of our acquaintance." Her adoration of this great man was peculiar, in that she was in no way inferior to Franklin in the matter of intellectual powers and as far as superficial polish is concerned, she was more than his equal. She was wise, witty, well informed, sophisticated. Her letters are among the first rank of brilliant epistolary literature of the period. Writing to him at another time, this woman, who consorted with the cream of French society, who might have any of the French gallants in her train for the crooking of a finger, said: "My papa loves me. He loves to know that I think of him; he loves to hear me say it. My heart, which is always ready to say it to him, guides my pen, and the word aimer (to love,) is always formed in the nib."

Here then, we have the biography, written with sympathy and restraint, but not a restraint that seeks to cover with a halo of hypocritical morality, a great American whose outstanding characteristic was a gusto for living; who preferred doing good to being good; who abhorred all forms of tyranny; who established the first public library; the first fire engine company; who tamed the lightning of heaven; who, though deficient in formal education, became one of the foremost men of his era consorting with the greatest scholars, philosophers, scientists and statesmen of two continents. He was humorous, tolerant, witty and wise. We are indebted to Mr. Russell for this study of one of the giants of those days that "tried men's souls." It appears, however, that Franklin's soul was never greatly tried. He was, from the first, though of almost peasant origin, too wise to ever appear overserious, and too genuinely serious to ever pretend to be overwise.

KUSELL TO TEACH CHILDREN

Maurice L. Kusell has just announced that his first children's class in buck and wing, waltz, clog, soft shoe and all stage dancing will commence November 13. Mr. Kusell will personally direct these classes and the work taught will be the same that is given to his adult pupils. He claims that a child should learn dances that may be useful to him when he is grown up. It is folly to teach children easy routines that have to be discarded when they become young ladies and men.

Besides the dancing training, he offers correct body development and physical corrective exercises, which every child needs. The classes will be limited so that each member will receive his share of individual instruction.

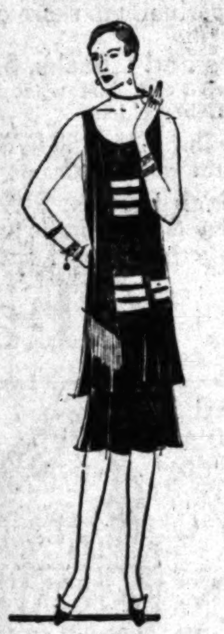
Dominant Points of the New Modes

FOR THE MORE IMPORTANT OCCASIONS OF DAY AND EVENING WHEN ONE'S FROCK MUST EXPRESS THE SOPHISTICATION OF THE TIME AND PLACE AND CONFORM TO THE LATEST DEVELOPMENTS OF THE MODE—THE FROCKS IN THIS COLLECTION AT J. W. ROBINSON CO. ARE SUGGESTED.

The daytime frocks are frequently developed in the soft crepes or satin with a definite feeling for freedom A softening of line is accomplished by narrow pleatings, bloused effects and unusual neck and sleeve lines.

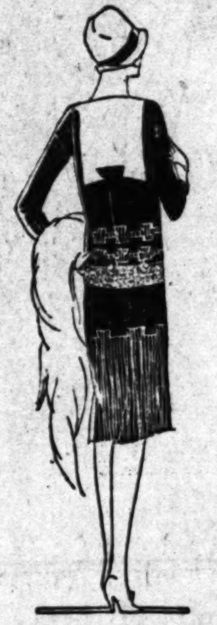
Velvet gowns, fringed gowns, brilliant sequins gowns and metallic effects enter the fashions for evening. There is a strong favoritism for black, with other colors also smart.

THIRD FLOOR



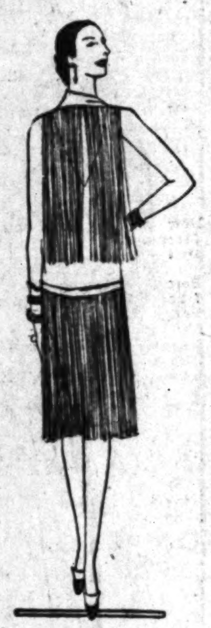
VELVET

BIAS Transparent Velvet flounces are combined with gold embroidered crepe Mongol in geometric design in this graceful evening frock. A scarf bordered with velvet and gold fringe hangs from the right shoulder—$175.



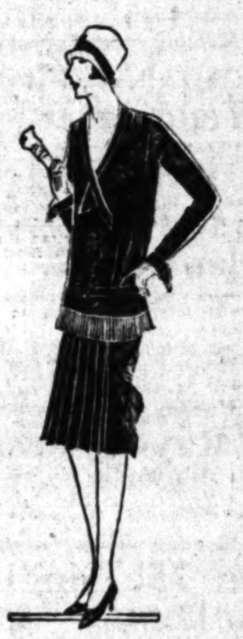
DECOLLETAGE

THE decolletage of transparent georgette makes its appearance in a street frock of flat crepe. In front the round neck ends with a scarf of the georgette. $75.



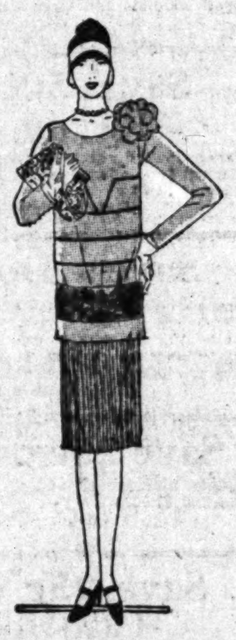
FRINGED

BLUE Crepe with shaded blue fringe making an overskirt and forming a scarf on the bodice is a copy of a Chanel model as mentioned by Vogue. $125.



PLEATING

BLACK Flat Crepe uses white grosgrain ribbon on collar and cuffs and narrow accordion pleating on the jumper and back of the skirt, in apron effect. $115.



JUNGLE GREEN

JUNGLE green two-piece frock with banding of baby calf. The jumper is cleverly seamed with green chiffon. A one-inch hem of chiffon finishes the pleated skirt. $95.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS OF THE NAVY

and Mrs. Arthur W. Radford was the accompanist at the piano. At the close of the program Mrs. Radford delighted the audience by playing and singing some of her own compositions. Mrs. Radford is the author and composer of the musical comedy "Purdy and Prunella" and numerous songs, one of which "A Little House I Know," has been published recently.

The Hob Nob Inn, Long Beach, was the scene of a luncheon party followed by bridge, Wednesday when Mrs. Wellbrock, wife of Commander J. H. Wellbrock of the Arizona entertained a company of friends.

Mrs. H. P. Le Clair and her daughters have left for the east coast where they will reside in Washington, D. C. Numerous social affairs were held in honor of Mrs. Le Clair before her departure. Mrs. Robert G. Coman gave a luncheon and bridge party in her honor Thursday, those included being Mrs. H. P. Le Clair, Mrs. Penn Carroll, Mrs. E. K. Lang, Mrs. H. B. Hutchinson, Mrs. Robert L. Irvine, Mrs. Charles Maynard Cooke, Jr., Mrs. Paul Rice, Mrs. R. C. Alexander, Mrs. Groos Kops, Mrs. Ormonde L. Cox and Mrs. J. A. Bass.

Last Friday another bridge luncheon was held in honor of Mrs. Le Clair by Mrs. C. M. Brand, wife of Commander Brand of the California, at her home in San Pedro. Another honored guest at this time was Mrs M. W. Gokey, wife of Commander Gokey of the U.S.S. Madusa, who has recently arrived in San Pedro and Jamestown, N. Y.

One of the most important social events in navy circles was the tea-dance Wednesday afternoon given by Rear-Admiral Henry J. Zeigemeier, the event taking place on board his flagship the Pennsylvania. Several hundred persons were present.

Mrs. Zeigemeier was assisted in receiving her husband's guests by Mrs Charles T. Owens, Mrs. Robert W Cary and Mrs. Russell Willson. The deck was inclosed in canvas and a Halloween motif carried out in the elaborate decorations, while tea was served in the admiral's cabin below deck.

Last season the wives of the officers on the Arizona inaugurated a very pleasant custom of meeting together for luncheon once each month, and the idea proved so successful that the practice has been resumed this winter.

The first event of this series was held last Monday noon, at the new Hotel Breakers. Among the "Arizona wives present on this occasion were Mrs. Harlan Perril, Mrs. John T. Bowers, Mrs. Maurice G. Holmes, Mrs. Philip C. Ransom, Mrs. J. H. Wellbrock, Mrs. William A. Anderson, Mrs. Julian Wilson, Mrs. S. T. Cloughley, Mrs. A. A. Burke, Mrs. G. W. Campbell, Mrs. George L. Todd, Mrs. M. J. Tichenor, Mrs. J. C. Daniel, Mrs. H. S. Dyer, Mrs. R. L. Hicks, Mrs. R. U. Hyde, Mrs. C. F. Kershner, Mrs. E. P. Kunkel, Mrs. Wallace L. Lind and Mrs J. B. McGovern.

Capt. Watt T. Cluverius left last Friday morning to fill some lecture engagements on Navy Day in the State of Montana, and was joined in Salt Lake City by Mrs. Cluverius, who accompanied him on the return to Long Beach. Mrs. Cluverius has many friends here and will be a great addition to society in naval circles.

Mrs. Thomas C. Hart, wife of Capt Hart of the Mississippi, has returned to Long Beach and is again at the Hotel Virginia.

Mrs. Louis De Steiguer and Mrs. Karl Shears were among those who motored to San Francisco to be there over Navy Day.

Mrs. John T. Bowers, wife of Commander Bowers of the Arizona has issued invitations for a luncheon and bridge party to be given next Tuesday at the California Club.

Mrs. Arthur W. Radford, wife of Lieut. Radford of the Pennsylvania, entertained a company of navy friends at tea Saturday afternoon at her residence in Hermosa Beach.

Premiere Recital Given by Singers of Ellis Club

The Ellis Club season will open with an auspicious program this Wednesday evening, November 3, at Philharmonic Auditorium. Conductor J. B. Poulin has selected a program of great musical diversity.

Miss Ruth Reynolds, the charming mezzo-contralto who made such a splendid success at the first Philharmonic Orchestra concert, has been engaged to sing the solo part in the pretentious offering, "Voyage of Columbus" (Dudley Buck,) which will be given with orchestral accompaniment. She will also appear in a group of solos and an operatic aria. In "The Voyage," Harold Procter, Robert Brown and Mr. MacPherson will sing solo parts.

For some years Mrs. M. Hennion Robinson has been the capable accompanist of this organization, and from time to time she has enriched the literature for male chorus in composing numbers specially suited to this type of performance. Her newest composition is "Manuela," and has been dedicated to the club. It will receive its premiere performance at this program, with William Pilcher taking the tenor solo parts.

The complete program, containing many gems of the first rank, appears as follows:

"The Long Day Closes"..................Sullivan
(This number, a favorite of C. J. Ellis, founder, is given in his memory at the first of each season.)
"To Arms" ....Maunder
"Manuela" ....Mrs. M. Hennion Robinson

"Voyage of Columbus" ....Dudley Buck
Ellis Club and Philharmonic Orchestra.
Miss Ruth Reynolds, mezzo-contralto.
Harold Procter, tenor.
Mr. MacPherson, baritone.
Robert Brown, baritone.

Ruth List, popular young Los Angeles violinist, returned home last week after a most successful concert tour in Arizona. This talented artist played in Bisbee before one of the largest musical audiences ever gathered there. Miss List is scheduled for a number of concerts in Southern California during the coming winter.

The Beauty of My Teeth

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I am always smiling, so countless women consider my glistening teeth the chief item in my beauty.

I have consulted on teeth, as on everything else, the greatest experts I could find. They advised me to brush my teeth with Quindent twice a day.

Quindent is a recent development. Some 59 able experts collaborated on it. It has 16 ingredients, and is made to combine all the major helps in one.

It contains cleansers and polishers of the highest order. Then antacids, antiseptics, iodides and deodorants. They have aimed to combine in Quindent all the best helps known to science.

Quindent is not an Edna Wallace Hopper product. It is made by Quindent Laboratories, and sold by druggists everywhere. But the makers supply me with samples, and I gladly mail a ten-day tube to anyone who asks.

Send the coupon for it. It will bring to you the best tooth paste that men have yet developed. And if it brings to you the gleamy teeth it brings to me, you will always be glad you know it.

MASON LEADER RETURNS HOME

Clubs in Principal Cities Visited on Tour

Appreciation of California Impressed by Trip

Southland Products Found Widely in Evidence

Frederick Beutel, general counsel of the Federal Trust and Savings Bank of Hollywood, vice-president of the Masonic Club of Los Angeles and one of the leaders of the Masonic order in Southern California, recently returned from a four-months' automobile trip in which a complete circuit of the country was made. The trip was one of exceptional interest, the itinerary not only embracing routes of scenic beauty and grandeur, but, also points and places rich in historical associations.

The first leg of the journey, from Los Angeles to Phoenix, covered the old Apache Trail, via Roosevelt Dam; thence onward to El Paso, Tex. Principal cities were visited as well as spots embalmed in the lore of the Lone Star State. The Southern States were traversed and among the places in them of contemporary or historic interest visited were the Wilson Dam (Muscle Shoals,) the battlefields of Vicksburg, Missionary Ridge and Chattanooga and Frederick, Md., where Barbara Frietchie hung out the flag of the Union in defiance of Stonewall Jackson. Washington, D. C., Annapolis, Mount Vernon, the battlefield of Gettysburg, Valley Forge, Philadelphia, New York and the home of the Roosevelts at Oyster Bay, Long Island, were next visited.

DRIVE TO NEW ENGLAND

From New York, Mr. Beutel motored along the Hudson to old Dutch Poughkeepsie, taking in West Point en route. From Poughkeepsie the ferry across the river was taken and the drive into New England commenced. In Connecticut and Massachusetts many places of high historic importance were viewed including noted battlefields of the French and Indian and Revolutionary wars, the tip of Cape Cod, where a monument marks the spot on which the Pilgrims signed their famous compact, Nathaniel Hawthorne's home and grave, the oldest standing colonial house, Boston and the Charleston navy yard, where the Constitution, "Old Ironsides," was boarded.

The return trip was made via Niagara Falls, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis, thence through South Dakota, Montana and Idaho, the route lying partly in the Yellowstone Park and Little Big Horn River country, to Portland, Or., from which the run down the coast was made to Los Angeles.

Mr. Beutel visited the Masonic Clubs of the principal cities of the Union, but in no instance did he find any such organization as handsomely and comfortably housed as the Masonic Club of Los Angeles, nor any affording in such liberal measure as the local club diversions and opportunities for fraternal and cultural development. Few of the clubs had attractive homes, most of them being quartered meagerly. He feels that every member of the Los Angeles club should be proud and appreciative of such identification and that every Mason in Southern California should get his name on the club roll. He now understands why Masons from the East are surprised and delighted when entertained as guests at the Los Angeles Masonic Club.

Mr. Beutel contends that one must take a journey such as he did in order to adequately appreciate residing in California. Food costs he found high and in most of the eastern cities a really good meal is available, as a rule, only at an exorbitant price, while in the smaller communities en route South and East the quality of food served is decidedly inferior to that obtainable in this State. The four best cities for dining he concludes are New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco, with the two latter really in the lead because of the lower costs at which fine food and service can be had in them. In every community of consequence he found fresh California fruits and vegetables in evidence abundantly.

Bull-Whip Duel Lends Realism to 'Thrill' Film

Glittering, gorgeous—grim, with thrill succeeding thrill, are the descriptive terms applied to "The Temptress," now in its second week at the Million Dollar Theater.

One of the many thrills, one perhaps which is witnessed for the first time in a picture is the desperate battle with bull whips, in which Antonio Moreno and Roy D'Arcy, slash at each with rawhide weapons to settle difference which envolve the seductive Temptress, Greta Garbo. The men with their long whips, stand in a circle of spectators and slash at each other until one drops. It is evident that both suffer frightfully from the ordeal, but it lends a realism to the drama that grips the audience.

The spectacular wrecking of a great dam in the Andes, sensational rides over the South American plains in pursuit of bandits, and other thrills embellish a gripping romance of a charmer who victimizes all men but pays the price through a strange and novel trick of fate.

The colorful and dazzling prologue "An Argentine Fiesta," with the Oumansky girls, and the marvelous scoring of "The Temptress," by Leo Forbstein makes the bill now at the Million Dollar Theater one that promises to break all attendance records. "The Temptress" is the sensation of New York's Rialto and Los Angeles theatergoers are giving it an equal reception.

SOCIETY OF CINEMALAND

Dan Cupid has been behaving himself very nicely in Cinemaland, thank you, these last two weeks. One of his late shafts having gone straight to its mark he has made it possible for William A. Seiter to prefer one little blond, Laura La Plante, and further enabled the yellow-haired starlet to announce her wedding date for November 14.

Miss La Plante has chosen as her bridesmaids Carmelita Geraghty, Gertrude Olmsted, Helen Ferguson and Julanne Johnston. The ceremony will be conducted in the Hollywood Congregational Church and immediately thereafter the couple will leave for a short honeymoon journey, planning later to tour the Orient. They will make their home in Hollywood.

Virginia, Ben and Marilynn

Virginia Lee Corbin returns from New York to tell the waiting world that Cupid has not interfered with her professional plans. "No, I'm not engaged to Ben Lyon," she said Thursday on her arrival here. "Ben is a lovely boy and wonderful to work with in a picture, but he is far too attentive to Marilynn Miller to have any off-stage time for anyone else," said the vivacious young actress. So that's that. And also it is a reminder of the fact that Jack Pickford is escorting Bebe Daniels everywhere she goes in Cinemaland society nowadays. No, Charlie Paddock is not running Jack a race. The anomaly is that Jack has already won over the fleet-footed Paddock. Or has he? What have you?

Jobyna and Dick

The engagement of Jobyna Ralston to Richard Arlen will culminate in marriage some time when the new year is very young.

Cupid has been busy, too, with his marksmanship in the case of Pauline Starke and Donald Freeman, although Pauline denies any engagement, as does Carl Laemmle, who shakes his head negatively when one sweet day is mentioned. Alice, too, denies an engagement but rumor persists that wedding bells may ring next year for these very young lovers.

Premieres

The Vitaphone premiere at Grauman's Egyptian Theater Wednesday night will long be remembered as a marker in cinema history. It was also a gala night in society circles of Cinemaland when Hollywood Boulevard was alight with Kleigs and gay with limousines with their burdens of beautiful women and well groomed men. For the most part they are the same ones whose names are megaphoned often along the great white ways of Hollywood and Los Angeles. The names predominating in the demonstration of the Vitaphone are for this event the most important. Among them were: Marion Talley, the young soprano; Anna Case, Will Hays and Mischa Elman.

Mabel and Lew

A little bird, not a blue one, sang a sad story of the cessation of Cupid's visits with Lew Cody and Mabel Normand Cody. But that was not Cupid's fault. It was the bird's, who was off on the wrong wing. Lew and Mabel are devoted to each other. Haven't they been married at least four months? To be sure Mabel lives at her own home but what is one home between two true lovers? Why, Mr. and Mrs. Cody expect to have a new home soon. "What pleases Mabel will please me, too," says Lew.

"Kosher Kitty Kelly"

Friday night Figueroa at Santa Barbara was a blaze of light and glory in which walked many stars and cinemalites before the first showing of that hilarious comedy "Kosher Kitty Kelly." It was a gala occasion in society as well as in professional circles. Among the many prominent stars, directors and producers who were present were noted the following: Viola Dana, who has the name part, with her sister Shirley Mason, Carroll Nye, who plays the brother to Kitty, escorting Helene Lynch; Alberta Vaughn, George O'Hara, Margaret Morris, Mary Brian, Raymond Keane, Mary McAllister, Cleve Moore, Frank Withers, Kit Guard, Gl Cooke, Danny O'Shea, Betty Caldwell, Nat Carr, Aggie Herrings, Dorothy Dunbar, Tom Wells, Helen Foster, Kalla Pasha, Gilbert Roland, escorting Jocelyn Lee; Ruth Clifford, Doris Hill, Yvonne Howell, Valentine Zimina, Etta Tom Forman, Stanley Taylor, Kathleen Myers, Tom Tyler, Frankie Darro, Alice Day, Thais Valdemar, Joseph P. Kennedy, Edwin King, Frank Ormiston, Al Boasberg, Jimmy Wilkinson, Fred Smith, Caryl Flemming, Ralph Ince, San Wood and Byron Morgan.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes"

Appearing in this department of cinemaland because of its author Anita Loos, who has always been closely identified with the Hollywood colony, an elaborate premiere for "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" has been arranged for tomorrow night at the new Belasco Theater. The event will be in the nature of a dual celebration as it marks the opening of the newest addition to the group of local playhouses and also offers for the first time on the Pacific Coast the stage version of the most widely heralded piece of humorous writing of the decade.

"In Blossom Time"

"In Blossom Time" will begin with what promises to be one of the brilliant premieres of the season November 22 when the picture "Ben Hur" closes its long run at the Biltmore Theater.

Mrs. Brown Entertains at Promenade

At Peggy Hamilton's initial fashion promenade at the Biltmore, Mrs. Clarence Brown entertained the following: Mrs Antonio Moreno, Mrs. Bob Leonard (Gertrude Olmstead,) Mrs. Tom Mix, Mrs. Bert Lytell (Claire Windsor,) Miss Dolores Del Rio, Mrs. J. Ward Cohn (Jackie Saunders,) Mrs. Thalberg, and her daughter Sylvia, Mrs. Tod Browning, Mrs. Jack Ford, Mrs. Edwin Carewe (Mary Akin,) Mrs. Irving Willat (Billie Dove,) Yvonne Carewe, Mrs. M. P. Illitch (Kathleen Clifford,) Miss Laemmle, Mrs. Monte Blue, Mrs. Victor Schertzinger, Mrs. Charles Dorian, Monroe Lee, Ruth Collier, Kathleen Key; Grace Kingsley, Grace Gordon, Mrs. D. W. Wilson, Mrs. Frank Gurnsey, Mrs. Bill Hart, Gertrude Astor, Mrs. Larry Semon (Dorothy Dwan,) Dorothy Manners, Mrs. Harry Carey, Bess Meredyth, Theda Bara, Mrs. Jack Warner, Mrs. Earle Williams, Mrs. Bill Keefe, Corliss Palmer, Vilma Banky, Mrs. Harold Lloyd (Mildred Davis,) Mrs. Edwin Schallert, Mrs. Joseph Schenck (Norma Talmadge,) Miss Constance Talmadge, Dorothy Summing, Mme. Teckinkoff, Nadja Teckinkoff and Beverly Wood.

San Diego Bound

One of the most interesting and novel events of the week will take place tomorrow when Edwin Carewe, the film producer, will play host to several dozen film celebrities by chartering a special train that will carry them to San Diego where he will supervise the premiere of his new stage play, "The Heaven-Tappers."

Carewe is not a stage producer, but a film maker. However, he has purchased the world rights to this drama and has decided to see that it is staged properly.

Among those that will be aboard the special are Lew Cody, Mabel Normand, Francis X. Bushman, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Marmont, Gardner James, Dolores Del Rio, Senor Del Rio, Count and Countess Tolstoy, Peggy Hamilton, Ruth Roland, Monte Blue, Grace Kingsley, Grace Gordon, Kenneth Harlan, Marie Prevost, Lionel and Mrs. Barrymore, John W. Considine, Jr., Joseph Jackson, Harry Brand, and a dozen or more others.

The party will leave via special train tomorrow afternoon, arriving in San Diego in time for dinner and thence to the theater, after which a supper party will be staged at the Grant Hotel. The special train will bring the entire party back to Los Angeles early Tuesday morning—in time for work.

Oh, of course—one must mention the famous folk in the cast of the Carewe play, who will assist the producer in entertaining the distinguished aggregation from cinemaland. They include Henry Kolker, Bessie Barriscale, Sarah Paden, Mitchell Lewis, Louis Bennison, Howard Hickman, and others. George Scarborough and Anette Westbay, co-authors of "The Heaven-Tappers" will be on hand as well.

Moonlight Horseback Ride

Marco C. Hellman and Jack W. Evans were hosts to a group of Cinemalite for a moonlight horseback ride last Wednesday when they entertained along the bridal paths of Beverly Hills and Hollywood the following guests: Alfred Meyer, Mrs. L. A. Rice, L. A. Rice, J. Ward Cohen, Maurice DuMond, Jacquelin Saunders, Kathleen Key, Miss L. M. Lamberger, Norbert Nettleship and Jerry Pembroke.

Dinner-Dance Given

One of the charming affairs of recent weeks at the Ambassador was the dinner-dance given last Saturday evening in the Cocoanut Grove when James R. Grainger was the host.

At the smartly-appointed tables, covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Sol M. Wentzel, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Mix, Mr. and Mrs. J. Farrel MacDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jungmeyer, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Forrest, Mr. and Mrs. James Ryan, Kenneth Hawks, Virginia Valli, Mr. and Mrs. George Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Yost, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Blystone, Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Dull, Mr. and Mrs. John Ford, Mr. and Mrs. R. William Neill, Thomas Buckingham, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ray, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Schertzinger, Lew Seiler, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Stoloff, Mr. and Mrs. Lew Tellegen, Mr. and Mrs. William Darling, Miss Katherine Hilliker, Capt. H. H. Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. John Stone, Miss Elizabeth Pickett, Mr. and Mrs. John Sullivan, Edwin Grainger, Felix Adler, Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Cline, Mr. and Mrs. Lambert Hillyer, Howard Hawks, Mr. and Mrs. Raoul Walsh, John Dillon, Mr. and Mrs. Victor McLagen, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sandrich, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Selander, Alexander Pantages, Lloyd Pantages, Mr. and Mrs. Jules White, Mr. and Mrs. Jess Robbins, Miss Kathryn Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Buck Jones, Howard Sheehan, Miss Madge Bellamy, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Dunlap, Mr. and Mrs. Zion Myers, Eugene Ford, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Cummings, Ernest Maas, Miss Bessie Love and Mrs. Frank Borzage.

Kathleen Key Honoree

At a bridge party Thursday Kathleen Key was the honored guest when Mrs. Abraham Lehr was hostess. Other guests were Mrs. Tom Mix, Mrs. John Ford, Mrs. Victor Schertzinger, Kathryn Perry, Dorothy Dwan, Mrs. Donald Clark, Mrs. Clarence Brown, Kathleen Clifford, Mrs. Lynn Reynolds, Dorothy Manners, Anita Stewart, Mrs. Edwin Carewe.

Engagement Announced

Miss Marion Constant Blackton entertained with a dinner at her home, 7065 Hillside, Saturday evening to announce the date of her coming marriage, December 25, to Gardner James. The young couple have decided to make themselves an exchange of Christmas gifts at the holiday season.

A profusion of fall flowers in shades of gold, brown and russet prevailed in the table decorations and room, the colors also being carried out in the place cards and favors.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Percy Marmont, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sloane, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Barker, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Schallert, Miss Patsy Ruth Miller, Miss Grace Kingsley, D. Benturrin, Ernest Maas, James De Tours, Mr. and Mrs. Col. Tom McCoy.

Week-End at Santa Barbara

Miss Betty Boyd was hostess over the week-end to her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Leonard of Santa Barbara. A family dinner was given Saturday evening at her home on North Highland avenue after which the guests were entertained at one of the downtown theaters.

After completing her current screen engagement at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, Miss Boyd will visit her relatives at their ranch a few miles north of Santa Barbara.

Bridge-Dinner Given

Last evening Mildred Vincent gave a bridge-dinner at her Hollywood home in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Harold Gray of New Orleans, who stopped to visit Miss Vincent prior to returning home from the Railway Men's convention held last week in San Diego. Mr. Gray, assistant general passenger agent of the Southern Pacific System, was host to the 1500 railway officials who attended the convention.

Besides Miss Vincent's mother, Mrs. Cornelia Van Buren, Mr. and Mrs. Josef Swickard, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Murphy, A. Lincoln, Gordon C. Hair, Mr. and Mrs. Loren W. Babcock, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Grayson, and Lieut.-Col. James M. Hutchinson, U. S.A., were among those present.

At Fashion Promenade

Miss Peggy Hamilton entertained Mrs. Irving R. Smith, Mrs. Charles Baad, Mrs. David D. Pascoe, Mrs. Clarence Brown, Mrs. Frank Guernsey, Miss Gertrude Astor and Miss Dolores Del Rio at the Fashion Promenade Tea held at the Biltmore Wednesday.

Visits Northern City

Accompanied by her house guest, Mrs Seraphim Painchaud of Haverhill, Mass., and Mrs. S. J. Becka of Hollywood, Mrs. Pat O'Malley motored to San Francisco and other northern cities last week.

Anniversary Gift

A diamond brooch was the present of David Hartford to his wife, Frances Nordstrom, on their eighth wedding anniversary. We hasten to explain, of course, that it is the anniversary of eight months, and that one of these celebrations has been held every month since their very happy marriage!

And the Hartfords have moved from their home on Gardner into a more pretentious abode.

You remember Miss Nordstrom's charming young niece, Ursula, who visited her this summer? She is attending school in the East and writes that she misses California, and hopes to come here for another visit next June.

Royalty Comes to Hollywood

Contessa Bianka-Guistiniani arrived in Hollywood last week, and has been feted by many of the elite of Cinemaland. She expects to stay here for some time.

At Malibu Lake

Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. French were guests at Malibu Lake last week, with Emmet King. Wallace Worsely, Bobby Newhart, Wallace Beery and Rex Goodcell were also present.

Bohemian Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hart of Fourth avenue entertained a group of friends last Sunday with a "Bohemian supper" in honor of Count Ilya Tolstoy, his wife and Miss Maud Allen. During the evening a life-size portrait of Dolores Del Rio was on exhibition, by Theodore Lukits, the artist.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Cimini, Dolores Del Rio, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bledsoe, Baroness Ryhiner Morrill, Mr. and Mrs. George Davidson Gilmore, Miss Doris Lee Gilmore, Mr. and Mrs. Montague Shaw and Gabrielle Ravenelle.

HATTIE MEETS B. LOWE PARRS

BY DOROTHY JONES

The B. Lowe Parrs (he peddled bonds)
I met by merest luck:
I burst right through their sideboard when
My trick bed ran amuck.

When Betty Parr would air her son,
She'd read the movie bills;
The sign, No babes in arms allowed,
Denied to her the thrills.
But when the child grew old enough
To offer him the diet
Provided by contented cows,
In pastures high and quiet;
They left him with his Grandma; then
With toothbrush and pajamas,
Went back to Keokuk and saw
The latest silent dramas.

Now when Bettina had to ask
A famous vampire's name,
Their friend in Keokuk were shocked,
"Why, that's Miss Jetta Flame!
I thought you'd seen her many times
Along the Boulevard!"
"Oh, yes, I saw her buying shrimps
Last time I went for lard."
The villain was a neighbor and
An extra lived next door.
Bettina's thoughts on movies were,
"Home talent's such a bore!"

BY EVA G. TAYLOR

Dr. Millikan sounds a new note for the churches and science when he states that the church must accept the teachings of science and science those of Christ. That neither science nor religion can do without the other.

The truly wise and great have always known this. There has never been any question as to the divinity of either in the minds of those who truly know. Ignorance alone interposes barriers.

It is encouraging, however, to have a leading scientist give voice to this opinion. To quote Dr. Millikan:

"Science has neither added to nor subtracted anything from religion. Religion is the most stirring example of evolution . . . If the churches can adapt themselves to the advance of science they will go forward, and if they cannot, they will be swept aside in the back currents of progress."

This seems inevitable in Dr. Millikan's opinion because he knows that religion is scientific. He knows that it rests upon the science of the universe.

"God geometrizes" means simply that in the dawn of creation when worlds were called into being, when spirit crystallized in matter, a certain orderly arrangement corresponding to mathematical symbols and the musical scale was employed.

Creation began with scientific purpose and is built up from age to age, with orderly procedure. Atoms and electrons obey this law. When one really understands science and religion, he is struck with their interdependence.

Dr. Millikan also states that if he were obliged to choose between atheism and fundamentalism, he would become a fundamentalist, as atheism is opposed to science. He added that no such choice is necessary.

His conception of religion is scientific and his knowledge of science links it to religion. When he states that "there always will be religion so long as man continues to think" he declares a profound truth.

The foolish controversies engaged in from time to time between those whose conceptions of science and religion are pitifully narrow should be an object lesson against the sin of ignorance. To argue against either science or religion seems too benighted for this progressive age. Radio is unfolding its wonders through the patient investigations of science and speaks with compelling voice of a boundless arcana of hidden mysteries which proclaim an infinite Creator. Thus witnessing for both sides of one eternal truth.

It is truly pitiable for the human intelligence to encase itself in narrow prejudices. Science is not so prone to this evil, but even science can be dogmatic.

Atheism and infidelity never really hurt Christianity. It hurts only its sponsors.

Neither do the dogmatic assertions of purblind fanatics harm science. Like religion, it moves sublimely along in its splendid constructive work. The stars in their orbits continue to fulfill their Creator's purpose regardless of the opinions and prejudices of pigmy man.

It would be a sorry day for our universities if they should curtail any scientific investigation and research. We would soon slip back into the dark ages.

Reverently, however, should the student approach the study of any branch of science. While its mysteries unfold, a divine plan can be clearly seen.

The ignorant pronunciamentos against science belittle the God-given intelligence and blind the eyes to truth. They perhaps do more harm to religion than atheism.

It is truly refreshing in this turbulent age when even religion seems to have lost so much of its strength and poise, to have a great scientist like Dr. Millikan find the reconciling harmony between the science of the universe and its spiritual mysteries. For the mysteries of science are spiritual and the mysteries of religion are scientific.

True wisdom, resting upon a sure foundation, builds upward, never disputing, never limiting. It is both humble and tolerant for it knows there are heights beyond its farthest reach.

It is never too late to retrieve our mistakes and begin again.

The recent tragedy where a mother took the lives of her three children and her own was the result of a failure to recognize this truth. She saw that she had been a failure as a woman, a failure as a mother. She stood at the very gateway of a new life, for recognition of our mistakes is the open sesame to higher things. Yet she turned back to the land of despair. She dwelt among the ghosts of her morbid thoughts. She failed to see that it is never too late to begin again. She wondered if there would be another chance for her on the other side.

Perhaps so. Perhaps there may be many chances and many lives through which to work out God's higher purposes for the human soul. But it is better to begin now and here for this is the seed-ground. The harvest comes in that other life.

When mistakes are recognized and repented of the first step has been taken toward the ideal which the soul glimpses in that crucial moment. Failure to take the second step comes when discouragement enters in. Turning back to the phantoms of the past is fatal.

It was said recently of a noted woman who is president of an international society: "She keeps the gateways of her spirit open to allow through her soul to pass all the beautiful and wonderful things of life. At the same time she keeps them closed against that which is evil and harmful to the soul."

It seems to me this is as clear and comprehensive a definition of true spirituality as one can find. It seems also to be the real secret of life, health and beauty.

To keep the gateways of the spirit open to the beautiful and good. To close them against the evil. The highest philosophy of life can be sentences.

This explains all the difference in people. So many make of their souls a campus for the field meet of ugly and sordid, base and impure things. Then they wonder why the face registers the picture.

The windows of the soul are many, but we use few of them as a rule. Those which open upon the spiritual glories have drawn shutters and we fail to see the radiance and beauty of that inner world of light.

Even those which open upon the world about us often give us distorted views of things. Like chromatic and spherical aberrations in lenses.

Indeed, it is very difficult to see clearly. When we do, life becomes a wonderful thing.

For if we could see life as it was intended to be, with the shining through it of radiant light from higher worlds, the miserable sordid thing we have made of it would seem horrible beyond expression.

So in the last analysis, true spirituality is not a vague, indefinite, nebulous thing, but merely keeping the gateways of the spirit open to allow only the pure and beautiful things to pass through.

hives of the Macca- late during the last few Supervisor Ruth A. Leese Hive No. 104, under the supervision of Commander Ethel Swanson, gave her a great reception and at the meeting at the Walker Auditorium last Monday the full work of the order was put on, and a class of juveniles presented to Lady Leese by Lady Mary P. Coil, in charge of the juveniles in Southern California. A class of candidates also was presented and the members of Hive No. 104 presented Supervisor Lady Leese with a gift of flowers. On Tuesday evening Lady Leese was guest of honor at Sunkist Hive, No. 114, and the program was in charge of Commander Winnifred M. Frost. Sir Knights were invited to participate in the program.

On Saturday last the first juvenile camp was organized by Lady Leese in Los Angeles. The camp comprises all the juvenile members in Los Angeles, Pasadena and Wilmar.

UNITED SPANISH WAR VETERANS

Los Angeles is recognized as the largest city in area in the world. It is also the boast of the citizens that they have the largest camp of the United Spanish War Veterans, Roosevelt, No. 9. Roosevelt Camp has set its goal at 2000, and it is the determination to reach that goal in the near future. The 1800 men in this camp comprise many outstanding citizens.

The observance of the birthday of former President Roosevelt was appropriately recognized at the last meeting of Roosevelt Camp and Roosevelt Auxiliary last Monday evening at Patriotic Hall.

Roosevelt Camp acted on many of the measures to be voted upon at the general election, November 2. To the victims of the Florida disaster the camp voted $100. The camp indorsed the proposition for favorable consideration of the Indian War Veterans' pension bill, which will be presented to the next Congress.

REDMEN

At 1226½ West Washington street last Monday night Mojave Tribe, No. 124, Improved Order of Redmen, held a short session after which the Haymakers' Association nominated officers for the coming term.

Last Friday night at the same hall Manitou Council, No. 48, Degree of Pocahontas, had a Halloween costume ball, which was well attended.

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF FORESTERS

A large crowd enjoyed the program given by Dick Parks at the October high jinks of Court E. G., No. 83. An attendance prize was awarded to M. Polsky. Announcement was made that the high jinks of next month will be of an athletic nature.

Next Thursday, Friday and Saturday the annual Purple Cross Bazaar of the High Court of Southern California will be given at the Forester Building, 955 South Olive street. The bazaar is for the purpose of raising funds for the emergency relief of distressed members and to supplement the hospital and surgical department.

Supreme Vice-Chief Ranger Frank E. Hand has been confined to the hospital with a severe illness for some time.

Companion Ball-Davis will be general hostess of Companion Court Morris Vineyard for November, and her first offering will be an all-day session of the Thimble Club, next Wednesday.

STATE SOCIETIES

There is special interest in the inauguration of monthly social reunions by the New England States Society, which includes Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Each State will maintain its separate society, but there will be union social meetings monthly on the first Tuesday of each month, commencing November 1. Dr. George H. MacNeill, president of the society, has obtained the Veterans' Hall at 246 South Hill street, and will offer a fine program each month, followed by dancing.

President W. Warren Campbell is calling Coloradoans to their monthly social, with program and dancing, next Saturday evening at the Moose Hall.

The opening fall rally of the New York State Society will be next Thursday evening at the Veterans' Hall, with a popular program and dancing to follow. Cooper Culver will be heard in several numbers. Other features will be community singing, roll call and prize awards.

Col. Frank H. True, leader of the Wisconsin contingent of the Southland, is calling his people to their social rally tomorrow evening at the Veterans' Hall. A program will be followed by dancing.

Minnesotans have issued a call for all Gophers to meet their friends next Friday evening at the Music Art Hall to enjoy the entertainment and dancing of the monthly social.

Several States are changing date and place of meeting this year. President H. J. Brubaker announces the Illinoisans will meet at the Veterans' Hall the second Monday evening, monthly.

W. Warren Campbell announces that the Coloradoans will be in the Moose Hall each first Saturday evening.

The Oklahomans had to change to the third Wednesday evening, but remain in the Veterans' Hall. South Dakotans go to the Veterans' Hall, but retain the third Saturday evening.

I'm Rosa from Italy, A Christmas Arrival at Bullock's Doll Shop

"EXCITING? It's more than exciting to travel across the ocean and then across the land all the time packed in a big box so that you can't see a thing . . . and all of a sudden to stop and see daylight and think it must be a fairyland. My impressions of America? Ah, I think it is ravishing . . . charming . . . wonderful (at least as much of it as I have seen already, which means Bullock's Doll Shop and Toy Store).

"So gay! Why, this gorgeous place is just filled with the most wonderful, wonderful toys . . . the loveliest, woolliest animals . . . and the dolls! My particular playmate is Yvette, a fashionable lady doll from France, but I like Gretchen, too, a jolly German doll with merry blue eyes and golden hair. And there are several very pleasant Chinese boys. And the babies . . . even in Italy I never saw so many cute little tiny babies. It looks as if this is a season of twins, for the big, long-legged stork is continually bringing them in pairs. Some come in baskets all wrapped up in pink or blue blankets. Although I'm supposed to be a ladylike little Italian girl, I'm just bursting to tell you about all the marvelous dolls and toys here at Bullock's. Aren't you glad that you can come in tomorrow and choose just what you want for Christmas before the crowds come?

"Boys Will be Interested in Standard Gauge Lionel Trains—for $19.75 Monday

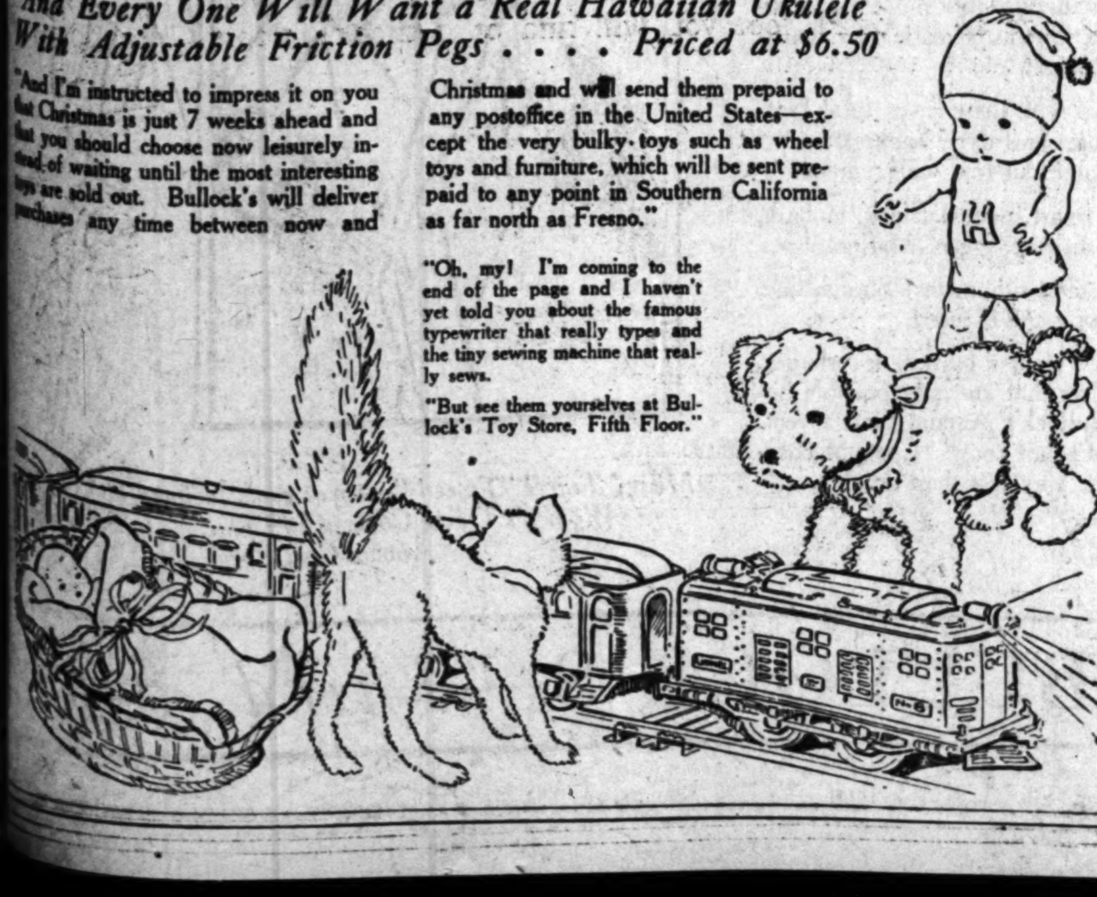
"Many of the other toys are envying these trains, for no matter how much we like it here, every one is ready for new adventures and with these trains priced so much lower than usual they're expected to leave in great numbers Monday. Think of getting a reversible locomotive, 13 inches long and 3 electric-lighted cars, each 11½ inches, with automatic couplers and 12 sections of track . . . all for $19.75. And Bullock's will hold them for Christmas delivery if you want.

"Little Girls Will Enjoy Infant Dolls in a Willow Basket—100 of Them Monday, $1.95

"These are some of the baby dolls I was telling you about. They have pretty bisque heads, sleeping eyes and they're dressed in white dresses and wrapped in pink and blue blankets.

And Every One Will Want a Real Hawaiian Ukulele With Adjustable Friction Pegs . . . . Priced at $6.50

"And I'm instructed to impress it on you that Christmas is just 7 weeks ahead and that you should choose now leisurely instead of waiting until the most interesting toys are sold out. Bullock's will deliver purchases any time between now and Christmas and will send them prepaid to any postoffice in the United States—except the very bulky toys such as wheel toys and furniture, which will be sent prepaid to any point in Southern California as far north as Fresno."



"Oh, my! I'm coming to the end of the page and I haven't yet told you about the famous typewriter that really types and the tiny sewing machine that really sews.

"But see them yourselves at Bullock's Toy Store, Fifth Floor."

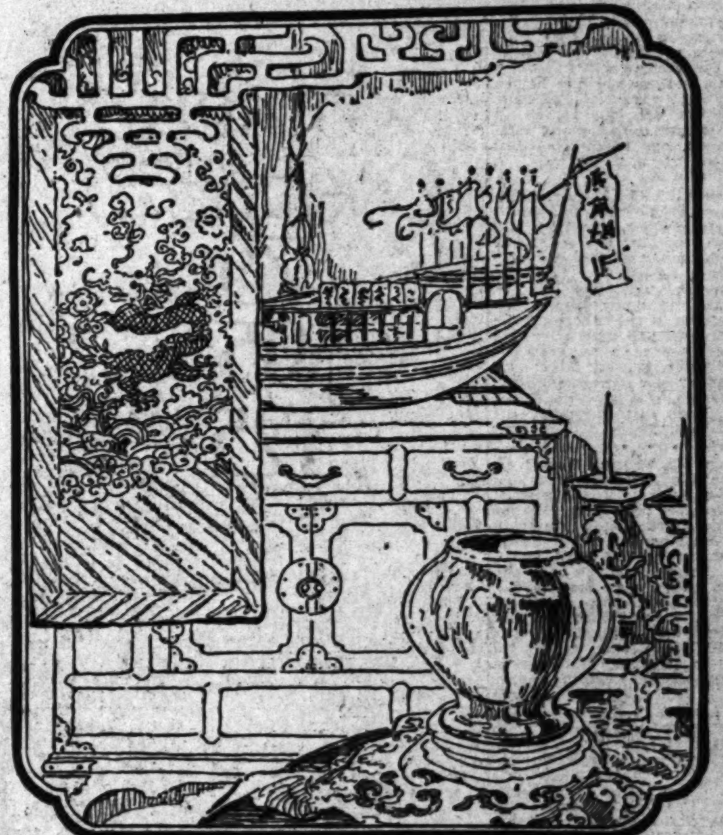
Oriental Gift Shop at Bullock's

Following the Vogue for Things Oriental

You'll find that inexpensive gifts abound here as well as those of the costly type. Wander at random—browse about as you will, if you are in search of a fascinatingly different gift you should find it in Bullock's Oriental Gift Shop.

The vase in the illustration is peachbloom porcelain—a fine antique. To be exact — Chien Lung Dynasty—about 200 years old. The Chinese Junk is a decorative piece cleverly and wonderfully conceived.

As this selection was made personally in the Orient — Bullock's is able to price the individual pieces lower than is ordinarily possible.



An avenue of gifts, imbued with an old world atmosphere, the mysticism, the charm of the far East. Gifts from Japan, China, Korea. Objects of art, antiques, curios, porcelains, colorful embroideries, quaint old hand-carved chests, gleaming brass carved marble, exquisitely colored cloisonne. The Orient has opened wide its treasure chests that you might find at Bullock's in this unique shop the Christmas gift of rare distinction, original, different!

BY ALMA WHITAKER

If all had gone according to schedule, the Brown-Lacke honeymooners should have returned from the isle of heart's desire, and Elizabeth will set out upon her housekeeping on Rexford Drive today.

A lovely, happy wedding, a lovely, happy honeymoon—what a wonderful start these youngsters have!

And their first job will be writing fond and grateful notes to the 400 people who sent them affectionate wedding presents.

But mother, dear Mrs. Chester Brown, can be trusted to lend a hand on that job. We are, by the way, trying to persuade Elizabeth to keep a diary. It ought to be a record of undiluted happiness. Her mother has always kept one—and she finds the record infinitely good.

I am going through some tremendous emotions with a "girl" friend of mine who has worked at a civil-service job for forty years. She will celebrate her sixtieth birthday this coming January—having had her full share of headaches and tummy aches, but never having lost a day's work through illness in all that time.

Now she is to "retire" on a pension, and she has some little savings as well. In addition she has helped to rear several youngsters, the children of sisters who did not go to work, who found romance and husbands and starving widowhood—and yet whom my friend envies.

This friend of mine has waited to live all these years. She is brimful of joyous plans for traveling and reading and gardening and staying in bed after 6 a.m. in the morning.

"All I have achieved so far," she says, laughing, "is sixty years, a spread figure and a punk digestion."

Her chief fear is that she won't be able to turn over and sleep after 6:30 a.m., from force of forty years of disciplined habit. "There is sawdust in most dolls," she sighs, naughtily.

All the same, she is a wonderful darling—and we just naturally still call her a "girl."

There is a Mr. Thomas Russell on his way to Los Angeles whose task will be to enthuse us in the promotion of a fund to rebuild the Shakespeare Memorial Theater in Stratford-on-Avon. England has raised about $250,000, but they will need about $1,250,000, the rest of which he hopes to raise in the United States.

And to think the poor chap will arrive right in the midst of the Community Chest drive, and along with the tax bills . . .

It is to be hoped he finds us in suitably poetical and altruistic mood.

I see the Women's University Club is to discuss three pictures, "Don Juan," "Bardelys the Magnificent" and "The Winning of Barbara Worth."

The first two deal with dashing "lady killers." Don Juan makes the subject thoroughly unpleasant and disgusting. Bardelys, with the same theme, makes it light, gay, amusing. After having "psyched" these two, they ought to take "The Temptress," in which the sex is reversed. Either way, we seem to be running to wholesale and promiscuous love making. Let's hope it is only in pictures.

It is safer to take the children to "Barbara Worth."

Mrs. Clara Burdette is back from an entrancing European trip, accompanied by a stylish millinery creation in becoming blue from Paris, and seductive blue enamel jewelry to match from Norway. The general effect is excellent and Mrs. Burdette radiates happy satisfaction.

It is noteworthy that when Mrs. Burdette visited the League of Nations at Geneva Germany was promptly admitted. And when she visited Norway—ahem—they repudiated prohibition! Can we believe her modest claim that she was not really responsible for either?

Now Mrs. Burdette will only be home for a few short weeks, as she goes to Washington after Christmas. On her European record all sorts of important things ought to happen in Washington next year.

A remarkable lady, this Mrs. Burdette. Time has enhanced her mental charms and left her physical health and energy unimpaired. Time was when club women liked Mrs. Burdette; now they love her.

Almost as many new theaters as beach clubs. The Hollywood Playhouse is going to be something different. The coterie of men that includes Orville Routt and Bobby Jones, who first considered it a good business venture, are now bitten with the superior uplift drama idea, and, instead of leasing it out, they intend running it themselves. Oh, well, "out of sorrow comes happiness," we are told. Mrs. Arabella Rodman is in on it, too. So are the Shepherds and Mrs. I. W. Hollingsworth. Mrs. Orville Routt will probably have considerable voice in decisions.

And a good many people are having an exciting time reading up on the higher drama just now. And probably some of them are also studying the important ramifications of dramatic finance.

What's Doing in NEW YORK

"The Ladder" "American Tragedy" Inept Players

BY ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT

(Copyright, 1926, New York World)

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Among all the new ventures that have passed this reviewing stand within the past fortnight my perverse interest keeps reverting to one called "The Ladder." Arriving on its heels there was a fine, new, savorous comedy, "Daisy Mayme," by the author of "The Show-Off." There was the matchless Raquel Meller returning to her new people. There were new undertakings by the dauntless Eva Le Gallienne and the equally unabashed Walter Hampden. There was even the seemingly indestructible Harry Lauder (kilts and all) having still another go at the bottomless American pocket. Yet, crowding into my mind as I sit down to pen this encyclical from Broadway memories of that excruciatingly unimportant farrago called "The Ladder" will keep fighting for attention.

This piece was solemnly and expensively unfurled at the Mansfield on Thursday night. In its first scene one saw a magnate at ease before his costly hearth in Manhattan, while the fair chatelaine of his Park Avenue establishment accompanied his after-dinner coffee by faint strains of Debussy. She was the sister of his dead wife and she had come to his great mansion to rule it and to rule, too, the harumscarum daughter who was her niece. While her hands wandered idly over the keys, her brother-in-law walked up behind her and imprinted, what seemed to me, a fairly chaste salute upon her neck or (possibly) ear.

ANCIENT EJACULATION

At this unheard-of outrage, she shrank magnificently and cried out (believe it or not) "You cad." It was, I think, the first time any heroine hereabouts had recoiled with a "You cad," since the closing of the Corse Payton Stock Company many years ago. What ejaculation would have been wrung from this lady if the monster had sunk a tooth in her, I shudder to contemplate.

Next in came a handsome swain for the purpose apparently, of sitting on the sofa, gazing into space and murmuring slowly: "I often think that reincarnation may be the secret of this riddle we call life."

VISIONS OF THE PAST

At that signal, the waiting stage hands in the wings sprang to attention and back went the play through the ages, its characters reappearing in batches in Plantaganet England, in the London of the naughty Stuarts, in the New York of yesteryear. At the end we were tremendously reassured on learning that it was all just a great big dream which had, however, taught the aforesaid people that love and sympathy are awfully important.

WHY THE PLAY?

Brook Pemberton produced this blundering, artless, helpless play. The layman may feel secure in his innocent assumption that if a producer puts on a play it is either because he likes it or, at least, because he thinks the public will like it. I have far too much respect for the aristocracy of Mr. Pemberton's taste and for his sagacity as a showman to suppose for one moment that either reason prompted him in this instance.

In the overtones of this production these old ears kept detecting the voice of angels, and sure enough, such inquiry as I have since been able to make unearths the fact that in staging "The Ladder," Pemberton was merely acting as agent for one of those many men of means throughout the land who itch to play Maecenas to dramatic art. One E. B. Davis, having struck oil in Texas, ordered a play written to express his convictions on the subject of reincarnation and then ordered "The Ladder" produced as a message to suffering humanity. He had spent

After went back to Chicago, her and almost gave up the a musical stage career alto After two years, however, she vaudeville in a short revue quite a happy success for with Keith in New York.

That engagement ended, her heart sighed for California and a dear sister who lives in Beverly. She came to rest and vacate, intending to return, when Macloon offered her some parts in "The Copperhead" with Lionel Barrymore and in "Lullaby," and also a small role in "The Love Call." She gave such a good account of herself in these that she seemed destined for dramatic work, without a chance to do much with her well-trained and truly sweet voice.

OUTLOOK CHANGED

But now she doesn't care if she never goes back to New York. "Castles in the Air" are materializing for her—and "Monkey Business" and the discerning eye of Lou Wiswell have transformed the whole outlook of her future. If she is as good as everyone thinks she surely will be Juanita is "made," and in the most popular form of entertainment.

It is a good story with a real plot, based a little on the "She Stoops to Conquer" idea. For in the play Juanita is a rich girl who transforms her stylish barn into a saucy private night club for the benefit of her gay set. Two young men suffer a car breakdown and mistake the place for a road-house. They masquerade for fun and Juanita likewise changes places with her maid and becomes a cigarette girl for the evening. After that the fun waxes fast and furious—and Juanita has several adorable singing numbers, two in particular called the "Lantern of Love" and "Romance," the latter really a light-opera number, proving particularly engaging and lilting. And then one of the nice young men, in the person of Raymond Marlowe, tenor, turns out to be really and truly a prince and everybody is happy ever after.

The scenes, setting and chorus are quite delightful if rehearsal is any criterion to judge by, and that tenor certainly can sing a convincing love song.

In fact, they are all feeling in pretty good conceit of themselves down at El Capitan these days, and Frank Reicher, stage director, has that on-top-of-the-world look.

Reasons Given for Popularity of Laugh Play

"What makes 'The Family Upstairs' so popular?"

That was the question put to Mitchell Harris, second lead at the Morosco, now playing the part of Pa Heller in "The Family Upstairs," the three-act laugh play that enters into its fourth week of its run on the Pacific Coast.

"Because this play is filled with bright comedy and natural situations," answered Mitchell Harris, who is the hit of the show. "Nowadays audiences want this kind of play, rather than the gloomy and long-drawn out tragedies."

And Harris is an authority on these matters. Aside from coming from a family of actors, he has been leading man for some of America's greatest actresses. He has been leading man in stock at Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis and has also headed his own stock company. He is a nephew of the great Maggie Mitchell.

As Pa Heller in "The Family Upstairs," Mitchell Harris creates many a laugh by his humorous actions and witty sayings. "The Family Upstairs" falls in line with Harris's idea of a good play as it has caused a laugh riot at every performance.

Comedian Again Plays Opposite Old Team-mate

Chester Conklin has combed the salt out of his "walrus" mustache and is singing out "Next," in Harlem.

The Paramount comedian, who recently finished an important role in "We're in the Navy Now," with Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, has been loaned to Asher, Small and Rogers for the part of a Harlem barber in their First National production, "McFadden's Flats."

Chester, appearing with his old Keystone team-mate, Charlie Murray, has the role of a canny Scot, who finances his Irish pal, McFadden, in the building of a string of flats. Larry Kent and Edna Murphy have the romantic parts in the picture, which is being filmed under the direction of Richard Wallace.

SMALLMAN'S A CAPELLA CHOIR SPREADS ITS FAME AFAR

BY KATHERINE LIPKE

Forty voices softly blending Bach—lifting aloft the old choral chants and melodies.

Forty voices unaccompanied, yet holding a pure thread of tone throughout.

This is John Smallman's A Capella Choir, which gives its annual concert November 19 at the Philharmonic Auditorium.

Out of Los Angeles has come one of the very few organizations dedicated to the promotion of the music of the human voice, unsupported by either organ or instrumental accompaniment. There are two other choral choirs of this sort in the United States—a few in Europe, notable among which is the Ukranian Choir of Russia.

BACH STRESSED

Two years ago John Smallman gathered twenty men and twenty women together to model an organization after this famous Russian choir. He felt that in an age of jazz and artificial musical stimulus, it would be well to revive the old vigorous and beautiful music of the old masters—especially Bach.

Music in the churches he found to be almost entirely devoted to popular, jazz-time songs with religious words affixed. And he decided to introduce in Los Angeles an organization of men and women with voices perfectly blended who could take the musical masterpieces of the past and the present and give them vocal outlet.

Now, after two years, the Smallman A Capella Choir finds itself with considerable of a reputation among music lovers, not only in Los Angeles, San Francisco and the Coast but through the Middle West, where a tour was made last year.

With but few exceptions the personnel of the choir has remained the same. The two years of practice, with rehearsals sometimes three and four nights a week—the careful selection of the voices themselves—the splendid direction—these have united to make the choir itself an unusually fine organization.

EUROPEAN TOUR

With this November concert Mr. Smallman and the choir are looking forward to a future which will mean further development—as well as touring Europe, singing as they go.

Within the last few years Los Angeles seems to have suddenly awakened to what its future might be both musically and dramatically. New theaters have sprung up everywhere. Opera seems to be an annual popular certainty. Singers, instrumentalists from other parts of this country or abroad are greeted enthusiastically when they come to the city.

Now within our own environs a new musical organization has come into being. Within two years a perfectly attuned group of singers is able to stand before us almost faultless as to technique—sweeping in tone strength.

This group was organized because of the musical vision of one man and the ardent support of forty men and women who have given their time freely for two years in the hope that some time in the future Los Angeles might be known not alone for its climate and picture studios—but because it was the home of the Smallman A Capella Choir.

Halloween to be Celebrated With Program

A collegiate picture and a spooky Halloween party—a mingling of "rah-rah's" and ghostly gibberings, as it were—will be on the program at the West Coast Boulevard Theater for three days beginning today.

The picture is Bebe Daniels's "The Campus Flirt," with the real college atmosphere, provided by the University of California campus, Charley Paddock, world's fastest human, and other college athletic stars.

The Halloween party is being arranged by Gene Morgan, popular funster and band leader. Special stage settings of the spooky variety are being constructed. The celebrated Fanchon and Marco Sunkist Beauties, Armstrong and Phelps, "two boys from Hollywood," Reeves and Lew, specialty dancers, Holly Hall, who sings the blue-ist blues, and others will participate in the old witch festival.

TREADWAY TO FOLLOW EAGELS

Charlotte's Sadie, in 'Rain,' Coming to Orange Grove, After Eagels Style

Charlotte Treadway does not intend to vary to any great extent the interpretation Jeanne Eagels gave to her character of Sadie Thompson in "Rain."

"It would almost be a sacrilege to play that character differently," said Charlotte.

So when "Rain" is presented at the Orange Grove Friday night, the first nighters will see the familiar Sadie, pompadour hair dress, slouch walk, whisky voice, and all.

Perhaps the role of Sadie Thompson is the outstanding stage character of the past decade. Jeanne Eagels played it for approximately four years. As the play went on, the actress grew with the character. When the Los Angeles audiences saw the Maugham character at the Biltmore last season, Miss Eagels had been playing Sadie for several years, and was consequently at the historic peak in her career.

Miss Treadway must take up the characterization with but two weeks of rehearsals, and she realizes the tremendous task which confronts her.

"Of course, comparisons in this case are inevitable," she said, "but

CEBALLOS ADDS "AFRICAN" TO CURRENT DANCE SCHEDULE

BY BARBARA MILLER

The chorus is the thing.

And who would dare question such an edict when issued by Larry Ceballos, to whom goes all the credit for the dances and ensembles in the eastern success, "Americana," and in Carter De Haven's Hollywood "Fancies"?

Ceballos is making his first visit to California as the dance director for a revue. He follows Dave Bennett, who came west for "Patsy," and Sammy Lee, who made the journey in the interests of "Tip-Toes."

With years of circus, vaudeville, musical comedy and revue experience, young Ceballos has arrived at several definite conclusions on the show game in general.

The first, anent the importance of the chorus, is demonstrated in the "Fancies." For it is the elaborately staged and bizarrely costumed chorus numbers that are causing the comment.

For instance, it is because of "African," his number, that another onslaught on the dancing schools is threatened. For one must "keep up" on the latest steps.

Too, he is quite certain that the chorus girl type has undergone a distinct change in the past ten years. In the alleged good old days, for instance, she only needed to know a few comparatively simple dance steps, have the knack of wearing striking costumes and have mastered the rudiments of stage marching.

But not so today.

For members of the chorus must perform all the stunts done by the principals. They must know all types of dancing, from acrobatic to ballet. And these girls keep right on going to school, like teachers who must "brush up" on new courses.

According to Ceballos, practically every girl who makes up the astounding pictorial "Fancies" chorus, is a schoolgirl, too, still learning more about dancing.

And, because of another conviction, he was especially glad to come to the Coast for a production.

For he thinks that most of the dances which have become "crazes" have originated here. And, indeed, he avers, the first jazz band was a California invention.

The "Texas Tommy," for example, he saw in a San Francisco cafe and later introduced in New York himself. Broadway caught its first glimpse of the "Tommy" in "The Henpecks," when Ceballos and his sister, Rosalie, appeared in that musical success.

In De Haven's "Fancies" he has evolved a new "something new." He calls it the "African" and it is proving one of the indisputable hits of the show.

Claiming some relation to the prevalent "Black Bottom," this dance is deftly staged, with highly pictorial Zulus, duly clothed in black and silver "native costumes," executing the new steps.

His "Serpentine" is another innovation. This is a dance he had wanted to do for several years, but never attained his ambition.

The effect, with the dancers before a plain black drop, is that of a gigantic, writhing snake. This illusion is created merely by writhing arms and hands. Startling.

"RAIN" WILL OPEN FRIDAY

According to Arthur Freed, "Rain" will open at the Orange Grove on Friday night, with Charlotte Treadway in the role of Sadie Thompson.

It is conceded that Freed has picked the best available actress for this difficult role. Charlotte has a host of followers in Los Angeles, having made quite a name for herself at the Morosco. Her outstanding role at that theater was "Kiki," the David Belasco success by that name.

The supporting cast will include Dudley Ayres in the role of Rev. Davidson, who has been a favorite in local productions. Albert Van Antwerp will be Sergt. O'Hara; George Pierce, who played the part of the doctor in "White Cargo," will play the doctor; Martha Golden plays Mrs. Horne; Charles Gill, Mr. Horne; Leanor Lawson will play Mrs. Davidson.

Charles King is directing this production and is being assisted by Harry Shutan.

COLOR-CAMERA TESTS MAY RESULT IN ROLE

Ethel Shannon, following the completion of her leading role opposite Hoot Gibson at Universal, is having a series of color-camera tests made by a producer who feels that Miss Shannon's exquisite coloring and vivid personality are unique qualifications for the featured role in a big production soon to be cast, and of which several sequences are to be photographed in color.

WHAT'S DOING IN NEW YORK

more than $60,000 before ever the first curtain rose, he packed the first night house with guests who came bearing orchids and, even so, I understand, that suffering humanity is growing recalcitrant.

A POPULAR SUCCESS!

Theodore Dreiser, whose mighty novel, "An American Tragedy," has something of the rude, massive strength of a Rodin statue, returned to these shores the other day and by this time, probably, has witnessed the mess the theater has made out of his overwhelming book. It would be interesting to know what emotions warred within him as he saw his patient plodding epic done over into a jerky, heavily underscored, vehemently acted play—interesting to run panting after his train of thought when the management further assured him that this play was a great popular success, with the crowds flocking to see it as if it were another "Broadway."

It would be idle to suggest for one moment that the success of the book had caused this immediate stampede to see "An American Tragedy." After all, Dreiser is no Zane Grey, and the two hefty volumes of this latest of his novels, have, in ten months they have been in the book stalls, sold something less than 82,000 copies.

Looking over the rapt audience which grunted and gasped as the play unfolded the other evening, I was inclined to suspect that this public was being drawn less from the readers of Theodore Dreiser than from the readers of the tabloids. They were to watch the boy's trousers being slit for the electric chair, there to squeal and pinch one another in the scene where Clyde Griffiths seduces the little factory girl in her mean, shabby bedroom. For it is an odd and unexpected by-product of the inevitable telescoping of the book (to squeeze it through the stage door) that the drifting, uncomprehending Clyde should emerge on the stage as a "fast-worker."

AUTHENTIC BASIS

As everyone must know by this time, "An American Tragedy" had its origin in the actual arrest, trial and conviction of an ornery young nobody named Chester Gillette. What led Dreiser into the field of that murder and bade him fence it in as his own was its great normality, its suggestion of disaster happening to the folks just across the street. This was no Thaw case, lunatic spawn of the great White Way, no Loeb and Leopold crime, monstrously peopled with fantastic creatures from some nether world.

When the hapless Chester shoved the plaintive girl he had got into trouble beneath those whispering Adirondack waters twenty years ago we were all of us sick with the sense that it was one of us who had done this thing. And Dreiser, brooding on what unperceived, casual wrong-turning must have landed this floating youth in the death house instead of in the brotherhood of Kiwanis and Rotary, wrought at last the crushing novel called "An American Tragedy." It is a great book and great in the exact propertion as it earns the tacit subtitle "Even as You and I."

AVERAGE YOUNGSTER

The play, therefore, called for an actor who could suggest simply the average, humdrum, small-town American youngster. What the play got was a febrile, fragile twitching young actor whose selection was about as happy as if some dainty ballroom dancer had been engaged to play Huckleberry Finn.

The book is really extraordinary in the skill with which it lets the monstrous idea of drowning poor Roberta rise like imperceptible mist from the invisible marshes of the boy's mind and at last take the dread shape of murder without his ever knowing by what stages the idea was born. But the play cannot waste more than five minutes on such folderols of natural history and you really have its measure when you see how this chapter is managed on the stage, with Morgan Farley playing Clyde.

He is discovered alone in his lodgings. Enter a garrulous landlady, equipped with a newspaper and bent on reading aloud to him its account of a mishap of Big Bittern Lake the capsizing of a canoe, the drowning of a girl. As soon as he is left alone with his thoughts and his audience, Clyde must pick up the paper and reread it to himself and since Mr. Farley is the kind of actor who expresses the mildest surprise by wrenching his face into what Mr Mintilini used to call a "demnition nutcracker" you can imagine the playground for the emotions what that mobile countenance becomes during this reading. A playground? Nay, a Coney Island for the emotions, with mery-go-rounds, loop the loops and everything.

Films Recruit From New York Held Real Find

The public having spoken, producers are eagerly scanning the field for new faces. The latest "find" in Hollywood's films circles is Kenneth McDonald, a recent recruit from the New York stage, who has been signed to portray the leading male role opposite Barbara Bedford in "Sunshine of Paradise Alley," being produced by the Chadwick Pictures Corporation.

Blessed with handsome features and a tall, commanding physique, the future predicted for this young thespian is being given added assurance by the ease with which he has thus far lent himself to the silent drama.

With the continuous turning of the cycle of events, the dial now seems to point to the period in which producers have recognized the public's demand for "new blood," resulting in the stretching of the limited confines to permit the acquisition of strange faces possessed of the necessary talents, it is claimed.

which formerly characterized the decorations of even our best playhouses.

There are approximately 1100 seats in the lower floor and balcony, and the unusual breadth of the theater is such that even the back rows of both floors are within easy hearing range of the stage.

All things considered, the Belasco is quite the last word in theater design.

MANAGED BY TRIO

It is being operated by a group composed of Edward Belasco, brother of the noted David; Fred J. Butler, the stage director, and Gerhold O. Davis.

This trio have been engaged for the last two years in plans for an artistic downtown playhouse. The backing of E. L. Doheny, the oil magnate, made their dream a reality. The theater is reputed to have cost $1,200,000.

Backstage one finds everything known to the modern science of stagecraft.

A commodious Green Room has been built under the stage for the comfort of the players and their friends.

The formal opening of the new house, together with the Pacific Coast premiere of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," will bring forth many notables tomorrow night.

The principal roles in the comedy, those of Lorelei and her chum, Dorothy, will be played by Joan Marion and Mary Ricard.

Butler is staging the piece and promises an excellent production. The properties, like the cast, are New York "importations."

Miss Louise A. Boyd of San Rafael, Cal., has returned from a six weeks' trip into the Arctic regions, where she shot twenty-nine polar bears, bringing the pelts home with her. She is the first woman to set foot upon desolate Franz Joseph Land.

"Struttin' Sam" Role Declared Best in Career

"It's the greatest role I've ever had!" Thus Miss Freita Shaw, prima donna in Arthur Hockwald's all-colored musical show sensation "Struttin' Sam From Alabam'" at the Majestic, emphasizes the manner in which she assumes her role of the Samoan princess.

Miss Shaw has been on the stage for years both as a grand opera musical comedy and vaudeville headliner. For three years Miss Shaw sang on the H. F. Alexander, a coastwise steamer plying between Los Angeles and Seattle. Tiring of this, she accepted an offer to appear for a season in a colored opera in the East.

Then she was signed for a prima donna role in "Shufflin' Along!" Arthur Hockwald then obtained her for his colored show "Bambalo Land!" She toured the East, North and South in this production and again returned to the opera, singing in concerts for a season.

When Hockwald decided to produce a new show, he asked Miss Shaw to return under his management. She was immediately assigned the Samoan Princess role which is one of the hit parts in "Struttin' Sam From Alabam'" ever since I saw the play I have longed to do that role. And if doing one's best counts for anything then I will succeed."

She is working constantly at the present time to cultivate that hard, husky voice which Sadie, the lady of easy virtue, used.

Between rehearsals she is dashing around to the shops in an attempt to assemble the colorful, although not exactly harmonious, wardrobe which the character wore. It is not the easiest task in the world to find the right things, as lace jacquettes, picture hats with drooping willow plumes, and high boots are not being worn this season.

She will bring to her characterization of Sadie an experience gained from three years as leading lady in stock at the Morosco. This she regards as a decidedly useful background. It was at the Morosco that she gained an outstanding success in "Kiki," which Lenore Ulric played in New York.

Whereas most of the players seen in Los Angeles casts gained their first experience in New York, Charlotte Treadway's experience is confined to the California stage. She has never appeared in a New York production.

Actor Enjoys Author's Ideas in Ibanez Film

Antonio Moreno, the dashing and handsome hero who plays opposite Greta Garbo in the Vicente Blasco Ibanez drama "The Temptress," now establishing new attendance records at the Million Dollar Theater, enjoyed not only the direction of Fred Niblo, but that of the author as well.

Moreno, while in Europe, playing in "Marie Nostrum," frequently visited Ibanez at his villa in France. The actor was keenly interested in the story of "The Temptress," and particularly the role of Robledo to which he had been assigned. Ibanez with his keen insight into drama and emotions, his power to create strong and realistic characters, went into every detail of the role with the actor. Fred Niblo urged Moreno to follow the author's suggestions to the letter in many scenes, with the result that Antonio enjoyed the direction of both author and director.

Miss Garbo and Moreno are supported by a strong cast in "The Temptress," including Roy D'Arcy, Lionel Barrymore, Marc McDermott, Armand Kaliz and Virginia Brown Faire.

The prologue "An Argentine Fiesta," with the Oumansky girls, and the musical prelude with Leo Forbstein conducting, is continuing to be enthusiastically received by a packed house at the Million Dollar during the third week of "The Temptress."

EBONY-HUED STEPPER TO DANCE HERE

Black-Face Artist Said to be Peer of Buck and Wing Vaudeville Performers

A suburb of Richmond, Va., called Manchester, has produced two of the greatest vaudeville entertainers of all time. One of them is Eddie Leonard, dean of minstrels, and the other is Bill Robinson, peer of all buck-and-wing dancers who have ever graced the two-a-day boards who comes to the Orpheum tomorrow and is said to be the most remarkable interpreter of this type of dancing ever known.

Both are black-face performers, but Eddie acquires his color for every performance, while Bill was born with his make-up on. They are life-long friends, used to shuffle together back in Manchester. Both of them have made vaudeville their chief field of endeavor and both have won unique distinction as two-a-day stars.

Most buck-and-wing dancers are novices in comparison with Bill Robinson. He makes buck dancing a fine art. He has never taken a lesson in his life. Dancing proclivities were his natural heritage, and by dint of hard work he has gradually superseded all his contemporaries and made the "dark cloud of joy," as he is known, the greatest dancer of them all.

Bill was the first to introduce stair dancing to vaudeville. Many years ago he appeared with a small flight of stairs—about six steps high. Upon this he performed the most amazing array of buck steps ever witnessed in vaudeville. The stunt has become so popular that today he is not allowed to leave the stage until he has danced on the stairs.

Bill Robinson, like so many other Orpheum circuit favorites, has now acquired justly the title of "international star," for he has just returned from a tour of the English music halls, where he created as big a sensation in his way as Sophie Tucker, Ted Lewis and Nora Bayes, who had preceded him. The ebony-hued stepper was the greatest hit of his race to visit London since the memorable tour of Williams and Walker.

VISIONS LOVE TRIUMPH

Chauffeur Pictures Himself in Film Uniform of Actor

Pat O'Malley's chauffeur looks with new favor on his employer's job now.

For Pat has promised to give him the uniform he will wear as Mae Murray's chauffeur in "Diamond Handcuffs," on which he will start work for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer soon.

And if Pat can capture Mae Murray's heart in the $200 uniform his tailor is making, his chauffeur reasons, what havoc he can create among his girl friends!

Numerous Orpheum Features

A sextette of features will top the new bill opening at the Orpheum today. Familiar names included are George Whiting and Sadie Burt, Robert Emmett Keane and Claire Whitney, Bill Robinson, the Weaver Brothers, the "Pompadour Ballet" and Thomas J. Ryan.

George Whiting and Sadie Burt will offer a new act written by Blanche Merrill, Al Boasburg and R. L. Corbaley. Robert Emmett Keane and Claire Whitney will appear in a playlet entitled "The Faker," a comedy by Edwin Burke, while Bill Robinson, "The Dark Cloud of Joy," will bring several new dances. The Weaver Brothers will hold forth with their strange farm implements—instruments and Albertina Rasch's "Pompadour Ballet" will serve to introduce a number of dancers, with Norree and Evelyn Groves featured and Andy Rice, Jr., providing "comedy relief." Completing the sextette will be the famous old actor Thomas J. Ryan, in "Father's Comeback," by Hazel Harrington. Paul Remos and his "Wonder Midgets" and another act will complete.

Farce at Playhouse

That distinctly successful farce, "The Cradle Snatchers," continues its hilarious run at the Playhouse.

Helen Bolton is featured in the cast, appearing as the middle-aged wife who decides to acquire a college boy escort since her husband habitually seeks the company of flappers.

The cast includes Grace Travers, Florence Auer, Norman Peck, Arthur Rankin and Gilbert Lawrence.

Comedy Continues

"The Family Upstairs" starts its fourth week at the Morosco Theater this afternoon. This comedy of American life is proving highly successful.

The cast includes John Litel, Alma Tell, Mitchell Harris, Jane Morgan, James Bush, Elizabeth Allen, Iny Shephard and Jasoda Marinoff.

Third Week for Revue

Today marks the beginning of the third week of Arthur Hockwald's all-colored musical show, "Struttin' Sam From Alabam," at the Majestic.

Thomas Harris, Margaret Jackson, Beston Webb, Freita Shaw, Ed Tolliver, Mildred Washington, Helen Justa, Johnson and Brown and a chorus of sixty appear. Charles Alpin wrote the book, lyrics and the music.

"Miss X" at Burbank

The management of the Burbank Theater, having received many requests for a return engagement of "Miss X" has decided to present it for one week only, beginning today.

James Yoeman, producer, has added several humorous bits. Grace Hutchison, Henry Shorr, Billy Moody and Reece Gardner are the principal funmakers. Lee Bud Harrison will have the floor to himself for he has written a special number.

"Fancies" Continues

Carter De Haven's "Fancies" is breaking attendance records—or establishing them—at the Hollywood Music Box, where it enters upon its third week tonight. With a cast of thirty and chorus of sixty, "Fancies" bids fair to last over the holidays.

The cast includes Thomas J. Dugan, Eddie Lambert, Doris Eaton, Betty Byrd, John Maxwell, Florence Hedges, Wheeler Oakman, Bobby Higgins, Billy Ritchie, Alpha and Delta Crane, the Duley Twins, Monty and Carmo, Arthur Miner, Ken Browne, and Billy Stout.

Smythe at Egan

J. Anthony Smythe as William Van Lyun, the young millionaire who marries his stenographer, is eminently fitted for the role he plays in "White Collars," now entering its 134th week at the Egan Theater. To Ross Forrester belongs the credit of making Cousin Henry a memorable study in the class consciousness which encourages failure. Henry has the soul of the reformer and his oratory is always on tap, but, nevertheless, he is a lovable fellow.

In the cast of "White Collars" are Gladys Heaney, Blanche Douglas, Zellah Covington, Gordon White, Frances Sheehan and Allan Elder.

NIBLO, EFFICIENT MASTER OF CEREMONIES, GIVEN 'VACATION'

After eight years of serving as master of ceremonies at divers theater openings, picture premieres, and charity functions, Fred Niblo has come to look on his dress suit as his working clothes.

He puts on his "b'iled" shirt with the same degree of resignation with which the bricklayer picks up his hod.

It's all in the day's work.

For once, at least, however, Niblo is to have the opportunity to sit back and enjoy himself.

"NIGHT OFF"

The Million Dollar Theater is going to have a Fred Niblo night tomorrow night in connection with the showing of "The Temptress," which he directed for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Incidentally this picture is said to be playing havoc with box-office records all over the country.

But Niblo will not be on the stage He will be in the audience with the members of the cast on the picture, hands folded comfortably over his tummy, and at peace with the world in general.

Someone else will perform the rites of "that reminds me of a story about Pat and Mike—it seems that Pat, etc, etc." Somebody else will introduce Mary Twinkle and Jack Handsome, the movie stars, to an admiring public.

Somebody else, not Fred Niblo.

COMPETITION

Of course, Niblo hardly can called the dean of masters of ceremony in the West. Charlie Murray was exercising that keen Irish wit of his on such occasions long before Niblo himself came to the Coast, and Bert Lytell and Conrad Nagle, among others, have done the honors many times. But since 1918 there is perhaps no other man in the industry who has been called on oftener than this director.

It all started during the war, when he was one of the four-minute men, and after the war when Grauman introduced the idea of the elaborate motion-picture premiere. Niblo, being in training, was the favored one.

"I never get over having stage fright," he confessed. "I believe on the nights I have served at the Egyptian that I have been more worried over it all than Sid Grauman himself. It is a terrible feeling to sense that perhaps the ceremonies are dragging a bit."

Niblo, by the way, is immensely proud of the profession to which he belongs.

"BOOSTERS"

"You hear that motion-picture people are jealous of each other, but it is not true. No picture is ever more enthusiastically received than on the first nights when the motion-picture people are all there. They are anxious for it to be a success, no matter from what particular studio the production might have come

"After the picture has been run these people gather in the foyer and you hear:

" 'Isn't it wonderful?' and 'A fine production!' "

Sometimes they know it isn't such a wonderful production at all, but they want to help 'put it over' just the same."

For a time this being master of ceremonies was pretty strenuous. He was hardly ever home in the evenings, but now it is a little easier.

Whether it's every night or not, however, that really amazing youthful enthusiasm of Fred Niblo stands him in good stead, and he is always ready to set forth for the fray. As he says, he can't refuse when it is for charity, and he certainly cannot refuse to serve his good friends when it is a motion-picture premiere.

Screen Actor Wins Fame as Horse Buster

To ride and tame a bucking bronco marks the victor as a real horseman, but to "bust" a wild mustang and "fork him to a finish" means lasting fame among the western riders. George O'Brien, the smiling athlete who heads the cast of "Three Bad Men" now playing at the Rialto, has gained that fame.

In the picturization of this story, Director John Ford of "Iron Horse" fame, took an army of players to one of the locations, the Jackson Hole country in the Teton Mountains of Wyoming. In that maze of hills herds of wild mustang still roam. To startle the actors, a number of cowboys captured and dragged into camp two of these equine demons and one of the leather-faced riders suggested that "mebbe some of you motion-picture heroes 'ud like to go hoss back ridin'."

O'Brien realized it was a challenge to what he had heard the Wyoming "hoss wrangler" describe as a "Sears, Roebuck" buckaroo. He accepted. The brute was thrown and blindfolded and a saddle cinched on. The hobbles and the eye cloth were pulled and the mustang staggered to its feet with O'Brien on the "hurricane deck." And to the surprise of all, he stayed. He quirted the mustang to a frenzy, raced him miles and in thirty minutes the animal was whipped. George was repaid when one of the old-timers murmured: "He shore is top hand."

French Actress Playing Varied Roles on Screen

After the completion of her next two screen roles, Arlette Marchal, will have appeared in about every class of photodrama since her arrival in the United States from France more than a year ago.

Mlle. Marchal's first American picture was "Madam Sans Gene," in which she played the role of the queen. This story was followed by "The Cat's Pajamas," a comedy drama. She was then cast in Marshal Neilan's mystery drama, "Diplomacy." After the completion of this production she appeared with Jack Holt in "Forlorn River," a western film. She is now scheduled to go in for comedy, having been cast for the leading role opposite Raymond Griffith in his next Paramount picture, "The Waiter From the Ritz," which James Cruze will direct.

FATES MOCK ACTRESS' EFFORT TO BE SERIOUS

The Fates are alaughing at Natalie Kingston. Miss Kingston recently left the Sennett studio because she wanted to desert comedies for dramatic screen work. Since then she has played in three pictures at the Paramount studio—and every one of them has been a comedy. The first was Bebe Daniel's "Mis Brewster's Millions." The second, the "serious comedy" costarring Betty Bronson and Ricardo Cortez, "The Cat's Pajamas," and the third, Raymond Griffith's "Wet Paint" which comes to the West Coast Westlake Theater Sunday for a three-day showing. On the same program at the Westlake will be an elaborate Fanchon and Marco production featuring Carol Weston and Dare Brenda in an interpretative piano number, Roscoe Ates, former headlined Orpheum comedian, and Charlie Melson and his Play Boys.

Million-Word Output in Two Years Credited

There hasn't been a day's let-up in Eve Unsell's writing schedule since December a year ago.

Prospects are that Miss Unsell will be writing right through the Yuletide season and into the new year without a day's pause in order to keep abreast of the constant succession of commissions for adaptations and continuities which have kept her busy through long days without a break for two years.

The popular scenarist, whose latest adaptation, "The Lily," the Belasco play, has just been released, computes that she has averaged 1000 words a day in original composition, building scenes for cinematic interpretation, what with the time spent in reading and revision, in those busy past two years.

Which means more than 1,000 000 words in all.

Miss Unsell's incessant activity is reflected on the current screen in namely, "The Plastic Age," "Sandy," "Siberia" and "Yellow Fingers."

At present Miss Unsell is engaged in adapting an original story of theatrical life, for which also she will write the continuity and which will be directed by Victor Schertzinger on completion of "Return of Peter Grimm."

Actress Found Thrill in Upset of Poker Game

Helen Bolton gets a thrill out of life every day!

Of course, her greatest thrill is in the tremendous roars of laughter that come over the footlights at every performance of the "Cradle Snatchers," the Medcraft-Mitchell farce which is said to be crowding the Playhouse at every performance.

"But speaking of thrills," says this trim and pretty Miss Bolton, "there is one in my early life that I distinctly recall, one that proved, in fact, a liberal supply of thrills at a poker party which were not at all expected in the game. When I was just that same theater-loving little girl, I used always to spend my time playing the leading roles of every play I saw. On the night in question I was attired in a kimono, borrowed from my mother, and possessed of a long carving knife, purveyed from the kitchen and standing in front of a mirror with the carving knife raised defiantly above my head, declaiming in my most strident tones, 'I am no coward!'

"At this juncture my uncle appeared and naturally startled, gave a yell which not only frightened me but sent me speeding downstairs, carving knife still clutched high above my head, straight into the library and a poker game at its most crucial moment. Needless to state, all thoughts of the 'kitty' were forgotten as skinny little girl in flowing white, with menacing carving knife, leaped onto the table. Every time my uncle meets me he says, 'Well, Helen, you are now a Broadway leading woman, and I see you are still no coward.'"

Shorter Comedy Declared to be Adding Prestige

According to F. Richard Jones, vice-president and director-general of the Hal Roach Studios, and recognized as one of the leading authorities on comedy construction, the comic feature of short length is rapidly acquiring the prestige to which it is entitled. Much of the comedy's rapid increase in popularity Jones attributes to Hal Roach's unique innovation of surrounding the short, humorous story with casts, settings and costumes on a par with those used in filming the most lavish dramatic feature.

"An indication of Mr. Roach's determination to continue signing the greatest available artists for his comedy roles," said Jones, "is found in the fact that within the past week or two he has contracted such notable players as Agnes Ayres, Priscilla Dean, Matt Moore, Mae Busch, Raymond Hitchcock and others for our star series. These are but current additions to his list of favorites which already included such names as Mabel Normand, Lionel Barrymore, Charley Chase, Helene Chadwick, Theda Bara, Ethel Clayton and scores of others.

"Mr. Roach maintains one of the most capable corps of artists and art directors available, and no expense or pains are spared in making each set as perfect as human ingenuity may devise."

BROADWAY DESERTED BY SCREEN COMEDIAN

Ned Sparks, screen comedian, will not be featured this winter in a New York comedy, according to his own statement. Although well known on Broadway as a stage actor, Sparks has decided to permanently remain in pictures. He recently completed a featured comic role in "Oh, What a Night," a Joe Rock comedy-drama produced at Universal. Sparks is one of the founders of the Masquers Club and one of the most active workers in the affairs of the actors' organization.

Hefty Tramp and Thin Bum in 'Fat' Parts

Mack Swain and Slim Summerville are "bumming" around together again after years of professional separation.

The two comedians, Mack so hefty and Slim so skinny, would shame in their appearance the most disreputable pair of hoboes who ever stalked the back door sandwich trail.

Cast as the vagabond companions to John Barrymore in "The Beloved Rogue," which Alan Crosland is making for United Artists, the former Keystone favorites reflect a vivid contrast in characterization. Mack is six feet, three inches in height and weighs 315 pounds. Slim is the same height and weighs 140. To make him look fatter, Mack has a full beard. Slim has no whiskers at all, and his face is plaintive in its make-up for exaggerated thinness. Both have "fat" parts in the Barrymore picture.

When they were youths Swain and Summerville were both of the "bean pole" type. Swain took on poundage with the years, but Slim says that his stomach remembers so well those "lean" days of his career that it will never permit him to eat enough to grow fat.

Film Continues Attraction to Audiences Here

"The Volga Boatman" has a powerful pull!

Any possible existing doubt of that has been removed by the crowds attracted to the Broadway Palace where the newest Cecil B. De Mille production is in the second week of its first downtown showing at popular prices. Audiences which have equalled in size the first week's gatherings have added their enthusiastic support to the chorus which has been sounding the praises of the production since its initial presentation several months ago.

Forced termination of the original run, to make way for pictures the showing of which had already been put off to the limit on account of the record-breaking run of "The Volga Boatman," gave the management of the Broadway Palace an opportunity to obtain the popular De Mille work for the inauguration of the new policy of important, extended-run cinema offerings.

The downtown showing of the film has also demonstrated the interesting fact that a picture of this magnitude can be depended upon to carry itself unaided as far as the box office is concerned.

This was assured for the run of "The Volga Boatman" at the Broadway Palace with the engaging of Eddie Pomeroy to select and supervise all musical settings at the theater and to personally conduct the orchestra at the performances of which there are four daily.

FAST PACE MADE IN FILM OPENING TODAY

Bebe Daniels, coached by Charley Paddock, sets a fast pace in her rollicking comedy, "The Campus Flirt," which opens today at the West Coast Westlake Theater for a three-day showing. "The Campus Flirt," directed by Clarence Badger, sparkles with genuine campus atmosphere, photographed at the University of California. Among those participating during the making of the picture wese: Charlie Paddock, Jim Barber, California track captain; Gordon Cramner, crew captain; Jack Merchant, ex-all-around athlete; Wanda Danley, joint holder of a world record for girls in the 100-yard dash, and Frances Keddie, title-holder in the hop, skip and jump. Westlake "Varieties," featuring Charlie Melson and his Play Boys, and a group of vaudeville favorites, are on the program with Bebe's picture.

LAST KISS AND LAST GARDENIA OPEN VISTA OF STARDOM WITH FIVE-YEAR CONTRACT IN HAND

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Well, anyway Natalie Kingston gets the last kiss, and the last gardenia—as far as we know.

You see, Lewis Stone is the hero of this "Don Juan's Three Nights" at Loew's State Theater this week—and ladies and kisses abound. One just has to get used to seeing Lewis kissing and being kissed. But I insist Lewis is really at a disadvantage because he has to do most of it in a Prince Albert, or at best a swallow-tailed evening rig-out, stiff white shirt and collars galore. (Lewis ruins numerous correct collars,) whereas both John Gilbert in "Bardelys the Magnificent" and John Barrymore in "Don Juan" have the galmour of romantic costume to help them.

Lewis will doubtless prove more encouraging and inspiring to modern masculinity. He looks more like a regular every-day fellow, in spite of the fact that he is supposed to be a great musician. (Really, I can't believe great musicians ever dressed so well or could be such good swordsmen.) But there it is, Lewis might be a well-groomed Shriner or even a Rotarian—and yet culls more romance and kisses than he can comfortably take care of.

Now this Natalie Kingston does not come into the picture until Lewis, as the famous Arabi, has signified that his disastrous masculine charms shall no longer register to the destruction of lovely feminine hearts. He has, in fact, vowed that he is through with women, and looked as if he meant it—having resisted the temptation to do a little cradle-snatching (Shirley Mason being the alluring infant.) Then Natalie calls, and embraces him fondly and gets the pure gardenia, and walks off with the romantically shop-worn prize.

WINS CONTRACT

And the really remarkable thing about it is that this "bit" was so dexterously done that it won a five-year contract from First National for Natalie. Hence, from now on, Natalie is a full-blown leading lady—and a very pretty dainty one.

Natalie never meant to be a picture actress. Dancing was her forte. And three years ago she was dancing her dainty way into the hearts of Loew's State Theater audiences—and one night she danced right into the middle of one Mr. Jones's eye. Mr. Jones mentioned the fact to Mack Sennett, who likewise took his eye down to be danced into. Whereupon Natalie was persuaded that her charms were needed for leading ladyship with Harry Langdon, who was then with Sennett.

Eighteen months of that convinced a few other people that Natalie had "it" and Lasky's gave her a role with Bebe Daniels in "Miss Brewster's Millions." Then came "Wet Paint" and this "Don Juan's Three nights."

Whereupon First National captured her and she rose to the distinction of leading lady with Milton Sills in "Men of the Dawn"—tropical stuff—and with Lowell Sherman in "Lost at Sea." They wanted her back to Lasky's for a good role in "Kid Boots" with Eddie Cantor, and now she has a wicked enchantress role with Ronald Colman in "The Night of Love," Goldwyn's hastening to rent the young lady likewise.

She is quite sumptuous as Donna Beatrice, the glorious Spanish minx, who sins for love of Monte Love, "the bold, bad beast" in "The Night of Love" and she looked at me very earnestly as she explained there really was some excuse for her, don't you know, because Donna Beatrice really is frightfully in love and it makes it so much better when the lady is in love, as it were.

This Natalie, who is fast soaring to starry heights in pictures, is a peculiarly sweet little girl, not yet 20, but already one of the projected "stars" who graduated from Mack Sennett's, which includes Chaplin, Gloria Swanson, Louise Fazenda and so many of the shiners of today.

PURE CALIFORNIAN

And she is pure Californian. Great-grandfather was Gen. Mariano Vallejo, the first military Governor of California, and her father is English and her mother Spanish, and she was born in Sonoma county, raised in San Francisco and then came to live in Los Angeles, as all first-class Californians should do. She can swim, and drives her own stylish new car, and means to learn to fly. Her contract says she must never, never weigh more than 140 pounds, but she is tall and slight and very graceful and manages to keep to just about 128 pounds.

She has that lovely dark hair with a glint of red that is so attractive, and has the largest, loveliest dark eyes and long silken lashes, and a perfectly wonderful clear Spanish complexion.

Natalie says she has an excellent idea of the sort of man she is going to marry some day—and he must be a gentleman and he must be intellectual and know a great deal more than she does. But it is no use him appearing on the scene yet awhile, because she does not intend to marry for five years. And when she does marry she expects it to be for keeps—Natalie has no taste for temporary marriage and easy divorce.

In the meantime, if they go on giving her siren vamp roles, she will get all the hectic love experience in her strictly professional capacity—and know every manner and means of holding a husband when she selects which one she wants to hold.

NOVELIST'S ONLY COPYRIGHTED WORK AIDS PERSECUTED SECT

How a celebrated novelist and leader of thought donated the entire proceeds from one of his most popular books to defray the expenses of colonizing a religious sect much persecuted by his government was revealed with the arrival of Count Ilya Tolstoy in Hollywood, to act as literary adviser to Edwin Carewe in the filming of the Leo Tolstoy novel, "Resurrection."

It was that author, the father of the distinguished Hollywood visitor, and the novel named which featured in the episode.

"Since 1883 my father had refused to have his writings copyrighted, so that they might find the wider circulation among the masses and exert the greater influence.

"In 1889, however, he made an exception to this rule after a sympathetic contemplation of the plight of a religious sect known as the Dughabors,, who were severely persecuted because their beliefs ran counter to government policies. The Dughabors, who were severely perrefusal to have anything in common with the state church. Their defiance of the ruling government was open and frank, and they violently opposed the use of arms or violence in any form.

"The Czarist government determined to wipe out this sect and immediately set into motion the usual machinery—exile to Siberia. Hundreds were deported to the barren steppes, and among them their leader, Peter Verigin.

"My father decided to find asylum for these unfortunate people in some friendly country, and after considering various localities he determined upon the United States.

"To raise funds to carry out the project, he made a deal with Marx, publisher of his works, to pay him 20,000 rubles, or $10,000 in American coin, for the first publication rights of his then just completed novel, Resurrection. This sum was later swelled by returns from the translation and, all in all, served to pay the transportation of the entire sect to the land of political and religious freedom.

"This colony, after a peripatetic existence in the United States, finally settled permanently at Brilliant, B. C."

"Resurrection" is to be made into an elaborate film spectacle by Carewe and work on the story will commence in Hollywood, within a few weeks. Count Ilya Tolstoy will remain with the producer until he completes the final episode of the noted novel.

Romance Scenes Found Essential to Film Comedy

Romance, says the astute Harry Langdon, is as essential to screen comedy as ham is to eggs.

So Langdon yesterday signed Alma Bennett, brunette charmer, for the principal feminine role in "Long Pants," his new feature comedy now in the making at the First National studios in Burbank.

The contract was closed by William H. Jenner, general manager of the Langdon corporation.

While Miss Bennett will do the bulk of the romancing with the starring funster, she is by no means the only girl to whom Harry makes love in "Long Pants."

His first amorous vis-a-vis is little Betty Baker, a recent Langdon find who plays with him for the first time in this new opus.

His second was Gladys Harvey, petite beauty, who is another of his "Long Pants" conquests.

His third was Babe London, heroine of a hundred comedies and a great screen favorite.

And now comes the statuesque Alma Bennett, to appear in many of the picture's principal love scenes.

SCARS VERSUS STARS

DIVORCE PROBLEM SOLVED BY ALICE GENTLE

Alice Gentle, charming opera star appearing with the Philharmonic Orchestra's popular concert this afternoon, has developed some very definite ideas as to the relation of the problems of divorce to problems of grand opera since her engagement with the Ravinia Park Opera last summer. According to Miss Gentle, abused wives in divorce courts who complain of their battle scars have nothing over on the opera stars singing opposite the fiery and temperamental Giovanni Martinelli. Miss Gentle believes Martinelli capable of holding his own against any caveman of realty or fiction. One opera with this temperamental tenor would cause the most painfully abused wife to return home thankful that fate had dealt kindly in giving her such a gentle mate. Hence she offers one cure for the divorce problem: An act of opera played opposite Giovanni Martinelli.

As a proof of the primitive tactics of the tenor, Miss Gentle still carries a scar of a seriously cut knee, the resulting casualty of an impromptu fling across the stage. This was a bit of business that was never rehearsed by the energetic tenor and it came as a total surprise to all concerned, particularly to Miss Gentle.

Grabbing a lady by the back of her hair is another ancient method employed by the singer. Miss Gentle, who wears wigs in the majority of her operatic roles, states that many times, after returning to her dressing room between acts, she discovered to her dismay that her blond wig was sadly twisted, revealing tell-tale strands of her own jet black hair.

The charming soprano states that while Giovanni Martinelli is supplying the audience with thrills galore by his utter abandon and realistic interpretation of his roles, he is also supplying thrills of every variety for the singer playing opposite him. If she could collect alimony for each of the scars sustained from the acting of temperamental tenors, she would, no doubt, totally eclipse some of our famous divorcees.

Certainly, from this, we gather that the life in opera is more realistic than it seems, and that the daily routine of a prima donna is far from an easy one.

Miss Gentle's dark eyes sparkled with amusement as she recounted her other experiences with the three temperamentally different operatic tenors with whom she sang during the summer, namely, Edward Johnson, Mario Chamlee and Martinelli.

Of the three, perhaps, Chamlee was the most interesting. A complete mastery in the art of poise and self-control on the part of Miss Gentle, however, was absolutely necessary, for Chamlee, with a boyish love of mischief, took a fiendish delight in whispering under his breath humorous remarks and comments during the most serious of love scenes. This, according to Miss Gentle, is not always conducive to the best effects in operatic performance, but nothing pleases the impetuous Mario as much as to obtain a muffled laugh or telltale smile in a situation that demanded tense and dramatic seriousness.

Edward Johnson, on the other hand, was the very soul of dignity. His personality dominated the scene from the moment of his appearance until his exit. Johnson, always "the artist." Never for a moment did he forget the fact, and his serious-minded performance reflected upon the other members of the opera, infusing them also with the feeling of its importance.

Ravinia Park, Chicago's open-air theater, was the scene of Miss Gentle's interesting experiences. It is thirty miles out of Chicago and has the distinction of producing the most realistic open-air opera in the world. Among other roles sung by Alice Gentle during her engagement there this summer was "Mme. Sans Gene." The opera has not been produced in this country for eleven years. It met with unusual success at the Ravinia performance.

Miss Gentle considers Los Angeles the ideal place for the development of open-air opera. With the wonderful California climate in our favor she sees no reason why this project would fail.

KOSLOFF'S FLOWER

Kosloff Dancer Recovers From Serious Injury

Kosloff's Flower has fully recovered from what might have been a very serious accident, and returns this week to her dancing number in the prologue, "Les Magnifique," which is running at the Carthay Circle Theater.

Miss Flower has been confined to her home for over two weeks because of a deep gash in her heel received from stepping on a piece of broken glass. She was forced to give up, not only her dance number in the Carthay Circle Theater prologue, but also her numbers in the Kosloff ballet in the operas of "Samson and Delilah," "Traviata" and "Aida" of the season just passed.

It is fortunate that Miss Flower carries accident insurance of a considerable amount to cover just such emergencies.

MUSIC NOTES

In this, the fourth season of the oratorio of the Glendale Music Association, there are 150 voices. John Smallman of Los Angeles is the director and Lorna Gregg, the accompanist. It is planned that the society will sing the Messiah again this year. Last year the Box Christmas Oratorio was given with merit. Mr. Smallman plans to present Hadley's Ode to Music some time in the spring. Mrs. Mattison Boyd Jones organized Glendale's Oratorio, as a part of the Glendale Music Club.

Miss Sarah Ellen Barnes gives the second of the series of interesting talks on the Philharmonic programs in the lecture room of the Public Library November 4, next, at 10 a.m. The first program two weeks ago proved very popular and it is hoped that there will be a regular attendance of music lovers who wish to become more familiar with the programs given by the orchestra.

On the program for Thursday, in addition to the illustrations by Miss Lansing Hartwell, the songs to be given by Mary Lewis, soloist at the Philharmonic, will be illustrated through the kindness of Miss Eleanor Woodford, soprano of the Temple Baptist Church. These programs at the Library are free and the public is invited.

The Olga Steeb Piano School gave its first children's recital of the present season to a hall full of interested listeners on Saturday afternoon of last week. The recital was extraordinary for its splendid tone coloring. The next recital will take place on Saturday afternoon, November 20, at the Wilshire Methodist Church.

Olga Steeb, the director, is kept busy constantly. She played a recital for the Amphion Club of San Diego on Thursday night and on Friday night she was soloist for the Woman's Club of Glendale, playing the Liszt Concerto with the Philharmonic Orchestra of Los Angeles, Walter Henry Rothwell, conductor.

Edmund J. Myer has returned from his three months tour of the East and has reopened his residence studio on Coronado street. While in New York and other eastern cities he met many of his former musical and social friends.

Guy Bevier Williams, pianist and teacher, who has been in the hospital for the past month, is again at his studios in the Southern California Music Building, and has also opened a new studio in Hollywood. Mr. Williams has been forced to cancel several recital programs which were given this month, but is planning to give them later in the season. Next Wednesday he will be heard in a joint recital with Margaret Colmon, to be given for the women's chairman of programs committee, and on November 12 he will give a program for the Los Angeles Opera and Fine Arts Club at the Ambassador.

An unusual honor has come to Miss Margaret Bitter of this city, who is one of the six among the 800 to win a scholarship at the Juilliard Foundation in New York. This scholarship entitles her to a year at the school with all expenses paid, and study with the best teachers obtainable. The pianist under which Miss Bitter will study will be the famous Lehvinne. Miss Bitter, who is a gifted composer, is especially interested in the classes in harmony and composition.

Mrs. Leoline Walton, pianist and exponent of Stojowski, who has been in Europe for the past four months, has returned home and has reopened her studio. Mrs. Walton expects only advanced pupils and is giving both class and private lessons this season.

May Massie Levengood will appear in the first Philharmonic concert of the series held November 9 in the Municipal Auditorium, Ocean Park. She is the only local artist appearing. These concerts are sponsored by the Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club, under the able chairmanship of Mrs. J. G. Braun.

"Pop" Concert This Afternoon at Philharmonic

For the first "pop" concert of the season of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, to be given this afternoon at Philharmonic Auditorium at 3 o'clock, Conductor Rothwell has chosen the following program:

Meyerbeer, "Coronation March" from "The Prophet."

Schubert, Symphony No. 8 in B minor (unfinished.)

Moussorgsky, "A Night on a Bare Mountain" (first time at these concerts.)

Czibulka, "Fly Minuet" from "Der Bajazzo."

Tschaikowsky, "Capriccio Italien," Op. 45.

Alice Gentle, soprano, will be the soloist on this occasion and has chosen for her numbers: Massenet, "Pleurez, pleurez mes yeux" from "Le Cid;" Saint-Saens, "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" from "Samson and Delilah."

SANTA MONICA CLUB SCHEDULES CONCERTS

Beginning the fifth year in presenting the Philharmonic concerts, the Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club, under the efficient chairmanship of Mrs. J. Braun, is busily at work. Mrs. Braun has appointed her usual committee of twenty-five leading club women and they report that tickets are being most enthusiastically bought. Such artists as Walter Henry Rothwell, distinguished conductor; Alfred Megerlin, violinist; Andre Maquarre, solo flutist, and May Massie Levengood, soprano, are appearing at the first concert November 9 at the Municipal Auditorium at Ocean Park.

One of the most valuable features of the concerts is the opportunity afforded the school students to hear this great orchestra. Students have been made a half-rate. Judging by the enthusiasm shown at the high school and junior high the only problem confronting the committee is how to retain seats for the grown-ups.

PRYOR MOORE IN BILTMORE RECITAL

An interesting announcement comes from the Pryor Moore office. This young and talented musician, who heads a concert orchestra bearing his name, is going to offer music lovers in Los Angeles a splendid and varied program in the Biltmore Hotel ballroom, November 10. Heretofore Mr. Moore has concertised with his regular nine pieces; on November 10 he will enlarge his orchestra to fourteen men. This includes the full wood-wind choir, string sextette, brass and percussion. Light and heavy classics, rearranged and reconstructed by his pianist, Juan Aguilar, ought to prove a delight to the Biltmore Hotel audience.

Besides his ensemble as a whole, he expects to feature his string quartet; Juan Aguilar at the piano rendering his own composition, "Consuela," a solo with orchestra accompaniment; Harriet Henderson, soprano, a most charming figure in vocal art, and Walter Kuns, youthful artist in a cornet solo. It can easily be seen that this concert will provide varied and artistic entertainment.

NEW MUSIC SOCIETY PLANS ACTIVITIES

Persinger String Quartet Will be Heard on Programs of Club

The New Music Society of California, whose successful concert of last year is remembered by all those who attended it, is beginning its second season with a concert to be given at the Biltmore Music Room, November 20 at 8:30.

This year we shall hear the Persinger String Quartet interpret works by two living European composers, the Quartet in A minor by Darius Milhaud, and five pieces by Casella. Those who heard the Persinger quartet, which was founded by Elias Hecht as a part of the San Francisco Chamber Music Society, will know that the works will be produced with perfection.

The quartet will also perform a work by Henry Cowell, written several years ago. It is probably the first composition in what is now called dissonant counterpoint to have been written in America. The fact that Cowell was then unaware of the most recent works of European ultra-modernists like Schoenberg adds still to the historical value of the pieces.

The Persinger Quartet with the help of three extra instrumentalists will also repeat Carl Ruggles's beautiful "Andante" (performed last year) on the request of many musicians, and play a work of similar type "Lilacs," which Ruggles wrote as the slow movement of a symphonic trilogy called "Men and Mountains."

Henry Cowell, the founder of the New Music Society, who recently completed a most successful tour throughout Europe, will play three of his most recent works. They utilize the new instrumental possibilities of the piano discovered by the young California pioneer and constitute a step futher in the direction already indicated by his former compositions.

D. Rudhyar, whose symphonic trilogy, "The Surge of Fire" was performed last year by the society, will interpret several of his tone-poems for the piano. They are terse and intensely expressive "poetical expressions beyond words." Some of these scored a great success when Rudhyar played them in New York last winter.

The last opus for piano written by the great Austrian modernist, Arnold Schoenberg, will also be performed by Miss Ethel Denny.

The program will constitute a summary of the most diverse tendencies in music today, fulfilling thus the aim of the New Music Society. This organization, which is planning to extend its activities in the future, has recently made a reciprocal arrangement for a yearly exchange of music with the following European groups:

The Artists' Society of Warsaw; the November Groug of Berlin, The Composers' Guilds of Prague and Vienna; the Moravian Society of Brunn; the Societee Independante of Paris; the Composers' Society of London.

On its advisory board are to be found the names of most of the prominent composers of the younger generation.

KURT MUELLER TO BE HEARD IN RECITAL

Kurt Mueller, pianist of Berlin, and more recently head of the Conservatory of Music of Atlanta, Ga., studied under the famous Wagnerian, Karl Klindworth, and was soon appointed assistant to the Xavier Scharwenka. Prof. Muller later taught in Helsingfors, Finland, where he succeeded Ferruccio Busoni as head of the piano department at the government conservatory.

This is Kurt Mueller's first piano recital in Los Angeles, to take place at the music room of the Biltmore Hotel, November 10. Kurt Mueller will be assisted by the coloratura soprano, Teodora Wisniewska, who will sing several new compositions by Miss Bach, a young Czecho-Slovakian musician and writer, who is now making her home in Los Angeles.

LOUIS GRAVEURE TO APPEAR IN RECITAL

Famous Baritone Scheduled to Open the Behymer Season

Judging from the number of requests for a return engagement of Louis Graveure and expressions of appreciation over his appearance at the Philharmonic Auditorium next Tuesday evening, L. E. Behymer could not have opened his thirty-sixth season more auspiciously than in presenting the famous Belgian baritone. Graveure's growing following is due to his fascinating artistry, which is equally that of voice as of interpretation.

While Graveure has been blessed by nature with a truly exceptional baritone voice it was unrelenting study guided by high intelligence and vivid poetic feeling which made it into the remarkable instrument it is today. Incidentally, it was excessive study which nearly ruined Graveure's voice.

Overpreparation for a debut left him one morning with not more than a hoarse whisper. That condition remained for months. Finally a friend suggested outdoor life. Always fond of the sea, Graveure who was a good boatsman, took a job on an English fishing vessel out of Plymouth. While his body became hard fate once more stepped in, when he was thrown overboard as some spars on which he stood broke. Hours in wet clothes led to diphtheria and at the close of weeks of illness young Graveure was on his way to a dry country, South Africa.

There the warm sun, riding all day horse-back as a government claim agent from diamond mine to mine did the miracle. Gradually Graveure's voice come back until that once lustrous voice once more was his in all its flexibility. A concert in Cape Town more than brought the cost of the steamer ticket. Within six months Graveure sang his belated recital in Brussels and he was launched on an artistic career which has ever since led him upward in artistic growth and public favor.

Graveure attributes much of his interpretative versatility to that year and a half among sailors and mining men. He has seen life from every angle and he lives his songs. As a result his new and fascinatingly versatile program next Tuesday should all the more prove a musical event of first importance.

Mary Lewis to be Soloist With Philharmonic

Mary Lewis, who is to appear as soloist at the second symphony pair of concerts by the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, Walter Henry Rothwell, conductor, Thursday evening, November 4, and Friday afternoon, November 5, was born in Little Rock, Ark. Miss Lewis received a good musical education at home, her foster father being a Methodist minister who taught music and made her practice for long hours at the piano. She sang in public at 8 years of age in the choir of the Methodist Church at Dallas, Tex. During the next eleven years she sang and played the violin and pipe organ in church at Dallas and Little Rock. In 1917 her musical career outside the church began when she ran away from her home in Arkansas to appear in the chorus of a traveling musical show, and later she was a star of Ziegfeld's Follies. No one in public life at present has had such a dramatic career. Her brief life story has captured the imagination of thousands who go to hear her because of the romance connected with her sudden rise in less than a decade from a place in a small-town church choir to the goal of all great singers throughout the world, the Metropolitan Opera Company.

For her appearance with the Philharmonic Orchestra Miss Lewis will sing Mozart's "Deh Vieni non Tardar" from "The Marriage of Figaro" and Charpentier's "Depuis le Jour" from "Louise."

On this same program Conductor Rothwell has included the Borodine Symphony No. 2 in B-minor, which is being given its first performance at these concerts, and Rachmaninoff-Vocalise, Op. 34, No. 14, which is being given its first performance in Los Angeles. The program closes with the Wagner prelude to "Die Meistersinger."

Louise Homer Heard in Recital at Auditorium

Mme. Louise Homer, the American contralto, will sing in Los Angeles for the first time in recital, at the Philharmonic Auditorium, Monday evening. George Leslie Smith will present the famous contralto as the first event of the Auditorium Artist Series.

Following her operatic engagement with the Los Angeles Grand Opera Association, Mme. Homer, toured the Northwest and Northern California, where she has appeared with success in the leading cities. Mme. Homer will give but one recital in Los Angeles this season.

For her program, Monday night, Mme. Homer will sing.

A CAPPELLA CHOIR PRESENTED

A real a cappella choir that can sing with the true spirit is the latest addition to our local musical attractions. That unique choral organization formed by John Smallman more than two years ago and known as the Smallman a Cappella Choir, will give its first Philharmonic Auditorium concert on November 27. In repertoire sacred and secular, they will make a colorful picture on the platform in their gypsy costumes. Vera Barstow, violinist, will be the soloist.

EGAN PRESENTS PUPILS

Frank Egan, in line with his usual policy of presenting the pupils of the Egan School in public performances at stated intervals, announces three one-act plays which will be given this afternoon in the Egan Theater. They are entitled, "Brides of War," "Roses," and "The Return of Jim." The casts will be composed of Willah Jernigan, Constance Darlington, Lillian Meyer, Glenn Darling, Gilbert Kinsey, Dorothy Day, Gayle Nelson and Wallie Moore. Edwin N. Wallack is responsible for the direction and staging.

GOLDWYN FILM SETS PRECEDENT

[illegible] With Western Locale Give Promise of Gaining New Pre-eminence Because of It—Stellar Hits on the Decline—Greta Garbo Most Outstanding

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

THE production of "The Winning of Barbara Worth" [illegible] undoubtedly give [illegible] stimulus to a new type of [illegible] feature of greater im[illegible] and interest than any that has been told before. This production has opened up a new [illegible] because it has taken a [illegible] of extraordinary import [to a] large section of the country, [and] the country as a whole, and woven this into a story of wide popular appeal.

There are other stories of well-[illegible] equal significance, and one of the greatest undoubtedly is of the conservation of the tim[illegible].

These bigger phases of western development have never been [illegible] in pictures in the past, though "The Covered Wagon" and "The Iron Horse" have paved the way for their visualization.

Consequently, "The Winning of Barbara Worth" affords a vision of new meanings with which the [illegible] of western locale may be [illegible] in the future, and in this respect particularly is far-reaching. The flood scenes and those which show the effects of [illegible] are a rare achievement, and are linked with a [illegible] motif that is bound to [illegible] popularly.

RONALD COLMAN and Vilma Banky are becoming well-[illegible] ideal costars as a result of their two appearance together, originally in "The Dark Angel" and now in "The Winning of Barbara Worth." They are appearing together again in a new picture being made by Samuel Goldwyn, with a Spanish locale, originally called "The Beauty and the Beast," and now [illegible] called quite intriguingly "A Night of Love."

The adaptability of these two [illegible] is amazing. It is difficult to imagine such a sudden switch as they made from "The Dark Angel" to "The Winning of Barbara Worth." In the former instance the locale was English; in the latter most thoroughly [illegible], and from all advance [illegible] they are quite as much at home in the more exotic Spanish atmosphere.

[illegible] that she has only been in this country for two years, Miss Banky managed to preserve very attractively the impression of being a western girl in "The Winning of Barbara Worth," while Colman could well be accepted in his role as the civil [illegible].

In respect to their adaptability they both appear to be quite [illegible], and that perhaps is one [of the] special reasons for their successful appearance together.

GRETA GARBO occupies a unique place in the cinema firmament of the current [illegible]. She is practically the only new star to have scored a decisive [illegible].

[illegible] finds have been a [illegible] this season. They are in every season, for that matter. However, there have been fewer [illegible] that have won a brilliant [illegible] for themselves this year than for the past two seasons. It has been a period decidedly lacking in real discoveries.

A PECULIAR thing about Miss Garbo is that she has won her popular conquest by her own personality. Neither of the productions in which she has appeared since coming to this country command any particular rating as productions.

Her really big chance will probably occur in her next picture, "The Flesh and the Devil." The advance reports on this film say that her work is marvelous, and that she has really her first [illegible] opportunity to act.

Her acting so far hasn't helped her victory very greatly. Personal appeal has been nearly the whole thing in her instance.

THERE are some discoveries still to be heard from as yet. The most important is probably Fay Wray, who is playing in Erich Von Stroheim's "The Wedding March."

The Stroheim discoveries are [illegible], though, in the respect that [illegible] in the majority of cases begun and ended with a Von Stroheim production. It can generally be revived again only when they appear in another of his pictures.

Miss Wray may, however, prove the dazzling exception.

Story Based on War Song to be Filmed

"Mademoiselle from Armentieres," the song that has been sung by more warring soldiers than any other, is the theme of a new original written by Albert Shelby LeVino. LeVino's story, 25,000 words in length, has been sold to Cecil B. De Mille for $15,000 cash. It is to be made into a special production next spring by Paul Sloane, one of De Mille's foremost directors.

Five armies, the American, British, French, Italian and Portuguese, numbering approximately 20,000,000 soldiers, sang "Mademoiselle from Armentieres during the World War. It was originated at this little French town by the Australian contingent billeted at Armentieres during the war.

According to LeVino, who made a thorough research of the origination and continuance of the song, it is sung today in every language. It is known throughout the world as "the song with a million verses."

"Even during the war," LeVino reports, "it was known as 'the song of a thousand verses' until the arrival of the Yanks. They added another 999,000 verses, all but two of which were too ribald to print."

War Film Novel in Lack of Scene at Battlefields

A war picture without a battlefield scene, yet declared to rank beside "What Price Glory" in war realism, is "Corporal Kate," Paul Sloane's new production for De Mille from the story by Albert Shelby LeVino.

While no actual "No-Man's-Land" scenes are incorporated "Corporal Kate" depends for its war interest on scenes depicting the German bombardment of the town of Rivercourt, fifteen miles behind the front. It is in this town that Vera Reynolds, star of the picture, Julia Faye and Majel Coleman, the three girls around whom the story has been woven by LeVino, are billeted.

Rivecourt was almost totally destroyed in the great German offensive of August-September, 1918. It was the place where the American Seventh Machine Gun Battalion, First Division, fought.

JOVIAL JOHN T. MURRAY HAS MOST STARTLING PREJUDICE

BY MARQUIS BUSBY

Seasoned vaudevillians have fewer foibles, complexes and inhibitions complexes and inhibitions than perhaps any other one group of the children of Thespis. In fact, they are usually just "folks." They get hay fever in the fall and tonsilitis in the winter, even as you and I. And that is the way one would describe John T. Murray and his lovely blonde wife, Vivian Oakland. They are just "folks."

Seasoned vaudevillians have fewer complexes and inhibitions [than] perhaps any other one group of the children of Thespis. In fact, they are usually just "folks." They get hay fever in the fall and tonsilitis in the winter, even as you and I.

And that is the way one would describe John T. Murray and his lovely blonde wife, Vivian Oakland. They are just "folks."

Murray contributes a most amusing performance as a sort of medieval [illegible] in "Bardelys the Magnificent," at the Carthay Circle Theater, and has now embarked on a costarring engagement with Louise Fazenda for Warner Brothers. Vivien Oakland is playing at Universal in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." But before that Murray and [illegible] in their "Songs and Satires" [illegible] the length and breadth of the Keith and Orpheum circuits.

MURRAY THE DETECTIVE

The first picture under the new contract in which Murray will appear is "Fingerprints," a story by Arthur Somers Roche. In this he is a boob detective, with Louise Fazenda as a slavey. It is to be one of those thrilling, shivering crook mystery comedies, in which you suspect everyone but the right person. But I'm not sure that Murray will be much of a success on the [illegible]. You see, he doesn't believe in that time-honored tradition, the close-up. Of course, there must be something wrong with an actor who doesn't believe in close-ups.

"I don't say that all action should be taken in the long shots of the [illegible]," said Murray. "There is a [illegible] and 'tween, however. Every time there is a close-up it represents a break in dramatic continuity. And anyway, those enormous features one sees in the close-ups.

"I tell you it's terrifying."

DIRECTORIAL AMBITIONS

Murray would like to direct some day. Perhaps then the "close-upless" picture, if a word may be created, will become a reality.

When I told him that Louise Fazenda had a habit of walking away with every picture in which she appeared, he nodded sagely.

"I know it," he remarked, "but there are one or two places in the picture where I intend to do some walking away myself."

"The Vitaphone is going to make it hard for you foreign stars wth your insufficient English," he predicted wisely to the Norselike Vivien Oakland. Vivien is a native daughter of our own Golden State, so consequently will not lose weight over the dire threat.

ANCIENT DAYS

In the dark ages, before pictures had begun that involved process of emerging from their infancy, Murray sang the illustrated songs in a nickelodeon in Toronto, Can. He invariably brought down the house when he sang that stirring masterpiece, "Pony Boy," which was the "Yes, We Have No Bananas" in popularity of that period.

Murray himself is somewhat of an international problem.

He was born in Australia, educated in England and Switzerland, is a movie star in Hollywood—and his name is Murray.

I don't know just what that makes him, but the Murray coat of arms must be the front page of a Baedecker guide.

Murray free-lanced in "Sally," "Winds of Chance" and "The Still Alarm."

HUNGARIAN NOW AMERICAN

Vilma Banky, "Winning of Barbara Worth" Heroine, Looks That Part to Perfection

BY KATHERINE LIPKE

Vilma Banky—the beautiful blond Hungarian girl—is about to remove all traces of her foreign background. She will file her naturalization papers next March, and plans a trip to Vienna to persuade her family to try Hollywood as a place of residence.

Two years ago when Miss Banky came to America she could speak no English. Today, although her conversation is halting, she has very little accent. She has adopted all our styles in clothes, and looks eagerly forward to the time when she will be an American citizen.

INDIVIDUALITY RETAINED

It is an interesting development. Most foreign picture stars coming to Hollywood have proudly kept their individual manner of dressing—their European ways.

Not so Vilma! Perhaps she recognizes that her blond beauty makes her very American in type. As the heroine of "The Winning of Barbara Worth," the Samuel Goldwyn production now showing at the Forum, no one could have appeared more completely the American girl than did Hungarian Miss Banky.

At first, in the filming of the picture, she struggled to appear American and affected certain mannerisms. Then later she found that she could be more like the girls of this country if she was just herself. And the result has been singularly pleasing in "The Winning of Barbara Worth."

Now she is filming "A Night of Love." Ronald Colman again appears with her. However, this picture is far removed from the recent epic of the declamation of the desert. It is a story of Spain many years ago, with romance, much devilment, including two wives stolen on their wedding night, and plenty of sword play. It affords a glimpse of Ronald Colman as a Spanish adventurer, in a most intriguing costume, with curved sideburns and a mustache.

THE PRINCESS

And Vilma is a princess, with her long blond curls twisted into a unique headdress, with soft, clinging velvets, and a crown in her hair. To be perfectly candid she would rather play this type of role, rather than Barbara Worth—the alert, matter-of-fact girl. The air of romance and mystery which clings to "A Night of Love," as well as the beautiful costumes, makes it an alluring prospect for anyone.

Hollywood really knows little about Vilma Banky—apart from her picture self. Without meaning to she has kept herself aloof from the rest of the film colony. Once in a while she accepts a party invitation, but for the most part she is seen with but few people.

It is something to awaken admiration. With the public constantly viewing the picture stars, at parties and premieres, and hearing stories about them through the columns of the newspapers—a great deal of the glamour disappears.

NO RUMORS

But just try and find a rumor, either romantic or otherwise, about Vilma Banky. Go to ten premieres—and perhaps you will see her at one of them. Go to ten parties and, you will probably have the same result. Yet she is neither upstage, nor unfriendly. She likes people with a childlike feeling of friendliness.

The possibilities of romance and Vilma Banky becoming linked has been mentioned several times, but never with any degree of certainty. She is going to Hungary next year—but it is not for any matrimonial

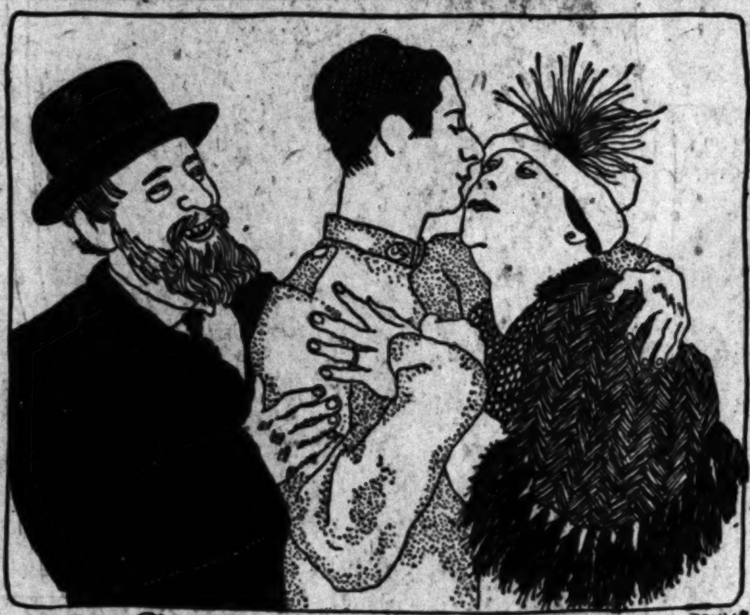
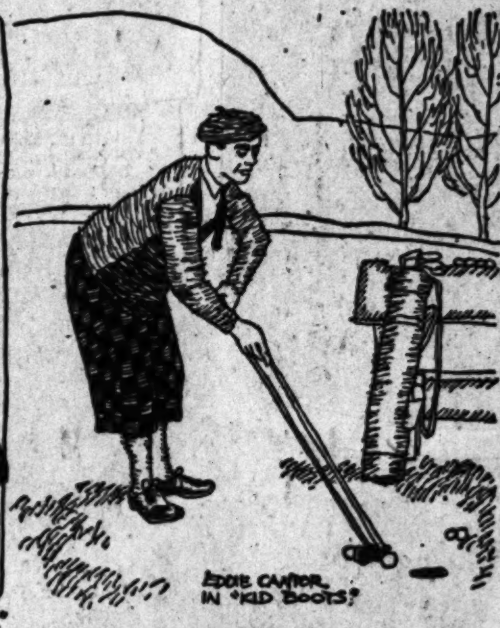
IRISH-JEWISH COMEDIES HAVE THEIR INNING

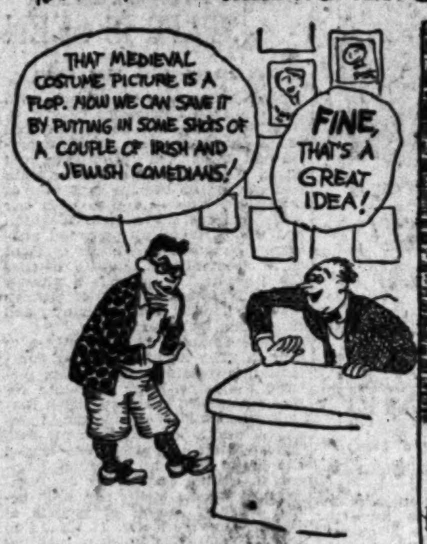
Ever since "Abie's Irish Rose" made such a hit on the stage, Hebrew-Hibernian comedies have proven popular with picturegoers—to such an extent, in fact, that there's no telling when they'll cease. Two new ones make their appearance this week, "Kosher Kitty Kelly" and "Private Izzy Murphy," scenes from which are shown below by Staff Artist Bob Day. A third, "Kid Boots," does not emphasize this racial combination, but nevertheless the Jewish hero wins the Irish heroine in the last reel.



NAT CARR, GEORGE JESSEL AND VERA GORDON IN "PRIVATE IZZY MURPHY."

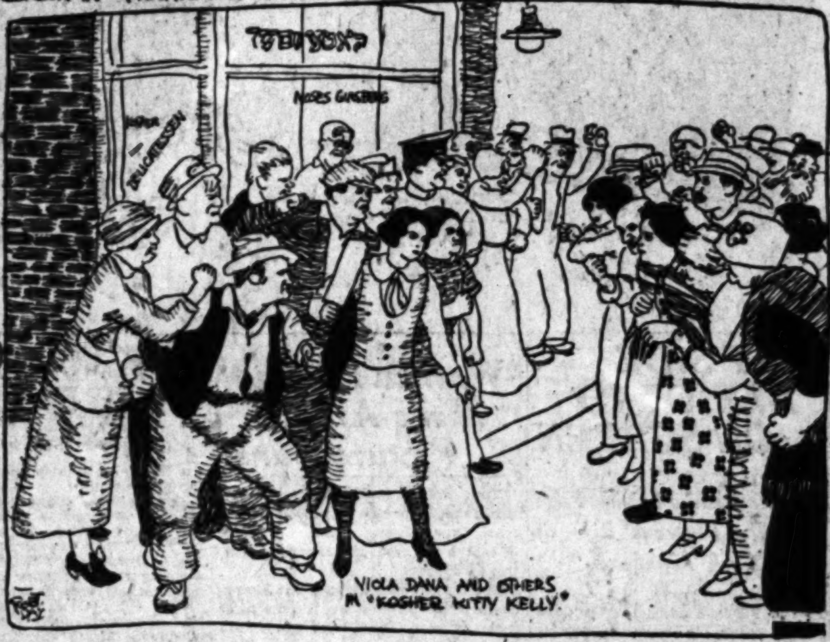


EDDIE CANTOR IN "KID BOOTS."



THAT MEDIEVAL COSTUME PICTURE IS A FLOP. NOW WE CAN SAVE IT BY PUTTING IN SOME SHOTS OF A COUPLE OF IRISH AND JEWISH COMEDIANS!
FINE, THAT'S A GREAT IDEA!

INTIMATE PRODUCTION SCENE SHOWING TWO FILM CHIEFS DECIDING WHAT THE PUBLIC WANTS.



VIOLA DANA AND OTHERS IN "KOSHER KITTY KELLY."

BY HERBERT MOULTON

THAT old joke about the Irishman and the Jew seems to have started something that promises to become as much of a fixture in our lives as the joke itself.

The story, based on the extreme racial characteristics of the two clans, has become the basis for a series of motion pictures and stage plays. The Goldbergs and the Callahans have been thrown into the movie melting pot—and the result has been humorous, pathetic and profitable.

"Abie's Irish Rose," of course, will always be regarded as the first of the series, but the idea itself goes back into the dim past when two vaudeville comedians indulged in a bit of Heb-ernian slapstick. I was about to tack it on Shakespeare, but he failed to bring in any Irish comedy relief into Shylock's meat-market episode.

IN MAJORITY

Things are coming to a pretty state of affairs when, out of the three new comedy offerings of the week, two of them rely on Mr. Murphy and Mr. Ginsberg for their humor.

This type of screen entertainment has become so popular with the producers that the studios are filled with ex-pawnbrokers and bricklayers. The studio cafeterias are specializing in corned beef and cabbage and such delicacies as salami and kippered herring.

The two latest films constructed around this idea are "Kosher Kitty Kelly" and "Private Izzy Murphy."

The latter, which is now showing at the Uptown Theater, views the matter in a light somewhat different from the others, inasmuch as the racial differences are brought together in one character, the Izzy Murphy of the story.

BUSINESS IS BUSINESS

Izzy's real name, it seems, is Goldberg, but he very astutely changes it to Murphy when he moves his delicatessen business from the Ghetto to an Irish neighborhood.

And when the World War comes, Izzy joins the Irish regiment!

His sweetheart, incidentally, bears the name of Eileen Cohannigan.

The climax of the story takes place after the armistice, when Izzy's parents, fresh from Russia and very proud of the family name, Goldberg, look askance at such carryings-on as Izzy Murphy's and Eileen Cohannigan's.

Lloyd Bacon, who directed the picture for Warner Brothers, feels that comedies of this type wouldn't have been feasible before the war.

CATS AND DOGS

"Before the war the status of the Jewish and Irish people was like that of the proverbial cat and dog—always one darn thing chasing another," he says. "In the war both races showed their merit; in fighting for a common cause they learned that the good qualities of each race far outweighed the bad, and they grew chummy. Intermarriage before the war was a thing to be feared; today, as witness our pictures, it's just a thing to be laughed at.

"The Irish and Jewish today are probably the two friendliest neighbors of all the mingled American races."

"Private Izzy Murphy" has added interest because it stars George Jessel, the stage comedian, in his first screen venture. Jessel, of course, plays the title role, while Eileen is portrayed by Patsy Ruth Miller.

The presence of Vera Gordon and Nat Carr is just about indispensable to these Irish-Hebrew pictures. Not only do they appear in the picture at the Uptown, but they're cavorting around the screen this week at the Gigueroa, in "Kosher Kitty Kelly."

In the latter we have a somewhat complicated racial mix-up, with Viola Dana playing the Irish girl and Stanley Taylor her Irish lover. Then there's Tom Forman as the Irish policeman and Aggie Herring as the mother. Kathleen Myers plays the Jewish girl.

Still another comedy on the screen this week with a trace of the Hebrew and Jewish combination is "Kid Boots," at the Metropolitan.

In this Eddie Cantor frolics about in the starring role and Clara Bow plays opposite him. It does not, strictly speaking, fall into the same category as the others, but at least it presents the familiar view of the Jewish lad who "makes good" with the Irish gal.

ERNEST BELCHER, DANCE MASTER, TURNS FROM STAGE TO SCREEN

Ernest Belcher, dance master, has become Ernest Belcher, director of film dances spectacles.

Strangely enough, the man whose academy is one of the oldest and most prominent in Los Angeles, whose students have been notably successful and whose stage presentations have been widely praised, is now most interested in his motion-picture activities.

For years, while he has been "carrying on" in his original line of work, he has been studying the problems of transferring dances to the screen.

His first attempt along this line was made in London almost fifteen years ago. Belcher, of course, is English.

His latest was Colleen Moore's dances in "Twinkletoes," for which he had Colleen "on her toes" in an incredible eight weeks.

The filming of dances is a singularly difficult process. For, while certain traditional gestures are adaptable to the screen, others are mere blurs. Belcher has catalogued those which may be "transferred" and builds his solos and ballets on this foundation.

His ideas on teaching dancing are distinctive.

And considering that he has coached such stars as the proverbially temperamental Pola Negri, and Ramon Novarro, Lois Moran, Lillian Gish, John Gilbert—to name a very few on the glittering list whose autographed portraits line the walls of his cozy office—they must be notable.

Belcher believes that a dancing teacher must possess a peculiar mental power over those he wishes to instruct.

He does not call it mesmerism,

SHIRLEY ASPIRES TO THE DRAMA

Miss Mason Objects to Wide-eyed Heroines Who Merely "Look Pretty"

Shirley Mason goes a step beyond the customary futile habit of lamenting the opportunities she has missed. For she has shown herself fully capable of fulfilling her dreams.

More than a year ago, in "The Talker," she proved she could play the disillusioned heroine as well as the sweet little girl in the pink gingham dress.

But in spite of such tangible evidence, many directors remain unconvinced.

For when one is several inches less than five feet and is the sort of girl to whom the popular adjective sweet inevitably is affixed, the ingenue roles appear to be quite inescapable.

During her four years with the Fox organization, Shirley did heroines by the dozen.

"THE TALKER"

Then came "The Talker," with Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson. Shirley was utterly convincing, unforgettable, as the girl who, adoring an older woman of broad-minded ideas (for verbal use only, however,) takes these theories to heart and proceeds to follow them.

"Thank goodness, I didn't have to look pretty in the last scene," exulted Shirley, remembering the haggard, pitiful girl who discovered for herself that some theories glitter alluringly when discussed in the drawing-room but lose their splendor when encountered in reality.

She recently finished another picture for First National, also with Lewis Stone.

This is known as "Don Juan's Three Nights," showing at Loew's State this week, and Shirley appears as the child of a woman, still youthful and attractive herself, who insists on keeping her daughter looking as much like a little girl as possible.

GORGEOUS GOWNS

But Shirley glories in her opportunity to grow up later in the picture. Also, she wears bizarre gowns, quite in keeping with the general sophisticated tone of the story. Quite an unheard of proceeding for her.

But she has gone back to the old line of work since that picture. "Rose of the Tenements," for F.B.O., and "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" are among her recent ventures.

Shirley is an energetic person. With a few days of leisure between pictures, she was busy with Christmas presents the other morning. Of course, one for Sister Viola was occupying most of her attention.

Exceptionally companionable sisters, these two have been mentioned together since the days when first Viola and then Shirley did "The Poor Little Rich Girl."

LUCK DOGS DEL RIO STEPS

Husband of Beauty and Film Star of Short Year Both Found Favored of Fortune

BY ALMA WHITAKER

My first conscious thought was "Oh, Senor Jaime del Rio, what a lucky fellow you are." You see, I had just met his Delores face to face.

But, bye-and-bye, when I heard how it happened that Dolores came to Hollywood and jumped right into the middle of success and so has reached stardom and world-wide fame in a brief single year, I decided maybe Dolores was lucky, too.

Because Dolores' Senor had quite a lot to do with it. Dolores is 21 years of age, and she has been married to her Senor for five years, and her Senor is ten years older than she. Voila, work it out.

And Dolores's Senor is no ordinary Spaniard. He was, for instance, educated in England, so that, added to the Spanish charms, there are some superior English ones. Then, too, he is a person of property in Mexico—so that filthy lucre plays a minor role in his considerations. And, by marrying the lovely little Dolores when she was 15 years of age, straight out of a convent, where they teach girls lots of nice things besides booklearning, he launched her as a youthful society matron. This launching made it possible for her to meet one Edwin Carewe, a gentleman of influence in getting lovely talented girls into the movies.

Exactly. So Edwin started another career. The Senor frowned a bit, so did Dolores's mama and papa. But did the Senor do the heavy husband and forbid . . . Nay, nay. With Spanish gallantry and British caution, he proceeded to investigate Hollywood. Was it a suitable place in which to trust the lovely Dolores? It was. Dolores came.

HER CHAPERONE

Chaperoned by a charming husband, launched by Edwin Carewe, and admired by all who beheld, Dolores has played important roles in seven pictures in one short year. (Well, there were really eight, but one was slapstick comedy and Dolores has banished it from her record.)

In fact, she has made pictures so thick and fast and become famous so swiftly that only three of those pictures have seen release as yet—the first, "Joanna," in which Dolores is Spanish; the second, "Pals First," in which she is an English girl, the third, "High Steppers," in which she plays an American girl. Versatile maiden!

Her very best role completed to date is the French girl in "What Price Glory?" with Victor McLaglen, the Fox picture awaited with palpitating interest. Fox says this is the best picture he has ever made.

But it is prophecied that her work in this will be eclipsed by her role in Tolstoi's "Resurrection," Katusha Maslova, in which her opportunities for tremendous drama and tragedy are exceptional. She is pretty certain t play this.

Dolores has a merry eye and a merry wit—but she assures me she hates playing comedy. She loves big drama, agonizing tragedy, and can weep copiously on the slightest provocation and thoroughly enjoys herself doing it. And she loves the Russian authors, eats them up. Always, she says, she has longed to play a Russian role, she feels Russian, thinks, breathes Russian. (No, she did not become acquainted with the Russian authors at the convent. Her Senor introduced her to these intellectuals after marriage.) So Dolores sees in this Russian role the goal of her dramatic hopes.

Dolores read her wide acquaintanceship with intellectual authors in French, which she speaks perfectly, as she does English, and, of course, Spanish. She learned the French at a French convent, where she was still a pupil when she visited England and met her Senor, then in the English college of Stonehurst—which

PERSONALITY SPELL SHOWN

Armida, Tiny Dancer From Barcelona, Captivates Audiences at Million-Dollar Theater

BY BARBARA MILLER

A proud small boy leads a patient little donkey, dragging a rickety old cart, onto the stage during "The Temptress" prologue at the Million Dollar Theater.

Distinctly and withal quite justifiably he is proud, for out of the ancient vehicle springs a lithe girl, a curly-headed little gypsy in a gown of scarlet and gold, who immediately captivates her audience.

APPLAUSE FOR HER

Vivid, impetuous, the diminutive dancer whirls joyously, apparently effortless, executes intricate steps with superb insouciance, clinks the inevitable castanets in her tiny hands and gleans a gigantic portion of the applause.

Armida is the belle of Los Angeles' Latin theaters, the diminutive prima donna of the playhouses grouped around the Plaza.

With her family, she came to Los Angeles from Mexico about four years ago.

There are six other children. The boy who appears with her at the Million Dollar, is the youngest, Joaquin, who is making his "professional debut."

FROM BARCELONA

Armida was born in Barcelona. With a Spanish father, formerly a "magician" on the continent, and an Italian mother, she is distinctly a Latin.

Volatile, pleasure-loving, intensely fond of pretty clothes, she is as demure before strangers as she is captivating behind the footlights.

She behaves like a poised, well-bred child when introduced, but is perfectly capable of demanding a job and stating her qualifications to the manager in no uncertain terms.

Armida believes in Armida.

DANCING ESSENTIAL

It would be as possible for her to stop dancing, to stop singing as it would be to quit breathing. And the latter would be immeasurably less bitter an experience.

For Armida always has danced; in Mexico City, as her older sisters danced, for the sheer joy of it. Then in Los Angeles she has followed the same rhythmic path.

Today she alone remains to represent her family in the theater. For the older girls have married.

Marriage? Armida laughs lightly, cringling her determined, fine little nose at the idea. For she is going to dance, to sing, to act.

Things she has learned, not through training, but by instinct.

LIKE MELLER?

Though it will be several years before Armida is 20, she has been compared with her countrywoman, Raquel Meller. For something of the indescribable quality that enchanted thousands with the singer of "La Violetera," is apparent in the work of Armida.

Glibly described as personality, undeniably it is an immensely valuable attribute found in few characters.

Two seasons ago, Ann Pennington came to Los Angeles for a special prologue to "Zander the Great." Armida also appeared at that time and received the usual delighted response from the audiences. To such a marked degree, indeed, that her name found its way into the reviews.

LASKY-GRIFFITH SPLIT IS SEEN

"Sorrows of Satan" Given Cool Reception

Warners to Release "Manon Lescaut" Soon

"London," With Dorothy Gish, Proves Mediocre

BY NORBERT LUSK

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. (Exclusive) The rumor that D. W. Griffith and Famous Players are parting over the chilly reception given "The Sorrows of Satan" is repeated on all sides. So much so that it is taken for granted.

It was hoped, in the first place, that the "Sorrows" would qualify as one of the company's biggest road-show attractions, but receipts for the three weeks of its run have been disappointing to say the least. As a result of conferences and arguments, Griffith is reported to have offered Famous Players his contract, which, if accepted, would mean the postponement of his next production, "The White Slave," in which Richard Dix and Carol Dempster were scheduled to appear.

THE MYSTERY

"The Sorrows of Satan," as seen on the screen, has puzzled almost everybody, particularly those familiar with the Corelli novel. In book form it seemed excellent material for the films, and it is generally thought that as Griffith produced it the picture would have come up to expectations. However, up to the day of its opening it was being cut and retitled, and it is common knowledge that for weeks previous to the opening the picture was undergoing the same process. It is quite likely, according to common knowledge that the film has been subjected to too much doctoring.

In case Griffith does withdraw from Famous, it is more than likely that he will return to United Artists.

The Warners have suddenly decided to release "Manon Lescaut" for a Broadway showing early in December, changing the name of their last John Barrymore film to be more in keeping with box-office tradition. What the title will be no one here knows, but it is expected to flash forth within the week. Meanwhile the stills of the production are being lavishly planted, although they have been in possession of the home office since last summer, with strict orders forbidding their distribution. It is more than likely that the third Vitaphone production will be ready to be presented with the picture at the time of its release. The new Warner picture, "My Official Wife," on view at the Broadway this week, has received only fair notice, the same being true of "Midnight Lovers" at the Hippodrome.

"MAGICIAN" ARTISTIC

From an artistic standpoint the outstanding film of the week is Rex Ingram's "The Magician" at the Capitol. Due to the unavailability of a "legitimate" house at this time the picture must be content with a single week at the Metro-Goldwyn house, instead of the run it undoubtedly deserves in a special theater. "The Magician" is a heavy subject of a sort that some may call morbid, but it is superbly directed and photographed with the acting honors going to Paul Wegener in the title role, that of a mad sorcerer, but on the other hand, Alice Terry and Ivan Petrovich, the young Serbian, leave nothing to be desired as the romantic leads. The picture bears the stamp of Ingram as unmistakably as the pages of a Balzac novel embody the style of the great Frenchman, and has been splendidly received by the press, although the audiences have been nothing to brag about.

On the other hand, the picture which does not belong on Broadway, and which should be kept far from it, is "London" at the Rivoli. This is the second of the British national pictures starring Dorothy Gish, who appears as a Limehouse cutie in a story written, it is said, expressly for the screen by Thomas Burke. This probably is true, for the story certainly could not qualify in any other

JOLT GIVEN CRITICS OF FILM ROLE

Production Officials on Coast Defend Choice of "Music Master" Lead

Not a few of the sentimental, "I knew him whens" of Hollywood are somewhat sadly disappointed, it is said on reliable authority, that William Fox selected Alec B. Francis for the leading role in David Warfield's stage success, "The Music Master."

While constrained to admit that his performance in "The Return of Peter Grimm" is flawless, they feel that Fox should have used more discretion in his selection, as they contend Francis no more resembles the Teutonic musical genius analogous to Warfield than does Jackie Coogan. However, here's the shock: Alec B. Francis is the great grandson of Van Renegal, the celebrated Dutch painter and is one-half Holland Dutch and the other half is a mixture of English and Scotch. In fact, most of his camera angles discern the Dutch features and leave little doubt as to his claims.

Withal, according to Fox West Coast representatives, it matters little to them what the venerable actor's nationality is. The fact remains that after carefully scanning the entire picture field, Francis stands head and shoulders above everyone else, in their estimation.

Director Looks Forward to His Greatest Year

David Kirkland, director, is looking forward to his greatest season of motion-picture production. Having just signed to guide the destinies of "Uneasy Payments," Alberta Vaughn's latest starring vehicle for F.B.O. release, Kirkland is losing no time in getting the production under way. Initial scenes are to be filmed Tuesday.

The fact that Kirkland is responsible for five recent Fred Thomson successes, officials of the F.B.O. organization needed little persuasion to be convinced that Kirkland should handle the megaphone on Miss Vaughn's next film. Had he not made "The Tough Guy," "Hands Across the Border," "All Around the Frying Pan" and "The Two-Gun Man" for them, as well as recently completing "A Regular Scout," and each of these proven money makers little hesitancy might have taken place. As soon as "Uneasy Payments" is completed Kirkland will assume his duties with the Fred Thomson company, directing the western star and his remarkable horse, Silver King, in "Silver Comes Through," the contract of which was signed some time ago.

WRONG IS WRIGHT

Mix-up Identity Provides Story for Comedy-Drama

In "The Wrong Mr. Wright," Universal picture, Walter Hiers is the "right Mr. Wright." Jean Hersholt is the wrong one. In other words, Walter's right, although his name isn't Wright, while Jean is not right although his name is Wright.

While this mix-up of "wrong" and "rights" sounds very complicated, in the story that Scott Sidney is making with Hersholt and Hiers playing the two principal masculine roles, it is simply a matter of Hiers being mistaken for Hersholt and Hersholt for Hiers, bringing about a series of funny incidents that should make this one of the funniest comedy-dramas of the year.

NEW FILM UNDER WAY

Joan Crawford, Gertrude Astor and Owen Moore Featured

"The Taxi Dancer," featuring Joan Crawford, Gertrude Astor and Owen Moore, is now well under way at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Harry Millarde is directing.

Miss Astor plays the part of "Kitty," an abandoned woman who frequents New York night clubs. Her better nature is aroused when she takes Joan Crawford under her protection and she ultimately accomplishes her redemption.

Miss Astor also signed with Universal to play Mrs. St. Clair, little Eva's mother in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." This makes her third recent picture with Universal. The first was "The Old Soak" with Jean Hersholt and the other "The Cheerful Fraud" with Reginald Denny.

EAST SIDE DEPICTED ON SCREEN

New Irish-Jewish Film Vividly Portrays Life of New York Tenements

In the F.B.O. studios they built a set two blocks in length which is in every detail an exact replica of the old New York East Side. Even its pungent odor assails one before they have turned the corner which takes them to the narrow little street recently transformed to a likeness of New York's tenement district.

There in the crowded flats the Kellys and the Feinbaums waged another chapter in the eternal and everlasting Irish-Jewish war. Over the flying wash hung from window to window sharp words and threatening fists are wagged with the experience of many years. And underneath the tawdriness and class of it all a beautiful romance is woven to bind the hearts of the warring factions.

With a background of matsos, pickled fish and other kosher delicacies, the Irish are making a brave stand against the invaders. The bright wit of Erin is fencing with shrugs and flying arms filled with Jewish gestures. And out of it all walks Kosher Kitty Kelly, like a saucy little princess. Hasn't she an Irish cop for a beau? What girl on Avenue A could ask for more?

"Kosher Kitty Kelly" is released by F.B.O. It is a realistic and genuine portrayal of that bit of earth which the world has laughed and wept over since its very beginning. It is a revelation of life and the living of it in a place where one exists through sharp struggles.

That's the picture that is packing the Figueroa Theater to overflowing at every performance this week.

Veteran Tells of Early Days in Film Field

To exploit the star is the idea of selecting a story for the screen today. In the early days of motion pictures the star was called upon to portray many types of characters. So says Francis X. Bushman, the screen's most famous lover of the first years in picture making, and who is staging a comeback never equalled before in filmdom by which he is gaining and will perhaps exceed his former screen popularity.

"In the early days," says the star, "Directors wanted action and lots of it then. No attention was given to details of scenery and stage settings. The audience was not supposed to notice whether or not the scenery was in keeping with the scene to be represented or otherwise.

"Today months are given through research departments of picture companies, through government, State and other historic bureaus and departments, to obtain in minute detail, everything—scenery, costumes, speech, actions to present a certain period."

NEW ROLE DEPARTS FROM USUAL CASTING

John Miljan has a role that is decidedly a departure as the young waster in "Wolf's Clothing" for Warners, his current engagement. He is a rich man's son, whose prodigality reaches a climax when he is checked at a sanatorium. His escape and what follows give him some interesting things to negotiate. This is Miljan's third picture this year with Warners and follows without interval his engagement in "The Great Galeoto" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Women Prove More Ardent Picture Fans

That women are more ardent picture fans than men is proven by the fact that three-fourths of Norma Shearer's fan mail is written by feminine admirers.

The women who write to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star are, for the most part, young. Many of them are children.

Of the men who write in appreciation of Miss Shearer's work most of them are college men. The star was, a year or so ago, voted the most popular actress among the students of Princeton University.

Miss Shearer is truly the college type girl, although she is not, herself, a university graduate. Many of the letters written to her by college men and women contain invitations to senior proms, college picnics, frolics and pageants.

William Haines is also a favorite among college students. Since his overnight success in "Brown of Harvard," he has received hundreds of letters from university men and women. If all the invitations he has received to attend football games were placed end to end they would, no doubt, reach from Oxford to the University of California.

Both men and women stars receive a greater number of letters from feminine fans than from men.

Film Producing Found Matter for Teamwork

"Film producing is today a matter of teamwork, and the present trend is toward even more complete absorption of individual effort."

That is the answer of June Mathis, scenarist, to assertions that directors, writers, players or other single elements of film productio have gained, or will gain, ascendency over others. Miss Mathis, who is now not only writing but producing with her own unit for First National, believes that film players will always remain most important in the public eye, but that their efforts are vain without 100 per cent backing from what she styles "the invisible forces behind picture making."

"A wonderful performance by a star may be made possible by a fine story, well adapted, well scenarized, well photographed, well directed, well cut and well titled. Let there be any weak link in the human chain of production and responsibility, and that star's chances to please the public may be lessened, or even lost," Miss Mathis points out.

"The most responsible individual in production today, and one whose power is to grow, is the unit producer, editor, chief or supervisor—whatever his title may be—who acts as coach and manager of all the elements of the film team, and co-ordinates their efforts."

VACATION IN ROLE

Louise Fazenda Declares She Fits Right Into Slavey Parts

"They are a vacation to me," says Louise Fazenda, speaking of slavey roles.

She is playing one now in her co-starring vehicle for Warners called "Fingerprints." "Possibly because I have played so many, I fall right into the psychology of these roles. The outstanding trait of a slavey is her simpleness. She is innocent, green, awkward. When I put on laced shoes and gingham dress I immediately feel the way I look. Also a dirty apron. 'Psychology' seems a most pretentious word. We're such old friends!"

the men of his family have attended for generations.

Dolores has learned all her English in Hollywood. She says the electricians contributed a great deal of it! (Those electricians must be nice high-brow chaps.) Dolores shocked me by insisting that she understood all the naughty words in "What Price Glory?" perfectly, and that they were duly utilized for atmosphere during the filming of the picture. In fact, she says she has a natural aptitude for understanding naughty words and never misses one in any play she witnesses. But she doesn't look or sound a bit like that.

But there you are—when Dolores says a word like dope, meaning data, she says it in such lovely liquid tones that it sounds quite high bred.

Good-Looking Face Nets Him 'Feature' Role

Since the days of Eve, members of the opposite sex have been partial in their preference for the tall, virile man. The latter's mere presence, it is said, impelled a feeling of safety and as the ladies in the past have been considered the weaker side, this feeling was not surprising.

But what with suffrage and politics, in which phases of life both mother and sister are potent parts? Has this tended to change their aspects toward the type of man they prefer? Not so that one can notice it.

As an example, Kenneth McDonald came to Hollywood several months ago, direct from an eastern college. Possessed with an abundance of manly good looks, he obtained his first part with the Sunset Productions. The unusual demand for new faces has caused producers to scan the horizon, with the result that the Chadwick Pictures Corporation have signed him to play the featured male role opposite Barbara Bedford in "Sunshine of Paradise Valley."

Swedish Actor Cherishes Hope of Directorship

Einar Hanson's secret ambition is to be a director. However, the Swedish actor does not expect to take up the life of a megaphone wielder until he has established himself as a featured player with the American public.

Hanson, who is at present working in Pola Negri's Paramount production, "Barbed Wire," started his career in Sweden under the tutelage of Maurice Stiller, who is classed as one of the greatest European directors. It was Stiller who first interested the young actor in the business of a director.

FOREIGN EXPERT AT WORK ON NAVY FILM

E. M. Somlyo, foreign expert on production at Famous Players-Lasky, has begun his work on the foreign negative of "We're in the Navy Now," the Wallace Beery-Raymond Hatton seafaring comedy and by editing it to meet exactly the foreign requirements with which he is familiar, expects to make the picture as big a hit in Europe as it is confidently expected to be here.

Mr. Somlyo has but recently returned from five years spent in the film business, including production, sales and exhibition, in Central Europe.

field of fiction save the cinema, with its perplexing aberrations.

"London" is an echo of the kind of story epidemic with American producers about ten years ago, and which Universal used to fall for again and again. Its heroine is a waif of the slums who eats peas with her knife to serve the ends of laughter, and who is taken up by proud aristocrats because she reminds them of their dead Eleanor. Cutie marries the juvenile. Thus ends a ghastly bad picture—bad in spite of glorious views of London and the country and interesting British types.

Andre Beranger, who came here to play in "The Popular Sin" for Paramount, is remaining for another picture, the same being "Paradise for Two," Richard Dix's next, which Betty Bronson will grace as leading woman. James O. Spearing, formerly with Universal on the coast, has landed the job of assistant to Julian Johnson in editing and titling for Paramount. Raquel Meller this week began a short season of recitals at Henry Miller's theater. It should interest Los Angeles to learn that her prices have been lowered to a more reasonable level, namely, from $1 to $5, and the theater is a small one, too. Senorita Meller is in fine form and her audiences are as enthusiastic as those of last season.

The only contact Queen Marie had with motion pictures while in New York was indirect, but it was taken full advantage of by those alive to snatch at whatever publicity that could thus be gained. The young Princess Ileana was given a reception at the Capitol Theater, and, as if to thank her mother for letting the Princess out of her sight, Edward Bowes sent the Queen a diamond wrist watch with a note representing it as a token of the pride and happiness felt by the personnel of the theater in the event, the concluding flourish being the hope that they be enrolled among the true friends of Rumania. To date no one has objected.

Doris Kenyon is spending her honeymoon, so to speak, in a sanatorium while she undergoes treatment for a severe case of intestinal "flu." The worst is over, however, and it is possible that she and Milton Sills may be able to entrain for Los Angeles early next week. Miss Kenyon is said to have contracted the malady while on location during the filming of "The Blonde Saint."

Pauline Starke and Carmel Myers will arrive in Los Angeles tomorrow, one of them wearing an engagement ring placed on her finger shortly before she departed Wednesday. It is all supposed to be a dark secret and those in the know are pledged not to divulge it, but the presence of the ring will have to be explained and then the secret will be known to all Hollywood. The man in the case is Donald Freeman, managing editor of Vanity Fair, whose first meeting with the lady he now declares to be the most wonderful girl in the world occurred less than a week ago. With him it was love at first sight, he says, and also first love, which in itself will indicate that Mr. Freeman is youthful and, moreover, has never been to Hollywood.

Fannie Ward is preparing to plunge into vaudeville with a sketch calculated to exploit her youthful charms in competition with one or more girls a third of her age. The proposed sketch will show a woman who steals away her grand-daughter's sweetheart, and Miss Ward's methods of defying the ages are expected to be shown in the course of the piece. Edna Wallace Hopper meanwhile is touring the outlying theaters in her own conception of eternal youth, and it is quite unlikely that both will ever play the same theaters or appear on the same bill.

Evelyn Brent has completed her role in "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em" for Paramount and is remaining here to consider what her next picture will be. Word that Cecil De Mille has signed William K. Howard to a new contract with the incidental comment that he considers the director of "Gigolo" one of the ten best, has percolated to New York and there is no doubt that the promise found in Howard's work in this picture entitles him to most serious consideration from now on.

LOS ANGELES DANCERS SCORE

Two more Los Angeles dancers have scored a success in New York, their first season in the eastern city. Fay Adler and Ted Bradford, star pupils last year of Ernest Belcher's Celeste School of Dancing, Los Angeles, appearing at the Strand Theater, New York, have been highly praised in the reviews from the eastern city.

The success of this recent pair of graduates from Belcher's is in keeping with the success of other pupils. Marcella Rey last year went to New York to score a success in George White's "Scandals."

VITAPHONE PLAYING TO FULL HOUSE

History-Making Invention Draws Large Crowds to Hollywood Theater

The opportunity to hear and see four great stars of the operatic and concert stage on one program, made possible for the first time in history by the wonders of the Vitaphone, is held responsible for the crowds besieging the box office at Grauman's Egyptian Theater, according to Sid Grauman.

Giovanni Martinelli, Marion Talley and Anna Case, all of the Metropolitan Opera, and Mischa Elman, violin virtuoso, form the quartet brought to Los Angeles by the Vitaphone.

Grauman, in interpreting the throngs attending the presentation, points out that any one of the four would pack a New York playhouse at fancy operatic prices, and the crowds attest to the achievement of discovery in complete and perfect reproduction.

In addition, the New York Philharmonic Orchestra of 107 pieces and the Metropolitan Opera chorus are brought directly to the ears and eyes of the audience 3000 miles from the scene of their triumphs.

The Egyptian is one of only four playhouses to present the marvels of the Vitaphone, and Grauman, through arrangements made months ago with Warner Brothers, obtained for Los Angeles the first presentation of the invention west of Chicago.

As a fitting accompaniment to John Barrymore in "Don Juan," the Warner Brothers' classic of the screen, the New York Philharmonic Orchestra renders an elaborate musical score, while the romantic drama is being shown on the silver sheet.

Director Aids ex-Assistant on First Effort

The acquisition of Sam Wood, producing director, and Byron Morgan scenarist associated with Wood in his recent screen creations, by M.-G.-M., for which concern they will develop and produce a play of the citizens' training camps, at present on the schedule as "Red, White and Blue," at once has set at rest rumors of the director's alliance with another film concern and revealed an interesting side of his character.

A report which was circulated some time ago had it that Wood was to direct "Her Father Said No," an F.B.O. production. This report, it is now explained by Wood himself, resulted from an erroneous interpretation of his interest in the forthcoming Witwer play.

Translating into practical terms his friendship for Jack McKeown, who is making his directorial debut with the filming of "Her Father Said No," Wood while preparing this picture for production just prior to his affiliation with M.-G.-M. groomed McKeown to do the actual directing, supervising as well the taking of the early scenes of the picture.

McKeown isn't the first man to benefit through Wood's kindly offices. John Waters, his assistant for years, was aided by the same Wood in making his bow as a director with the Zane Grey picturization, "Born of the West."

Such was the case in "La Boheme" when Lillian Gish and John Gilber were to do their rustic dance.

The company was far out in the country on location for that famous picnic scene, but Belcher got his "hur-ry-up" call and rushed out.

He feels that certain dances are impossible for certain people.

For instance, heartily approving Miss Gish's interpretation of the "La Boheme" dance, he cannot imagine her doing a gypsy number. Though he concedes she might surprise him.

THE BAND VERSION

On the other hand, Sally Rand, vivacious Cecil B. De Mille player, recently came to Belcher to learn gypsy dance.

It seems that Sally had her own ideas about it. So Belcher let her follow them and he feels that the result is excellent—though Rand.

Rod La Rocque, who has danced very little, astonished both fans by his remarkable "Gigolo." Belcher is responsible these, too.

Gilbert at Circle

John Gilbert in "Bardelys the Magnificent" continues as the attraction at the Carthay Circle Theater.

Eleanor Boardman, John T. Murray, Arthur Lubin and others appear in the cast. The picture is introduced by an elaborate Jack Laughlin prologue.

Barrymore at Egyptian

"Don Juan" continues at Grauman's Egyptian Theater.

John Barrymore, as the Spanish philanderer, is supported by a capable cast, including Estelle Taylor, Mary Astor, Phyllis Haver, Warner Oland, Montagu Love and others.

The Vitaphone is a feature of the current program.

"Ben Hur" at Biltmore

The fourteenth week of "Ben Hur" at the Biltmore Theater begins tomorrow. This thrilling motion-picture production has on. a few more weeks to remain in Lc Angeles, for stage attractions are booked to follow it in rapid succession at the Fifth-street playhouse.

The cast includes Ramon Novarro, Francis X. Bushman, Claire McDowell, Carmel Myers, May McAvoy and others.

Peter the Great Featured

"The Sign of the Claw," a Gotham production, is the current film attraction at the Hippodrome.

Peter the Great, the "wonder dog," is featured in this unique motion picture. Though an "animal story," every scene in "The Sign of the Claw" is laid in the city.

The cast includes Ethel Shannon, Edward Hearn, Lee Shumway and Joe Bennett. It was directed by Reeves Eason.

"Temptress" Stays

"The Temptress," with Greta Garbo and Antonio Moreno, from the story of Ibanez, is still continuing to entertain crowds at the Million Dollar Theater.

The strong appeal of "The Temptress" is greatly enhanced by the spectacular prologue, "An Argentine Fiesta," and the musical prelude by the Million Dollar Theater orchestra with Leo Forbstein, conducting.

LESS DIRT AT THE TOP

Milk everywhere is so dirty that we have experts to inspect and regulate the supply. But the cream rises to the top, and while the cream partakes somewhat of the quality of the milk, there is a certain amount of dirt in the bottom of the pan absent in the cream. There is dirt in everything human, but less at the top than at the bottom.—[E. W. Howe's Monthly.

CATALINA COMES TO FORE

Island Looms as Competitor for Hollywood in Picture-Producing Honors

Hollywood, long recognized as the film capital of the world, must share her picture-producing honors—and the real estate subdividers are to blame!

Catalina Island now looms as a competitor for some of the prestige held by the film city, for many of the most important productions of the past year have been filmed in its quiet coves and rugged canyons.

Four pictures are now being filmed at the Isthmus, Catalina's most intriguing spot—Cecil B. DeMille's biblical feature, "The King of Kings," heading the current list.

Just beyond the location selected by DeMille is Harold Lloyd's company, producing "The Mountain Boy." Rupert Julian is directing "The Yankee Clipper" in Catalina waters, while Rod LaRocque, starring in "The Cruise of the Jasper B," divides his time between the Isthmus and the many picturesque harbors of the island.

In addition, Frank Lloyd's "The Eagle of the Sea" was made at Catalina, Lasky filmed the historical picture "Old Ironsides" at and around the Isthmus, while Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer produced "Cape Cod Folks" entirely in this same vicinity. DeMille's "Feet of Clay" filmed two years ago, was one of the first pictures "shot" on the island.

The recent wholesale subdivision of Southern California is the cause of Catalina's boom in motion-picture production. A few years ago directors could find excellent locations for any purposes within a short radius of Hollywood. Today, however, it is almost impossible to find space within fifty miles of Hollywood unmarred by telephone poles, real estate offices, sidewalks, billboards and other evidences of the city.

Fortunately for the motion-picture producers, this development has not yet reached across the channel to Catalina Island, where the complete wildness of the country and its natural beauty make it ideal for exterior scenes.

to enact the part, there is scarcely a name in the list that is not prominently known to motion-picture followers.

The late Rudolph Valentino, who has the role of Julio, the romantic, is one of the most glamorous figures the screen has ever produced. "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" is the picture which introduced him to fame. Alice Terry enacts the leading feminine role, that of Marguerite, the little French girl.

Qualifications of Artist for Role Described

Otto Matieson, who was personally chosen by John Barrymore to play Olivier, the barber who dominates France in "The Vagabond Lover," believes that an actor wears his characterizations as he wears his costumes and wigs.

"Every actor has a mental space reserved for the closeting of his characterizations. This closet is his most valuable possession, whether it has been filled with deliberate care or with impressions. Usually an experienced actor can find his characterization in his mental storeroom without confusion. Once on a while he is called upon to acquire a new one by the conscious exertion of his power of observation. The greatest artist is the man who can step into his role and cast it off as he dons and doffs his make-up."

Distinguished Cast Feature in Film Return

Probably one of the strongest and most distinguished cast ever assembled for any picture in the history of the screen is seen in the return of Rex Ingram's production for Metro-Goldwyn, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," adapted by June Mathis from the novel by Vicente Blasco Ibanez, now being shown in its second and final week at the Criterion Theater.

While every player of the twenty-five principal roles was selected because of his or her special ability

FUN POLICY DEFINED BY COMEDIAN

Eddie Cantor Outlines Definite Ideas of What He Considers Humorous

Eddie Cantor, the stage comedian, whose first Paramount starring vehicle, "Kid Boots," is now being shown at the Metropolitan Theater, has very definite ideas on what is and what isn't funny. Says Eddie:

"I want those who don't enjoy clean fun to stay away from the pictures I make. Mrs. Cantor and our four little girls witnessed 'Kid Boots' even when I didn't know they were out front. And I never had to change a single line because it wasn't necessary.

"If you want to judge the value of clean fun, just recall the best laughs you've ever had. You didn't get them at a show where the dialogue bordered on the danger line. I don't believe in comedy that reflects ill on any race, sect or nationality.

"Having been on the stage for many years, I've had plenty of time to watch the success of this policy. At first it was hard, but my hunch that most people think as I do, has certainly been borne out. I have also noticed that the most successful comedy stars are those who advocate clean fun—the kind a man will take his wife and family to see.

"My stage plan was pursued while filming 'Kid Boots.' It happened that Mr. Jesse Lasky, vice-president in charge of Paramount productions, and Director Frank Tuttle shared my feelings. The results were gratifying to us and I hope they will be to the public."

Eddie Peabody, who leads the presentation on the magic stages at the Metropolitan and has built up a reputation as a musical comedian, says he carries out a policy similar to that of Cantor.

"I believe in clean fun," says Eddie. "It's the only kind of fun the American public really enjoys."

Nine Languages Being Spoken at Culver City Lot

Almost every language known to mankind, including the Scandinavian, is heard in a motion-picture studio.

During the course of one day at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio nine different languages were heard on the sets.

In an office in "directors' row," Viatcheslave Turjansky, Dimitri Bilchowetski, directors, and Natalie Kovanko, actress were conversing in Russian. Also much Russian was heard where Benjamin Christianson was directing.

In "Tell it to the Marines," starring Lon Chaney, a Chinese scene was being filmed. The extras, Japanese and Chinese, were all speaking their native languages.

On "Flesh and the Devil" set both Swedish and German was heard with Greta Garbo and Lars Hanson playing in this picture. Baron Von Brincken, the technical director, spoke German.

Ramon Novarro was speaking Spanish to the Spanish and Italian extras working in "The Great Galeoto."

Renee Adoree, in the studio restaurant having tea, was speaking to her sister, Mira Adoree, in a flow of French.

The ninth language heard was English, although the English-speaking peoples were almost in the minority.

Pony Hostler to Little Eva Now Her Papa

John Roche finds that everything comes to him who waits!

Turning the clock back to when he was a little boy in Penn Yan, N. Y., John tells that he had the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" habit, for twice a year it came to town and he always went to the show on a pass. It happened this way.

It was his exalted ambition to lead the pony of Little Eva in the parade. So he met the manager and won this honor year after year beginning when he was 8 years of age, for always the same production played Penn Yan. He says he probably would have died of heart failure in those days if he could have looked ahead and seen himself "Little Eva's" father as he is today in the Universal production Harry Pollard is directing. Mr. Roche is now on location with the company.

Technical End Has New Find in War Veteran

The newest find in the technical end of filmdom has been discovered by Sidney Olcott, director of Richard Barthelmess. This find proves to be no other than Col. G. L. McDonnell, war hero and celebrated historian, who fought in the Boer War and the World War, having been a member of the original "Princess Pat's Canadian Light Infantry."

When the "Amateur Gentlemen" was selected as Richard Barthelmess's next production, Olcott sought out McDonnell and engaged him as technician for the production. Not long after the release of the "Amateur Gentlemen" in England, a cablegram was received by First National in New York from their London office, which was immediately forwarded to the colonel in appreciation of his splendid work which read: "Sincerest congratulations on the 'Amateur Gentlemen.' Old English atmosphere and details are perfect."

Col. McDonnell has just finished work on Inspiration Pictures' "White Black Sheep," which vehicle stars Richard Barthelmess and which is directed by Sidney Olcott. In this vehicle, Col. McDonnell acted in the capacity of technical adviser for the English sequence and the British military details in the Arabian sequence.

FOREIGN EXPERT AT WORK ON SEA COMEDY

When Famous Players-Lasky were looking about for a man qualified to act as "foreign expert" on their local productions, it may have been a surprise to some that their choice finally fell upon an American. However, the incumbent, E. M. Somlyo, although born and educated in the United States, has spent the last five years in Europe, where he bought, rented and exhibited American-made pictures, after personally editing and adapting them to the special requirements of the country in which they were to be shown. Previous to this experience, Somlyo had been engaged in film studio work in Hollywood. He is now editing the foreign version of the Wallace Beery-Raymond Hatton seagoing comedy, "We're in the Navy Now!"

NEW RECORD ANNOUNCED ON SHOWING

"Ben Hur" Declared to Have Set Mark Here as Film Attraction

Within a few short weeks the motion-picture production of "Ben Hur" will leave the Biltmore Theater and it will be a long time before Angelenos will have the opportunity of seeing it again. The heavy demand for time for other attractions is forcing the management of the Los Angeles playhouse to cut short the stay of this picture. "Ben Hur" might easily run on at the Biltmore for months to come, but it has already exceeded its originally allotted stay by four weeks.

The specially organized staff of stage and projection experts, business staff and the large symphony orchestra now at the Biltmore will remain intact and tour with this picture as a complete theater unit. "Ben Hur" will be shown on tour just as at the Biltmore and the route from here calls for a flying trip into the Southern States and Texas and then the entire far-western territory is to be visited.

In passing from here after the long engagement at the Fifth-street playhouse, "Ben Hur" will leave a record for other films to shoot at. It will have played to the greatest number of paid attendance and to the greatest box-office receipt figures ever known for a picture offered purely as a legitimate theater attraction and with no attendant stage production.

The triumph of "Ben Hur" is one for Fred Niblo, who directed this master effort.

Learning Quickly

Johnny is in his third year of school. He is just taking up the science of physiology in a moderated form. The other evening his mother asked him:

"What did you study about today in your health class, Johnny?"

"We studied about our stomachs and intestaments," he solemnly replied.—[Indianapolis News.

TIMES
A new form of entertainment has achieved its debut. It has made its bow to the resounding call of the trumpet; the beat of the drum; the soft-voiced plaint of the violin and 'cello, and the triumphant beauty of the human voice replete with the spirit of music. It has been applauded and acclaimed with discrimination and enthusiasm, and its advent has been proven to be as far-reaching and undoubtedly as momentous as anything that has ever transpired in the history of the theatre.

Florence Lawrence
EXAMINER
Vitaphone made its bow to Hollywood last night, and today the film world stands thrilled and nonplussed.
Grauman's Egyptian Theatre was packed last night with the greatest celebrities in the world. Men and women from every phase of the film art stood in line or waited in traffic-blocked motor cars to gain admission to the theatre.

Monroe Lathrop
EXPRESS
The Vitaphone surpassed expectation.
Unless you see and hear it you have no conception either of its big entertainment value or its potential worth, first to movies and eventually to many forms of the showman's art.
To Los Angeles and its millions invested in picture-making studios and in theatres, the significance of the Vitaphone is beyond exaggeration.

Carl Bronson
HERALD
As a musician I have never before surrendered to a mechanical musical device, but I readily capitulate to the indescribable possibilities of this marvel which extends the imagination along bewildering vistas.
Yesterday it had been declared that "Vitaphone" was "thrilling the world;" today it is a verification of its own powers.

Gilbert Brown
RECORD
The motion picture screen broke the chains of its two-dimensioned prison last night at Grauman's Egyptian Theatre, and added a new dimension—sound.
That, in two words, is the meaning of the initial Los Angeles performance of the newest scientific wonder, the Vitaphone, which drew as celebrated an audience as ever Rolls-Royced to a Sid Grauman Premiere.

Jack Townley
HOLLYWOOD NEWS
Yes, the Vitaphone looks like a sensation.
The Vitaphone creates almost perfect illusion, eliminating the mechanical and bringing forth the voice and instrumental numbers in natural tones. The synchronization is perfect, since the visible and auditory elements are recorded in one operation. Likewise, they are reproduced as one.

One Week More of 100,000 Extra Vote Off

Greatest Vote Opportunity of Times $50,000 Prize Race Closes Saturday, Nov. 6—9 P. M.

Eager to get the best possible start in their efforts to win automobiles, radio sets, and numerous other prizes, candidates in The Times' great $50,000 prize campaign are looking forward with high expectations to a busy week of club building. Every $30 club of new subscriptions turned in this week, and not later than 9 p.m., Saturday, November 6, means a bonus of 100,000 votes in addition to all regular votes.

Many more—men and women are also expected to announce themselves as condidates this week, for, with the close of the 100,000 extra vote offer, the nomination credit of 12,000 free votes now given each new candidate will be reduced to 2,000 votes, and the 20,000 free vote offer on the first subscription turned in will be withdrawn entirely.

To enter The Times campaign during the present week means to gain 30,000 free votes which later entrants will not receive. All those who have been undecided about entering, or who have not yet got around to it, should by all means make their start before Saturday, and thus gain the 30,000 free votes given to early starters. Better yet is to send in the nomination blank immediately, thus allowing time to build one or more $30 clubs of new subscriptions, and receive 100,000 extra votes for each club.

The bonus vote offer closing Saturday night is positively the largest vote offer that will be made. New subscriptions will never again yield so many votes as now. And votes are what every candidate is after, for votes alone will win the thirty handsome automobiles selected by The Times with which to reward the most energetic candidates.

The campaign itself does not end, of course, until December 18. But even that date is not far distant, and well-directed effort now is of the utmost importance. Almost before one knows it, the day of days will be here when the $5247 Lincoln Sedan, the $3655 Pierce Arrow, and twenty-eight other motor cars will be turned over to their new owners. Many others will be rewarded with fine radio sets, and still others will receive generous cash sums for their participation in the campaign. What a Christmas it will be for them!

Is your name in the list of candidates published today? Only a few subscriptions would put you up among the leaders. The list includes all nominations received up to noon Friday, together with votes held for publication up to that time.

Promptly at 9 o'clock next Saturday night the doors of the campaign office will close and no one will be allowed to enter. All $30 clubs must be in by that time. However, all persons who are inside the campaign office at closing time will be allowed to turn in their new subscriptions to apply on the 100,000 extra vote offer.

In order that candidates living outside of Los Angeles may have the same length of time to work on the extra vote offer, new subscription payments may be mailed as late as next Saturday, providing that letters containing remittances bear a postmark not later than 9 p.m., November 6.

Voting is just getting under way. Make every effort to get at least one $30 club this week. Get two if possible—three—all the new subscriptions you can get your hands on—for never again will so many extra votes be given.

This is the week in which to DO YOUD BEST!

Notice to Candidates

Attention is called to fact that only NEW subscriptions count on the 100,000 extra vote offer now in effect, and old subscriptions cannot be changed from one member of the family to another to make them new. In other words, if a person now taking The Times stops the paper and some other members of the household subscribe, that does NOT have the effect of making a new subscription out of an old one. "Switches" such as this should be carefully avoided, as candidates will forfeit votes on old subscriptions turned in as new. If in doubt whether to call a subscription old or new, telephone or write to the Campaign Department, explaining the circumstances.

SCHEDULE OF REGULAR VOTES

Below are shown the subscription rates of the Los Angeles Times. Vote values shown here apply only to new subscriptions. Old (renewal) subscriptions entitle the candidate to half the number of votes issued on new subscriptions.

REMARKABLE EXHIBIT BY LOCAL MODERNIST

Boris Deutsch of Los Angeles is holding the first one-man exhibition of his paintings in the Fine Arts Building of the University of California, Southern Branch, until November 15. It is a very important and impressive exhibit. How such a painter could remain practically unknown in this age of publicity seems a mystery, until one considers the parallel Los Angeles cases of Gjura Stojana and Peter Krasnov. Deutsch seems to me number three in this glorious company of unknowns who are, between them, doing a large share of the Southland's finest painting. How many other submerged artists have we who care very little for exhibiting and very much for painting?

Deutsch has worked for years without ceasing but he has never sold a picture, nevertheless painting was as necessary as breath to his life. For years he painted one picture over another on the same canvases, and as many as ten pictures lie buried under some of his earlier paintings. Working always in the attempt to express himself, he incidentally became a fine craftsman in paint. Just regarded technically his work in this exhibition is beautiful painting. That is important. Far more important is the intrinsic beauty of the works themselves.

It is several months since I got so much genuine aesthetic pleasure at an art exhibit. Time was forgotten. Before several of the canvases I sat for thirty minutes apiece, watching them grow. The next day they seem even more beautiful. What does he paint? Many phases of life move him, and I read into his paintings a continual battle between the human emotions aroused in him by his subjects and the aesthetic form through which he forces their expression. The most recent group of all, the three figure compositions seem to most perfectly unite subject-emotion with form. This is mere speculation, however, for each of the three years represented produced good painting.

The most antagonistic observer could hardly fail to recognize the watchful care which has gone into the making of even the tiniest drawing, the exhibit containing a large group of drawings in black and white, water color, drypoint and monotype, as well as thirteen oils. This is a key to Deutsch's attitued toward his work. His original period of academic training, i.e. learning painstakingly how to represent objects, was not very long. He soon discovered that his road lay a different way and set forth on uncharted seas. But free, he stepped more than ever warily, with the result that his painting ability is great.

There are three landscapes. One of them in a red key, delighted me through and through. The artist seems to have taken the forms of trees, houses and mountains and re-energized them from within himself. Here appears the flame like rhythm indicative of all things that grow upward. He seems to have been his subject. In the green landscape with wonderfully drawn house-forms in the foreground appear the flat planes of color which reach their broadest development in the later figure canvases. The rein is checked a little on the impetuous emotion. Composition becomes more conscious and more subtle. Finally we reach the groups of Talmudists. Perhaps "Kabalaist" is the most entirely satisfying of these, but they are all very beautiful. In "Kabalaist" three figures are moving forward. The color seems almost breathed on the canvas, it is at once so subtle and so rich, and as finely calculated as the underlying geometric forms of this fine composition. "Minyion," a composi-

Los Angeles—Congratulations!

Tomorrow, a beautiful, artistic playhouse—The BELASCO—opens its doors to the Los Angeles public—for the happiness—the entertainment of thousands of Angelenos. Truly, a fitting link indeed to the chain of fine structures throughout the city.

Congratulations—cordial, sincere, to the spirit, the foresight, and the faith of the men of action, who are making possible the artistic development of this splendid city. Congratulations, too, to the architects, and to all those who, by their labor, have made possible this achievement.

Onward—Los Angeles! Long live the spirit—the faith, and the industry that is making Los Angeles the Metropolis of the West!

Charm in Crown City Junior League

Highly successful is the group of society matrons of the younger set of Pasadena in their work with children. They have formed what is known as the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society, giving not only financial aid to children of the Crown City, but individual inspiration and care to otherwise hopeless children. Mrs. Baer is president of the aid society; Mrs. William Bucklin, vice-president; Mrs. Landreth, secretary; Mrs. Lionel Armstrong, assistant secretary; Mrs. Hall, treasurer, and Mrs. Kelleher, one of the directors. Others on the board are Mrs. Averic Allen, Mrs. Garrettson Dulin, Mrs. Paul Hunter, Mrs. Donald O'Melveny and Mrs. Parker Toms.

EBELL FOUNDERS HONORED

History of Club, Now Largest of Kind in World, Outlined at Charter Day Luncheon

BY MRS. E. A. TUFTS

A generation ago, before many of the young women who are now active in club work were born and at a time when it seemed as though there were no need for another woman's club in Southern California, Mrs. Robert J. Burdette and Mrs. W. H. R. Strong sat in the library of the Burdette ranch-house on Orange Grove avenue in Pasadena and discussed the advisibility of organizing a new study club. A list of names of their friends who might join was prepared and groups were selected who might be interested in different lines of study.

Thus did Mrs. Robert J. Burdette tell of plans which in 1894 preceded the forming of the Ebell Club of Los Angeles, now the largest club of its kind in the world, when she spoke at Ebell's Charter Day luncheon on Monday.

NOTED WOMEN PRESENT

That the roots of the club are buried deep in traditions of love and courage, of culture nad service was clearly shown by the number of brilliant and loyal women who were founders of the Ebell Club and who attended this luncheon given in their honor. Among those present were names known not only in California but some who are known to women the world over: Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, Mrs. W. S. Bartlett, Mrs. William Chichester, Miss Alice Parsons, Mrs. John E. Coffin, Mrs. Frank King, Mrs. Cummins B. Jones, Miss Florence Riley and Mrs. Sherman W. Wiggin.

Mrs. William Read, club president, spoke of the charter members as benefactors and pioneers. "When we think of you we visualize you as women of conviction, daring, energy; women of broad sympathy, tender in ministration to the unfortunate; women already awake to the responsibility of the strong and the successful, happy to care for and to try to understand the weak and the sorrowful. More than mere mental development, you sought that broad culture which comes only through service to others, soul development and spiritual growth. And so, because you builded better than you knew, we have this wonderful club, powerful, strong in numbers and in finance, brave morally, and interested in all that is good and beautiful."

Mrs. Virgie Lee Mattoon and Mrs. Roy C. Arnold, in old fashioned dresses, sang "Long, Long Ago" and "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," accompanied by Mrs. Guy F. Bush.

HISTORY RECALLED

Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles recalled to the memories of the charter members the forty women who met for the first time at the home of Miss Alice Parsons thirty-two years ago, and, later, when the group grew larger, told of obtaining as a clubhouse the former home of Gov. Downey at the corner of Fourth and Main.

Mrs. A. Bennett Cooke greeted the past presidents of the club. Mrs. Frank King spoke to the "old girls and the new girls of today." Mrs. W. S. Bartlett, who is compiling a history of Ebell to be placed in the corner-stone of the new building, gave a clever talk on the founders of our nation who are being criticised and pulled from their pedestals by the novelists and biographers.

Mrs. Burdette not only gave an interesting view of the early days of the club but spoke of the true meaning of federation and what the club could do to stimulate and assist the women all over the world. In Sweden, when she was asked to suggest plans for a departmental club, she told them of Ebell. She spoke feelingly of the women in the clubs on the Isle of Pines, in Cuba and in China.

Mrs. Grantland S. Long and Mrs. Chester C. Ashley spoke for the executive committee and the past presidents from whose reminiscences the history can be traced. A touching tribute was paid to the first president, Mrs. H. W. R. Strong, recently taken by death.

In the auditorium, following the luncheon, Capt. Paul Perigord carried the sentiments of the day into his talk on "Woman's Place in Civilization."

The charter members who were unable to be present are Miss Abby C. Adair, Miss Elizabeth Gibson, Miss Agnes M. Knight, Mrs. Dean Mason, Miss Emmie H. Parsons, Mrs. William Charles Read, Mrs. T. P. Swaine and Mrs. Kate Slauson Vosburg.

WOMEN CONSULTED ON NEW DE MILLE FILM

The influence of women is becoming more and more apparent in the field of motion pictures. Spreading beyond the reviewing of pictures and the preparation of the "approved list" the interest and influence of many of the prominent club women was so important to Cecil De Mille that he called several of the leading executives in club work into conference before photographing was actually started on "The King of Kings." These executives were Mrs. J. B. Lorbeer, president of the Los Angeles district, California Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Alfred Graham, State motion-picture chairman for California, and Mrs. E. H. Jacobs, motion-picture chairman for the Los Angeles district of the same organization.

La Canada and Flintridge Club Women Reach Goal of Years in Erection of Clubhouse

Fourteen years ago at the home of Mrs. Jessie Knight, the La Canada Thursday Club was organized among a few women of La Cañada and Flintridge. Today the club is composed of 150 members and has become one of the outstanding women's clubs of the community.

During these years the semimonthly meetings have been held at the individual homes of the members, but two years ago a piece of land on Woodleigh Lane, Flintridge, was presented to the club by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Howard. Inspired by the gift members have been working toward a financial goal materialized in the erection of a home of Spanish architecture which they hope will be ready for occupancy early in December.

A spacious auditorium, complete with foyer, stage and dressing rooms will take care of the regular meetings and entertainments of the club, while the principal delight of the clubwomen is the dining patio on the south side of the club where a real out-in-the-open California spirit will prevail. A chief attraction is the double fireplace which is being placed between the main auditorium and the dining patio.

The club officers of this year are Mrs. H. L. Hayman, president; Mrs. E. A. Kantel, first vice-president; Miss Lulu Lanterman, second vice-president; Miss Florence Pate, secretary; Mrs. H. P. Hoefner, corresponding secretary; Mrs. George L. Miller, treasurer, and Mrs. P. H. Johnson, Mrs. A. M. Guidinger and Mrs. R. S. Lanterman, directors. Mrs. R. S. Lanterman is chairman of the membership committee, which is composed of Mrs. Judd Rush, Mrs. R. L. Scoles, Mrs. A. A. Lester, Mrs. J. M. Howard and Mrs. Jay Schieffelin.

Mrs. N. A. Maynard is chairman of the literature section while Mrs. R. S. Lanterman is chairman of the drama section.

MEASURES DISCUSSED

Meeting in the Windsor Tea Rooms, Brack Shops, tomorrow evening at 6 p.m., the Business Women's Civic Club will hear discussions on the measures on the November ballot, by a representative of the League of Women Voters.

A charming new dance frock is of white chiffon, with collar and girdle of the same material crossed by the lines of corning. Artificial boutonnieres appear on the shoulder and on the flared skirt.

HOLLYWOOD CLUB PLANS BUSY WEEK

Literature, Education and Bible Lectures Will be on Program

Members of the Shakespeare section of the Woman's Club of Hollywood will read Act Three of "King Henry VIII" at their meeting tomorrow at 2 p.m. Mrs. Leonard M. Cutting, chairman, will preside. A sketch of Wolsey will be given by Mrs. K. M. Whitham. Mrs. M. W. Muller will give "Domain of Charles V," and Mrs. Harlow Kimball, a character sketch of Catherine. Chapter twelve of "Windsor Castle" by Ainsworth will be read by Mrs. W. H. Barrows.

The education department will hold its weekly meeting on Tuesday at 11 a.m., with Mrs. Lowell C. Frost, chairman, presiding. There will be a debate on the question: Resolved, "That Under Present Conditions a College Education Does Not Afford the Best Opportunities For Personal or Social Development, i.e., Real Education."

Carl S. Knopf will lecture at the meetings of the Bible department held on the first Wednesday of each month at 10:30 a.m. in the auditorium of the club. Mrs. A. J. Verheyen, chairman, will preside at the meetings which are open to the public. "The Eternal Quest—The New Testament Writers and Their Message for Today," is the subject of the series of lectures. At the first meeting on Wednesday Dr. Knopf's topic will be, "Where All Religions Meet."

The first literature luncheon will be held Wednesday, at 12 o'clock, with Leslie Conner Williams, chairman, presiding. A brief outline of the year's programs will be given by Mrs. Williams who is the leader of the explorers. "Romanticism in English Literature," is the subject for the day. Mrs. Harlow Kimball will speak on "Romanticism Through the Eighteenth Century," Mrs. Henry F. Boesche, "Nineteenth Century Romanticism," Mrs. Harriet Clay Penman, "Contemporary Romantic Drama and Poetry;" Mrs. Raymonde Doyle, "Contemporary Romantic Fiction."

Mrs. John P. Mead, past-president of the club, who recently returned from Europe will speak on "Europe—Twenty-five Years After" at 2:30 p.m. Tea will be served in the lounge at 4 p.m.

DRIVE FOR CLUBHOUSE INSTITUTED

Forty Thousand Women Members to be Asked to Aid Headquarters Appeal

Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith, the Los Angeles district, California Federation of Women's Clubs, has launched a campaign to enlist the support of the 40,000 club women in the district for a new permanent headquarters to be called "the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs—A Memorial to Eleanor Joy Toll," late junior past president of the district.

The necessity for new headquarters is declared to have been apparent for a number of years and it is proposed to purchase one of the older homes in the residential district suitable for remodeling for the purposes of the district headquarters, expenditures to be met by a contribution from women members of $1 each.

The proposed headquarters will contain a reception room, dining-room, office, rooms for exhibits, reference, material and data; bedrooms for visiting club women from the five counties in the district and a large conference room which could also be rented for club meetings and social affairs.

Hotel Woman Welcomed to State Confab

It is seldom the laurels are handed to a woman and admitted by men—but the exception has been made.

MAUDE N. BOULDIN

Maude N. Bouldin is the only woman in the hotel world claiming the title of managing director and with said title represented her hotel—the Hotel Figueroa—at the State convention of the Hotel Men's Association at Arrowhead.

She went alone, a little in doubt as to just what kind of a reception would be accorded a woman in the hotel world, she said, but the reception she received, the courtesies shown her and her initiation into the hotel world of California was one she will never forget.

Women as well as men clamored to meet Mrs. Bouldin, who has a personality all her own. Even with the position she occupies and the years of experience she has had in the hotel world, she is admired by all who know her.

Mrs. Bouldin is managing director of the Hotel Figueroa, the newest in Los Angeles, and catering particularly to the discriminating traveler and permanent guest. The hotel contains over 400 rooms and baths and many beautiful suites—a wonderful lobby, reception hall and private salons for parties.

A straight coat of red velours de laine, wrapping tightly about the hips and having a blousing bodice, is smartly trimmed with a mole waist-line, border and collar.

CLUB NOTES

Business Woman's Club

The Business and Professional Woman's Club of Whittier enjoyed a Halloween party following their regular business meeting and dinner at the First Christian Church, Whittier, Monday evening.

Miss Velma Thompson, chairman of the social committee, was in charge of the entertainment provided after the dinner. Each table furnished an improvised attraction or "stunt." Mrs. Lucy Clements Spears, the club's bride, sang a group of popular songs, with interpretative dancing by Miss Katherine Spears. Miss Grace Curtis also contributed to the pleasure of the evening.

One of the big affairs of the year is the annual birthday party, which is scheduled for January, and plans are already being made for the celebration. Reports were given of the athletic activities of the basketball group. These young women have become expert players and have been meeting teams from near-by towns.

East Whittier Club

Reciprocity day was observed by the East Whittier Woman's Improvement Club Wednesday afternoon with a luncheon served at 1 p.m. Honor guests for the occasion were the members of the district board and representatives from many of the near-by sister clubs.

The luncheon was preceded by an informal reception with Mrs. J. A. McGee, president, at the head of the receiving line. Mrs. L. K. Little reciprocity chairman, was in charge of the afternoon program and was assisted by the other members of her committee, namely, Mmes. W. A. Phelps, Russell Caldwell, J. A. Cole, Laura Cook, Orville Espolt, Walter Mundt and E. Y. Partridge.

The club is one of the oldest in the Los Angeles district and has been a powerful factor in the social, civic and the cultural interests of the community.

African Program

Taking for her subject "The Land of the Garden of Allah," Mrs. Byron Thorpe Carr will give a lecture before the Eschscholtzia Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, Tuesday, at the Ebell clubhouse, at 2 p.m. Mrs. Carr will wear an Arabian costume which she procured during her recent stay in Africa. A program of vocal selections will be offered by the soloist, Gail Mills Dimmitt.

During the social hour Mrs. Thomas B. Stowell and Mrs. Enoch Pepper will preside at the tea table, and the reception committee will consist of Mrs. Charles Wellborn, Mrs. Bayless Shepherd, Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Douglas, Mrs. John McLean Rugg, Mrs. Ezra Scattergood and Miss Grace Pease.

Mrs. A. Halden Jones, First Vice-Regent, will preside during the afternoon.

Monrovia Club

Mrs. Harry Andrews, president of the Monrovia Woman's Club, accompanied by the members of the club, will attend in a body the next president's council at the Pomona Ebell Club, Wednesday, November 10. The regular sections for that day will be omitted. At the next regular meeting Wednesday James Murray, baritone, and Raymond McFeeters, pianist, will furnish the program.

New Singer Here

Miss Wilda Blow, who has recently come here from Canada, will make her musical bow before the Opera Reading Club of Hollywood tomorrow, when she will appear in the title role of "The Juggler of Notre Dame," by Massenet.

Dr. Frank Nagel will be featured in the program, with M. McElroy Johnson, Dan Gridley, Ivan Edwards, Clemence Gifford and Hazel White completing the cast.

Mrs. W. A. Nickell, president of the club, reports sixty-four new members were added to the club roster after the October program.

"Thais" Presented

Under the direction of Roland Paul, the Euterpe Opera Reading Club presented Massenet's "Thais" last Tuesday, in the Ambassador Theater. Mr. Paul, assisted by Celeste Nellie Ryus at the piano, with Flora Myers Engle, Louis Courcil, James Malcolm Huddy and Sol Cohen in the cast, succeeded in giving a most interesting performance.

Bird Life Studied

An address on "The Romance of Bird Life" will be given by Prof. Alfred Cookman, at the next meeting of the Philanthropy and Civics Club to be held Thursday, in the clubhouse on South Wilton Place.

In order to replenish the scholarship fund, a card party will be given at the club on Monday, November 8, at which time Mrs. Mamie Seibert and Mrs. Harvey Laughlin, chairman, will be assisted by Mrs. Frasier McIntosh, Mrs. C. L. Daniels, Mrs. P. Wilding, Mrs. L. Zimmerman, Mrs. A. W. Kelleher and Mrs. Fred Bowman.

Japan Featured

Present-day literature and art of Japan will be the feature of the next program of the Lincoln Study Club, to be held tomorrow at 2 p.m. at the Women's University clubhouse.

Among those on the program will be Mrs. Allen Minot, Mrs. Everett B. James, Dr. Maude Wilde, and Mrs. H. A. Dutton, discussing current events.

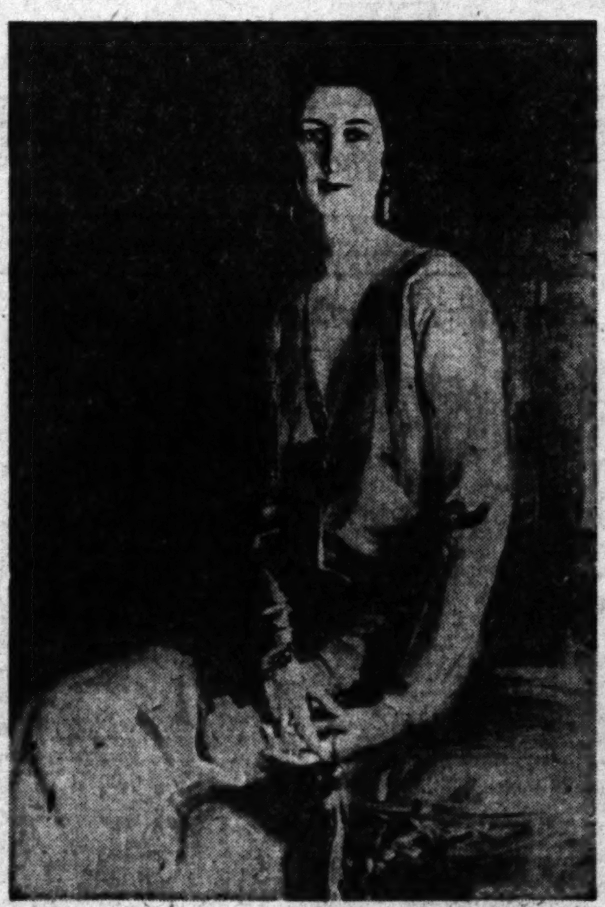
tion of ten students of the Talmud in a room, has an extraordinary life. "Talmudist" adds really great character drawing to superb composition. It is obvious throughout that Deutsch thinks and feels as a painter even in his black and white drawings. Color and form do not exist independently for him. In this he is a true child of his age. The impressionists discovered that color must exist where there was light, but it remained for Cezanne to convince us that form could not be separated from color in painting or seeing. This is one of the roots of modern painting, and often when we think that painters are imitating each other, a little investigating will show us that they are simply profiting by this common understanding.

A third group of paintings with a tendency to blue and green does not make such a strong appeal to me, although it is interesting to note that the University students are drawn to them first of all. I think this is because the subject here outstrips the aesthetic form. "Color Variations," on the other hand, in which a woman's head counters the flame-like ascending movement of color, is from any angle a beautiful work.

Deutsch is a significant figure in the growth of modern art here. The development of art is as natural as the growth of a plant or a human, yet few people understand the process. We too easily think of art as a building built up block by block, and when we see some impertinent fellow apparently building an erratic pavilion in the shadow of the main building we say that he doesn't belong. A much truer analogy is that of growth from a new fallen seed. Any phase of art starts with great energy imprisoned in small compass. It expands, grows into many shoots, flowers, and finally again drops its seed. Little then remains but the trunk, and for future growth we must look to the development of the new seed in new ground. The new tree is really new, only the inner life impulse of the seed connecting it with the parent. When the forms grow too old life departs from them. It is in the new shoots we must look for vital art.

A Brilliant Portrait



"Mrs. Thomas Weeks Banks" by Neale Ordayne
A charming work from the current exhibits of this artist's portraits at the Cannell and Chaffin galleries.

HORSE DREW RUSSELL TO WESTERN GRAVE

Charles M. Russell will paint no more buffalo hunts or model no more of his spirited animal sculpture. An old horse-drawn hearse bore him to his grave in Great Falls, Mont., on October 25. Recorder of the authentic life of the western range, his paintings are owned by many collectors and public institutions, for he caught not only the facts but the spirit of life on the plains. Born in St. Louis in 1865, he came to Montana as a boy of 15. Here he fished and trapped, lived among Indians and frontiersmen and spent some years as a cowboy. In 1892 he commenced to paint the life he knew and loved. In later years he spent much of his time in Los Angeles.

His pictures of range life are no less remarkable for their literal truth than for the unusual vitality of his drawing. Some of his greatest achievements are unquestionably in the realm of sculpture where a keen sense for muscular movement had free play. Malcolm McKay of New York City owns the finest collection of his work. The Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught own Russell paintings. The artist leaves a wife and son here and a brother and sister in St. Louis. A portrait of the artist by Arthur M. Hazard, is on exhibition at the Biltmore Salon.

NEALE ORDAYNE'S SECOND EXHIBIT

"A portrait," John Sargent used to say, "is the picture of someone with something wrong with the mouth."

The layman, who is more interested in representation than interpretation, always, when looking at a portrait, finds something wrong with something—hands, feet, eyes, mouth, nose, according to his preconceived notion as to how the sitter looks. He is avidly interested in some irrelevant detail, and if a button or a bangle has been painted with meticulous exactitude he acclaims the artist a crackerjack at his trade.

But art is not a trade and the artist is not a copyist of nature. The painter of portraits does not try to imitate the facial contours of his subjects—an easy matter—but to educe that subtle and elusive thing known as personality, as character. He must, of course, represent essentials, but if he stops at representation his portrait remains a dead thing, a hollow sham, an empty husk of a man. It has no distinction, no style, no charm, no beauty—in brief, it has no pictorial value whatsoever, it is not art.

Art is achieved by a series of compromises, and a picture may become notable and fine more through what the painter leaves out of it than through what he puts in. This sounds like a paradox to the uninitiated, but it's true. Look at the extreme simplicity of most of the old masters. Look at the great economy of means for stupendous ends. The buttons and the bangles may or may not be true to form—sometimes they are not—the artist was not specially interested in them—but we have a positive assurance that the sitter is. We are arrested and held and fascinated by character, even more than if we were looking at the man in the flesh. More, because we have before us the added wonder of art.

All this was my thought when I studied, with ever increasing interest and pleasure, Neale Ordayne's portraits of William P. Jefferies, of Mrs. Thomas Weeks Banks of Monsignor Tonello, and one or two others. These three portraits, with six more, make up Ordayne's second exhibition in Los Angeles. The show opens tomorrow at Cannell and Chaffin's, where the artist's first exhibit was held exactly a year ago to the day.

Ordayne has grown steadily through this busy intervening year. His color has become richer, fuller, more varied. His draughtsmanship, always good, has reached a more forceful simplicity. His brushwork has become easier, more pliant, at once more expressive and more seductive, the brushwork of a man born to paint.

Not that every portrait in the show is a triumphant success. Homer sometimes nodded, Michael Angelo sometimes slept (in spite of his neuralgia,) and Neale Ordayne sometimes faltered in the rendering of a line. But, all in all, this year's showing is some distance ahead of last year's, and it contains at least two portraits, perhaps three or four, that are among Ordayne's very best. And there is nothing radically wrong with anybody's mouth, so far as I could dis-

Native Indian Arts & Crafts

MEMBERS of some of the most interesting tribes of the Sou have been secured by Barker Bros., to present this fascinating educational exhibit—the Navajo, Pueblo and Moki Indians and also one Sioux! The Third Floor will be the scene of their activities, where a realistic Indian setting has been arranged, including a typical "Wick of brush and adobe.

See Indian Craftsmen Making Beautiful Wares

THE ART of the Indian, recognized as one of the finest forms of racial expression among the peoples of the world, may be studied here at first hand, for there will be two expert Navajo Blanket weavers, Pottery and Basket Makers, a Navajo silversmith [who fashioned a flat silver service for President Coolidge], a Moccasin maker and a small Indian boy who makes bows and arrows.

Talks by Chief "Little Bison"

CHIEF "LITTLE BISON," who is in charge of the exhibition, is a full blood Sioux, a man of unusual attainments, and worldwide experiences. He will talk informally each hour on the handicraft and life of the Indians and will also tell the amazingly romantic history of some of the antique treasures on display.

Indian Creations May Be Bought

All the wares in the display may be purchased. There is one of the finest collections of Navajo Blankets in this country; also Silver Jewelry. Silver Mounted Bridles, Pottery, Baskets, as well as the rare antiques mentioned above, old ceremonial blankets, tom-toms, etc.

On the Third Floor—next to the Children's Department—will be found the Indian Arts & Crafts Exhibition. It will be especially interesting to children, and no less interesting to grown-ups.

"Too Tired to Move"

HOW often we hear a woman use this expression! She is in a weakened and run-down condition, not fit to do her work. Bravely she struggles on. She becomes nervous and discouraged.

Whether she lives in a luxurious apartment, a cozy bungalow or a crowded city flat, every woman can understand the handicap of poor health. The woman in moderate circumstances suffers more, of course, than her well-to-do friend because she cannot afford to hire help.

In spite of her efforts, her house begins to look neglected. Her children say, "Mother is so cross."

Eagerly she listens when a neighbor tells her of other women who found the road to health and happiness.

Health! That's the answer to so many of our problems. Without health, a woman cannot make her home the happy haven she dreams of.

MRS. GOLDIE SHOUP of May View, Illinois, is one of the many women who have improved their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was in a run down condition which caused her much unhappiness.

MRS. SHOUP says, "I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I think it is the most wonderful medicine I ever tried." She declares that she is now in better health than ever before.

Miss Patricia Janss, in a yellow-gold taffeta gown against a background of blue brocade, is another charming debutante who has been painted by Ordayne. The rendering of the gown shows much technical virtuosity.

Lack of space forbids more than a mention of the hardly less interesting portraits of little Mary-Elizabeth Baly, shown in a gray riding habit; of Miss Beatrice Peeples, and of the woman in "Study in White."

The exhibition will continue at Cannell and Chaffin's for two weeks.

CHARM OF MATTISSE ELUDES DESCRIPTION

Few artists have drawn with the same reckless ease as Mattisse. Rembrandt drew in the same way though the world he portrayed with his emotionally true and anatomically incorrect line was far broader and deeper. The Mattisse lithographs and etchings yield up a delicate, charming bouquet. You get it or you don't. You may catch it today and not tomorrow, and I find it quite indescribable.

Personally I enjoy them immensely. Light as air and not to be taken too seriously, they nevertheless have the essential virtue of art or life, they are. Their seeming off-handedness creates a division of opinion concerning this artist, but it is interesting to note that despite the flood of imitators and influences swimming in the wake of all the outstanding artists of post-impressionist days, one of these drawings can be recognized as far as it is visible.

Mattisse is Gallic, witty and charming. Some of the lightness and elegance of Fragonard is reborn in him. One or two of the tiny etchings of faces might be signed with that older name. His art is akin to much modern French music. You like it and you can't for the life of you say why. These drawings can take you into a lighter world than the accustomed heavy and serious world of every day without robbing or cheating you. A sort of Beggars' Opera lightness in which all the essential rules of art are observed without taxing the mind. The world is a charming comedy, so let us laugh lightly and enjoy for here is nothing to bring a sight. Sip daintily for this is champagne, and nothing to quaff in great draughts. The lithographs of ladies, clad or unclad, lying on chaise-longues, in Mattisse's world ladies always lie on chaise-longues—give most delightful informal patterns that exhilarate, always granted that you like them at all. There are many people of excellent taste and judgment who see nothing in them.

Then these tiny etchings, in very pure and unaffected line, of heads, or more properly, faces, there has never been anything like them put on copper plates. If this is what you want no other artist can give it to you. Yet at moments they seem so slight and inconsequential. It is a case of an artist trusting absolutely to his instinct for what is right. The mind does not guide the hand, for the mind is in the hand. Artistic tid-bits that please like nothing else on the menu but you must first have eaten the substantial meat course to enjoy them.

L. A. Art League

Here and there among the mass of what, in my humble opinion, is wasted paint and canvas, some interesting painting may be found in the present exhibition of the Los Angeles Art League in the art gallery of the new Public Library.

Rhea Cashman shows a group of five little works in good design, somewhat in the manner of the Japanese wood block. "The Bridge," a wood block, is very good, so is the little night painting, "The Shop." David Dunn, president of the organization, is a real romantic. His "Sycamore Path" is a charming picture, a fine composition of massed trees. There are much life and warmth in the paintings of John A. Dominique, notably, in "Under the Eucalyptus." Frank Girardin's "November Morn" is also worthy of better company. William A. Paxton has designed a simple, strong pattern in "Torrey Pines." Jackson Martin shows two good and original Chinatown canvases, "Houses of Mystery" and "Poultry Shop."

Idealistic references from the publicity director about "Truth" of this of that won't make art, and if the late George Bellows had read the passage about the grotesque and freak schools of painting not having been represented in an organization which attracted him solely because he believed in "no jury" exhibits, he would quickly have withdrawn his honorary membership. There is room for public unrestricted exhibitions, but they must attract those who, like George Bellows, are misunderstood because they are ahead of their time, for without their presence, there is little to balance what seems to me inexcusable amateurishness and pointless paint puddling.

Artland Exhibit

The Artland Club is sending invitations to artists of the Pacific Coast to submit paintings for its inaugural exhibition to be held at the galleries of the club in the new Fine Arts Building, Seventh and Flower streets from December 3, to January 29. The jury of selection will consist of Barse Miller, Edgar Payne, Bessie Hazen, Anna Hills, Paul Lauritz, Leland Curtis and Edouard Vysekal: (alternates,) Dana Bartlett, Arthur Hill Gilbert and Henri DeKruif. For sculpture: Peter David Edstrom, Finn Frolich, Lora Woodhead Steere, Harry Winebrenner and Roger Noble Burnham. The jury of awards will consist of the entire membership of the Artland Club, voting by secret ballot to award a purchase prize of $500 and other cash prizes to be announced later.

Dana Bartlett's picture, "Along the Shore," has been accepted for the annual exhibition of American art at the Art Institute of Chicago. This is the fourth time Bartlett has shown in this exhibit.

Geraldine Carr, well-known English artist and authority on the wood block will lecture before the Ebell Club on November 3. Following the talk, Dorothy George, will display a unique series of wood-block printed Christmas cards, the work of a group of artists including Vernon Hunter, Edouard Vysekal, Geraldine Carr, Harwell Harris, Fred Monhoff and Dorothy George.

Helena Dunlap announces a clearance sale of her drawings, paintings and sketches at her studio, 750 South Windsor Boulevard. Visitors will be welcome Saturday and Sunday afternoons until December 1.

S. MacDonald Wright's series of Friday evening lectures on art at the Lytell studio, 546 South New Hampshire, under the auspices of the Arts and Crafts Society, is proving of first interest. Wright is both artist, student and philosophical speculator. On November 5, the fourth of five lectures is entitled "Modern Art."

At the MacDowell Club of Allied Arts, corner of Beverly Boulevard and North Vermont, Dinmar Building, on Monday evening, November 8, Emma Goldsworthy Clark will give a talk on "How the Artist Works" illustrated by painting in water colors before the audience. The public are invited.

Museum to Entertain

On Friday evening the Los Angeles Museum invites the public to a reception, opening the large historical exhibition of furniture, paintings, relics and objects of art and historic interest.

Films Declared to Play Part in Americanization

Motion pictures are playing a greater part in the Americanization of immigrants than any other national institution, not excepting the public school.

That is the novel contention of Svend Gade, the director. Gade, a Dane, has only been in this country a few years, yet his close study of immigration and his own interest in Americanization has led him to believe that his own profession wields greater power in the making of Americans than any other American element.

"Before motion pictures told their tale of America an immigrant didn't become a real American for at least ten years. Despite the fact that he may have taken out citizenship papers," says Gade, "the newcomer would not be considered an American until he had absorbed the inherent customs of the land.

"Today motion pictures carry their tale of Americanization to the immigrant even before he is an emigrant from his own country. Visual education works 100 per cent more rapidly than written or spoken tute-

The Basis of Beauty
Combines within itself all the virtues of a simple beauty treatment.

The Beauty Cream for Busy Women

FOR girls and women whose activities leave little or no time for that all important daily attention which ensures a good complexion, HELENA RUBINSTEIN, the noted beauty specialist, provides a quick and marvelously effective beauty treatment in her unique—VALAZE PASTEURIZED FACE CREAM.

Differing from any other cream you have ever used, Valaze Pasteurized Face Cream is the basis of the famous beauty regimen at the Helena Rubinstein Salons.

VALAZE PASTEURIZED FACE CREAM combines within itself all the virtues of a simple, corrective and protective beauty treatment.

Cleanses perfectly
Molds out the "tired look" about eyes and forehead
Cools, soothes, refreshes
Protects the skin from coarsening effects of sun, wind and weather changes
Revitalizes the skin
Creates a complexion of velvet smoothness
Keeps skin of hands and elbows pliant
And is, in addition, an excellent make-up base.

Give yourself a daily two-minute treatment with this unique cream and note the decided improvement within the short space of two weeks.

EXCELS FOR OILY SKINS

This remarkable cream is incomparable for all normal skins and because of its unusual properties, is the only cleansing cream that positively benefits an oily, pimpled or skin blemished skin.

VALAZE PASTEURIZED FACE CREAM—4 oz. 1.00, ½ lb. 2.00, 1 lb. 3.50.

VALAZE FINISHING TOUCHES—scientifically compounded of the purest ingredients—safeguard and enhance the complexion. Powders 1.00 to 5.50. Rouges—Compact 1.00, Rouge-en-Creme 1.00 to 5.00. Lipsticks 1.00, 1.50. Cupidsbow—new—the self-shaping lipstick—now taking Paris by storm. 1.50

Formal Opening Monday—at Barker Bros.—of

The CHARM SHOP

A TINY, perfect bazaar, where beautiful things, essential to sophisticated modern charm are assembled for femininity! Miss Jane Cable is the delightful personality who will receive you when you call—and the treasures that the shop holds are to be of the same daintiness for which Miss Cable's shop at 6776 Hollywood boulevard was known. In a word—this shop at Barker Bros. replaces that one—and presents the same exclusiveness of fashion for which the Jane Cable Shop was known among women of good taste.

JEWELRY

COSTUME JEWELRY in a distinctly exclusive assemblage—bracelets, necklaces, ear rings, brooches—one here and one there—of smartest fashion tendencies.

IN ONE, very long links made up of tiny green beads constitute the gleaming necklace—long, flat stones set in between, $15.00. Another pendant necklace boasts sphinx stones and onyx with marcasite studs, $35.00. Complete range of price from $7.50 to $50.

PERFUMES!

PERFUMES as rare and marvelous as jewels! Containers as fascinating as foreign designers could create—and scents that lead the mode both in this country and abroad.

THERE are the distinctive odors packed by Fontanis—Sous la Charmille for example, $12.50. Or Eiffel Tower scent by Raffy—in bottle of black and box lined in green satin—an exotic perfume of several fragrances, $25.

THEN there are perfume bottles and burners—all manner of intriguing gift things for femininity. In this particular part of the shop gifts may be found at prices from $6.00 to $50.00.

HANDKERCHIEFS

AND IN THIS lovely Charm Shop at Barker Bros. there are wee handkerchiefs of the most engaging newness. Clever French designs with color in its most striking combinations. Silk ones begin at 50c. They glove handkerchiefs just six inches square have arrived in lovely shades, with bits of embroidery in the corners, 85c

HANDBAGS

JUST THOSE hand bags that are smarter than smart at this moment! Not great numbers of anything—in the Charm Shop—just choicest bits of things that one buys here. Delicate, lovely beaded bags in most exquisite colorings, $65 to $115.

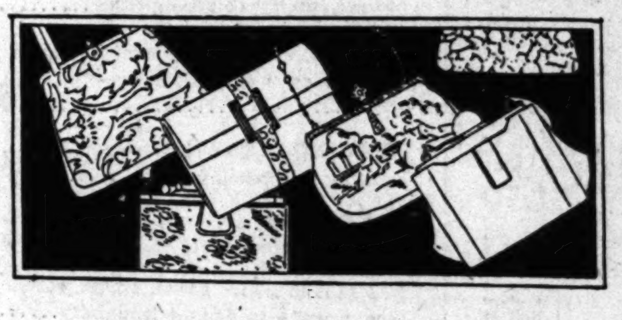
THE PATOU BAG of much fashion importance is here at $22.50—the Chanel bag at $16.50. A lovely rhinestone bag at $35.00—and many, many others. Complete price range from $15.00 to $125.00.

Lingerie

EXQUISITE hand made lingerie—the kind that is made but once—as a picture is painted! Dear little georgette creations—garments of the very, very smart Ninon—or French silk voile! And you should see the sets of tiny trunks and brassieres—an entirely new lingerie fashion! Prices for the many charming fashions, $10 to $50.

Negligees

DELICATELY tinted chiffons and velvets—with flowing ostrich to trim them—or gleaming satins smartly plain! Negligee fashions are so important this season that they are worthy of the place they take in the opening presentation in the Charm Shop! Prices range from $25 to $75.



All of Marie Earle's Cosmetics

—AND HERE is one of the most interesting and most important services that Barker Bros.' Charm Shop can render the women of Los Angeles! Marie Earle's cosmetics! Marie Earle—maker of exquisite preparations for the skin—well known to smart women the world over—now presents each and every preparation that she makes—in this new shop at Barker Bros.

MARIE EARLE herself, a gracious gentlewoman, is beloved by scores of prominent people in New York, Washington, London and Paris. She is the "grande dame" type—one to whom women confidently entrust that most important of problems—the care of their skin.

A Most Unusual Series of Lectures

IS to be announced very soon—a series of surpassing interest to every woman of Los Angeles. The lecturer, a national authority on the care of the skin, comes directly from New York and Marie Earle's Fifth Avenue Salon!

THE lectures will be given in Barker Bros.' Auditorium! Watch for further announcement of them.

Writer Chosen to Adapt 'Silk' for Screen Use

The universal appeal of the story "Silk," the screen version of which is now being written by Lenore J. Coffee for Cecil B. De Mille, can best be realized when one delves into the amazing details of Samuel Merwin's novel.

Rupert Julian who is to direct this story, expressed his sincere pleasure when informed that Miss Coffee had been selected to write the adaptation and continuity, it is said, because of her unlimited knowledge of story treatment.

This scenarist's screen version of "The Volga Boatman," is too well known to need comment. However, several months ago, she wrote "The Night of Love," an original story for Samuel Goldwyn, which is now being produced. This latter vehicle is said to greatly excel in dramatic intensity and whimsical situations any high-priced novel which has ever been brought to the silver sheet.

Recently she completed the adaptation and continuity on "Vanity," an original story from her pen, which De Mille is to shortly produce.

CENTURY OF FASHION TO BE DEPICTED

Colorful Review Will be Given in Library Gardens at San Marino

A century of fashion, a spectacular pageant in three episodes preceded by a colorful prologue, will be held next Saturday afternoon, in the Henry Huntington Library Gardens at San Marino, beginning at 2 p.m. Notable Shakespearean characters will pay their homage to the queen, impersonate by the president of the Pasadena Shakespeare Club, Mrs. Joseph Dor Five cycles of fashion will be shown with 100 society folk of Pasadena exemplifying the fashions of yesterday. In the fashions of today, Peggy Hamilton of The Times, and a coterie of fashion models, will appear. A humorous epilogue depicting the fashions of tomorrow with an exaggerated imagination at full play, brings the pageant to a mirthful climax.

In the modern section of the "Century of Fashions," all costumes, wraps and accessories will be shown exclusively by Walter Switzer's, Inc., of Los Angeles and Pasadena. This entire collection direct from Paris creators was imported especially for this occasion, featuring fabrics and modes quite contrasting to the fashions of recent months and promises to be a magnificent array of the latest note predicted by Dame Fashion. This firm will stage a complete bridal party, with Peggy Hamilton as the modern bride.

The furs have been recently brought from New York for this pageant by Mrs. A. E. Colburn, and will express distinction and modern tendencies in fur creations. All furs in this production will be shown exclusively by Colburn's. All wigs will be furnished by William Hepner, world-renowned authority on wigs and coiffeurs, who has been the originator of many of the most popular headdresses worn by women in the last forty years—first the "Transformation," inspired by Lillian Russell; then the "Virginia Coiffeur" with all its puffs, worn by Ethel Levy in "George Washington, Jr.," and the bobbed-hair inspired by Irene Castle.

There will be free parking space for several hundred automobiles and the Pacific Electric is providing special service. Every woman's club in Southern California has been invited to attend, and it is expected that thousands will be there. Mrs. Florence Magill Wallace, secretary of the woman's division of the Tournament of Roses, will direct the fashion pageant, while Mrs. E. B. Russell, prominent member, is general chairman for the club.

HILL SUPERVISES

George Hill, who recently directed "Tell It to the Marines," for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is busy supervising the final editing of the new picture, filmed with government co-operation. Blanche Sewel is film editor of the production.

PARTICIPANTS IN STYLES PAGEANT

Society in Review

Above Miss Rose V. Steni, Pasadena society girl, who will represent the bride in the 1870 period group and, below, Mrs. Susannah E. Holmes appearing in the Gibson girl review.

MacLENNAN SIGNED

Andy MacLennan, who recently played the stage hand in "Exit Smiling," has been added to the cast of Tod Browning's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "The Day of Souls," as the Ferret, strange underworld character. John Gilbert and Renee Adoree head the cast.

The Film Danger

To which authoritative dental opinion ascribes many tooth and gum disorders, should be combated daily the new way

THAT clear teeth and firm, healthy gums are largely the result of daily removal of film from teeth is largely the dental opinion of today.

As a result, thinking people—largely on dental advice—are adopting a new way of tooth cleansing, a way embodied in the special film-removing dentifrice called Pepsodent. Old-time brushing was found a failure in successfully fighting film.

Now an effective film combatant

For years dental science sought ways to fight film. Clear teeth and healthy gums come only when film is constantly combated—removed every day from the teeth.

Film was found to cling to teeth; to get into crevices and stay; to hold in contact with teeth food substances which fermented and fostered the acids of decay. Film was found to be the basis of tartar. Germs by the millions breed in it. And they, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea and most gum disorders.

Thus there was a universal call for an effective film-removing method. Ordinary brushing was found ineffective. Now two effective combatants have been found, approved by high dental authority and embodied in a tooth paste called Pepsodent.

Curdles and removes film
Firms the Gums

Pepsodent acts first to curdle the film. Then it thoroughly removes the film in gentle safety to enamel.

At the same time, it acts to firm the gums—Pepsodent provides, for this purpose, the most recent dental findings in gum protection science knows today. Pepsodent also multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. And thus aids in neutralizing mouth acids as they form.

It multiplies the starch digestant of the saliva. Thus combats starch deposits which might otherwise ferment and form acids.

No other method known to present-day science embodies protective agents like those in Pepsodent.

Please accept Pepsodent test

Send the coupon for a 10-day tube. Brush teeth this way for 10 days. Note how thoroughly film is removed. The teeth gradually lighten as film coats go. Then for 10 nights massage the gums with Pepsodent, using your finger tips; the gums then should start to firm and harden.

At the end of that time, we believe you will agree, that next to regular dental care, Pepsodent, the quality dentifrice, provides the utmost science has discovered for better tooth and gum protection.

AIRY-LIKE FOOTWEAR FEATURED

Shop to Display Latest in Parisian Shoes at Opening Event, Monday

By OLIVE GRAY

Where to begin expressing admiration of the new I. Miller Slipper Shop! At the Olive-street entrance, in the new Quinby Building, where a facade distinctly Spanish in savor greets the eye; where display balconies, Spanish in atmosphere, lend interest to the view; where within are glimpsed the colorings of Spain in draperies, in galleries, in furnishings! Or to commence our exclamations of pleasure as we behold the Spanish senoritas in promenade, timing their steps to the music of a Spanish orchestra! These are some of the alternatives to be met by those who, during the opening on Monday, visit the fascinating new shop. Bewilderingly beautiful is the place, enchanting will be the entertainment accorded those who enter there.

Since the unusual elicits most attention, the gaze will first be held by the miniature representations of slippers from Paris—slippers of genuine artistry in design, in lasts, in coloring and trim. Rare indeed are the examples shown were they of normal size—but fairy-like in proportion as they are, it is as if some slipper dreamland had exhaled its wares. These are promise of the slippers for actual wear and use exhibited throughout the shop—the fairy footwear a preview, in short, of the stock within those walls.

Slippers of extremest mode, presenting every latest feature possible to design, created by a world-famous Parisian maker, and notable for that marvelous gift, known of Parisians, where not only to begin in trim and dainty accessories, but better far than this, to know where to stop. This characteristic, beyond all others, is known of Paris; this it is which has brought to Parisians world fame. To decorate, to trim and not to overdo, to overornament.

Slippers there are in the I. Miller shop which, while featuring leathers of popular finish and coloring, present some exceptional ways in scrollwork—restrained, yet notable; slippers of tints so delicate as to simulate the flower petals, in rose, in blue, in gold. Metallic touches—the merest glints in many cases—sufficient to enhance, without becoming brazen, are there. Reptile skins shaded down to veritable poesy; antelope so soft as to seem fitted for gloving milady's hands; slippers set with embroidery precious as if drawn from mellowed reliquaries; heels gem-set; heels silver. A veritable fiesta to the shoe imagination will there be embodied.

The new shop, in reality an annex to the I. Miller shoe shop on Sixth street, opens from out that shop. The additional space was a natural growth from the first shop, whose popularity, due to the able management of John F. Reedy, president, may be said to outvie the parent store in beauty and in friendly spirit.

The opening reception on Monday from 10 a.m. to the closing hour may be considered on the order of a house-warming, although the enviable stock of merchandise will be available.

Being legitimate contractors, we do not quote misleading prices, neither do we make promises that we cannot fulfill.

We simply ask you to come into our office and have an interview with our staff of skilled and courteous experts who are at your service with free plans and advice. Or phone us and our representative will be pleased to call upon you.

We ask for no advance payments, neither do we charge any bonuses.

Payments equal to, or less than rent, are made only upon completion of building.

Our prices are very conservative, and our design, workmanship and quality of materials used defy competition.

Now is the time to build as prices are steadily advancing.

We are breaking ground for three new buildings this week—all financed by us 100%.

ARE YOU SATISFIED

WITH AVERAGE SUCCESS?
If I can show you where you can earn at least $200 a week or more without investing anything but hard work and energy, would not such a proposition appeal to you as worth investigating?

I want 5 live, energetic salesmen, not job hunters, real men with ambition with the will to succeed, the backbone to fight your way upward, good health and an automobile. In exchange I will show you the livest and cleanest deal you have ever been connected with. I will give you prospects not leads. I will make good 100% on this point. I have no excursion, hot beans or hot air, but will give you full cooperation and 20% commission.

REAL ESTATE SALESMEN.

SAN DIEGO IS THE CITY OF OPPORTUNITY.

Last year I made a trip covering thirty-two States to investigate real estate conditions. This year, since resigning the vice-presidency of the Frank Meline Company, Los Angeles, I investigated conditions in all the major cities of the Coast. This survey has completely sold me on the present and future of San Diego and vicinity. There is in San Diego a healthy, substantial forward movement and development that is sure to progress rapidly due to natural advantages, to present favorable conditions, and to the attractive price at which property can be bought.

United Service, of which Ford Brown, well-known San Diego man, is president, is organized to give to the buyer and seller of property a service covering subdivisions as well as all classifications of brokerage operations. Applications for connection as salesmen and department managers will be considered from experienced real estate salesmen. Honesty, integrity of purpose, ambition and previous record will be considered. Boys, there is a real opportunity in San Diego. Write fully of your experience, or come down and talk it over.

G. B. STRAIN, General Manager, Real Estate Operations, UNITED SERVICE, INC., 1040 2nd st., San Diego, Cal.

MADDUX
(INC.)

We would like particularly to call your attention to the fact that we have a selected crew of salesmen who are scheduled to work evenings from 5:30 to 9:30 and on Sundays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

This arrangement is made with the idea in mind that many people are unable to leave their business at any other time. The men who will wait on you in our store during the hours mentioned, are not sleepy-eyed men, working extra hours. They are especially detailed to meet you at your convenience evenings and Sundays and are on the alert to give you expert advice and capable, courteous service.

This is just another little Maddux innovation for your convenience.

START THE EGG MUSIC
This Guaranteed Way

Go to any dealer named below and get enough Dr. Hess Poultry Pan-a-ce-a to last your moulted hens and pullets 30 days.

Mix one pound Pan-a-ce-a with every 50 pounds of mash. Then see the change come over your flock, see the combs and wattles begin to turn red, listen to the song, scratch and cackle—that's when the eggs begin to come.

These results absolutely—or you return the empty container to the dealer and get your money back. No quibbling. No questions.

Costs little to use: One egg pays for all the Pan-a-ce-a a hen needs for six months.

For Lice: Use Dr. Hess Instant Louse Killer.

For Roup: Use Dr. Hess Roup Tablets.

$25,000 $25,000
A Moroccan Jewel

Picture, if you can, this glistening white stucco structure seemingly projected from the background of rugged grandeur such as is found only in the foothills of W. Hollywood—this imposing 8-room home rests in a setting of appropriate tropical vines, shrubs and flowers. Its two large balconies overlook the entire city to the sea. Its interior, artistic in decoration and most effective in exquisite appointments, will convince you that this is a genuine $29,000 offering for $25,000. Must sell.

ALHAMBRA—
For Sale, Exchange, Etc.—53-A

SEVEN MODERN HOMES
These homes are located in the Wilshire section of Alhambra. The first buyer has the choice of (7) architect designed homes. These homes are not only correct in every detail, but they are accurately true to type. Much consideration and thought was given in the design and external appearance that it might be harmonious with the setting and surroundings of these unusual properties. Each of these (7) exclusive homes incorporate separate servant accommodations.

Here, at last, is an opportunity to pleasantly select a home guided by expert, yet unobtrusive counsel. You should set aside two hours and have one of our bonded and experienced salesmen show you what Alhambra's exclusive section really is like. Each home is different. Our exceptionally large and systematically arranged listings offer an unusual wide range of choice.

REMEMBER, only real values are submitted for your approval.

Alta Canyada Estate, The Beauty Spot of California

2000 feet above the sea, lifted high above the fog, out of the dust and noise of the city, yet with all the city's conveniences. Bathed in purest ozone, affording a panoramic view of Glendale, Los Angeles, Hollywood, Pasadena and the ocean, yet only a 15-minute drive from Glendale and Pasadena.

Each separate estate so set and arranged as to bring out a perfect view. Trees and shrubs of ten years growth, beautiful drives bordered by splendid pines to be found only in the most exclusive sections.

We are offering one of these estates for sale, size 139x264x304 with building restrictions from $8000 to $10,000, with all improvements in. Words fail to describe this beauty spot. Get on the ground—view the ocean and Catalina Island—note the sixty contented families already there. You will agree with us that this is a homesite supreme.

POULTRY RANCHES— For Sale —69

GOOD LAND

We have several poultry ranch builders building ranches for us that accounts for our LARGE listing of first class ranches.

Buy AWAY from the foggy COAST sections and the red hot INTERIOR sections.

Two brothers near here have nearly 30,000 birds, they came here 15 years ago and just recently acquired additional land. They are real business men and know a good poultry section when they see it. They ship millions of eggs to a large hatchery in the San Fernando Valley and chicks from their eggs sell at a premium to poultrymen.

JUST COMPLETED by one of our poultry ranch builders, 5 LARGE rooms, all hardwood, tile sink, 500 chicken equipment, acre or 5 acres bearing walnuts and fruit trees, near a prominent BLVD. CORNER, commuting distance L. A. Not aqueduct water, but pure sparkling well water, gas and electricity.

AS CLOSE TO L.A. CITY HALL AS HOLLYWOOD, 16 FULL BEARING WALNUT TREES. Fine for RABBITS OR CHICKENS. Large almost new 5 rm. modern home with nook. Dandy fireplace, all hardwood. Laundry in connection with garage. Lawn front and rear. Dandy fish pond. Water for all only costs $1 per mo. Chicken house for 200, acre of dandy chicken soil. 181 ft. frontage. Between 2 blvds., 3 blks. fast car L.A. Near school and store. You can keep 2000 chickens here, as this is real chicken soil, and there is no need of buying 5 acres. If you love nature's beautiful home surroundings, here is your chance to enjoy life to your heart's content.

RANCHES FARTHER OUT

100 CHICKENS, 6 ACRES, cozy home, LARGE tank and tank house. Own pump plant, 1000 ft. pipe line, trees, 3 chicken houses. Only $2600 Terms. Exchange for house and lot.

5 ACRES, 800 LAYERS, 600 PULLETS, 7-room house. On highway and just a step to school, P.O. bus, r.r. depot. All under cultivation. Garage, wood house, chicken houses, brooder house, many bearing fruit trees, berries, grapes, alfalfa, clover. All equipment, farm tools, plenty free water, spring, pumping plant, plenty water. $5500.

HOUSE, 7½ ACRES 5 chicken houses, 125 layers, incubator, brooder, tools, team of horses, 125 bearing fruit trees, 125 grapes, strawberries, 4 inches free water runs past the residence; also under irrigation ditch. All fenced. Only $2500.

ALMOST 800 layers, cozy home, 3 acres fruit, 3 water shares, Ford car & household goods, owner claims income of $4 per head in 10 months. Owner has other business. Price $4000.

21 ACRES LEVEL land, good well, 5000-gal. tank, orchard, alfalfa, shade trees, horses, 2 cows, hay, farm tools, 4-rm. home. Price $6600, terms. Will trade for city property.

HOGS MAKE BIG PROFITS
AND SURE MONEY, QUICK
Growing hogs, alfalfa, barley and corn has always been a big money maker. Sure and quick money coming in your first season. There is no branch of farming today that offers the opportunity to make real money equal to the hog business. Business men are going into it. They see the big future in the hog business, where they can get cheap land with an abundant supply of water. Have you ever figured what 10 brood sows raising 2 litters a year will make when you raise all your own feed? We believe in the opportunities of this branch of farming and are in a position to make you the right terms to get started right. This is an opportunity you should investigate. You are dealing with the owners direct. We can finance you and take your city property.

HERE'S A BUSINESS GOOD FOR
$6000 to $12,000 Year

A Mississippi grocer, an Arkansas broker, an Oklahoma clerk, a Texas salesman and others all over the U. S. wanted to own a real money-making business. Electrik-Maid Bake Shops gave them their opportunity. Today they own prosperous businesses without having known a thing about the bakery business before. You have the same sure money-making opportunity in your own town. A cash business, your profits in the till every night. Everyone who eats is a customer. Business good all year round. We supply equipment and information and put you in a going, growing business. All you need is a willingness to work, and some capital.

Write or Wire Today

for full particulars. This is the opportunity you have been waiting for. Get into your own prosperous business.

Money Makes Money!

Large fortunes have been made in the mail-order instruction field in the east. The opportunity is here to reap enormous profit in a mail-order course of international scope. It requires a financial backing of $50,000 to carry on the wide advertising campaign & to prepare the necessary literature, etc. Such an investment should make a return of not less than half a million. The investor could handle his own money & there would be no large salaries demanded. Every dollar would go into the creating of the business. If you have this amount of capital or can obtain it, writet for details. This is a straightforward legitimate business proposition. It merits investigation. Address K, box 218, Times Office.

CATTLEMAN many years in Argentine temporarily in California, wishes to get in touch with local capitalist with view of mutually engaging in very profitable South American business in regard to which cattleman has special knowledge, experience and connections. Only moderate initial investment required, but investor must be in a position and be willing to finance large extensions as fast as business warrants it. Highest references given and required. Address M, box 176, Times Office.

THE CREAM OF THE MARKET

There has never been a time in our fifteen years of business here when we have had so many high-class business openings at the right price. They consist of various lines of business, are being operated successfully, but for legitimate reasons are for sale, many of which will consider exchange for good property, others part cash, part property. Everything we submit is tied up on exclusive contracts, therefore we can give you ample protection while you are making your investigations.

LINCOLN SONGS

Students of politics and lovers of Lincoln will be interested in a collection of campaign songs, marches and hymns eulogizing the former President in the possession of Georgia L. Osborne, librarian of the Illinois State Historical Society. The first songs in honor of Lincoln, she says, were campaign ditties. One of them was called "A Campaign Song for Abraham Lincoln;" another, "We See the Break of Day," and a third, "Freedom's Call." Several songs are written in negro dialect, the best known of them being "When Will Dis Cruel War Be Ober?" and "Give Us Darkies Rest." One of the ballroom favorites of 1865, says Miss Osborne, was "The Lincoln Schottish," published in the same year that funeral marches were written for the martyred President. Among the songs written after Mr. Lincoln's death were: "The Nation in Tears," "A Nation Mourns Her Martyred Son," "The Death Knell is Tolling" and "Rest, Noble Chieftain."—[Philadelphia Ledger.

THE MATTER WITH HIM

"What makes that little boy look so much paler than the other children?" inquired a motorist who had halted his car. "Is he ill?"

"Not prezizely," replied Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "He got smart with some of the other kids and they flung him into the creek and kept him there soaking for half an hour or so."—[Kansas City Star.

NOTED MEXICAN OUTLAW KILLED

"El Chirrin" Shot in Attempt to Escape Prison

Began Career as Associate of "Tiger" Mendicoa

Was Greatly Feared for Ruthless Cruelty

XOCHIMILCO (Mex.) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—"El Chirrin" is dead, and this little town, some fifteen miles from the national capital, feels with a sigh of relief that its streets have become safe.

But "El Chirrin," of course, did not die a natural death. That would have been quite inconceivable, for he did not live a natural life. "El Chirrin" was a bandit, one of the most notorious in the country. And he was killed, shot down while trying to escape from the military prison here. They picked up his body, crumpled against the prison wall, riddled with a score of bullets, and took it to the Jaurez Hospital for the perfunctory autopsy required by law.

It was not so very long ago that the chief of the Federal garrison had finally succeeded in capturing "El Chirrin," after a long search for the outlaw. He was set down in the prison records as Benigno Calzacasco. His nickname had been given to "El Chirrin" by his fellows in the world of crime.

TRIES ESCAPE

"El Chirrin" was placed in a separate cell. He sent word to the commander of the Garrison de la Plaza asking that he be placed under his jurisdiction. But "El Chirrin" did not wait for a reply. Early one morning he asked permission to go into the courtyard. The request was granted. The notorious criminal walked about there moodily. He was waiting, waiting.

The guard sauntered out of the courtyard. In an instant "El Chirrin" was at the courtyard wall. He grasped the rough stones. Up and up he scrambled.

But they knew "El Chirrin" too well.

Scarcely had the prisoner begun his mad climb when the guard reappeared in the courtyard. At once he sounded the call for help. At the same time he fired.

"El Chirrin" ceased his frantic clambering. He made one last desperate attempt to top the wall. As he thrust his arm upward there came another thud of a bullet—and another—and another. The guard was emptying his gun into the body of the bandit. Beside him were his fellow-guards, shooting the life out of "El Chirrin."

A lifeless figure fell to the base of the wall. The career of "El Chirrin" was ended.

At the military investigation, "El Chirrin's" life was briefly sketched. He had entered upon his criminal career with Isaac Mendicoa, the celebrated "Tiger of the Stony Places," and with unprecedented audacity had shortly thereafter thrown into panic the countryside with his daring exploits.

The Tiger and his band were captured by the police "El Chirrin" made a miraculous escape, "shooting it out" with his pursuers, making his getaway unharmed through a deadly fire.

For a time nothing was heard of "El Chirrin." But after the trial of The Tiger, he reappeared, making daring raids on Tialpan, Xochimilco and San Angel, always contriving to elude his would-be captors.

The commander of the Xochimilco garrison received orders to capture the outlaw. Weeks and weeks of the most systematic searching began. And finally "El Chirrin" was caught and arrested.

"El Chirrin's" death caused a sensation here, for he was feared greatly for his exploits and cruelty.

Highland Park Ebell Pledges Memorial Gift

In response to Mrs. Lillian Burkhardt Goldsmith's plea for the Eleanor Joy Toll memorial readquarters, Highland Park Ebell Club was prompt in pledgin a 100 per cent gift and the president, Mrs. Herbert Carr, was made a member of the executive committee.

The last meeting for the month of October was devoted to piano solos by Miss Phyllis Worsley, a junior auxiliary daughter, who is specializing in piano, and readings by Miss Dorothy Cole, dramatic critic of the American Artist's Association of New York City. Miss Cole was well received and her selections, including both comedy and tragedy, were highly appreciated.

Mrs. Mabel B. Dunn, curator of the Shakespeare section, has planned a comprehensive study of "Henry VI" in which the members are assisting. The California Quartet, Miss Irmalee Campbell, soprano; Miss Beatrice Hovde, contralto; Charles King, tenor; Bodham Pillowitz, baritone, and Miss Margaret Wilson, accompanist, will give a recital next Tuesday morning, and Miss Gertrude Darlow will review new books at the literature section.

Resolutions regarding the death of Miss Elizabeth A. Packard, president of the club in 1912-14, were passed at the morning session Tuesday. Miss Packard was principal of the Los Angeles High School for several years, then teacher of English in Oakland High School, and later in the Hollywood High School. She published a testbook on English which is still in use.

Canned Food to be Featured by Local Dealers

With virtually all canners, food brokers and wholesale, chain store and retail grocers of the Southland behind the project, announcement was made yesterday that the days from November 10 to 20 will be set apart for sale of canned food bargains in retail establishments and recitals of the virtues of tinned edibles. The period, although it extends ten days, will be known as "Canned Food Week," and it will be observed nationally.

To carry on proceedings, a committee of twenty-one prominent food men of Los Angeles, with E. T. Aylesbury as chairman, has been named, and an office has been opened at 213 Produce Building.

"It is our intention to make the 'week' a thing of real value to the housekeepers," Mr. Aylesbury said. "We propose to explain how tinned goods cut down on household routine and worry and how numerous agreeable recipes may be formed from such products."

Question: What proportion of the average American family allowance for food is spent for dairy products?
B. J. R.

Answer: Studies made by the Department of Agriculture show that out of each dollar expended for food by the people of the United States approximately 20 cents is applied to dairy products.

Q.: For auction bridge is there any rule providing how the dummy hand shall be arranged on the table—I mean where the trumps shall be placed when it is a trump bid?
S. L. H.

A.: There is no law of auction requiring dummy to place his trumps in any particular place, and the declarer has a right to rearrange the dummy hand in any way he sees fit, but it is customary for dummy's trumps, if any, to be placed on the declarer's left and on dummy's right.

Q.: How long would it take to read the Bible through without stopping?
A. G. D.

A.: It would depend upon the rate of reading. The Protestant Bible was read aloud continuously in the Adventist Temple in Boston, the time elapsing from start to finish being fifty-five hours and forty-seven minutes.

Q.: Is it true that geniuses are generally small?
R. W. G.

A.: Lombroso in his "Man of Genius" says that greatness and stature are rarely found together. In consulting biographies of a number of great men in American history, however, it has been found that this statement does not always apply. There have been on the whole more prominent men above middle height than below. Among the short men may be numbered John Quincy Adams, Admiral Farragut, John Paul Jones, Gen. Philip Sheridan, Stephen A. Douglas, William H. Seward and Martin Van Buren. On the other hand, it is found that Charles Sumner was six feet four inches, Thomas Jefferson, six feet two and one-half, Andrew Jackson, six feet one; Samuel Adams, Samuel P. Chase and Jonathan Edwards, "over six feet," James Monroe, "six feet or more," George Washington, six feet; Benjamin Franklin slightly under six feet, Daniel Webster and Patrick Henry about five feet ten inches.

Q.: How much Indian blood must one have in order to put in a claim for Indian lands or other assets?
J. W. L.

A.: The Indian Office says that the per cent of Indian blood that an individual must have to make a claim for land or money depends entirely on the tribe, the treaty and the general circumstances.

Q.: What was the most expensive program broadcast and the probable cost?
M. M.

A.: The series of world famous artists broadcasting over a chain of fifteen stations is generally considered the most expensive. The cost is said to have been about $500,000 for the series, including fees to artists and stations.

CURRICULUM ADDS FENCING

Dr. Von KleinSmid of U.S.C. Enrolls in Favor of Noble Sport for University Classes

Placing his stamp of approval on the noble art of fencing [illegible] Bernard Von KleinSmid, president of the University of Southern California, has enrolled himself as in favor of this sport and fencing has [illegible] to the curriculum of the southern varsity as a result. [illegible] men and women, in the college classes, are to receive credits for the work done with the foil, broadsword and saber.

Prof. Harry Uyttenhove, fencing instructor for the Los Angeles Athletic Club, in conference with the president recently arranged for classes in the art of fencing and through the athletic club directorate has added additional time for classes in the three forms, the foil, the broadsword and the saber. This, it is argued, will give the business man, as well as the college student, an opportunity for regular exercise without unnecessary exertion.

REQUISITES OUTLINED

Classed as a sport, there is perhaps nothing, with the possible exception of swimming, that affords a maximum amount of exercise such as fencing, says Prof. Uyttenhove. There is positively, says the instructor, no danger of overexertion. The three requisites in fencing, he says, are good hands, good legs and an active mind. The proper functioning of the body will come with the training of the hand, the mind and the eye.

Youth and age practically meet on an equal basis in fencing. The short man has an equal chance with the tall athlete. It is possible to match almost any man, of almost any age, with almost any other man, as the age limit positively cuts no figure.

President Von KleinSmid, who was once instructor in fencing, is enthusiastic over its possibilities. In a tilt with Prof. Uyttenhove yesterday at the University of Southern California the well-beloved "prexy" showed traces of that former skill which was once his boast.

INVITED TO BE MEMBER

The U.S.C. president has been invited to become an honorary member of the Amateur Fencing League of America. He has also given a cup for the best woman fencer in Southern California. This is to be competed for the early part of December.

This year promises to be one of the best in the history of fencing at the Los Angeles Athletic Club. Both juniors and seniors are larger enrolled and the classes are larger than for any other period. This is largely due, it is said, to the aroused interest among the club members, who see in fencing an opportunity to get the exercise that comes from a few minutes or at the most an hour a day spent in the club gym.

Credit is due President Von KleinSmid for the introduction of fencing into our college courses here in the Southland. Already the [illegible] part of the State [illegible] importance and it [illegible] Southland's prestige [illegible] fore after the [illegible] Uyttenhove.

HIGHEST DAM IN WORLD IS UNDER WAY NEAR AZUSA

Giant Concrete Wall Will Harness Floods and Supply Fertile Valleys With Water

Work on what is to be the highest dam in the world is now actually under way at the Forks on the San Gabriel River about eleven miles northeasterly from Azusa. It will cost about $25,000,000. It will be 492 feet in height and its span will cover a distance of 2200 feet. It will impound 240,000 acre-feet of water creating a lake about ten miles long.

It will stand as a giant concrete wall to do man's bidding and say, on the one side to the raging flood waters of the Sierra Madres, that they may come so far and no farther and, on the other side, that the fertile valleys to the sea may be cultivated in security from either drought or torrent.

When this great project is completed, hundreds of thousands of acres of productive lands will be freed from the ravages wrought periodically by rainstorms over the San Gabriel's headwaters. Time and time again the cloudbursts in the mountains have sent walls of water down the canyon to spread out, sometimes down the Rio Hondo Valley to the Los Angeles River near Long Beach and sometimes down the East San Gabriel River to Alamitos Bay, floods of highly destructive nature.

Not only has great damage and economic loss been inflicted by the floods but precious water that could be turned into wealth has been lost by Los Angeles county to the salty [illegible]

The San Gabriel Dam will hold in storage enough water to cover 240,000 acres one foot deep. It will rise 492 feet above its foundation and will be 2200 feet long. It will rise 430 feet above the stream's bed. The base of the massive concrete wall will cover seven and one-half acres. The cost will be about $25,000,000.

The world's highest dam now is the Arrowrock Dam on the Boise River in Idaho. It is a United States Government dam. It will be dwarfed by the San Gabriel Dam as may be seen from the fact that it is but 1100 feet long, half the length of the San Gabriel Dam, and but [illegible] feet high.

Irrigation experts have figured that the value of the water that can be stored in the reservoir formed by the dam will amount to millions of dollars that will yield a big return on the capital investment.

ELEVENTH, BROADWAY DEAL MADE

Northwest Corner Bought by King C. Gillette from E. M. Nutting at $840,000

At a front-foot value of $4500 the northwest corner of Eleventh and Broadway has been sold by E. M. Nutting to King C. Gillette for $840,000.

The property fronts 188 feet on Broadway and has a depth of ninety feet. It is improved with a one-story structure of minor importance. The deal, which was negotiated by [illegible] Merwin.

The transaction included a one-[illegible] cash payment and the remainder [illegible] of 3280 acres in Santa Barbara and three and a fraction acres in Laughlin Park, Hollywood.

FACT AND COMMENT

Every four minutes a home burns somewhere in the United States. The annual fire loss in residences alone is around $85,000,000. Some one is careless.

According to the statistics of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, in residential losses, 14.4 per cent are caused by exposure under which head are such fires as are due to defective electric wiring, defective flues and such. Sparks on roofs are responsible for 9.1 per cent; lightning to 2.2 per cent and unlearned causes to 26.5 per cent. Fires originating within the home are responsible for the remaining 47.8 per cent.

This throws light on who is careless. Getting back to the beginning of the carelessness we find that a larger percentage of wooden buildings are being erected.

This is so throughout 128 of the large cities. The statistics relative to causes reveal that 41 per cent of the fires could have been prevented by proper construction. Defective flues and defective wiring could have been prevented had the structure been examined by a building inspector when it was being built. Nine per cent could have been avoided had the roofs been properly treated with fire resisting paints.

That would mean a saving annually of some $32,000,000 of the annual fire loss.

We seem to build homes to burn them. But we are going to get over the habit. Too many fires are communicated. We are awakening to that fact. Courts are taking notice. Decisions in many States presage the day in the near future when those responsible for communicated fires will be forced to pay damages.

That is done in many European countries and has been for years. It has made for greater safety there. Per capita fire losses in England are 33 cents, in France, 49 cents, Germany 28 cents, Holland 11 cents but in America $5 per each man, woman and child.

Salesmanship

A recent survey conducted by a local college professor that likes to do that sort of thing has revealed to him that shining lights among Los Angeles real estate salesmen are all characterized by one trait. They are absolutely sold on Los Angeles. Next in importance is the fact that they have the ability to look into the future.

To those two qualities he attributes this success.

The salesman that is sold on his city can't help but become enthusiastic. It is infectious. Listen to him and it begins to take possession of you. His earnestness is convincing. His apparent efforts to be of service, to benefit you, wins him a respectful hearing. Such men as a rule know their goods and naturally are successful.

Firm Reports Wilshire Area Sales Rising

During the last sixty days real-estate activity in the Wilshire and kindred districts has shown a marked upward trend. This information was given out at the office of Ford & Becker, brokers, last week.

"Our total sales over this period amounted to $881,750," Mr. Becker said. "There is considerable demand from eastern folk who are intending to remain in the Southland.

"More than half of the sales we reported were made in apartment properties. Charles A. Keeler, our sales manager, reports a general rising demand for this type of investment."

REALTY HEADS PLAN MEET

Presidents and Secretaries of National Body to Confer at Chicago in November

The committees appointed by the National Board of Presidents and Secretaries of State Associations, and the National Association of Real Estate Boards, have agreed to hold a preliminary conference on State and national relations at Chicago, November 19 and 20.

Their report will be submitted to the national midwinter meeting at Miami in January. The conference was called by A. H. Barnhisel, president of the national board, who acted as chairman of the contracts commitee, which reported at Tulsa last June.

In the call was pointed out the necessity for the State and national organizaiton to get together on a constructive working organic agreement.

Glenn D. Williman, secretary of the national board and delegate from California, is planning to attend the conference, and will return to California in time to present the report to the board of directors meeting at Culver City on November 27.

Mr. Barnhisel has resigned as president of the national board effective at the Chicago conference, and Harry P. Hadfield, vice-president of the national board, will preside over the State associations.

States represented in the conference with the national committee include California, Florida, Illinois, Michigan, Kansas, New Jersey, Ohio, New York, Texas, Wisconsin, and the Pacific Northwest group.

BOARD BIDS FAREWELL TO JEMISON

National Realty Officers Depart for Homes After Visit to Los Angeles

Following a visit of several days with officers and members of the Los Angeles Realty Board, President Robert Jemison and Secretary Herbert U. Nelson of the National Association of Real Estate Boards have returned to their homes in the East, President Jemison going to Birmingham, Ala., and Secretary Nelson to national association headquarters in Chicago.

The two officials, who came to Los Angeles following the convention of the California Real Estate Association at Del Monte, were guests of honor at the last luncheon meeting of the Los Angeles Realty Board, as well as at several dinners given by individual members of the board.

MONTH'S PERMITS TOTAL $9,840,504

Proof that building activities are continuing on a steady even trend is evidenced by the issuance of 748 permits valued at $2,190,491 by the city building department between the 23rd and 29th inst., bringing the month's total to 3445 permits having a valuation of $9,840,504. Permits issued during the corresponding period last month numbered 3260 and represented a building cost of $8,045,606. During a similar interval in October last year a total of 3751 permits having a valuation of $11,217,403 were authorized.

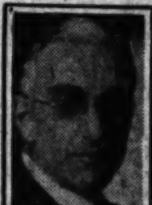
According to the local chapter of the Associated General Contractors the permits issued this year to date number 31,820 and represent an investment of $104,118,364 while during the corresponding interval last year a total of 37,280 permits valued at $126,984,936 were authorized.

MERTEL MADE SECRETARY

Long Beach Realty Man in Field Organizing Salesmen to Get Better Service

The salesmen's division, recently created by the California Real Estate Association at its annual convention, and of which G. D. Robertson of Los Angeles, is general chairman, and Lon J. Haddock, associate chairman, announces the appointment of Ed Mertel, salesmen's director from Long Beach, to act as the field secretary for the division.

Mr. Mertel is now visiting realty boards and assisting them in enrolling their salesmen, both in the board and in the association. The State association hopes in this manner to enable the boards to at least double their membership, increase their local standing, and enhance their board revenues so that greater local board service will result to both brokers and salesmen.



G. D. ROBERTSON

In many of the boards, salesmen are given recognition on the board of directors, and in some cities the salesmen conduct the luncheon meetings of the board.

The State association membership requires the salesmen enrolling to use the Salesmen's Code of Ethics, places him on the roll of the magazine, "California Real Estate," furnishes him with membership credentials, and grants to him the right to use the salesmen's badge, which signifies that he is identified with a recognized public institution.

ED MERTEL

More than 500 salesmen have enrolled in the State association, and more than forty-five boards are represented. President Harry H. Culver has sent a personal letter to each realty board president asking his cooperation, and a letter is going from the association to all of the leading firms employing large numbers of salesmen.

The stabilizing of the business of selling real estate through salesmen representatives, insuring a higher character of service on real-estate investments, is the goal of the State association.

DEMAND FOR HIGH-CLASS HOMES GOOD

Building Company Official Optimistic on Immediate Future of Business

The growing optimism in real estate and business circles for unprecedented building activity this fall is mirrored in a demand for homes of a better type. This is the observation of officials of the Lincoln Mortgage Company, which reports a splendid outlook for business this fall.

J. K. Baillie, vice-president and general manager of the building concern, believes that the spirit of prosperity nullifies any hesitancy in the mind of the man that plans eventually to own his own home.

"Buying a home out of income, as fostered under the Lincoln plan, is without doubt a responsibility," Mr. Baillie said, "but most clear-thinking men also realize that it offers one of the most stable forms of investment, considered solely from the investment viewpoint.

"The general feeling that this season will prove to be more than ordinarily prosperous is certainly one of the chief reasons why so many families are undertaking this enjoyable task of buying their own homes."

PLAYHOUSE COMPLETED

Belasco Theater At Eleventh and Hill to Be Opened to Public Tomorrow Evening

The new Belasco Theater, which cost $1,250,000 including the land, located at Eleventh and Hill, is now completely finished and ready for the opening Monday evening. The architectural and engineering plans for the building were made by Architects Morgan, Walls and Clements with the building contract in charge of the P. J. Walker Company.

Included in the many novel features in the theater is a hydraulic lift orchestra pit and a lighting system by which there is never a shadow on the face of anyone sitting in the auditorium. Also, there is a cooling and ventilating system, by which the fresh air is taken from the roof and drawn out through the floor, enabling the theater managers to govern the temperature of the house to within a fraction of a degree.

The new theater will be operated by Fred J. Butler, Edward Belasco and Gerhold O. Davis, who have leased the playhouse on a long-term contract. The building was constructed through the efforts of E. L. Doheny. The construction work was so nicely timed that the theater was in readiness, the seats in place, and if necessary a performance could have been given yesterday.

The theater will open Monday evening with the scintillating comedy by Anita Loos and John Emerson, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," with a New York cast, especially selected for the Los Angeles premiere by Edgar Selwyn.

Chain Grocery Has Plans for Big Warehouse

W. H. Daum & Staff announced the sale last week of the southwest corner of Central avenue and East Sixtieth street in the Goodyear Tract to Von's Inc., for warehouse purposes. The site has a frontage of 180 feet on Central avenue, with a depth of 158 feet to the Santa Fe Railway company spur tracks.

Including the 200 feet frontage already owned by Von's, this purchase embraces a total of 338x158 feet, or a ground area of 50,480 square feet, all of which is to be covered by the warehouses of the expanding grocery chain, according to the Daum concern.

Charles Von Der Ahe, president, declared that a second unit, 38x158 feet, is to be erected immediately of Class "A" construction. The chain system has expanded to sixty-eight stores in and near Los Angeles. A mark of 100 stores has been set for 1927 expansion, the official said.

INGLEWOOD BOARD WILL HEAR LEWIS

Educational Chairman is to be Guest of Realty Men at Luncheon

INGLEWOOD, Oct. 30.—Harrison Lewis of Beverly Hills, chairman of the educational committee of the California State Real Estate Association, is to be the speaker at next Monday's luncheon of the Inglewood board, it is announced by R. W. Thornton, chairman of the educational committee of the latter organization.

The local board will begin its real-estate course this fall on or about November 8, according to Mr. Thornton. It will probably be held on Monday evenings and at the Queen-street grammar school, as last year, he said.

Frank D. Parent was chairman of the educational committee last year and in charge of the course, which was very successful, both in point of numbers and the fact that it was not confined to real-estate men only. only.

Multiple Lists to be Used by Ventura Board

Present plans, according to T. C. Tychsen of the Ventura Realty Board are for the adoption and use of the multiple listing service beginning November 1.

"Work on the new service has been progressing for some time," he said, "and we feel certain that it will be available to all our members by that time."

DIVOT DIGGERS BARRED

Deer Nor Women Golfers Wearing High-Heeled Shoes to Be Allowed on Golf Course

In spite of the fact that Bert Farrar, president of the Chevy Chase Golf and Country Club, has installed signs fronting the new greens on the recently constructed course reading, "Keep Off," he discovered last week that a herd of wild deer had been making daily pilgrimages to Chevy Chase and had punctured the new soft turf with their sharp pointed hoofs.

Farrar immediately ordered wire fences to be built around the greens, as the four-footed admirers of the new Chevy Chase greens which have recently been seeded with the famous Cocoos Bent grass, the odor of which had attracted the deer, had wrought more damage to the greens than the average human "divot diggers."

There are hundreds of quail and song birds and other wild life in the wooded hills suurounding Chevy Chase which Farrar declares he wishes to preserve. But wild deer and women golfers who wear high-heel golf shoes are tabooed and will be kept off the Chevy Chase greens at all costs, even if drastic measures must be resorted to, he declared.

Architects Here Praised for New Motif

High praise for the architects of Southern California for their originality in the designing of modern buildings is sounded by A. T. Wintersgill, sales manager of Pacific Clay Products, one of the city's leading building material firms.

"A new note has been struck in American architecture," declared Mr. Wintersgill, and the architects of Southern California are largely responsible for the change. A trip through eastern cities makes the fact obvious that the influence of Los Angeles architects is being felt there too.

Night Club is Included in New Hotel

Although the Mayfair Hotel, now nearing completion, at Seventh and Hartford streets already represents an investment of approximately $1,550,000, another $100,000 has been appropriated by the Sun Realty Company, its financial backer, for the creation of another exclusive night club here, according to a report issued late yesterday.

The "Mayfair Night Club," which will be located on the second floor of the hostelry, will be operated in conjunction with the hotel.

LOS ANGELES PERMITS GAIN

City Shows Million-Dollar Increase in Month

Santa Monica in Limelight for Construction

Reports Received from All Parts of Southland

Building permits in Los Angeles show a substantial gain this month over last. The October report of valuations is $9,840,504. September building totaled $8,045,606. Out of fifty-one Southland cities reporting the month's construction to The Times, Twenty-nine show a gain this October over the same month last year.

However, when the first ten months of 1926 are compared with the same period in 1925, the figures show a falling off in general construction. Architects and contractors maintain that the decline is due to a let-up on apartment-house and duplex projects. They look with favor on the turn toward more homes of the single-unit type. Authorities on building here cite a real need for residences on the fronts of lots.

The month's report shows strong activity in Santa Monica. This October $1,954,155 was spent for construction against only $287,568 in the same period last year. To date, 1926, $7,071,669 has been spent against $4,503,363 during the first ten months of 1925.

Other cities showing gains this October over last are San Diego, Glendale, Pasadena, San Bernardino, Ventura, Burbank, Bakersfield, Redlands, Riverside, Inglewood, Compton, San Gabriel, San Dieguito Irrigation District, Culver City, Orange, Arcadia, Lynwood, Fullerton, Corona, Santa Maria, Palos Verdes Estates, Redondo, Colton, Visalia, Manhattan Beach, Calexico and Lindsay.

Though they fail to show increases this October over last, the following cities have had a building increase during the first ten months of this year over the same period last year: Alhambra, Ontario, El Centro, Whittier, Hermosa Beach, Tulare, Covina and Porterville.

SUBDIVIDE LARGE ACREAGE

Miramar Estates Representing Investment of $8,000,000 is to Be Put on Sale Today

The Miramar Estates development, representing an investment of approximately $8,000,000 and located on a high mesa facing Beverly Boulevard at the ocean is to be opened to the public today according to Phil Norton of the Frank Meline Company in charge of the property.

Miramar Estates, consisting of approximately 847 acres of land on Beverly Boulevard, was purchased by Arthur A. Weber, George W. Ley, Edward Haas and associates. The building program, being planned by the Meline organization will mean that when the owners have constructed their residences the investment will run into more than $200,000,000. Perhaps never before in the history of the development of residential estates has there been a more extensive program made for improving property than has been planned for these residential sites, Morton declared. The improvement plans include beautiful parks and parkways with splendid roads following the natural contour of the property, enabling the autoists to make the heights and plateaus in high gear.

The development of the new property is in charge of Mark Daniels, landscape architect, who made a careful study of every part of the property before planning the improvements. One of the striking features in Miramar Estates will be the beautiful and novel landscaping effects. The trees and shrubbery planted will be of the flowering variety. A nursery has already been established at Miramar Estates to form the nucleus from which to secure the shrubbery and trees for planting purposes.

The improvement work has all been planned for permanency, so that at no time in the future will conduits have to be dug up or anything done to mar the natural beauty of the property. From the heights can be seen the center of Los Angeles on the east and the Malibu ranch on the west.

The motorist will be able to reach Miramar Estates by driving out Sunset Boulevard past the Beverly Hills Hotel to where this thoroughfare merges with Beverly Boulevard. This route will take the motorist direct to the property. Miramar Estates can also be reached by the Ocean Highway. Norton's new tract office is located on the Ocean Highway two miles north of Santa Monica Canyon, and from it Miramar Estates is also easily reached.

Survey Near San Fernando is Extended

SAN FERNANDO, Oct. 30.—A surveying crew in charge of H. I. Comley working under the supervision of Alfred Jones, chief deputy county Surveyor, is extending the survey of the proposed mountain road down from the divide of Buck and Pacoima canyons to the floor of the Pacoima Canyon, according to the line of flags which is being staked out. The survey runs up Buck Canyon for a distance of a few miles with slight grade. By means of switchbacks and the general course of contours, the descent into the Pacoima Canyon will be very gradual, plans indicate.

The survey is being conducted as the result of a petition sent in by business men of San Fernando last spring. The proposed road will be a scenic mountain route for tourists. From the point where the survey reaches the Pacoima Canyon floor, parties owning the Indicator, Denver, Chance, Red Ledge and other mines plan to construct a road for bringing out mineral-bearing ores.

San Fernando Improvements Are Outlined

SAN FERNANDO, Oct. 30.—With a $150,000 city sewer system under way and an $80,000 street paving and improvement program on Celis street and Harding avenue, the city of San Fernando is preparing to start another improvement program involving the outlay of $76,000.

It is for paving Kalisher and adjoining streets with an oil macadam surface, according to plans and specifications prepared by City Engineer E. Brooks Currey and approved by the City Council. Concrete sidewalks, curbs and gutters are included in the program on Kalisher street and a storm drain on Workman street.

Engineer Currey is now working on the boundaries of the assessment district, after which bids will be advertised for by the City Council. This program will make the street improvements in San Fernando total over $300,000 the past year.

BRANCH PUBLIC LIBRARY

Plans are being completed for a $25,000 branch public library building to be built at the John C. Fremont Library site, Melrose avenue at June street, for the Board of Library Commissioners. It will be a one-story Spanish-type structure of wood frame and stucco construction and tile roofing.

WIDE SCOPE OF SERVICE IS PLANNED

Building Material Company Official Announces Change of Location

Plans for greatly increased service to lumber purchasers were announced last week by the Whiting Mead Company, which will open a new house-planning and architectural service in conjunction with the transferring of its lumber offices from its manufacturing plants, mills and lumber yard to its general sales offices.

"We feel that in thus concentrating our salesmen in one office together with our newly inaugurated plan and architectural service, we are going to be in a much better position to serve the home builders," said Clyde Owens, manager of the lumber department.

"It is astonishing the vast increase that has taken place in the last few months in the erection of individual residences, a large percentage of which are being built by their owners."

Realty Board to Hear Crail at Noon Meet

Joe Crail, nominee of both the Republican and Democratic parties for Congressman, will be the principal speaker at the second semimonthly luncheon meeting of the Los Angeles Realty Board, to be held this season, it was announced yesterday by President George H. Coffin, Jr. The meeting will be held in the music room of the Biltmore Hotel, Monday noon.

In addition to Mr. Crail's address a program of musical entertainment has been arranged and community singing will be led by Hugo Kirchhofer.

Advance reservations indicate an even larger attendance at this meeting than at the opening session, when nearly 150 realty men were present.

LANDSCAPE PROGRAM TO BE STARTED

Beautifying of Arroyo Seco Expected to Increase Value of Property

The improvement program for beautifying the Arroyo Seco which will shortly be under way, under direction of the Pasadena Park Board, will, according to officials of the Flintridge Sales Company, cause a great enhancement of the value of estate sites in Flintridge Highlands, the new section of Flintridge which was placed on the market two weeks ago.

This improvement program, it is declared, will result in the practical landscaping of the entire Arroyo Seco from the Colorado-street bridge to far above Devil's Gate Dam, where it is proposed to place a lake that will be a part of the Pasadena park system.

The bend of the arroyo extending above Brookside Park, and the Rose Bowl, including the acreage now occupied by the Pasadena public golf course, will, it is expected, be landscaped and placed in such a condition that it will be equal to any of the scenic parks in this part of the country.

A tremendous outlay of money will be necessary to complete this program but it is said that the expenditure will be more than justified in view of the corresponding increase it will cause in the value of adjoining residential property.

STEEL INSPECTION

The Robert W. Hunt Company, inspection engineers, has been retained to perform shop and field inspection of the structural steel for the new National Paper Products Company factory at South Gate, according to word released yesterday.

BOULEVARD PAVING TO BEGIN SOON

County Awards Contract to Construct Part of Whittier-to-Ocean Highway

Construction activities are to start early in November on the Los Angeles portion of East Beverly Boulevard. This boulevard will eventually extend from the city of Whittier westwardly through Montebello and Belvedere and then through the city of Los Angeles to connect with Beverly Boulevard in the proposed Civic Center, thus completing the Whittier-to-Ocean highway.

Contract to construct the county portion, which extends from the westerly boundary line of the city of Montebello west, a distance of about 12,450 lineal feet to Workman Mill Road, has been awarded to Griffith Company, engineering contractors, members of the local Chapter of the Associated General Contractors, at $186,077.16.

The contract provides for construction of a forty-five-foot roadway of eight-inch cement concrete pavement with a two-foot shoulder on each side, thus making a forty-nine-foot boulevard. In connection with this section there will be constructed two bridges and an overhead railroad crossing, but these structures will be built under separate contract.

The general alignment of East Beverly Boulevard in the city of Los Angeles, as shown on the Major Traffic Street Plan, will be eastwardly over the new First-street bridge, then southeasterly to East Fourth street, out East Fourth street to East Third street, then out East Third street to Belvedere.

SIGNS WILL GET POLICE PROTECTION

Realty Board Assured of Co-operation on Halloween

Active co-operation of the police department in preventing the destruction and removal of for-sale signs on vacant property on Halloween was pledged members of the Los Angeles Realty Board in a letter to the board of governors of that organization written by President I. W. Birnbaum of the Police Commission.

The communication, which was in answer to one written to President Birnbaum by Secretary Tom Ingersoll of the realty board, said that all division heads in the police department have been instructed to issue orders to the patrolmen and motorcycle officers under their jurisdiction to exert every effort to the end that property damage and rowdyism are reduced to a minimum on Halloween this year. Day patrolmen and special officers will augment the force, and the prompt arrest of offenders is ordered.

Secretary Ingersoll on behalf of the realty organization also has requested the co-operation of school authorities to eliminate vandalism.

Date Set for Next Brokers' License Test

Applicants for State real estate brokers' licenses who have applied to the commissioner since the last test held in October at the offices of the Los Angeles Realty Board on Flower street will be examined Saturday, November 13, according to an announcement yesterday by Chief Deputy Commissioner Richardson through Secretary Tom Ingersoll of the realty board.

The October examination was taken by 135 men and women, a record number since the inception of the tests, it was announced. There has been some improvement in the results, a larger percentage having obtained the required grade of 70 per cent at the last examination than in those preceding.

Many applications have been received at the commissioner's offices this month, and it is probable that a new record in numbers will be set at this test.

The examination will begin promptly at 10 a.m. and will continue until noon.

Branch Board is Addressed by Rosenthal

Members of the Hollywood branch of the Los Angeles Realty Board were addressed Wednesday at their weekly luncheon meeting at the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce by Bernard Rosenthal, chairman of the open forum committee of the parent organization.

Rosenthal urged the attendance of all branch members at the forum sessions held each Tuesday evening in the board auditorium. He outlined plans for future meetings, and said that those who attended the first session of the season last Tuesday were enthusiastic regarding the program. President George H. Coffin, Jr., also addressed the meeting.

Chairman A. B. Strode, who presided over the largely attended session, announced that the November issue of the Los Angeles Realtor, official magazine of the realty board, will be a Hollywood number. The magazine will contain many articles about Hollywood and will be profusely illustrated with views of that district, Mr. Strode said.

Nine Admitted to Membership in Realty Board

Favorable action by the governing body of the Los Angeles Realty Board at a recent meeting resulted in the admission of nine individuals and firms into membership in the local realty organization.

The new members include A. C. P. Zeuner, Robert Welch, G. H. Houliston, Horace A. Kengel, Miller-Yates & Co., Herbert H. Foster, Bernard J. Wall, Robb J. Rapp and the Angeles Mesa Land Company.

Building Gain in Huntington Beach Reported

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Oct. 23.—Building permits for the first two weeks of this month amounted to $2885,227, it was revealed today by a check of figures at the City Building Inspector's office. Monday was the highest day of the month, with $61,000. A total of sixty-six permits have been issued thus far this month and the building record for the town seems about to be shattered again.

According to Mermin Rosson, City Building Inspector, construction figures will soar again this week when the Standard Oil Company takes out a permit for a gasoline plant, which it is reported will cost $110,000.

HOTEL FOR SAN PEDRO

Plans have been prepared for a four-story hotel and hall building to be built at the southwest corner of Fourth street and Palos Verdes avenue, San Pedro, for the Salvation Army. The structure, estimated to cost $75,000, will of brick construction with pressed brick exterior facing. The first floor will be given over to a large assembly hall, a reading room and several offices, and the upper floors will contain sixty hotel rooms.

APARTMENT PROJECT

A $125,000 apartment building will be built at 1170 South Norton avenue for the Pacific Apartment-Hotel Company. It will rise four stories on a site 60x160 feet and it will contain 110 rooms divided into fifty-six apartments. Brick construction will be employed, the plans reveal, and the exterior will be plastered and trimmed in artificial stone.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

APARTMENTS TO COST MILLION

Three Structures in Same Hollywood Block

All New Buildings Situated on Cherokee Avenue

Housing Facilities Demand to be Relieved

Two large apartment structures within the same block on the same street in the rapidly developing western section of Hollywood, and representing a total investment of $750,000, will be formally opened within thirty days, and the work of laying brick for a third apartment building in the same district and which will cost $300,000, was started last week, according to the contractor, Samuel F. Bard & Co.

One of the structures, located at 1830 Cherokee avenue and being built for Marion P. Raab at a cost of $350,000, will be opened this week.

It is a five-story structure containing seventy-three apartments. The one at 1746 Cherokee avenue is also being built for Marion P. Raab at a cost of $400,000 and will be ready for occupancy within thirty days. It is a four-story building. Both structures are of Class B construction with steel frames, and their completion is expected to answer a strong demand for apartment facilities in the Highland-avenue district of the film metropolis.

The third apartment-house, which will be completed within six months in the same district, is rising at 1842 Cherokee avenue and will cost $300,000. It is being built for Daniel D. Rosengarten, will be five stories high, of Class B construction, steel and brick. The laying of brick was started last week. The building will be 40 by 163 feet, and will contain [illegible]30 rooms divided into fifty apartments.

The three projects are being financed by the American Mortgage Company, according to the contractor, and are two blocks north of Hollywood Boulevard and three blocks west of Highland avenue.

Building Gain in Huntington Park is Cited

HUNTINGTO NPARK, Oct. 30.—Building permits for the month of October this year will be around $170,000 in valuations, according to figures which were estimated at the office of the building inspector yesterday. The valuations for September of the present year reached only $96,920, and for October of last year the total reached $90,955.

Beautifying of District to be Continued

Many Street Improvements Are Projected

BY AN OBSERVER

Girard, center in western San Fernando Valley, is anticipating a development involving approximately 30,000 acres, according to reports issued from the offices of Victor Girard yesterday.

Walnut Acre Farms, comprised of the territory surrounding the town of Girard, is the first of a series of supporting tracts, Mr. Girard said. The report indicates that a large part of this land is within the city limits of Los Angeles. Many ranch sites in this tract have been purchased, homes erected, and crops planted.

Following out the plan used in building Girard, the new tracts will be given all possible beautifying features, the subdivider continued. Many trees and park features have been incorporated in the town of Girard.

PARK IDEA

As corelated with this basic park idea, Mr. Girard is planning his back-country development along the lines of intensification of production since he believes that a family can make just as good a living from one acre very carefully cultivated as from ten or twenty acres cropped only once a year in a cheap way.

It is through this intensive cultivation of acerage and beautification of the residential sections that the community of western San Fernando Valley is to be built up to a largely populated suburban city, with highly productive acre farms in the outskirts and a business district which shall supply the needs of near-by residents and the transient traffic which uses the great motor highways of Ventura Boulevard, Mulholland High Way, Topanga Canyon drive, Topanga avenue, Sherman Way and the feeding arteries which cross these major boulevards.

"That the district is capable of producing all manner of fruits, nuts, vegetables and agricultural products was indicated when the Western San Fernando Valley Farm Bureau Center won first prize with its exhibit at the Los Angeles County Fair at Pomona recently. More than fifteen substantial products of the district were shown, including walnuts, baby lima beans, alfalfa, persimmons, kadota figs, avocados, apricots, grapes, peaches, oranges, lemons, eggs, rabbit furs, melons etc. Most of these are produced in large quantities," Mr. Girard declared.

"The plans for new highways are part of the major traffic scheme of the City Planning Commission and are extensive enough to provide facilities for all residents of the district and also take care of the large transient travel which visits points of interest.

HIGHWAY WORK

"Ventura Boulevard is being widened in many sections and will eventually be widened from the Ventura county line to Cahuenga Canyon. Topanga Canyon Drive is being rebuilt from Girard to the top of the pass and is to be repaired all the way to the sea. Topanga avenue is to be paved from Ventura Boulevard to Chatsworth and then be carried over the mountains to Saugus. Vanowen street has recently been paved its entire length east and west in the valley. Saticoy street, paralleling it, is about to be paved. Roscoe Boulevard is to be pushed through as soon as possible, as is Victory Boulevard; Canoga avenue is to be repaired soon; Fallbrook is to be widened and paved; Devonshire is in line for improvement; then there is a plan to run an arm of Mulholland High Way northward to circle Chatsworth reservoir which is to be surrounded by a park if the Planning Commissions recommendations are carried out.

"These are only a part of the road plans as all subdivisions are adding streets for use of their residents. In all these sections where new roads or highway improvements are to be put in there are residential activities which will make use of them locally, but by far the largest need for their existence is the travel from all over the northern part of the county and particularly from the congested areas of Los Angeles. Not only do the motorists enjoy the drives but they are selecting these routes to look over the country as possible future residences.

"All the towns of that section are thriving, Owensmouth, Chatsworth, Calabasas, Zelzah, Reseda and others, as well as Girard, reporting increases in building and population. This district may be taken as an example of other communities building up in and around Los Angeles, which are adding to Los Angeles' growth," Mr. Girard concluded.

RUSH WORK ON POULTRY FARM UNITS

Modern One; Incubators Owensmouth Plant is to be to Have Large Capacity

Construction work at Fishel's Poultry Farm and Fishel's Income Poultry Homes, Owensmouth, has assumed large proportions during the past week or ten days, according to officials of the Pacific Investment Company, sponsors of these projects.

"The large structure that will house the mammoth incubators, upon which the work of construction commenced less than two weeks ago, is rapidly nearing completion," said Ralph L. Foehl, sales manager of Pacific Investment Company. "The two huge incubators, each with a capacity of 47,300 eggs, will be ready for installation immediately upon their arrival from Cleveland, O. Brooder houses and other structures that comprise a thoroughly up-to-date poultry plan will be rushed to completion, so that in a very short time Edward B. Fishel, actively in charge of the business, will have the plant in operation."

"Sales of Fishel income poultry homes continue unabated," Foehl said. "We have established what I believe is a record in selling twenty-three of our homes, totaling more than $200,000. The first five of these homes and poultry units are now under construction and will be completed within the next ten weeks. The building schedule for homes already sold provides for the completion of twenty units before January 1."

Zeiss Company Coast Offices in Los Angeles

Confirmation that Los Angeles had been selected as the Pacific Coast headquarters of Carl Zeiss, Inc., world's oldest and largest manufacturers of optical instruments and lenses, was received in a comunication last week by R. D. Sangster, manager of the industrial department of the Chamber of Commerce. Quarters were leased at 728 South Hill street through the W. Ross Campbell Company.

Los Angeles was chosen as the logical distributing point for the Zeiss products by William Hartman, Pacific Coast representative for the company, who spent several months in making surveys of the coast cities in Oregon, Washington and California. After visiting the principal points on the Coast, Mr. Hartman declared that the branch would be located in Los Angeles.

Unique Block Projected for Beverly Hills

A building that is a departure in conception and design is about to be erected for Leland P. Reeder, realty man of Beverly Hills, at 321 North Beverly Drive, according to a report issued by Mr. Reeder yesterday.

It is to be known as the Padway Mortgage Building, and is to house this company in one-half of the ground floor. Other offices will be available on the ground floor. The second floor will contain a patio or open court with stores arranged in a square around it.

Commerce Body in Inglewood Has Air Chief

INGLEWOOD, Oct. 30.—Inglewood Chamber of Commerce keeps up with or ahead of the times by authorizing its president, Sanford M. Anderson, to appoint an aviation committee to handle all matters pertaining to flying fields, proposed local ordinances regulating aviation, and other matters pertaining thereto, according to a report released yesterday.

Lieut. B. B. Donnelly, U.S.N., chief of the Parachute Division of the naval flying field at North Island, San Diego, has declared the Inglewood field strategically situated for a great metropolitan airport serving Los Angeles.

PRUNE PRICES LOWER

TULARE, Oct. 30.—Prune prices are in general ½ cent lower this year than last. Officials of the California Prune and Apricot Growers' Association report that 38,000,000 more pounds of prunes will be in the market this year than in 1925.

Women Realty Students in Suburban City

HUNTINGTON PARK, Oct. 30.—The realty class in Huntington Park has started with twenty-six members, sessions meeting every Tuesday night at the Huntington Park Union High School, with Robert B. Williams as head of the class. Of this number there are ten who are women, some of them being already engaged in the real estate business.

PLANT PURCHASED

HUNTINGTON PARK, Oct. 30.—Grant Parker, who was formerly with the Axelson Machine Company, and George DeBolde have recently purchased the old Vernon foundry on Twenty-sixth street, near Santa Fe avenue, and have opened the concern as the Eureka Foundry and Pattern Company.

City Hall to be Highest Unit Built in West

Comparison of the Smith Building in Seattle with the new Los Angeles City Hall sets the latter aside as the tallest structure west of Chicago, according to officials of the Baker Iron Works, supplying elevator equipment for the municipal enterprise here.

"The Smith Building rises 455 feet," they declared, "while the City Hall will be 480 feet high. The Smith Building has often been spoken of as the tallest in the West."

Eleven elevators and one dumb waiter are included in the contract recently awarded the Baker Iron Works, it is said. Architects Albert C. Martin, John C. Austin, and John Parkinson were associated in designing the City Hall.

Work to Start on Addition to Pasadena Block

Construction activities will start at once on a $25,000 addition to public garage at 329 West Colorado street, Pasadena, for the Carmelita Parking Company. Contract to build the addition has been awarded to William C. Crowell, a member of the local chapter of the Associated General Contractors.

Stone-tile construction will be employed for the walls and partitions, according to Architect Frederick H. Kennedy, and the roof will be of all-steel construction to assure an absolutely fire-proof garage.

Two Boards Ask Directorate to Meet in Cities

The Culver city Realty Board, through President Carl A. Jensen, and the Bakersfield Realty Board, through President R. E. Cady, have invited the California Real Estate Association board of directors to meet in their cities, the Culver City meeting to be November 27, and the Bakersfield meeting next spring at the new El Tejon Hotel.

The Culver City meeting will give a large part of its time to legislative matters, and the directors and wives will visit the studios in the afternoon, according to present plans.

Del Mar

DEL MAR is beginning one of the most sensational seashore developments in the history of the Pacific Coast! In the past five months all sales records at Del Mar have been shattered!

Business men, bankers and home seekers appreciate that this is a finished community of world-wide reputation, yet with all the advantages that will provide spectacular profit to owners. Over a million dollars' worth of homes built—$519,000 improvement budget for 1926-7. Private golf course—fishing pier—bridle paths—magnificent Hotel Del Mar.

It is very important that you secure your share of this high class property NOW! The owners of Del Mar have established a schedule of prices for all varieties of lots unequalled on the Coast for property of this sort. You are actually buying at prices which prevailed five years ago. The reason for this is to build quickly a thriving community among people of moderate means as well as those who now own costly estates.

Give Del Mar your careful consideration. Go to your banker or to any business man and he will tell you that Del Mar is owned by one of the oldest and most conservative land companies in the West. Statements appearing over their signature can be relied upon and when they say that prices are far below normal, it is the truth!

In order to help you secure your homesite at Del Mar, very attractive terms have been provided. As an example of what you may expect in prices, here are a few—Beach lots $1500—large Palisade lots $1750—wooded Canyon Estates $2500—Ridge sites (very large) $3000.

Remember—all are OPENING PRICES which will be advanced in the very near future. Make your selection NOW, before they go up!

Write for illustrated Del Mar booklet—or better still; plan a trip to Del Mar—105 miles South of Los Angeles on Coast Highway—and see the "specials" set aside for the coming week.

POULTRY CENTER FORESEEN

Experts Declare Southern California Will Become Largest Producer in World

Southern California is destined to become the largest poultry center in the world, according to Fontana Farms officials.

This conclusion is based by experts on the performance of "Queen of Fontana" who in five years of production ran up a total of 1174 eggs, laying the last one Monday, the day she died.

The passing of Queen started Edward J. Hauser and T. J. Conway, poultry authorities in charge of the big Fontana Farms plant to figure on the significance of her world record-breaking feat of 1167 eggs laid in five years. Since the average laying life of a hen in commercial poultry plants is only two years with an average production of less than 270 eggs, Queen's record not only demonstrates the value of proper breeding and care, but also proves the importance of the climatic factor in prolonging the useful life of chickens, they disclose.

"Undoubtedly a goodly share of the credit for the performance of Fontana Queen is due to the invigorating effect of Southern California's mild, equitable climate which enables poultry to thrive and remain strong despite huge egg production," Mr. Hauser said yesterday.

"If the right kind of breeding will produce a strain of White Leghorn hens that will have a laying period of three instead of two years in the Southern California climate, that during their life will produce more than 400 instead of less than 300 eggs, the Southland is destined to become the great poultry center in the country. The Fontana Farms have proven it is possible under conditions prevailing in that community to produce hens that will lay 1000 eggs in less than five years.

GYMNASIUM CONTRACT LET

VENTURA, Oct. 30.—Contract to build a one-story addition to the girls' gymnasium building of the Ventura Union High School has just been awarded to P. A. Belanger of Los Angeles. Plans drawn by Architects John C. Austin and Frederic M. Ashley, also of Los Angeles, reveal that the addition will cost $21,692. Wigton & Noyes have been awarded the plumbing contract at $4555.

EDUCATION FAVORED BY REALTY MEN

Beverly Hills Members in Two Classes; Enrollment in State Doubles Record

Interest among realty men of Beverly Hills in the educational courses given by the University of Southern California in conjunction with the California Real Estate Association has resulted in two classes being formed, one in land economics and another in technical land appraisals, according to Harrison Lewis, director. He said that enrollment is double that of any recent year. Harry Kennedy and Fred Rockett are the respective class leaders.

That the State educational committee and its allied members are functioning efficiently is evidenced by the reports of new educational classes being formed in various sections of the State. Among the newest classes organized are: Fullerton with twenty-two members. E. P. Elliott, president of the board is class leader. Bakersfield also reports a large registration. R. Y. Burum is class leader. Santa Rosa also reports an enrollment of fifteen. G. L. Ayers was chosen class leader.

The second educational class in real estate given through the offices of the Contra Costa Board of Realtors will be started in Martinez this week, according to announcement made by C. A. Bicks, chairman of the educational committee of the county board.

FINDS PLAY AREA VITAL TO BUYERS

Child Fnal Arbiter in Lot Child Final Arbiter in Lot Lawyer Declares

Women decide most of the buying of real estate but children are the final arbiters in 90 per cent of the cases, declares Don K. Lawyer, sales manager of Palos Verdes Estates, who has spent most of his business career in developing home communities.

"When the woman of the family makes the decision she has her children uppermost in her mind," says Mr. Lawyer, "and unless careful thought has been given by the community developer to the interests of the children the project can not be a success.

"This fact has been proved time and time again in our experience at Palos Verdes Estates. And all of the evidence has been on the positive or affirmative side, for special provision was made in the laying out of Palos Verdes Estates for wholesome activity by the growing generation.

"Practically one-fourth of the developed portion of Palos Verdes Estates was dedicated to public use in the form of parks, beaches, parkways and school grounds. The Palos Verdes plan calls not for one or two large parks but dozens of them, located in such a way that no child needs walk more than a block or two for plenty of open space for recreation."

FEED MIXING PLANT AT MAYWOOD READY

MAYWOOD, Oct. 30.—The California Cotton Oil Company has completed its new $60,000 feed-mixing plant on East Slauson avenue and Laguna Boulevard, in the Maywood-Bell industrial district. It is declared that the storage bin, stockyards and other equipment will care for 2000 head of cattle. The concern occupies seven acres of ground.

Starting monday November 1st

in Venice

NEW BUSINESS DISTRICT

Every lot in this entire tract goes up in price 10% or more next Monday morning.

This is our first price raise. We are FORCED to make it because of the rapidly rising value of this property. In fact all surrounding property has greatly increased in value since the completed plans for this development were announced.

Imagine the effect that has already been caused by this NEW, MODERN, and ADEQUATE business district suddenly made available in the exact center of Venice—Los Angeles' own beach city—chosen by the City Planning Commission and the Playground Commission for intensive development as the great recreational beach center of Los Angeles.

Then look ahead and see what MUST happen to property values in this tract, where every future builder of a hotel, office building, store building, market or garage in Venice will inevitably wish to locate.

THIS IS THE LAST CHANCE to buy here at opening prices and thus get FULL BENEFIT of the profitable rise in values that is now occurring.

Improvements are well under way—the district will soon be ready for the first downtown buildings—NOW is the time to BUY!

OPERATES FARM DAY AND NIGHT

Eastern Mexico Sees Modern American Methods

Three Shifts Run Tractors Twenty-four Hours

Natonal Land Policy Aid to Agriculture

TAMPICO (Mex.) Oct. 30.—Farming twenty-four hours a day, with three tractor crews dividing the twenty-four hours into eight-hour shifts, is the latest American innovation in Eastern Mexico, and has the natives of Tamaulipas rubbing their eyes.

They had heard that over on the west coast, especially around Los Mochis, the Americans used airplanes to spray their tomato fields and that some fields had been seeded for other crops by aerial planters, but they took those stories with a grain of salt. Now, however, with the chugging of farm tractors throbbing in their ears all night, they are willing to believe anything.

Indications that no more denouncements of land are to be permitted for the present under the agrarian law have caused agricultural development to take a new spurt here. In a number of cases lately efforts to denounce land under the agrarian law have been unsuccessful because the Mexican national Department of Agriculture has frowned on them, and this is taken as indicating a change of policy which will either nullify or greatly limit agrarista operations.

SECOND POLICY

The Department of Agriculture has, it is said, become worried by the decreased production resulting from practically every seizure by agaraistas of lands hitherto privately developed, and also to take the ground that if the new colonization law is to be a a national benefit it must in effect nullify the more dangerous features of the agrarian law.

If the belief is confirmed, and assurances are given that those who plant crops now may rest secure from agrarista confiscation, a season of widespread agricultural development is about to begin. Some shipments of seeds, intended for Jalisco and other Western States, are being detained here, pending more definite information.

One hundred and twenty tons of seed potatoes have been received here from the United States and France, and potato growing on a large scale will be undertaken for the first time in this area, although for years potatoes have been grown successfully around Guadalajara and lately experiments with potatoes in the new irrigated areas of Sonora have resulted in extremely heavy production of perfect tubers.

MODERN METHODS

In fact, potatoes seem exceptionally adapted to the soil and climate of most of Mexico, which are similar to those of Peru, where "Irish" potatoes first were discovered, but heretofore they have not been extensively cultivated for the reason that the Mexicans do not care greatly for them, and will eat none but the very small ones.

But the American and other foreign colonists on both the east coast and the west coast, that look to the export market rather than to the local market, have been quick to see in potatoes a source of high profits. The big, fine potatoes the Mexicans won't touch are as essential a staple as sugar in the United States.

W. B. Kaelin, one of the principal importers of seed potatoes here, is operating tractors day and night to put in an immense crop of them at Hacienda San Pedro, in the State of Tamaulipas. He also is using automatic planters and fertilizing machines and will use four-row sprayers Several other large haciendas, both American-owned and Mexican-owned, are planting potatoes also. It is believed the large American and English colony in Tampico will make it easy to sell the entire crop locally.

Modern agricultural enterprises are increasing so in this territory that the Universal Motors Company has leased 1000 acres of land near Tampico, on which it will demonstrate modern agricultural machinery and farming methods. It is understood here that similar experiment stations will be established in Central Mexico and on the west coast, althrough in the latter area so much modern farm machinery already is in use, especially in the Yaqui Valley and around Los Mochis, that practically every big hacienda is a demonstration station.

EAST SIDE TRACT PUT ON MARKET

Bandini Business District Draws Large Throng; Sale to Continue Half Month

Bandini business frontage to the amount of $250,000 was placed on sale yesterday by the J. B. Ransom Corporation, developers of Bandini and other important tracts located immediately east of Los Angeles.

Many prospective investors were on hand at the opening sale yesterday, and many others are expected to visit Bandini today to purchase business frontage in the East Side industrial zone. The sale will continue for fifteen days.

One of the outstanding features in connection with this sale is the fact that Bandini's business center, though right at present in the early stage of development, is located where five major-traffic arteries come together, the more important being Atlantic Boulevard, the East Ninth-street-Anaheim-Telegraph Road, and Eastern avenue, the last-named artery, when completed, to be known as the Western avenue of the East Side. Another converging highway, already an established fact, is Astor avenue.

ALHAMBRA CHAMBER VISITS INDUSTRIALS

ALHAMBRA, Oct. 30.—In its program to acquaint its membership and the general public with the industrial life of the city the Alhambra Chamber of Commerce today led a trip of inspection through the new plant of the Alhambra Creamery Company, where the various operations of the concern were explained to a large number of visitors. Secretary P. C. Davis and other Chamber of Commerce officials had charge of the party. Other industrial plants will be inspected from time to time, it was announced.

First Baptist Church

Finished Soon

Now nearing completion at Westmoreland and Leeward avenue, this edifice is the future home of the First Baptist Church of Los Angeles. The structure was designed by Allison & Allison, architects.

EDIFICE NEAR COMPLETION

Novel ideas in concrete construction in the form of a 150-foot tower and an unique exterior finish are being incorporated in the palatial edifice to be the home of the First Baptist Church, at Leeward and Westmoreland avenues, now being rushed to completion, according to yesterday's report.

The building, to cost approximately $600,000, is of Class-A concrete construction throughout and covers an area of approximately 91,000 square feet. The edifice is being erected by Weymouth Crowell Company, using Union Rock materials, from plans drawn by Allison & Allison, architects.

TELEPHONE ADDITIONS

PORTERVILLE, Oct. 30.—Additions are being made to the switchboard of the Porterville telephone exchange to care for future growth of the city. One hundred new lines are being added. E. C. Otto and G. H. Provence of the Sacramento office of the company are here doing the work.

MINERAL SURVEY

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 30. — Kern county led all valley counties in the production of minerals during 1925 while the San Joaquin Valley's mineral output amounted to one-fourth of that of the State, according to a report including fifty-five different mineral substances found in California.

POULTRYMEN CO-OPERATE

Project at Pomona Promises to Inject New Element Into Southland Industry

POMONA, Oct. 30.—With actual construction work starting in November, interest of Southland poultrymen is manifest in the launching of the California Centralized Poultry Farms with subsequent development work now being carried out on the extensive Phillips estate south of this city.

With thirty-six five-acre units, each improved with modern dwellings, and modern poultry plants fully stocked combined under the central-plant system, the project promises to inject a new element into the poultry industry in this section.

Under the detailed plans which have been extensively worked out, the central plant will provide the breeding of all birds, supervision and culling of laying flocks, all incubation, care of the total egg output and cold-storage facilities, will take care of the brooding of chicks to twelve weeks old, when they will be turned over to the unit holders, and in addition will provide all green feed and the cultivation of all crops incidental to the project.

Under the central-plant system a board of governors will purchase in carload quantities direct from the producers all feed, straw, oyster shell and such necessary. The project will have its own sales force and be able to ship in carload lots to markets of its choosing.

Development plans will be continued until each unit is stocked with a minimum of 6000 White Leghorn laying hens. When fully developed the thirty-six-unit project will have a total of 216,000 birds, while the central plant will contain 108,000 breeding and commercial birds in reserve.

In addition to all these features, the enterprise will be a community within itself with clubhouse, dormitory, swimming pool, etc., within its confines. It will be a restricted residential community adjoining this city at its southern limits.

Sales in the enterprise are being handled by the Centralized Agricultural Enterprises, a subsidiary of the California Centralized Poultry Farms, with E. M. how to go Drive over Cahuenga Pass to Ventura Blvd., out Ventura to Sepulveda. Watch for Edwards & Wildey signs at that corner—turn right on Sepulveda and drive through to Chatsworth Blvd., turn left on Chatsworth and drive to Granada, about two miles west.

SENSATIONAL increases in values can be expected at Granada. It is located inside the city limits of Los Angeles, has the advantage of city conveniences and is only a short distance by auto from the metropolitan business district. Those in close touch with the development of the San Fernando Valley are convinced that highly fertile and producing acreage, such as can be had now at Granada, will more than double in value in the near future. Don't miss THIS opportunity.

Remember, Granada has 1000 acres of citrus groves, from two to nine years old. You can buy a producing Valencia orange grove estate, from 3 to 6 or more acres in size, the income from which will help pay for the land. Or you can buy a half-acre or a one-acre estate, planted to 2-year-old orange trees, and by intercropping you can realize an income while waiting for your trees to come into bearing. By proper selection and rotation, you can grow three highly profitable crops a year. Our experts will be pleased to advise you.

THE best of improvements are being installed, including good streets and sidewalks, water, gas, electricity. No new community in the Los Angeles area ever was started with better possibilities for handsome profits by early investors than Granada. Location and environment are ideal. A large producing section already is established. The valley land and sloping hillsides form a natural setting for a community of happy and prosperous people. Select YOUR Estate NOW.

See Granada at once. Analyze the situation for yourself. Keep in mind that Los Angeles is growing at the rate of 100,000 new people a year. Outlying sections of today will be close-in sections of tomorrow. Paved boulevards and automobiles diminish distance. Suburban homesites as close in as Granada soon will be at a premium. Metropolitan Los Angeles is reaching into and over-running the great San Fernando valley. The onward movement cannot be stopped. Are you going to sit still and let THIS opportunity pass you by?

SUBDIVIDE LANDS FOR FUR FARMS

Manager Outlines Plans of Company Marketing Modern Rabbit Ranches

Recognizing the importance of co-operation and expert supervision in the successful raising and marketing of fur rabbits, the developers of Sparriand are building a community of small ranches where every resident will devote the greater part of his time to caring for a herd of these prolific fur-bearers.

A huge ranch of 3000 acres is being cut into tracts of approximately two and one-half acres and on each of these units a modern home and full equipment for raising fur rabbits are to be installed, according to Ralph Jamieson, general manager of Sparriand Realty Company, developers of this big project.

"It is our intention to make of Sparriand the world's largest community of rabbit ranches, where the best breeds of fur rabbits will be raised under the eye of experienced men and where a co-operative plan of marketing meat and furs in large quantities has been worked out," Mr. Jamieson said. "We plan to ship furs to the eastern markets by the carload, insuring top prices to the rabbit raisers.

"Sixty-two families have purchased model units at Sparriand in the past thirty days. We expect to have a score or more of homes completed and ready for occupancy within a month.

"Sparriand was opened to the public on September 26. Since that time our sales have reached a total of approximately $300,000, an average of about $10,000 a day."

CALIFORNIA RICE

MERCED, Oct. 30.—Porcasts place California second in production among the rice-growing States for the coming year, although California is but fourth in acreage.

HOSTELRY ADDITION READY

A new one-story hotel building approximately 300x160 feet, rectangular in shape and Spanish in style, has recently been finished and is now a part of the Desert Inn in Palm Springs.

The addition includes a lobby, a dining-room, a kitchen equipped to supply 1500 guests, an ice plant, a bake shop, a boiler room, a grocery and storeroom and public and private offices.

The building was constructed by Ernest Thompson of Beaumont at a cost of $250,000, exclusive of furnishings, it is said.

Lindsay Area Road Repair is Under Way

LINDSAY, Oct. 30.—The road-repair crew of District No. 1, Tulare county, has spread 170 cars of decomposed granite on roads leading into Lindsay, and an additional fifty cars are being unloaded at Strathmore for distribution over roads in that section. The cars average fifty tons each, so that the highways of the Lindsay-Strathmore district will receive 1100 tons of gravel covering before the winter rains set in.

This road material comes from a big pit owned by District 1 at Globe.

ORANGE COVE PROSPERS

ORANGE COVE, Oct. 30.—Orange Cove, one of the sheltered settlements in the foothills of Tulare county, is enjoying a period of prosperity. Four packing plants are now in operation packing grapes from the district. The new O. H. Williams plant, built this year, is doing a large shipping business. H. H. Bennett is superintendent.

Besides raising a large amount of table grapes, this district is also noted for its superior oranges. Each year it sends out a considerable pack of navels and Valencias.

Grain and other produce are raised in large quantities. This year's harvest shows about 50,000 sacks of barley and wheat.

Another important industry is the poultry business, ranchers adding this feature to their well-established diversity.

The prosperity found in agricultural lines is reflected in increased business and general advancement.

MORE PASS IN REALTY QUIZ

Board Examination Failures Decrease Approximately 10 Per Cent

At the August examination of applicants for realty broker licenses, Commissioner Gabbert announced that the percentage of failures was reduced to 31 per cent, as compared with a previous mark of 40 to 45 per cent. The State Real Estate Department conducts examinations each month for all applicants for licenses.

Lemon Company in San Fernando Builds Addition

SAN FERNANDO, Oct. 30.—The San Fernando Heights Lemon Company is completing a new unit, an 80x172-foot building, which will increase the space of the main floor and basement to a total of 130,560 square feet, according to Herbert S. Sykes, manager. Cost of the new addition, including equipment, is $40,000, which brings the investment over $100,000.

The storage capacity will now be 150 carloads of lemons, or 60,000 packed boxes, representing about 10 per cent of the holdings of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, in the lemon department of the industry, declared Mr. Sykes.

A total of 315 men and women are required in the packing-house and the field for four months of the year, the weekly pay roll being about $6000. At present five carloads of lemons are going into cold storage daily and three cars per day are being shipped to various markets. A carload of cull fruit is being shipped every day to the by-products plant at Corona where lemon oil and citric acid are manufactured. Over 3000 tons have been shipped to the by-products plant so far this year.

REDLANDS PURCHASE

REDLANDS, Oct. 30.—A. M. Holder has just made the purchase of the corner lot, at Cypress and Cajon, opposite the Kingsbury school, and plans to erect a grocery-store building. It will be of stucco and of a design pleasing to the property that is built in that section.

VISION URGED FOR SALESMEN

Psychologist Talks Before Hollywood Board

Realty Men Cited Value of Foreseeing City

Benefiting Buyer Declared Key to Success

The power of visualization as related to successful salesmanship, was the subject of an address by Griffith Jones, Los Angeles attorney and psychologist, before the Hollywood branch, Los Angeles Realty Board, recently. Mr. Jones said in part:

"The first thing essential to salesmanship is an ability to visualize. Hollywood is a beautiful city of homes, because those that founded it formed a clear vision of what they desired, and Hollywood is going to be, in the years to come, what you gentlemen visalize in your own minds.

"If a man sells merely for his commission he will not be blessed with continued prosperity. A man to be a permanent success in the real-estate business, must be firmly convinced that he is benefiting the buyer. You men in Hollywood have some wonderful advantages. When you ask a man to invest his money in this community you can conscientiously do so.

"You should feel sorry for the prospective buyer if he is not quick to grasp the fact that you are offering him a home in one of the most select communities in the world; in a place known in every corner of the world; in a locality which offers for his wife and children every literary, educational and enjoyable opportunity.

"It is not only necessary to visualize the beauty and merits of the property you are trying to sell, but you should visualize the additional success that property will bring to the purchaser.

"Enthusiasm is absolutely essential to the life of a salesman. You realtors in Hollywood should make a sincere effort to keep recharging your systems with enthusiasm. There is an old religious song entitled, 'Count Your Many Blessings.' I tell you to count the blessings of a person living in Hollywood. Keep in touch with the improvements being made, the industries started and enlarged, educational advantages and other countless blessings of a Hollywood citizen. Keep in mind the picture of a great and glorious community, and in this way the fame of Hollywood will continue to spread with the result that hundreds of thousands of others will be able to share in your happiness and you will be rewarded for your sincere efforts."

GOOD MART FOR GROVES OF ORANGES

Realty Demand at Glendora Reflected by Deals in Lots and Citrus Lands

GLENDORA, Oct. 30.—One of the oldest [illegible] Glendora groves has been sold recently by E. E. Gard to John Sandiland of Long Beach. The property which is twenty acres of Valencias in full bearing is located on South Grand avenue and is improved by one of the most beautiful residences in the Glendora district. Local packinghouse records show that the grove has brought Mr. Gard a return of $86,000 in the past six years. The selling price was $72,500.

G. H. Pflueger has sold to Henry Kisling five acres of lemon grove and a small dwelling at the Foothill Boulevard and Loraine avenue for $15,000.

Anne S. Kisling has sold to George Lange of Los Angeles a ten-acre orange and lemon grove and residence at North Pennsylvania and Leodora avenues. The price was $22,500.

Three lots and four cottages at the corner of Wabash and Whitcomb avenues have been bought by E. S. Stucker from Anne S. Kisling for a $10,000 consideration.

Among those who have purchased homes in the Wildwood Park subdivision on the Foothill Boulevard within the past few days are Mrs. Fred Maine of Puente and George W. Davis.

Ground Broken at Oxnard for Bank Building

OXNARD, Oct. 30.—Construction work has just been started on a one-story $125,000 building for the Bank of A. Levy, Inc., which is destined to be one of the finest small structures in this vicinity, it was announced today by H. A. Nichols, general contractor of Los Angeles. Site for the building, which is 50 by 130 feet in size, is at Fifth and A streets here.

Exterior walls will be faced with granitex terra cotta to be furnished by Gladding, McBean & Co., the contractor said. Morgan, Walls & Clements, Los Angeles architects, prepared plans for the new private bank building, completion of which is scheduled for the latter part of February. Construction will be of brick and concrete and the interior will be elaborately decorated. J. A. Levy is president of the bank.

Home Started in Huntington Park Each Day

HUNTINGTON PARK, Oct. 30.—The one-new-residence-a-day move in this city is keeping up its record, started several months ago, seven permits being issued for new homes in the past week.

Mrs. Margaret Howarh has taken permits to build two new residences and garages on South Hood street each to cost $3100; Harry W. LaFetra has started building a home at 327 South Arbutus street, to cost $3700; Lester Gerwig is erecting a new residence at 504 South Cedar street, to cost $4000; W. L. Light has started construction on a $2700 home at 483 South Arbutus street; C. R. Hildon is erecteing a new $4000 residence at 528 South Cedar street, and Alice M. Roberson is remodeling the residence at 541¼ South Stafford street at a cost of $2400.

PASADENA HAS WIDE ADVANCE

Civic Center Project Near Completion

City Hall and Library Are Being Built

Hotel Owners Predict Big Tourist Era

BY WILLIAM J. PRINGLE, JR.

With Pasadena's long awaited Civic Center nearing completion a city plan actually in execution, and many new business and fine residence structures under way, the last ten months are counted as important in the Crown City's growth and development.

A new library is nearing completion at a cost exceeding $1,000,000. The City Hall, involving construction estimated at $1,200,000, is progressing with rapidity.

The city plan was conducted by Bennett, Parsons, and Frost, planners that arranged the Chicago development outline, according to reports here. Many street improvements have been undertaken at their suggestion.

Pasadena hotels report that last winter was the busiest season ever experienced. Tourist trade exceeded all other years, and it is declared by hotel authorities here th . the 1927 season will set a new high mark.

BOUNDED ACHIEVEMENT

Schools, hotels, business projects, industries, churches, homes, scientific institutions, theaters and civic and community organizations are all prominently represented in the varied development activities.

Among the most readily apparent examples of growth and extension of activities within the city is in the educational, scientific and cultural fields. The California Institute of Technology, headed by Dr. Robert A. Millikan, and the Mt. Wilson Observatory of the Carnegie Institute of Washington are world-famous centers of scientific research whose laboratories draw the leading scientists of the world and are the scenes of many important discoveries.

The two institutions have this year undertaken joint erection of a new seismological laboratory at the western city limits of Pasadena which is almost completed. New and highly refined instruments invented by Harry O. Wood and John S. Anderson of the Mt. Wilson staff are being installed and are expected to make possible the most detailed study of earth movements yet accomplished anywhere.

One of the most important forward-steps in the California Institute's history will be undertaken shortly in the establishment of a new and highly developed aeronautics department, made possible through the gift to the institute this summer of $300,000 from the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics.

The California Institute has experienced a steady growth in accomplishment and prestige during the last year, and its program of physical expansion is taking additional form in the construction of a large addition to the Gates chemical laboratory.

In addition to the regular staffs, distinguished visitors at these two centers of research and at the Henry E. Huntington Library here, recognized as one of the finest private libraries in the world, have included during the last year, Dr. Albert A. Michelson, eminent physicist of the University of Chicago; Dr. J. C. Merriam, president of the Carnegie Institute of Washington; John Drinkwater, novelist, poet and playwright; John Galsworthy, novelist and playwright; Dr. H. N. Russell, Princeton astronomer; Dr. Arthur L. Day of the Carnegie Institution; Dr. Maurice Ettinghausen of London, and a large number of other foreign notables.

NUMEROUS FACTORS

The Pasadena Community Playhouse recently has celebrated the first anniversary of the opening of its new $400,000 theater. Public schools of the city have kept pace with these other institutions, installing eleven separate improvement and expansion projects this year at a cost of more than $500,000, in addition to opening a new technical high school in the city.

Downtown building has been remarkably active, additional major projects undertaken or brought to completion during the last twelve months including the impressive Pasadena Athletic and Country Club Building at Green street and Los Robles avenue; the $400,000 First Baptist Church at Marengo avenue and Holly street; installation of $250,000 worth of improvements and enlargements at the Y.M.C.A.; a new Scottish Rite Cathedral, Mullen & Bluett and Fitzgerald clothing stores, California Security Loan Corporation Building, American Legion clubhouse, Bard's Theater, Singer, Building, Standard Warehouse Company building and others.

The problem of the city's future water supply is one of the major questions of the day in Pasadena and efforts are being made, as they have been during the last year, to work out a satisfactory combination of the city's proposed storage dam and the county flood-control and dam project in the San Gabriel Canyon.

Redlands Hits High Mark in Construction

REDLANDS, Oct. 30.—Redlands' October building permits broke the record for the year when they climbed above the $200,000 mark. With a permit yet to be issued for the Y.M.C.A. Building, and perhaps another large building or two, it is likely that the total for the year will be as good as last year when it was $1,300,000, a high mark.

The building of new homes is showing a steady increase. During the month there were permits taken out for many dwellings, among them being that for A. E. Frost, who recently sold his property on Citrus avenue to Wilson Brothers, and who is building a $10,000 home on Brookside avenue.

South Gate Has New High Mark for Building

SOUTH GATE, Oct. 30.—South Gate during the month of October had the greatest valuation totals in building permits since the city was incorporated in 1923, the total valuations being estimated at more than $350,000.

The largest valuation in a permit and the largest permit ever issued was taken out this month for the Zellerbach Paper Company, the amount of the permit being for $260,000, to build a new plant on Liberty, Santa Ana and Otis stret. The company purchased this site about three years ago. September's valuation this year showed $105,325, while October of last year showed $54,025.

HOSPITAL WORK RUSHED

Good Samaritan Building, Costing $1,750,000, Scheduled to Be Completed by May

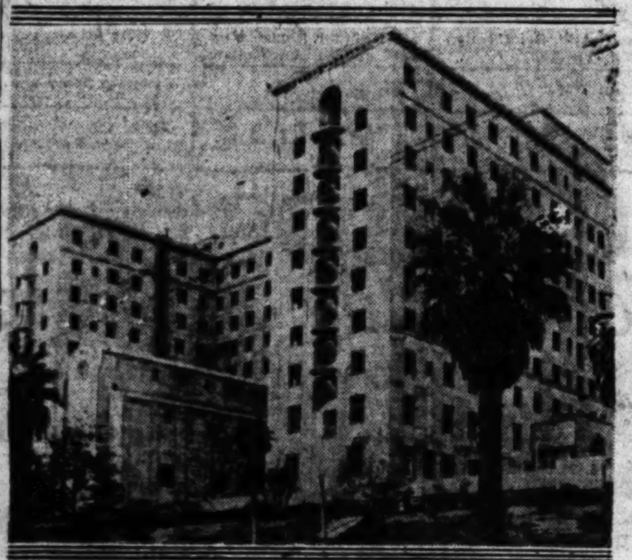
Progress is being made on the new $1,750,000 hospital being built in the block bound by Wilshire Boulevard, Lucas street, Shatto Place and Witmer street for the Good Samaritan Hospital Association. The general construction contract is being executed by the Scofield Engineering Construction Company, members of the local chapter of the Associated General Contractors.

Reinforced concrete was employed for wall, floor and roof construction and the exterior of the hospital structure will be faced with plaster and trimmed in Tuffa stone. The roof will be finished with clay tile. All concrete has been poured for the superstructure and workmen are now confining their efforts to the interior. The lathers are now up to the eighth floor and are being followed closely by the plasterers. The exterior plastering will be started within two or three weeks.

Rising ten stories and basement in height the structure faces 207 feet on Shatto Place with an east and west wing, each 121x44 feet in dimensions, and centrally located between these two wings is a chapel that rises sixty feet, covering an area 38x82 feet. The hospital, which will be serviced by four noiseless electric elevators, will contain 287 private rooms in addition to laboratories, operating rooms and the chapel.

Construction activities were started in May, last, and, according to A. R. McPherson of the Scofield company, all work is being rushed to have the hospital completed before May, next.

Good Samaritan Project



Involves $1,750,000

This new unit is under construction for the Good Samaritan Hospital. It will cost approximately $1,750,000. The building is rising on a site at the southwest corner of Shatto Place and Lucas. It will be completed about May 1, according to present plans.

WILL PAVE TWO MILES OF STREETS

Western Heights Center of Program to be Started by Pacific Palisades

Extensive improvements at Western Heights, Pacific Palisades, and at Temescal Heights of the same locality, are to be started Monday morning, according to Alex Douglas of the association's engineering force.

More than two miles of street paving, cement curbs nad sidewalks are to be installed on the area and grading operations will commence tomorrow, according to Douglas. The work will be rushed to completion.

The streets include Chattanooga avenue, Akron street, Chattanooga Place, Las Casas Place, Castac Place, Las Casas avenue and Emporia street; and in Temescal Heights, Oreo Place, Las Lomas avenue, Aleima avenue and Muskingum avenue.

The improvement of Western and Temescal Heights is the second development of major importance to be launched at Pacific Palisades since the opening of Beverly Boulsvard between Pacific Palisades and Beverly Hills several weeks ago. Two miles of streets are now being improved with paving and curbs and sidewalks on Chautauqua Heights.

The road improvements in Western and Temescal Heights will bring the total of road and street improvements in the 2150 acres held by the Pacific Palisades Association to thirty-two miles, according to Douglas. The grading and paving will be followed by the installation of water and gas mains, according to Douglas.

Bond Election in Huntington Park is Slated

HUNTINGTON PARK, Oct. 30.—For the past three years several movements to improve Pacific Boulevard between Slauson avenue and Florence avenue have been started, but each time the proposition failed. Now the City Trustees have called a bond election for an issue of $225,000 which, if carried through on November 16, will mean that this avenue will be one of the best in this territory, according to official opinion.

The bond issue provides money to pave this thoroughfare between Slauson and Florence avenues, with allowance for an ornamental lighting system. The issue calls for lights on each side of the street, and will mean the removal of all the light poles and the trolley poles of the Los Angeles Street Railway Company from the center of the thoroughfare, it is said. The railway company has agreed to remove these poles and instead arrange for poles at the sidewalk curbs, the report continued, and the company will also lower its tracks in the center of the street.

The passing of this bond issue will mean a paved thoroughfare 100 feet wide from curb to curb, without any poles in the center of the street, and will mean an ornamental lighting system on both sides of the boulevard for one mile. Pacific Boulevard is a section of Long Beach Boulevard, a main highway between Los Angeles and the city of Long Beach.

Suburban City Men Added to East Side Body

HUNTINGTON PARK, Oct. 30.—Jerome V. Scofield, Mayor of the city of Huntington Park, and Robert J. Shanahan, secretary of the Huntington Park Chamber of Commerce, have been selected as new members of the board of directors of the East Side Organization.

Samuel M. Dudlext, subdivider, has also been chosen as a director.

ANDREWS FORUM SPEAKER

Former Realty Board Heads and Present Chief Address Opening Meeting of Season

Tracing some of the enormous gains in the value of real estate since he first came to Los Angeles to enter the realty business twenty-three years ago, Charles G. Andrews, former president of the Los Angeles Realty Board and one of the pioneer real-estate men of the city, opened the season's first session of the board's "open forum" Tuesday evening. The meeting which was hold in the board's auditorium on Flower street was attended by more than 150 members and their employees.

Mr. Andrews said that many millions of dollars have been lost to some of the early-day realty operators because they lacked faith in the future growth of the city. Many millions more will be lost by those of the present area for the same reason, he said. He urged a thorough knowledge of the real-estate business as the prime requisite to financial success. Fair dealing and an unbounded faith in Los Angeles were also stressed as vital to success.

COFFIN ALSO SPEAKS

President George H. Coffin, Jr., of the realty board was another speaker. He welcomed those in attendance and urged that every member of the board and the employees of each attend the forum sessions where he said an unequaled opportunity to gain knowledge of the real-estate business will be afforded through the discussions of problems relating to that profession.

Past President Frank Ryan and Past President C. C. C. Tatum spoke along the same lines, the latter comparing real estate conditions here paring real-estate conditions here continent he recently returned.

Bernard Rosenthal, chairman of the forum committee, announced following the session that similar meetings will be conducted at the realty board offices every Tuesday evening during the winter and summer months. Some of the most prominent real-estate operators in the city will lead open discussions of problems which beset th ebusiness and an opportunity will be given to members of the audience to obtain the benefit of advice from many other men in the same business relative to the proper methods of handling any contingency regarding a deal which may be in the making.

MANY EXPECTED

While Chairman Rosenthal said he was gratified with the attendance at the opening session, he declared that future meetings should record an audience of not less than 500 people. There is no charge in connection with the forum, he said, the only stipulation regarding attendance being membership in the realty board or being an employee of a member.

PUBLIC GARAGE

Plans have been completed for a five-story and basement public garage building to be built at the southwest corner of Sixth street and Mariposa avenue for Chapman Brothers. It will cover a site 90 x 275 feet and will be built of reinforced concrete with plaster exterior.

EQUIPMENT CONCERN TO BUILD HERE

Will Manufacture Railway Supplies; Contract Let on Plant Unit

Western railway equipment will be manufactured in Los Angeles, according to officials of the Ramapo Ajax Corporation, builders of railroad supplies. That concern will follow the lead of the ever-increasing group of eastern manufacturers that have opened plants here after investigation other locations.

Contracts have been awarded the Union Iron Works for the steel framework of the main structure, to be erected near the intersection of Slauson avenue and Downey Road, adjacent to the plant of the American Manganese Steel Company.

Approximately $250,000 will be invested in buildings and equipment for the first unit. A main foundry building will be 110 feet in width by 140 feet in length, with a sawtooth roof. Walter Jannicki, resident engineer of the corporation, will supervise the construction.

San Fernando Valley Has Big Bean Harvest

SAN FERNANDO, Oct. 30.—An estimate made on the basis of baby lima bean crop of 225,000 sacks of 100 pounds each, places the threshing bill for bean growers in this section of the San Fernando Valley at $100,000 this year. Twenty threshing crews now in operation throughout this district are said by ranchers to be handling an average daily output of 8000 sacks.

Threshing outfits range from the old-fashioned, three-wagon rigs to giant devices managed by a crew of eight men. The latter move slowly over the fields and gather the beans as they go. Threshers of the stationary type, managed by a crew of fifty men and equipped with sixteen wagons, are reported averaging sixty sacks to the hour.

Realty Firm Makes Leases in Own Blocks

Leases for downtown store and office space, with rentals aggregating more than $135,000, were consummated during the past week by the Sun Realty Company, according to A. E. Langley, leasing manager.

Downtown structures, owned and operated by the Sun Realty Company, that figure in these transactions are the Chester Williams Building, Fifth and Broadway; the Roosevelt Building, Seventh and Flower; the Sun Finance Building, Consolidated Building, Insurance Exchange Building, Lincoln Building, and the Grant Building.

Construction work on the Chester Williams and Roosevelt buildings will be completed on schedule time and open to the public early in the year, it is said.

Realty Branch in Hollywood Adds to Force

The fact that real-estate development, sales and leases are increasing in Hollywood, Beverly and the San Fernando Valley, has caused John B. Wheeler, manager of the Hollywood office, of Los Angeles Income Properties, Inc., to add to his present staff he declared yesterday.

Harry G. Spengler, formerly of St. Louis, for several years a real-estate operator in the Larchmont district, is one of the new members.

Mrs. Florence Easthagen, for five years connected with the register of deeds office at Minneapolis, has been appointed as secretary to Mr. Wheeler.

Street Work Scheduled in San Gabriel

SAN GABRIEL, Oct. 30.—The lowering of the Pacific Electric tracks on Las Tunas Drive, from Mission Drive to San Gabriel Boulevard, is to be undertaken as soon as the necessary legal matters are completed. This was assured this week when the City Trustees instructed the City Attorney to prepare the papers for the condemnation proceedings.

The improvement will include removal of poles in the center of Las Tunas Drive, and grading and paving the thoroughfare. It is part of the plan to link Las Tunas with the Arrow highway route from San Bernardino to Los Angeles.

Warehouse to be Built on Third Avenue

Contract to build a $75,000 warehouse at 1919 Third avenue for the Arlington Transfer and Storage Company has been awarded to Walter E. Warne, general contractor, member of the local chapter of the Associated General Contractors. The structure will rise six stories in height in a site fifty by eighty feet.

Reinforced concrete frame, floor and roof construction will be employed, the plans reveal, and the exterior will be faced with plaster and trimmed in cast stone. Brick will be used as the exterior wall filler, according to Architect W. J. Saunders, and the partitions will be of tile construction.

Construction activities will be started early in November, according to Mr Warne, and all work will be expedited to have the structure completed and ready for occupancy before April 1.

WALL BOARD SHIPMENTS SET RECORD

Local Corporation Reports Sending Thirteen Carloads from Plant in Six Days

Shipment of thirteen carloads of plaster wall board from the local plant of the Schumacher Wall Board Corporation between the 18th and the 23rd insts., establishing a record for business transacted during a six-day period, was announced last week by Earl Schmidt, sales manager for the corporation. The building material was all shipped outside the city of Los Angeles, Mr. Schmidt added, but none of it went to foreign countries. Mr. Schmidt also reported a substantial increase in local and foreign orders during the past thirty days.

Bringing the total number of carloads sent to dealers in Northern Mexico during the past six months to three, Mr. Schmidt said yesterday that a carload was shipped to that section of the neighboring country last Tuesday. The material will be used in general building and was consigned to several dealers. Mr. Schmidt added that the local corporation now has dealers in Northern, Central and Southern Mexico and that a week seldom passes but what a carload is sent to one of those districts.

Alhambra Area Growth Shown by Telephones

ALHAMBRA, Oct. 30.—The growth of the Alhambra district is reflected by the increase in telephone installations during the past two months, the number of new telephone subscribers being greater than at any time for the past year, according to C. H. Reed, local district manager of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. Over 6000 telephones are now listed in the local exchange.

In September, 203 telephones were installed in business houses and in homes in the district as compared with 115 for the same months last year. This month the installation reached 220 as compared with 159 for October, 1925.

The company now has under way construction work amounting to $52,000 to take care of the demand for service in Alhambra, Monterey Park, San Gabriel, San Marino, Rosemead, Wilmar, Temple, Arcadia and El Monte, it is declared.

Hillside Area Realty Deals Swing Upward

Sales activities of the past week indicate a decided public interest in the San Rafael Hills section, which adjoins Pasadena on the west, extends northward along the Arroyo Seco and westward through Flintridge and Chevy Chase, according to P. J. Hayselden, executive secretary of the San Rafael Hills Association.

"The real-estate market has shown a sound upward trend since midsummer," Mr. Hayselden declared, "and records of the various projects in the San Rafael Hills prove beyond question that the buying public is being attracted to this hillside area so accessible to Los Angeles."

PORTERVILLE CITY OFFICES ADD SPACE

PORTERVILLE, Oct. 30.—Porterville City Council will lease for five years the west half of the Callison Building for city offices. This will double space now in use, as hitherto the city has only occupied the lower floor of the west half of this building. The Police Court will be moved to the second floor. The space formerly used for this purpose will be altered and a vault built for the safe-keeping of city records.

CITRUS LANDS IN DEMAND

Fifteen Hundred Carloads of Fruit Shipped From San Fernando Valley Area

SAN FERNANDO, Oct. 30.—Oranges and lemons produced in the San Fernando area for the fiscal year ending October 31 will total 1500 carloads or 600,000 packed boxes which will bring returns to the growers reaching the $1,340,000 mark, according to the opinion of managers of the six local packing houses. Demand for citrus acreage is increasing.

The citrus fruit output this year when combined with the olive crop, the deciduous fruits and vegetable canneries will reach a total of $2,390,000, it is declared by growers.

When operating at full capacity the citrus packing-houses employ 843 persons on a weekly pay roll of $15,800. The combined plants of the San Fernando area, nine in number, employ 1363 persons with a total pay roll of $26,700 it is estimated.

Citrus acreage is on the increase due to the demand for San Fernando fruit which has a keeping quality above average. The shipping records show that decay of fruit from this area does not exceed 10 per cent, whereas in some localities it is as high as 40 per cent. New groves are now coming into production and it is estimated that within ten years the citrus output will be just twice what it is now.

STATE DEPUTY MOVES TO LOS ANGELES AREA

C. F. Allison, field deputy in the real estate department of the State, has been added to the Los Angeles force for outside inspection work. Mr. Allison, whose home is at Stockton, has been employed as a deputy for the past five months in Northern California, where he has assisted in completing a State-wide check of broker's offices. In Southern California he is assisting in examining agricultural subdivisions and in other field work.

NEW CITY SPRINGS UP IN ARIZONA AREA

CASA GRANDE (Ariz.) Oct. 30.—La Palma is a new town on the new main line of the Southern Pacific, near Picacho Lake. Seven hundred date palms have been planted by the townsite company along the streets, which are wide and which have side parkways of sixteen feet. Even in the business section palm parks will be planted. No wooden or temporary structures will be permitted. Amos Hess is president of the operating company, with Mayor Dan Peart of Casa Grande serving as secretary.

PLANT FOR HARBOR AREA

Contract has been awarded to build a group of three warehouse and cold-storage buildings on Water street, Long Beach Harbor, near West Channel slip No. 5. The group consists of a six-story cold-storage building containing 80,000 square feet of floor space, an ice-manufacturing building having a daily capacity of 175 tons, and an ice-storage building having a capacity of 4200 tons. The buildings are being built for the Long Beach Terminal Warehouse Company.

Smoke Washing Appliance Will be Made Here

A machine to wash smoke will be manufactured in Los Angeles. It eliminates all carbon and fats and also prevents sparks from passing from the furnace, according to R. D. Sangster, manager, industrial department of the Chamber of Commerce. The machine will be manufactured by the Robinson Smoke Washer Company.

This appliance has been approved by many experienced men throughout the country, and will also eliminate the necessity of constructing smoke stacks and chimneys, Mr. Sangster said.

Machinery is Installed at Storage Plant

The former Union Pacific freight house is being used by the Progress Warehouse Company, according to officials of the latter concern. Cranes and other handling equipment has been installed, they said.

"Many loads of machinery and heavy merchandise of all kinds are arriving in Los Angeles constantly," declared B. F. White, president of the warehouse company. "In order to meet this need for storage our concern, with others, has installed necessary facilities."

THIRTY ACRES CHANGE HANDS AT VAN NUYS

VAN NUYS, Oct. 30.—Another large sale of Van Nuys acreage at a substantial price is reported by the Fred A. Kellogg agency. The transfer comprises the thirty acres that were owned by Nick Kinzer on Sherman Way and Fulton avenue. The consideration is reported to have been $35,000. Mr. Kinzer had owned the property for the last twelve or fourteen years.

The buyers are Newcomer & Thomas of Burbank, who declared they will subdivide the acreage for market purposes. It is understood that the purchasers will start at once to put street through the property, according to present plans.

STAGE SETTINGS UNIT BUILT

Indicating the rapid expansion of the motion-picture industry, a complete woodworking unit to make stage settings has been erected for the United Artists of Hollywood by the Austin Company at a cost, including equipment, of $100,000.

The buildings, consisting of a carpenter shop, planing mill and a generator structure, provide 24,000 square feet of working space that is well-lighted and ventilated.

Contract Let to Build New Cleaning Unit

Plans were approved and contract awarded last week to the Austin Company of California for the erection of a large new cleaning plant to be erected for the Paris Superba Cleaners at the junction of Swall and Keith avenues.

The proposed plant will comprise several modern fireproof buildings. The dry-cleaning building will be of concrete construction with concrete slab roof, completely isolated from the main structure as a protection against fire. The tumbler building and the boiler house will also be of concrete construction.

The main structure, which will contain the offices of the company, safety storage vaults and sorting rooms, will be 100x59 feet. The exterior will have a stucco finish with an ornamental tile roof.

Company Has Rapid Growth in Southland

From a "college-job" concern to a thriving business in a new $40,000 factory at 1117 North Wilton avenue equipped with $50,000 worth of modern machinery, Frank Bireley, president of the Golden Bear Orange Products Company, is receiving congratulations from his friends on his success.

The company specializes in serving fresh-fruit drinks to 150 schools in Los Angeles and surrounding cities. The new factory is a two-story Class A structure with an area of 9000 square feet. The company employs thirty persons in three shifts.

PASADENA BANK BUILDING

Architectural plans have been prepared for a six-story bank and office building to be built at Lake and Colorado streets, Pasadena, for the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank. The structure will contain banking quarters and one store on the first floor and forty-five office suites above. Construction will be started late in December, it was declared.

PAVING CONTRACT LET

Contract to improve West Seventy-sixth street, between Western and Eighth avenues, with eight-inch cement concrete pavement has been awarded by the Board of Public Works to William Liddington, a member of the local chapter of the Associated General Contractors, at $50,807.53. The improvement involves more than 320,000 square feet of pavement in addition to several incidental items.

GLENDALE BOARD TO BUILD HOME

Lot Purchase Is Authorized As Plans Shape for Headquarters

The Glendale Realty Board has voted to go ahead with plans to purchase a lot for its new home, and the corner-stone laying will be an event of the near future, according to official announcement. W. L. Truitt, member of the building committee, was authorized to go into escrow for the lot, and building plans will be launched promptly. The Glendale Realty Board has nearly 125 broker and salesman members, being one of the strongest institutions in the city.

Apartment to Open Here in Coming Month

Lakeview Arms, located at Twel 'i and Lake streets, and designed by L. A. Smith, will open November 6, it was announced yesterday. The builders and owners are D. I ser and S. Klitnick, formerly of Chicago. They estimate the cost of land, construction and furnishings to approximate $310,000.

Gables Club Construction to Start Soon

Construction on the twenty-three-story main building of the Gables Beach Club is scheduled to start November 8, according to word given out yesterday by the Scofield Engineering Company. The construction program indicates completion about July of next year.

The structure was designed by Architects Curlett & Beelmen, who declare it to be one of the finest beach club buildings in Southern California.

TWO FLAT BUILDINGS OPENED ON NORMANDIE

Representing an investment of approximately $46,000, erection of two eight-flat buildings at 427 and 431 Normandie Place has just been completed by the Construction Guarantee Company, it was announced yesterday by officials of the concern. William Van Tress, plastering contractor, handled the interior plastering and exterior stucco work for the structures, each of which is two stories in height.

LAUDS LANDSCAPING

Landscaping in Holly Vista and Hacienda Park has reached a state of perfection seldom seen even in older communities of California. A greater variety of shrubs, trees, flowers and tropical plants are in full bloom and growing in this Hollywood foothill location than in any other similar area, according to a botanical report made for John A. Evans, owner and subdivider of these properties. The particular angle from which the sun strikes these hills during the day, plus the shelter from winds and fog, is conducive to prolific growth of all vegetation.

SANTA MONICA STRUCTURE

Work is scheduled to start at once on a four-story store and office building on Wilshire Boulevard near Fourth street, Santa Monica, for Harry Weiner. The structure, estimated to cost $65,000, will cover an area of 50 x 96 feet and will be built of brick. The ground floor will contain three store rooms and the upper floors will be divided into fifty-four offices.

BOX PLANT PUTS ON NIGHT SHIFT

Company Started in March Now Employs 160

Trade 100 Per Cent Better Than Expectations

Value of Filled Orders Set at Quarter-Million

Manufacturing operations at the plant of the Hollywood Paper Box Corporation will be given considerable impetus with the institution tomorrow of a night shift of thirty employees, bringing the total number of workers at the establishment to 160, C. B. Kerr, president and general manager, announced yesterday.

With the addition of the night shift, the plant will be in operation fifteen hours daily, the daytime employees working for eight hours and the evening crew being on duty seven hours, according to Mr. Kerr. The company's plant is in the Commercial Building at La Brea avenue and Santa Monica Boulevard.

"This expansion of production adequately reflects the success of our concern, which was established on March 1, last," the executive continued. "In seven months' time, we filled orders totaling approximately $350,000 in value and right now we have $125,000 worth of unfilled orders on hand which we plan to run through with our night shift."

Unit Control of Road Work Urged by Bean

If the street and road-building facilities of the city and county could be combined under one management, the savings so effected would run into the millions of dollars per year, Jack Bean, County Supervisor, said recently, to the members of of the Southwest Branch, Los Angeles Realty Board.

Mr. Bean cited many instances of such changes which prevented duplication of effort, whereby taxpayers are saved enormous sums already, including the Regional Planning Committee, and the county welfare activities. The commissioner declared that within a very short time, all Los Angeles county will be one vast city.

New President of State Body Congratulated

Letters and telegrams congratulating him upon his election to the presidency of the California Real Estate Association, have been received by the score by Harry B. Allen, San Francisco broker, and vice-president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

These have been received from not only out of the State, but from all sections of California. In addition, the San Francisco Real Estate Board pledged its support in a special resolution passed at its last meeting.

State Body to Invest With Loan Concern

Upon motion of Director Stephen Barnson, the board of directors of the California Real Estate Association, at the Del Monte convention voted to invest $4000 State association gold reserve fund in the Pacific Building and Loan Association of Culver City, bearing 6 per cent interest.

A letter was read from Henry A Stern, manager of the Pacific Building and Loan Company, calling attention to the opportunity afforded for this investment. The motion carried unanimously.

COLONIAL HOME DESIGN SHOWN

Comparison of Types Given in Outline

Small Dwelling Not to Cost Over $3800

Furnishings Suggested for Simple Abode

BY CLIFFORD A. TRUESDELL

What is colonial architecture? The cold New England climate has developed its particular type of colonial just as the Central Southern Atlantic States. Climatic conditions of these two geographical extremes are just as varied as in England and Central Italy. They could have developed styles as different as, let us say, Tudor Gothic and Lombard Rennaisance, and in many respects there is just as much difference in the several types of colonial architecture.

To say that one is fond of colonial architecture is therefore a broad statement. Colonial means the severe and extremely restrained symmetrical house of New England with its elegantly detailed marble doorway, breathing a sort of calculated austerity and refinement from its every corner. Colonial means the stone houses with slate roofs that bless the Wissahicon and the Schuylkill and that are just as much of a Germantown autumn as the blazes of color of the fallen leaves. Colonial means George Washington's house at Mt. Vernon. And it means the wide clapboarded house of the southern country gentleman with its high slender wooden columns supporting the open balcony over a low-floored portico.

SOUTHERN MOTIF

Southern colonial is essentially a wooden architecture. And, as in all colonial architecture, it relies upon carefully detailed moldings for a part of its refinement. A feeling of symmetry is ever present, yet symmetrically placed masses are not essential. In fact, the style often admits of considerable picturesqueness.

This type of architecture does not necessarily involve any definite characteristics in plan. In the example illustrated today the two bedrooms face the street and each has cross-ventilation. A little service hall connects the living-room and the bedrooms with the bathroom, which latter room is accessible to the kitchen through an auxiliary door opening on to the screen porch. A vacuum cleaner closet and a linen closet in the hallway are conveniently placed.

The major rooms overlook the rear garden, where the interest of the entire plan is centered. Flagstone terraces lead from these rooms to the lawn and garden walks, and a hedge creates here a typical Southern California outdoor room. The living-room is purposely set back from the street and is entered through a covered entry flanked by pairs of proportioned box columns.

ROOM APPOINTMENTS

It would be a natural thing to expect the interior of this little colonial house to have colonial furniture as its dominating note. Windsor chairs and rockers with perhaps a davenport would seem in place in the living-room. Particularly would this be true if the woodwork were light and the fireplace faced with brick framed by delicate moldings. Oriental rugs or domestic Bengal with their soft lovely colors would make the room extremely attractive. The book shelves on either side of the mantel will help to maintain a friendly informality. An Adam or Queen Anne dining table and chairs with leather seats in the dining-room, or an Erskine Danforth table and rush-bottom chairs with sideboard would be attractive.

The design is by Murphy & Cullity, and the house, built of redwood siding, need not cost over $3800.

TIMELY HINTS ON HOME FINANCE

Authority Outlines Further Aspects of Price and Value

BY EDWARD R. DEWEY

[Mr. Dewey will be glad to answer in this column any question in regard to home finance. Address him in care of Sunday Real-Estate Editor, Los Angeles Times.—Ed.]

In last Sunday's article I explained that the value of a piece of real estate depended chiefly upon the income that is or can be derived from it.

As one must earn about 12 per cent gross on real estate in order to net 7 per cent, the gross unfurnished rental on a lease basis must be about one one-hundredth of the total value of the property. In other words a piece of land properly improved will be worth 100 times the net unfurnished rent on a lease basis.

There are, of course, many exceptions to this rule which I will discuss in later articles, but the ratio just given is one used by many important lenders of money as a first check on values.

There may be a wide variation between the true value of the real estate and the price at which it sells. Nowhere do we meet this condition more often than in the case of private residences because they, as a rule, are not rented and because so many other factors aside from the true commercial value enter into their selection.

A man may take a fancy to a tree or to a view or to an exposure. A man may want to buy a home ready built and have difficulty in finding one that just meets his requirements. A home may be in a district that temporarily seems particularly desirable. All these and other factors enter into the situation.

There is no reason why a man should not pay $5000 more for a piece of land than it is worth provided he recognizes that he is spending money to gratify his own personal desires rather than for a sound commercial investment.

However, for the great majority of home owners, the purchase of land and house is a matter of considerable financial importance. It is for most people the biggest financial transaction of their lives and such people cannot usually afford the luxury of gratifying personal fancies at the expense of sound economy.

The trouble is that large sums of money are often spent for what the buyer thinks is a sound investment whereas in reality he has gratified personal tastes far in excess of his financial capacity. The buyers of real estate, improved or unimproved, must befare of this pitfall.

REAL ESTATE and BUILDING LAW

A Department for the Property Owner and Home Builder Conducted by the Legal Department of the W. Ross Campbell Company

Question: "A" employs architect verbally and agrees to pay 3 per cent when plans and specifications are ready on building not to cost over $100,000. Bids run over $140,000. Can architect collect on latter basis? There was no agreement as to fee if building was not constructed.

Answer: Assuming "A" did not proceed with building accepting larger amount, the architect is limited to the percentage on the stipulated amount; that is, $100,000.

Q.: Lessee put up money as guarantee for faithful performance of terms of lease. Lessee failed to pay rent and owner served notice to pay or vacate. Lessee moved and delivered keys to owner. Now lessee claims owner canceled lease and is suing for return of security. What is lessee's standing?

A.: Even if it be conceded that owner canceled the lease, such cancellation was predicated upon the prior breach by the lessee, and the lessee is not in a position to recover.

Q.: I am offered a deed which is only signed by husband, who says it is property acquired before marriage. What should I do to be sure?

A.: If the facts are as seller says, the joining of his wife would remove all question as a matter of record. You should insist upon the signature of the wife. Better still, insist upon a policy of title insurance issued to you by a reliable company.

Q.: If a lessee agrees to assume responsibility of condition of building with exception of its structural part, what is the legal meaning of structural part?

A.: There is no absolute legal definition of what constitutes the structural part of a building. It is a question of fact to be determined in each case.

Builders' Questions Answered

By Southern California Chapter of Associated General Contractors

Question: The concrete floors in my factory are going to pieces under heavily loaded steel-wheeled trucks. What do you recommend when replacing or constructing new concrete floors that will be subjected to such heavy-duty purposes?

Answer: The following method has been used successfully when replacing concrete floors. The rough slab is first picked, swept and washed with clean water. One and one-quarter inch round steel bars are then placed as grounds and leveled up. The floor is again wet down and a 1-to-1 cement sand grout brushed on. Before the grout has set a 1-to-2 mixture of cement and trap rock uniformly graded from 1-8 to one inch is dumped on the floor and screened off. The mixture should be as dry as possible. The grounds are then moved and the spaces filled with 1-to-2 mixture. When this mixture starts to stiffen place an even coat of crushed trap rock, about 3-4 of an inch in depth, over the entire surface. After the trap rock has been placed it should be rolled with a 150-pound roller, then a 900-pound roller and finally an 1800-pound roller. These rollers should be operated laterally, longitudinally and diagonally. The last rolling should bring some water and fine material to the surface, therefore it should be given a hand steel troweling to smooth out any of the material that has come to the top. Finally the floor should be ground with ordinary grinding machines that utilize carborundum block and coarse powdered emery with a generous supply of water. The grinding should be started about five to six days after the topping has been placed. It is reported that floors when constructed this way have remained in excellent condition after years of severe trucking. This type of floor construction is said to be solving the problem of floor construction in ice cream plants, packing plants, chemical laboratories, etc., where the floors are subjected to the action of acids in addition to trucking.

Q.: What is the time required to pay off a note of $4000, payable $80 per month including interest at 7 per cent? The first installment payment was made on November 8, 1923, and an extra payment of $500 was made on December 13, 1924. Also how much interest will have been paid?

A.: The time required is four years, three months and nine days and you will have paid $590.11 in interest.

Q.: On August 1, 1919, I contracted to purchase a piece of property for $3500, paying $350 down and the balance at the rate of $35 per month including interest at 6 per cent. When will the contract be paid out and how much will I have paid in interest?

A.: If all payments are made when due the contract will be paid off on July 28, 1929, and you will have paid $1045.95 in interest.

Q.: I purchased a lot for $7500 paying $1000 down and the contract provides that I am to pay $75 monthly for a period of nine years. What interest am I paying?

A.: You are paying a fraction less than 5 per cent interest.

New Addition to Paper Plant is Announced

Announcement has just been made by R. E. Brown, secretary of the Los Angeles Paper Manufacturing Company, of the addition of a new asphalt saturation plant costing approximately $20,000. The improvement will increase production about 50 per cent, Mr. Brown said, and will be completed and in operation within thirty days.

"We have built a number of additions," said Mr. Brown. "We have occupied our new administration building but a short time, and this new saturation plant is simply another unit in a growing organization that has forged steadily ahead over a period of more than twenty-five years until now we boast a million-dollar lay-out equipped with the finest machinery obtainable."

INDUSTRIAL PAY ROLL IS CITED

Los Angeles Factory Area Annual Check About $400,000,000

Pay rolls in Los Angeles industrial district the past year amounted to more than $400,000,000 according to a speaker on salesmanship before the Southwest Branch, Los Angeles Realty Board, at their last regular meeting. The city of Los Angeles has made greater strides toward a predominating position in the industrial and commercial world in the last twenty years, than any other city in the United States, he said.

MASSIVE ARTESIAN WELL SEEN ON MOTOR JAUNT

Montezuma's Well, One of Nature's Freaks, Found Near Old Cliff Dwellings in Arizona

In search of something a bit out of the ordinary, a Times-Nash scouting party, traveling in a Nash advanced six two-door sedan, rolled out of Los Angeles and headed eastward for Arizona, traversing the National Old Trails road through Barstow and Needles to Kingman, Williams and Flagstaff, the latter being the first night stop on the jaunt, some 544 miles distant from the metropolis of the Pacific Slope. Next morning, the second day of the journey, the Nash was headed southward via Mormon Lake (the second largest body of water in Arizona) and Stoneman Lake (which is certainly well named, as it is in a very rocky region which makes the going tough on tires) to that odd product of Nature—Montezuma's Well.

This notable landmark is an artesian well of such odd characteristics that it at first appears as nothing but a large pool of water surrounded by ninety-foot cliffs, but a little exploration develops the fact that it has an outlet through crevices in the rock and forms

Small Machine Gets Attention Among Makers

DETROIT, Oct. 30. (Exclusive) Proceedings of the annual safety congress which convened in Detroit this week were watched with considerable interest by automobile manufacturers, especially that part of it that dealt with traffic regulations and control.

During the past two years manufacturers have seriously considered the advisability of introducing small automobiles especially designed for driving in the congested districts of city traffic. Two or three companies have made the initial move in this direction and makers generally have expressed themselves as being favorably inclined toward more stringent traffic regulations in line with delegates to the convention who registered similar expressions. This is taken as an indication that more small cars will be introduced in the coming year with improved features of the past attempts.

REGULATE LIGHTS

Another important subject which was discussed, and vital to manufacturers and owners, was that of headlight regulations and enforcement. Standardization as the remedy for this particularly

REVEAL GAS TAX LETTER

Bring Pressure to Bear in Effort to Force Votes for Proposition No. 4

Who is urging the 50 per cent increase in the gasoline tax on motorists? What is behind the costly campaign being waged? Why are proponents of the gas-tax increase knifing State highways measure No. 8 in the north and urging its adoption in the southern part of the State?

So the people may know, the following letter will explain how funds are being raised for the gasoline-tax campaign and how the pie will be distributed if it is put over.

Here is the letter, sent the 14th inst. to the machinery dealers of the State:

"Gentlemen:

"A short time ago a list was made up and forwarded to all people who should contribute to the campaign fund for putting over the new highway-financing measures to be voted upon. A large number of you have contributed, and a still larger number have failed to consider themselves a party to the transaction.

"The committee, after having given you this consideration, has decided that we will make one more call for you to contribute as requested; and in due course an honor roll and a slacker's roll will be distributed among each of the machinery dealers; also rock-producing companies, cement mills, bond houses and all other industries that are directly interested in furthering this campaign. This will be done so that each one interested will know who were their friends.

"We believe that it is no more than just that those who pay should bring pressure to bear upon those who do not feel like paying to see that they do, and we further believe that those who pay are certainly entitled to first consideration when future business is to be placed by the contractors, rock-producing companies, and other interested parties.

"It is the decision of the committee that all capital possible shall be made out of the co-operation given for the benefit of those giving the proper co-operation."

Long Service—
Low Operating Expense

THE old idea that only the favored few could afford to own really fine cars is passing into the discard. Packard Six sales prove it.

Every year a larger proportion of Packard Six Sales are made to those who have owned a long procession of lower-priced cars and who at last have recognized the real economy of investing in first class transportation—and using all of it.

The Packard six owner finds it easy and desirable to take from his car the long years of use built into it. For Packard engineering provides for the protection of the Packard's operating efficiency in the hands of owners. The motor oil rectifier assures constant proper lubrication of the engine with a minimum of troublesome oil changes. A daily pull of the convenient plunger is all that is required to give chassis parts the long life insured by thorough, frequent oiling.

The long-established Packard's policy of protecting the owner's investment through preserving traditional Packard lines has just been again evidenced in the new and improved cars. They are more beautiful—true—but still distinctively Packard. Thus recent Packard owners are not tempted to buy new cars.

Have you experienced the thrill of driving the new Packard Six? We will be glad to have you do so. Let us send the model you prefer to your door tomorrow. Prices are unchanged. The five-passenger sedan is still but $2928.

American Car Sales in Great Britain Increase Twenty Per Cent During the Past Year

BRITISH AUTOS HALF AMERICAN

English Sales Show Enormous Acceleration

Women Buy Third of Machines in Kingdom

Australia Also Displays Big Machine Demand

At a luncheon given this week at the Savoy Hotel, London, by the Motor-Car Manufacturers' Association, it was stated that at the forthcoming motor show at Olympia, London, the sale of automobiles in England would be found to have increased by 20 per cent since November, last year.

During last year $280,000,000 worth of automobiles were sold in Great Britain—nearly 50 per cent of which were American—and that from next November to October, 1927, the sales would have exceeded $300,000,000. Since 1919 the auto sales in England have leaped from $75,000,000 a year—the amount is small compared to the annual United States turnover, but no other country has offered such spectacular increase in so short a time.

"Thirty per cent of present automobile purchasers in Great Britain are women," said H. K. Preston, continental sales manager of Britain's leading firm of auto manufacturers.

WOMEN BUYING

"Manufacturers with an eye to the British market should bear this in mind, and that 90 per cent of women purchasers intend to drive the auto themselves. Today, one Englishman in thirty possesses an auto, but this will be increased by 50 per cent shortly.

"Not excepting America, there is not another country where the leap in sales has been so sharp as in Great Britain. This has been accelerated by the last year's road building, in which 2200 miles of new arterial roads have been built at a cost of $121,500,000. It is largely due to the interest on the part of women in England since the war.

"Remembering this distinct feminine demand, manufacturers should bear in mind that the average woman driver does not want a car that needs too much polishing or unnecessary cleaning, and she wants linings of the most practical and dust-resisting kind.

"There is bound to be an even higher demand for American autos next year, when the annual tax on rated horsepower is removed, and a simple gasoline tax imposed in its place. England then will be the ideal market for United States manufacturers to place their surplus production."

AUSTRALIA, TOO

Mr. Preston added that at the end of last year there were 24,564,574 automobiles in the world, and of this total there were 21,094,984 in the United States.

"Europe's share at present is only 2,675,891," says Preston, "which shows the amount of field to be covered.

"Australia is another 'auto-eating' country, for with its population of 6,000,000 it already has 416,586 autos."

Records Fall in New York Motor Salon

With a record list of exhibitors for the twenty-second annual New York automobile salon, opening on November 28 at the Commodore, arrangements have been made to display more cars than heretofore. A new doorway has been cut from the main ballroom, making available a suite of large reception rooms and, in addition, there will be an overflow exhibit of a dozen or more cars downstairs in the main lobby.

The forthcoming salon will be the largest exclusive exhibition of de luxe cars ever held anywhere in the world. Well over 100 individual cars will be shown, each mounting a specially designed and built custom body.

It is distinctly international in character, there being six nations, France, Italy, Belgium, England, Germany and the United States, represented. Cars being exhibited by their makers or importers are Cunningham, Isotta-Fraschini, Mercedes, Minerva, Panhard, Renault and Rolls-Royce. Cars to be shown by coachmakers are Cadillac, Duesenberg, Franklin, Hispano-Suiza, Imperial Chrysler, Lincoln, Marmon, Packard, Pierce-Arrow and Stutz. Special custom coach-work exhibits will be made by Brewster, Brunn, De Causse, Derham, Dietrich, Fisher, Fleetwood, Holbrook, Hume, Judkins, Le Baron, Locke, Rollston, Weyman and Willoughby.

PRESENT PAGEANT

A historical pageant will be presented by Garnet Holme, pageant master of the national parks at the Casa Grande ruins, out of Florence, Ariz., on November 5, 6 and 7.

In the Kaibab National Forest, Utah

The road in the picture at the upper left is winding through the trees of the Kaibab. Angel's Landing is at the right. Below is an average trophy taken in the forest which was open to hunters for a month this year, closing tonight.

MONTH OF HUNTING A SUCCESS

Kaibab Forest Closes to Guns Tonight After Being Open During October

Hunters who failed to get their deer early in the season have had their chance in the Kaibab national forest for the past month as that park has been thrown open to hunters this season for the first time in years. The month's hunting in this district closes tonight.

So spoke Roth Reynolds, who is in the front ranks of our authorities on game, game birds, furs, pelts and hunting. He has just returned from the Kaibab, and is enthusiastically spreading the knowledge gained on the trip.

Continued Mr. Reynolds: "The glory of the Kaibab is entirely beyond my ability to describe. Against the majestic heavy greens of the several conifers the eye is frequently struck by a sudden splash of crimson—which is the exquisite, symmetrical glory of a wine-maple silhouetted on the darker background of pine and spruce, while in every direction the trembling shimmer of thousands of quaking aspen suggests dancing naiads clothed in translucent silver gauze.

"One erroneous impression I would correct in most emphatic terms: There prevails an idea that deer in the Kaibab were so numerous, hungry and game that one could drive his car into a clearing, call 'pretty deerie,' hold out a handful of salt, sugar or talcum powder and, as the trusting beasties crouched around, select the best and knock him cold with a policeman's billy!

"All wrong!

"The Kaibab is full of deer. A pot-hunter could go in and, within a few hours, kill a buck, skin it and start for home the same day—if he was satisfied with the first beast of legal sex and age that he encounters.

"The sportsman whose time was limited, but who enjoys to the full, within his time limitations, the zest of trailing and selecting his trophy before making his kill, could be certain of accomplishing his purpose to his entire satisfaction in the one, or two, or three days he may have had for his stay within the park.

"The sportsman—or sportswoman—who devoted a week or ten days to the actual chase gathered full measure of content through every hour of every day, reserving until the end of the period the taking of the trophy that most appeals, which will have been marked down in the meantime. And the actual trailing was just as arduous, just as 'sporty,' as the individual demanded."

Americans Are Ready for Air Travel Liner

Having carried 1800 passengers between Philadelphia and Washington in the first regular daily passenger air service ever attempted in America, the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company has added a third great Fokker plane to its service, extending the flights from Philadelphia to Norfolk, Va., and increasing the schedule to three round trips daily.

Although the P.R.T. air service will terminate as originally planned, with the close of the Sesquecentennial Exposition, its brief period of life has proved that the public in America is quite as ready for commercial passenger air service as in Europe, where air transportation has already become commonplace.

Side Trip to Old Castle is Made on Jaunt

a stream of water which measures 1200 miner's inches, certainly a most generous supply, which is utilized for irrigation by a near-by ranch. Because of the large surface area, the water which wells up from the springs does not make its presence evident, but the outlet, and the fact that the well maintains a certain level at all times, indicate the enormous flow. Also, the flow is steady throughout the year, dry seasons or wet seasons not affecting it. Another fact of considerable import is that in places the novel "well" has been sounded to a depth of 900 feet, while at one or two spots no bottom has been reached.

At one time, no doubt, the water flowed over the top of the cliffs, as lime has been deposited to a depth of from two to five feet on the surface of the rocks, the water being strong with lime which makes it imperative for the ranch owners to scrape out their irrigation ditches every two years. But how long ago the well deposited lime on top of the cliffs none but learned geologists can conjecture, for the outlet gives evidence of having been in use for thousands of years.

In the cliffs, generally near the top, a few early cliff dwellings remain to this day, unrepaired and left in the condition in which they were found by the white man with the exception that a ladder was put down to one of them within recent years. All about the well, within a radius of several hundred yards, are many ruins, showing that at one time that early race of Indian residents of Arizona known as the cliff dwellers (long extinct, though research points to the fact that the modern pueblo dwellers—principally the Hopis—are the direct descendants of the long-vanished race that had an inclination to roost high in cliffs,) found this spot one of particular charm and utility.

Later on present-day tribes occasionally stopped at the well and utilized the old stone shelters of the bygone cliff dwellers, and at the time white settlers arrived in Arizona an Indian tribe was encamped at the well and clung to it tenaciously, though at last were forced to give way.

BACK SURVIVES

Will B. Back, one of the Arizona pioneers of Indian days, came to the region with a partner and secured the well and the rich bottom lands from the man who originally wrested it from the Indians. But it was one thing to buy from a white man who had taken it away from the Indians, and another thing to hold it, and the result was that one day Back's partner wandered over a nearby knoll without his trusty rifle and was later found with over seventy arrows sticking in his body. Naturally, Back became extremely cautious, and because of this survived the wrath of the Indians but not being in very good health of late, he recently leased his property to C. Vaughan. Though for many years the government has endeavored to make a national monument out of the well, the old land patents have held, and Back, not wishing to part with the ranch where he lived the greater part of his life and raised his family, has not been willing to sell. Some day, perhaps, it will be sold to the government, but the reader cannot but understand the sentiment back of the owner's refusal to part with it.

When the Nash party arrived at Montezuma's Well an old Mexican was just leaving with his family, and it developed that he had pastured sheep in the vicinity over thirty years ago, and had been so much impressed with the odd formation and its ruined cliff dwellings that the wish became action and he drove several hundred miles with his wife and children to show them the country he roamed over so many years ago. It was a touching bit of sentiment, for it was a considerable financial effort on the part of the aged Mexican to transport the party of six so many hundreds of miles. But it was a happy day for him, and an interesting one for his family.

While nosing around the house, looking at odd bits picked up around the well, the Nash-Times travelers inspected the bent barrel of an old flintlock with much conjecture, for it carried the date "1827" and was of the old frontier type with a hexagon bore. It had been picked up by Back when he first settled at the well, but of the stock there was no trace. It seemed to mutely testify that the owner, hard pressed by feathered and bedaubed foes, had finally been forced to use his gun as a club, and that the heavy barrel had been bent over the head of at least one unlucky red skin overly anxious for a scalp.

ON TO CASTLE

After the pleasing visit at Montezuma's Well the Nash travelers continued ten miles further to Montezuma Castle, a national monument set aside on December 8, 1906. Before proceeding further it is necessary to state that, though these two objectives carry the name of Montezuma, the Aztec chieftain conquered by Cortez, they have no connection, some fanciful traveler having given them the name without regard to fact, probably being well pleased with the high-sounding titles.

However, since it had started to rain, and good photographs were out of the question that day (Saturday,) the Nash sedan was hustled on into Prescott, fifty-four miles away, where the second night of the trip was spent. Prescott, the seventh largest city in Arizona (1920 census) occupies a very pleasing site in West-Central Arizona, and was the first capital of Arizona Territory, enjoying the honor from 1864 to 1867. Later, in 1877, Prescott was again made the capital of the Territory, but the honor was finally lost in 1889. Arizona Territory (Arizona did not become a State until 1912,) was dismembered from New Mexico and raised to the dignity of a Territory of its own right in 1864, the first Legislature assembling at Prescott in September of that year, the Territory being then divided up into four countries—Pima, Yuma, Mohave and Yavapai. There are now fourteen counties, but at the first division Yavapai county reached from New Mexico on the east and Utah on the north, to the middle of the Gila River on the south and the present line of the county on the west, truly an empire in itself, for it embraced in the neighborhood of 58,000 square miles, thus being larger than the combined area of Connecticut, Rhode Island, Maryland, Delaware, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont and New Jersey.

The next morning (Sunday) dawning bright and merry, the Times-Nash travelers retraced their route for the fifty-four miles back to Montezuma Castle and explored the ruins, which may best be described by quoting from the National Monuments booklet issued by the Department of the Interior, as follows:

"Situated in a cavity in the face of a vertical cliff about eighty feet above its base, Montezuma Castle is a true cliff dwelling. The building is about forty feet from bottom to top and is [illegible] feet of cliff, which [illegible] in a good state of [illegible]

GAS ON BARGAIN COUNTER

Every day is bargain-counter day for the motorists in the filling stations in Southern California. Gasoline, according to figures given out yesterday by the Gilmore Oil Company, is at present the cheapest of all commodities in general use.

Taking 1913 as the last year of normal, prewar prices, the Department of Commerce found recently that while the average of prices for all commodities has advanced since that time about 55 per cent, gasoline prices have climbed only 22 per cent in the nation as a whole. In Southern California, the gasoline advance over the prewar level is slightly less than 21 per cent.

Attention was drawn in the Gilmore report to the fact gasoline is one of the few things that may be purchased at home cheaper than abroad. Statistics of prices in the majority of foreign countries show the American dollar will buy more house rent, more clothing, more food, and more of almost every necessity of life in Europe than in the United States.

The one striking exception to this rule is gasoline, a greater quantity of which may be bought in this country for a dollar than in any European country, with the exception of Rumania. Rumania has a large production of gasoline, but consumes very little, selling its surplus at prices which compare with those in the United States, the greatest user of gasoline in the world.

Another point of interest stressed in the report was the assertion the oil industry's investment now amounts to $10,000,000,000, and transports annually through 55,000 miles of pipe line a volume of petroleum greater than the tonnage of all the freight handled by the railways of France.

PARIS HOLDS FIRST SHOW IN TWO YEARS

This year's Paris automobile show which was held in the Grand Palais from the 7th to 17th inst., inclusive, has increased importance by reason of the absence of any motor exhibition in France last year. It constitutes the first of the series of European shows and, uniting the entire motor industries of France, Italy and Belgium, together with an important representation from America, gives the first opportunity of examining the models prepared for the coming season.

While general progress is shown in chassis design, body construction and equipment, it is evident that the important manufacturers are reluctant to make changes unless real necessity for them is felt. Much as the public may be interested in examining mechanical novelties, purchasers are more interested in fully tried models ready to be placed in their hands.

NEW EIGHT SEDAN IN DEBUT

The Sperl Motor Car Company furnished a surprise last week at the Biltmore enclosed car salon by the introduction of the new Rickenbacker Super Vertical 8-90 European sedan.

This car was hailed by many as a sensational automotive creation. It was the center of crowds during the salon according to Harry A. Sperl, president of the local distributing firm. Sperl says:

"I am firm in the conviction that a super automobile has been built and I believe that car to be the new Rickenbacker 8-90 European which made its bow at the Enclosed Car Salon.

"From a mechanical standpoint I believe that the Rickenbacker organization has perfected one of the best engineered chassis ever offered in America.

"One of the interesting features of the motor is the dual carburetor installation. So far as I am informed this is the first standard straight-eight in America to have two carburetors instead of the usual one.

"The power developed by this new Rickenbacker motor makes in a real performer. It is rated at 107 horsepower at 3000 revolutions per minute and is easily capable of a road speed of eighty miles per hour.

DUCKS SCARCE

Owing to continued hot weather, ducks are not coming in as usual in the Salton Sea district, according to a recent report received from the touring department of the National Automobile Club. Conditions will be only average until later in the season. A good storm or cold weather will put the season on in full force. Rates at the various clubs average $5 per day for hunting privileges where boats are supplied for trips to blind vexing problem was advocited by J. B. Hunt of the electrical research division of General Motors Corporation.

SMALL MACHINE GETS ATTENTION

Answering the plea of manufacturers in general that every household have two cars instead of one—especially where one large car is concerned—the downward trend in prices is making this condition possible to a far greater extent than ever before. Lower prices and smaller cars are the present trend.

The talk in automotive circles right now that a leading manufacturer is soon to announce a new six; a Detroit company, financed by a Toledo manufacturer is said to be back of the announcement. Blind advertisements in daily newspapers asking for dealers, managers and skilled automobile workers lends strength to the report.

Still another subject of no small importance in automobile circles is the possibility of another well-known automobile concern establishing a manufacturing branch in the motor city. News this week from Paris was that Peugeot, the great French car builder, is seriously contemplating opening of an American plant in this city.

PARIS WATCHES

Of particular interest to American visitors at the Paris automobile salon last week was the new Erskine car, a machine designed and built by the Studebaker corporation in its Detroit plants expressly for European requirements. Two years ago A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker corporation, brought from Paris the specifications for a composite continental car. These were developed by the company's engineering department and the Erskine, decidedly European in appearance, is the result. There are two body types, an open and closed model, both for five passengers.

President Erskine this week stated that foreign drivers are fast discovering the comforts of closed cars. Prior to 1923 sales of closed vehicles in foreign countries were few, but at present about 20 per cent of all cars exported from the United States are of the closed models.

Trucks Sold Before Tests Are Finished

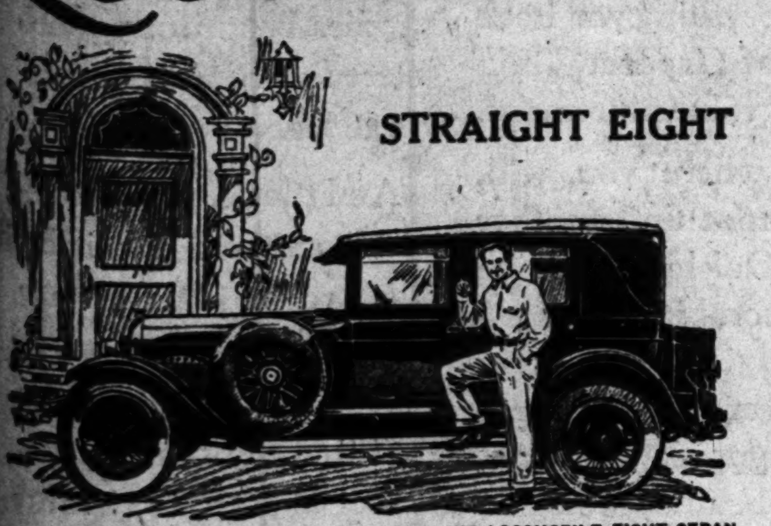
Selling a fleet of six trucks of a certain model "off the road," when that model is undergoing its road tests and is not yet in production, is the unusual experience reported by the Autocar Company. The sale was made to Oswald & Hess, Inc., of Pittsburgh, Pa., while their 1½ ton delivery truck was making a series of engineering test runs between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

The Autocar engineering department is subjecting the Model A delivery truck to a series of road tests under normal operating conditions which are going on day after day and which will put over 30,000 miles on that model before the tests are ended.

Beginning at the factory in Ardmore, a suburb of Philadelphia, the Model A, with a load of 1½ tons of sand in bags, and carrying two men, ran five round trips between the factory and Pittsburgh.

Locomobile

STRAIGHT EIGHT



DE LUXE LOCOMOBILE EIGHT SEDAN

The majority of the visitors at the recent Enclosed Car Salon held at the Biltmore Hotel made the same mistake about the Locomobile Straight Eight Sedan.

They thought that it sold for some price between four and five thousand dollars. They were surprised to learn that the regular Locomobile Eight Sedan sells for $2615 delivered here with full equipment.

The visitors were unanimous in their praise of the beauty of this different eight, unanimous in recognition of its fineness—they all knew the reputation of Locomobile and its prestige.

Until you have ridden in one of the Locomobile Eight motor cars you lack that standard of comparison by which to judge first class motor car transportation.

The initial cost of a Locomobile Eight is low, its operating and maintenance cost are also low. One can travel first class in a Locomobile for less cost per mile than is possible with many less desirable cars of lower initial cost. Investigate this. Prove it with a test tour.

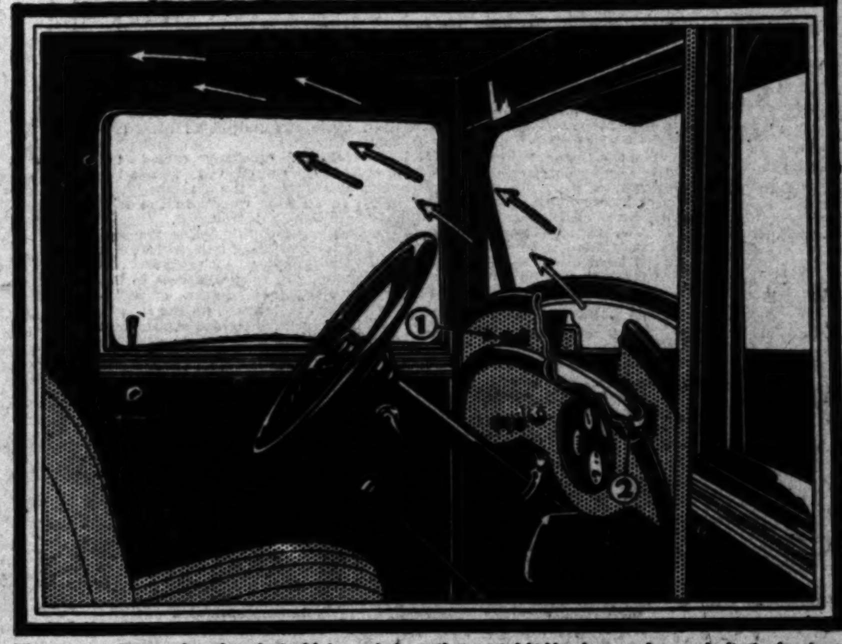
Only the New Studebaker Custom Cars Have This

Draftless, Stormproof Windshield

Admits fresh air without drafts—excludes rain



This cut-away diagram shows how the Studebaker no-draft ventilating windshield, when opened outward, directs the air up over the occupants' heads. Figure 1 indicates the convenient handle on the dash for adjusting the windshield to any desired position. Figure 2 points to the hidden trough under the cowl which carries off rain when the windshield is set for storm-proof ventilation.

WITH characteristic initiative, Studebaker engineers have solved the long-neglected problem of closed car ventilation.

In the new Studebaker Custom Cars, a unique, patented windshield eliminates all possibility of stuffiness from smoky or vitiated air, of acrid engine odors, of chilling drafts, or of discomforting rain sprays showering driver or passengers.

Waterproof Ventilation at Last Perfected

Set for stormproof ventilation, this Studebaker windshield admits outside air in a controlled current, but carries off the rain through cleverly designed troughs beneath the cowl. Even the concentrated stream of a hose, turned against the windshield, does not force water past this ingenious barrier.

Nearly every motorist has suffered the discomfort due to imperfect ventilation of a closed car in rainy weather, when it became necessary to close the windshield, cowl ventilator, and windows to prevent rain from entering. Shortly the atmosphere becomes close and muggy. The windshield and windows become steamed, obscuring vision to such an extent it is ofttimes dangerous. Quite in contrast is the rush of clean, sweet air which abounds in the Studebaker Custom Cars at all seasons and under all weather conditions, by reason of the patented Studebaker no-draft windshield.

Elderly people, mothers of young children, and women who are often lightly dressed for social engagements will particularly appreciate this no-draft windshield. Men can now enjoy smoking without annoyance to other occupants, because the air is constantly renewed.

Easily Adjusted by the Turn of a Handle

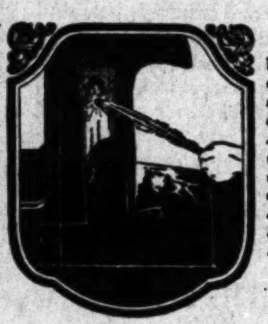
You can adjust this exclusive Studebaker windshield without taking your eyes from the road. There are no troublesome sidescrews to loosen and tighten again—no stopping to reach up to the top of the car. A convenient handle, right on the dash, sets the windshield at any position desired.

Custom Completeness at No Extra Cost

This no-draft ventilating windshield is typical of the completeness of the new Studebaker Custom Cars. The external beauty of their low-swung bodies, resplendent in lustrous duotone lacquers, is matched by interior luxury and more than $100 worth of extra equipment without extra cost.

Studebaker One-Profit facilities have mastered custom costs and produced masterpieces of custom design at less than customary prices—come in and see them today.

All Studebaker Custom Cars have the following equipment: No-draft ventilating windshield, exclusively Studebaker; front and rear bumpers; engine thermometer and hydrostatic gasoline gauge on the dash; coincidental lock; oil filter and air purifier; automatic windshield cleaner; rear-vision mirror; traffic signal light; 4-wheel brakes; full-size balloon tires; and two-beam acorn headlights, controlled from steering wheel.



When the Studebaker ventilating windshield is set in this position, a constant stream of fresh air is admitted but no water can get inside—not even in the hardest rainstorm or when—as an extreme test—a stream of water is turned full against the windshield.

Science Endorses Studebaker Hygienic Closed Car Ventilation

"I have analysed carefully the system of ventilation which you have adopted for your Custom Cars and find it thoroughly efficient. At ordinary speeds the air will change completely every five minutes. I know of no other windshield which equals this for scientific ventilation."
PROF. J. D. HOFFMAN of Purdue University, Past President of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers.

"Your no-draft ventilating windshield not only adds considerably to the comfort of driving, but gives a definite protection against the ills caused by riding in a draft. Fresh air is one of the greatest benefits of motoring. This device insures a constant change of air yet eliminates the exposure to direct drafts in cold or blustery weather. I believe it to be a decided reform from cowl or open windshield ventilation."
DR. CHAS. J. WHALEN, Past Pres., Illinois Medical Association; Editor, Illinois Medical Journal.

"The new windshield ventilating system is ideal. Its 'overhead or underfoot' selective feature is excellent for the avoidance of the disagreeable drafts to which one is subjected in most cars, and its rainstorm ventilation is a triumph. No more hot, stuffy cars during showers!"
DR. R. STEWART RALSTON,
308 Neville Street, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"The ventilating system in your new Custom Sedans, through the use of a no-draft windshield, was such a revelation to me that I felt duty-bound as a physician to endorse it. To the best of my knowledge it is the finest windshield and best ventilator ever put on a motor car."

"I am glad to write you what I think about the new Studebaker windshield. I have been over the matter thoroughly and think it looks so good I'm sure my next car will have it. It looks like a physical impossibility that any amount of draft can bother the occupants."
J. M. BLACKFORD, M.D., Seattle, Wash.

"I have tested the new Studebaker windshield in its various positions, and find that while it permits a constant change of air inside the car, the draft which formerly was common in a closed car is absent."

VENTURA VOTES ON BONDS

Pepole to Voice Opinion on Issue of Nearly $1,000,000 for County Highways

VENTURA, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—One of the 29 measures upon which people of Ventura county are to vote next Tuesday is a proposed $900,000 bond issue for rebuilding county highways. This big sum is made necessary, officials declare, as the result of paving destruction by heavy and speeding trucks.

The great activity in the Ventura-avenue oil field, which has suddenly become one of the principal producers of the State, and the consequent rapid development in this city have led to an extraordinary amount of heavy trucking in the last year. The importation of weighty drilling equipment, the laying of several long pipelines and the hauling of vast quantities of building materials have thrown a load upon the pavements which they were unable to withstand. The officials who directed their construction a decade or so ago never dreamed of the huge machines, with trailers, which now trundle ceaselessly across all the arteries of the county.

ROADS RUINED

This never-ending crunching in the last year broke down pavement after pavement. A concerted war of supervisors, District Attorney, State motor force, special county officers and all the judges of the county resulted in the arrest and imposition of heavy fines on overloading trucks. This tended to reduce the worst destruction, but still the pavements were unable to withstand the ceaseless impact.

Repairs have been rushed on most of the roads and at the present moment they are all in fairly good condition. But officials say they will be unable to stand up for long under the growing traffic, and that a consistent and fast campaign of rebuilding is the only remedy.

The county's assessed valuation was felt by the supervisors to be too low to allow having this necessary work done out of the moneys raised by taxation, so the bond issue is being submitted. The bonds, however, are to run for only ten years, so that the county shall not find itself in the position to have to pay for this work a long time after it has been completed.

DETAILS OF PLAN

The official notice of election outlines the work that is to be covered by the $900,000, as follows:

Ventura avenue, the main artery from Ventura to the oil fields, 1.15 miles, to be widened and thickened.

Telegraph Road, between Ventura and Santa Paula, three and one-half miles, to be widened to twenty feet; Santa Paula to Fillmore, eight miles, to be widened and thickened; Fillmore to Piru, 6.5 miles, surfacing; Piru to Camulos, two miles, surfacing.

Nordhoff Road, between Lacresse and Ojai, .87 of a mile, to be widened and thickened.

Los Angeles avenue, between Saticoy bridge and Somis, three miles; Somis and Moorpark, four miles; Moorpark and Simi, four miles, and Simi and Santa Susana, 2.3 miles, to be repaired, widened and thickened.

Oxnard Road, between Oxnard and Camarillo, three and one-half miles, to be widened and thickened.

Wells Road, between Telegraph Road and Saticoy bridge, 1.24 miles, to be widened and thickened.

Santa Rosa Road, sections aggregating three miles, to be thickened and additional culverts constructed.

Vineyard avenue, a distance of 3.65 miles, to be surfaced.

Saviers Road, between Oxnard and Hueneme, four miles, to be repaired and widened.

Valve Enough to Put Wheel Out of Balance

Every autoist knows that in the average wheel there is an unbalanced side where the valve and valve stem are located. The effect which this unbalanced weight has on the riding qualities of the car has only recently been made the subject of investigation.

The Buick company solved the problem of unbalanced wheels by counterbalancing the valves and stems in all four wheels in the 1927 models recently introduced.

An automotive publication recently made the question of balanced wheels an editorial subject. It said:

"Balancing of road wheels is to the fore just now, a refinement of seemingly needless delicacy, on the face of it. But remembering the erratic pull of a weight suspended from a string and swung rapidly in circles, not so foolish after all.

"As a matter of fact, a state of unbalance in a wheel equivalent to a weight of half a pound concentrated on the rim, exerts a pull of something like twenty-eight pounds when the wheel is turning at a rate corresponding to forty miles an hour. A twenty-eight-pound centrifugal pull on the wheel may be the root of several evils—"shimmy" and "tramping," principally. While a similar unbalanced condition in all four wheels may produce oddities in riding performance that are most difficult to explain.

A woman suffrage bill has been passed by the Argentine Chamber of Deputies and women in that country now have the same civil rights as the men.

PLUGS SHOULD BE CHANGED

If he has not installed a new set of spark plugs within the past year, or if his present set has gone 10,000 miles, he will make certain of quicker starting and better engine performance during the coming winter if the motorist installs a complete new set now. This is the advice of Hal Baker, sales manager for the Western Auto Supply Company.

Hundreds of motorists who installed new Champion spark plugs during Champion National Change Week last spring, have enjoyed better service since that time, and every motorist will be better satisfied with the performance of his car if he makes it a regular practice to put in new plugs once a year.

According to Baker, many do not understand how new spark plugs improve the running of the motor. The reasons are perfectly simple and easily understood. Power is developed by the rapid combustion and expansion of the burning gas ignited by the spark at the plug points. Increased power and economy result from an intense spark that gives instantaneous ignition, more rapid expansion and complete burning of the gas.

The spark plugs must furnish from 600 to 1500 full intense, perfectly timed sparks a minute while constantly subjected to terrific heat and hammerlike blows of the compression, deposits of soot and carbon are gradually burned into the surface of the insulating core, causing surface leakage of current; corrosion gradually sets up an electrical resistance in the electrodes and slowly but surely, a less intense spark occurs at the point of the plug.

Loss of power and waste gas and oil result from a less intensive spark that causes a lag in both ignition and flame propogation. Only a part of the gas is actually converted into power and much of it passes out the exhaust, merely wasted.

GERMANY CLOSES HILL-CLIMB SEASON

The last sporting event of the season organized by the Automobile Club of Germany, took place on the 19th inst. and consisted of a hill climb at Ruselberg, Bavaria, over a distance of 3.6 miles, during which the increase in altitude was 1574 feet.

The event was well attended and was keenly disputed in all classes. A Fiat 509, driven by Herr Waldhier, won in its own class by climbing the hill in 8m. 17 4-5s., or at an average speed of 27 1-4 miles an hour, this being much faster than many machines of greater piston displacement.

Here Are the Two Latest Paige Sedans

The Paige Company of Southern California is showing two new models of Paige sedans, recently announced by the Paige-Detroit Company, manufacturers of Paige and Jewett motor cars. One has a wheel base of 115 inches and the other 125 inches. The curved line, which is so effective in the latest automobile designs, is carried out in the new Paige models. The corners of the window frames are rounded off and the tops of the windows follow the curve of the roof. Four shock absorbers, standard with each model, add to riding comfort while the interior finish is the last word in closed-car convenience.

PAIGE HAS NEW BROUGHAM

Season's Trend for Color Seen in Glossy Blue Green Top on Latest Model

Curved lines and rounded contours characterize the latest Paige product, a landau-brougham, announced this week by the Paige Company of Southern California, Paige and Jewett distributors for this territory.

The new model has been added to the 115-inch-wheelbase line and is the second new car of that series to be introduced recently, a four-door sedan being put on display here two weeks ago.

The trend of more color on automobiles is distinctly shown on the top, which deviates from the more common black. It displays one of the feature colors of the two-tone car, being finished in glossy blue-green. This color is carried through over the roof and integral visor.

The second color, below the upper-belt molding, is Bambalina blue. The moldings are in zee blue, a darker shade, and are split with a stripe of old ivory. Between the moldings are two gold lines.

The artillery wheels are in Bambalina blue, with a split stripe of old ivory on each spoke.

The upholstery is in corduroy, combining durability with appearance and in pleasant contrast to the walnut finish of the interior trim, with highlights supplied by the silver-finish hardware and fittings.

The walnut effect is carried out in the instrument board, the door panels and the garnish moldings. The silver finish appears in the convenient remote-control door handles, dome light and instrument-board fittings.

Recording instruments are clustered in a symmetrical group under glass. They include an engine-heat indicator and gasoline gauge. The rear light is equipped with a roll curtain. Doors have shirred pockets at convenient angles.

Conveniences for the driver comprise a rear-view mirror, automatic windshield wiper and steering-post light control.

Chassis equipment includes shock absorbers on front axles; engine air cleaner; combination stop and tail light. The tire size is 31 by 5.25.

FREEMAN JOINS NERNEY

Maurice Freeman, who for years has been associated with the Pierce-Arrow Company in Southern California, has just joined the force of Stephen S. Nerney, Hollywood Lincoln dealer. Freeman's great acquaintanceship among members of the film colony will put him in good stead with the Nerney organization, who it is asserted have sold more Lincolns to members of the film colony than any other dealer in the entire country.

She Is One of the Lucky Girls

Miss Mildred Walsh with new Stutz vertical eight, five-passenger sedan purchased by her father, P. J. Walsh, during the recent closed car salon at the Biltmore. She looks happy.

Delivery Made on Car Sold During Salon

One of the happiest girls in Los Angeles is Miss Mildred Walsh, daughter of P. J. Walsh of 4263 South Figueroa street. The reason for this joy is because Miss Walsh has just been presented with a new Stutz vertical eight five-passenger sedan by her father. It was purchased from Lynn C. Buxton, Stutz distributor.

Miss Walsh, who attended the University of California, Southern Branch, and is a member of the Gamma Phi Beta Sorority, has a highly developed artistic sense and a love for the beautiful.

Her car had to have beautiful lines, and lovely finish, along with speed and handling ease. She had been looking around for several days and then along came the Inclosed Car Salon at the Biltmore.

Miss Walsh was one of the first-day visitors. She examined the quality cars critically. She found many things she liked in several of the better grade cars and then she came to the Stutz. The salon car was finished in Robin Hood green with a wide belt and fenders of armory green.

"I want that darling car," she told her father, and she got it. It has just been delivered.

Overhead Cost Runs Up Price of Automobiles

of overhead expense in manu- ing automobiles means that value can be given the buyer r his dollars. The buying of units n the open market has cut this erhead expense to a minimum, ac- rding to Selig Cahn, vice-president f the White Auto Company, distrib- r of the Auburn Straight Eight d other models of the Auburn line n Southern California.

"The Auburn Automobile Com- ny is one of the few concerns which l reserves the right in its policy produce a car from proven units rchased on the wide open mar- t," said Mr. Cahn. "This is large- responsible for the company's abil- y to serve the present automobile yer with the most modern models thout excessive cost.

"Many, and in fact most automo- e manufacturers who are striving r mass production manufacture a rge proportion of the units used their products. Little is purchased om outside concerns. As a result e overhead is costly, not only to e company but to the buyer also, t has been found.

"Auburn buys all its units in the en market, thus cutting down this ary overhead cost."

Performance
that startled the motor car industry

The motor car industry was startled when Buick presented the new Buick, with an engine vibrationless beyond belief.

If you have driven this great new car, with this remarkable engine, you know why.

Its fluid smoothness makes other motor cars seem rough, harsh, noisy.

The plain truth about it sounds like exaggeration, it is so effortless at every speed.

People who have driven Buicks for years, and people who have owned much more expensive cars, are captivated by the luxury of this one.

The industry was amazed, and you will be, too, when you drive this marvelous motor car. Everybody says, and we repeat it: "You never have driven anything like it."

SMALLEST STREETS IN THIS CITY

Los Angeles Has But Half Street Area of San Diego; Remedy Proposed

Failure of the original city planners of Los Angeles to visualize the future growth of the city is one of the prime reasons for present congestion in the downtown district, according to reports of the Traffic Commission.

Los Angeles, figures show has less street area per acre in its downtown district than any of the large American cities. Only 21 per cent of the area within the downtown section is devoted to roadways, it is disclosed.

Washington, D. C., and San Diego have twice as much roadway. Cleveland has 39 per cent in street area and San Francisco 34 per cent.

This lack of street area, coupled with the large number of automobiles in Los Angeles, makes the widening of some of the present downtown streets imperative.

Proceedings are now under way for the opening and widening of Flower street, Olive street, Fifth street (west of Figueroa,) Broadway, Pico, Tenth and Wiggins Place. The Major Traffic Street Plan also include the widening of Maple avenue and First street.

With these and other streets in the downtown area widened, there will be more room for automobiles, the result of which will be reflected in the development of business and prosperity, the Traffic Commission states.

The commission is now urging the adoption of Charter Amendment No. 7-A on the city ballot at the November 2 election. It provides funds as the city's share of carrying out the second unit of the Major Traffic Street Plan. This amendment calls for a tax increase amounting to 9 cents for each $100 of assessed valuation for a period of not more than five years. The increase, although but 2 1-3 per cent more than the present tax rate, will bring in approximately $8,000,000 during the five-year period.

By voting "Yes" on Charter Amendment No. 7-A Los Angeles voters will help toward the completion of the Major Traffic Street Plan for the relief of traffic congestion and assist in reducing street-improvement assessments.

FINISH REPAIRS

Repairs on the San Diego inland route below Temecula have been finished eliminating a short detour, states the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

New Model Autos Are Still Arriving

Miss Lillian Appelbe with new Stearns-Knight custom sedan-limousine recently received here by the Stearns-Knight distributor for Southern California.

FACTORY BUILT BODIES FACTOR IN SUCCESS

In a recent discussion with several Elcar distributors, F. B. Sears, president of the Elcar Motor Company, brought out one or two interesting facts in connection with Elcar bodies.

"Elcar bodies, as you know, are Elcar made. In fact, Elcar is one of the very few automobile manufacturers in this country who own and operate their own body plants. It is natural that Elcar should be one of these manufacturers, because the original product of the Elcar factory was fine carriages and coaches, the building of which began way back in 1873."

OPPOSE GAS TAX

Taking the stand that any added gas tax would put an additional burder of $8,500,000 annually on California motorists, the Los Angeles Auto Trade Association has just adopted a resolution urging voters to oppose the proposed increase i gasoline tax measure on the coming ballot.

STEARNS-KNIGHT ARRIVES

Stamped an aristocrat by its handsome lines, beautiful finish and luxurious interior, a new five-passenger Stearns-Knight custom limousine has just been received here by Collins-Lusby, Inc., distributors of the Stearns-Knight line in Southern California. It is one of the latest representatives of the new type Stearns-Knight cars that made their initial appearance just a few weeks ago.

The body of the car is finished in dark gray with a black upper-structure, fenders and dust aprons. It has a wide red belt with stripings of white and gold.

"Comfort and luxury of the highest order are seen in the rear compartment," said Al Lusby, a member of the company. "The wide, deep seats are upholstered in fine mouse-colored broadcloth and the entire compartment is lined with the same material. The finest hammered silver-finish hardware is used for window lifts and door latches. The seats are equipped with arm rests and in one of these is a telephone by which the passengers can communicate with the driver.

"Front and rear compartments are separated by a glass partition, which can be let down inside the front back seat. This partition is fitted with a silk curtain giving the rear section the utmost privacy. The rear part is fitted with a dome light and two reading lights that come on automatically when the rear doors are opened. It also has a large heater. There are wide lounging straps at either side of the back seat and doors have wide pockets in them. Handsome vanity and cigarette cases are provided."

FLORIDA ROAD PAVED

The Dixie Highway from Daytona, Fla., through Fort Pierce, Palm Beach to Miami was not damaged during the recent hurricane in the lower section of the State, according to information received from the touring department of the National Automobile Club. It is paved the entire distance, in splendid condition and without detours.

PAVEMENT TO BE THINNER

Experiments Show Enormous Waste of Money in Use of Thick Surfacing Bricks

An annual saving to American taxpayers of at least two million dollars will be the result of the reduction in the thickness of paving brick shown to be possible without danger of street and highway deterioration by tests recently made by the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture.

This should be cheering news to John Smith, taxpayer. It is another bit of evidence of the value of the research and experimentation in highway and street construction which have been carried on actively by the Federal bureau and the State highway departments and college laboratories for the past several years.

TESTS IN EAST

The bureau's tests, which are conducted at Arlington, Va., were made on a circular track divided into several sections each of which was paved with a different thickness of brick. One section was paved with the four-inch brick which has become the standard as the result of fifty years of usage. Others were paved with three and a half, three, two and a half and two-inch sizes. In all respects other than the thickness of the brick the construction of the several sections was identical.

Heavy trucks driven around the track subjected all thickness of brick to the same traffic and the test was continued until each section had been subjected to 62,200 passages of the test trucks. During 22,200 passages the trucks were equipped with heavy nonskid chains on the rear wheels. As the trucks were driven constantly over a narrow band of the pavement it is estimated that the traffic to which the surfaces were subjected was equivalent to eighteen years of traffic on the average highway.

The results of the test definitely prove that two and a half-inch brick of the quality used, when properly supported on a firm foundation, will prove satisfactory for pavements carrying the heaviest traffic; and two-inch brick are shown to be entirely satisfactory for streets carrying the lighter types of traffic.

CHANGES MADE

It is expected that the use of four-inch brick, the common practice for many years, will be practically abandoned as a result of the test, and that engineers, generally, will adopt the thinner types. This has already been done in some sections of the country, notably in the Southwest; but in other sections, particularly in the north where nonskid chains are used extensively in winter, road builders have been reluctant to reduce the thickness of their pavements for fear of the effect of the heavy hammering of the chain-equipped trucks.

Comparative bids received for the construction of pavements show savings by the use of two and a half-inch instead of three-inch brick ranging from 11 cents a square yard in Pittsburgh to 27 cents in Raleigh, N. C., and still larger savings compared with the three and a half and four-inch thicknesses. Compared with the later thickness the estimated saving runs as high as 51 cents per square yard.

BUY SEAMAN PLANT TO BUILD CLOSED BODIES

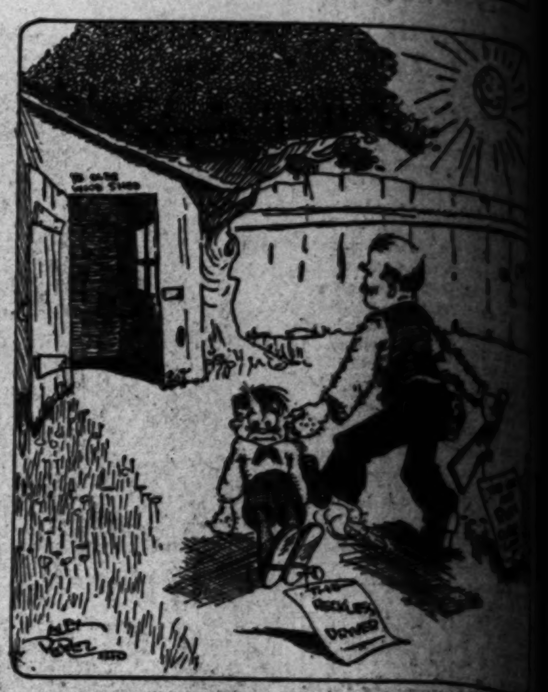
In line with the production expansion of the Nash Motors Company made necessary by the greatest demand for Nash cars in the history of the company, a large addition to the plant of the Seaman Body Corporation of Milwaukee has just been completed. The Seaman business, owned in half by Nash Motors, is devoted entirely to the building of inclosed bodies for Nash.

The addition to the Seaman plant is a five-story building. Installation of equipment to be used in the various departments in the new building is well under way and when this has been completed the plant will rank as one of the most modern and finest equipped automobile body factories in the world.

SNOW NEAR BISHOP

Snows have fallen in the higher mountains in the vicinity of Bishop, reports the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California. While the mountain passes are still open they may be expected to close at any time now.

IS THE PADDLE BIG ENOUGH



Pheasant Are Now Planted Near to City

"Every sportsman and motorist in Southern California undoubtedly will be glad to learn that Mongolian pheasant planting in Southern California has been started," stated Jack Hines, secretary of the Citizens' Fish and Game Conservation Committee, in his weekly report.

"About a week ago, the planting was commenced by E. H. Lewis of the State Fish and Game Commission," continues Hines. "Four hundred of the birds were released [illegible] lands, lying between [illegible] and Colton, while 200 were [illegible] in the Santa Ynez Valley, [illegible] ton. This week, over [illegible] set free in the [illegible].

"It is not commonly known [illegible] there are few places where [illegible] will propagate. The birds require a large area upon which may be found plenty of water, alfalfa and grain.

"From this report it can easily be seen that the Fish and Game Commission is helping Southern California in restocking its forests and streams and all of this will eventually lead to the establishing of a game farm in Southern California.

"Naturally the pheasants will be protected for several years, and the members of our committee make it a point to assist the game wardens in seeing that the birds are protected.

The Proof Is Here!

Mr. L. V. Starr, Manager,
J. W. Leavitt & Co.,
1130 S. Figueroa St.,
Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear Mr. Starr:

I wonder if you know of the feeling of satisfaction which your organization engenders in many of its customers. It is something real and worth while, and it should be exceedingly gratifying to you. You are to be congratulated on the way in which your employees meet the public and the courteous, competent and efficient manner in which they render service.

Along this line, your Mr. Carl Preston is deserving of particular commendation. I can not say that I like to have to go to him, but when service is necessary it is gratifying to know that I am going to be well treated.

I wish to take this opportunity to thank you for the many courtesies received since the purchase of the Oldsmobile "30".

Yours sincerely,
L. W. Wickes

J. W. Leavitt & Company is just as much interested in keeping its Oldsmobile owners sold as selling them in the first place. Not only does this apply to the front office but to every employee throughout the plant. On the left is one of the many letters we have received from Oldsmobile owners who simply can't help expressing their appreciation for the courtesy and cordial relationship they have enjoyed. It is surprising to some of our new customers to find that our interest in them does not cease upon the signing of an order.

There are five paramount features which should enter into the selection of any pleasure car. They are: 1—Appearance. 2—Durability. 3—Performance. 4—Economy. 5—Comfort. We believe your investigation will reveal that the Oldsmobile has all these.

LOWER-LOWER always LOWER!

Yet ample road clearance

AUTOMOBILES generally have been built lower and lower during the past twenty-five years.

Because all engineers know that the nearer to the ground the passenger-load is carried, the safer the car, the easier it rides and handles.

After years of engineering, floor-boards were brought down so that, in various cars, they measured twenty-five to thirty inches above the ground. Then further progress in that direction was stopped. Stopped by the propellor-shaft.

The propellor-shaft became a Chinese Wall against further lowering of the floor-boards of the car because there must necessarily be ample clearance between it and the floor-boards.

So it remained, until the creation of the New Safety Stutz. Then, for the first time was realized the ideal which had long been but an engineer's dream.

For, by adopting the worm-gear instead of the bevel-gear drive, and redesigning the entire chassis in accordance, the creators of this car were able to achieve a basic and fundamental advance in automobile construction.

Today, in the New Safety Stutz there exists a perfectly harmonized and co-ordinated automobile in which the passengers are carried at the lowest level possible consistent with maintaining full road-clearance—or from 5 to 10 inches lower than conventional design permits.

So valuable and so vital an advancement is embodied in the revolutionary design of the New Safety Stutz that American and European engineers alike pronounce the car "A real contribution to automobile engineering progress!"

The New Safety Stutz represents more than a theoretical improvement; to the man who drives and rides in the car, it brings a revelation of unimagined security, floating carriage, and gentleness of handling—all due to the lowering of the useful load.

And now, many thousands of these cars have covered millions of miles and any possible question as to the technical value of this contribution has long since been answered—by the greatest test of all—actual use in the hands of owners.

As hundreds of owners testify, the New Safety Stutz, in effect, levels the hills, straightens the curves, sands the slippery spots, and grades the roughest roads. It ushers in new standards that cannot be expressed in old words and phrases.

Every sales representative here is trained to explain why the New Safety Stutz is so basically advanced in design and performance. And to demonstrate its surpassing roadability in every sense of the word.

See this truly new and fundamentally different automobile—ride in it and drive it.

The symbol of Safety

The New Safety Stutz is permanently protected against theft, by The Fedco System, without cost to the car owner.

An exclusive feature is Loss-of-Use Insurance, paying the car owner five dollars per day, up to thirty days, for loss of the car's use through theft. This also is without cost to the car owner.

The entire car has Underwriters' Class A rating on both fire and theft.

Eight body styles, including 7-passenger models, designed and constructed under the supervision of Brewster of New York.

All closed bodies automatically ventilated by Hubbard Ventilating Eaves—another exclusive feature.

CHANGE IN NAME OF PONTIAC FOUNDLESS RUMOR, SAYS DEALER

Despite rumors that the Pontiac was to be called the Oakland light six, the General Motors Company is expending more than $7,000,000 on what is said will be the finest motor car manufacturing plant and which will be devoted exclusively to the production of Pontiac sixes under the management of the Oakland Motor Car Vompany, according to Reeve Gartzmann, Pontiac and Oakland distributor.

"The Pontiac was named after the greatest Indian in history. It was so named because the designs for the car were such that it would when completed represent the same enduring qualities and stamina as that great Indian," says Gartzmann.

"Once named and introduced to the public, the Pontiac made an instant hit and its popularity has been increasing daily. So great has this public approval become that a new and immense factory had to be built to provide manufacturing facilities to produce the cars. It now is the determination of the Genezal Motors Company to make Pontiac one of its outstanding products and just because the production of this car is under the immediate direction of the officials of the Oakland Motor Car Company, rumors have sprung up that it was to be called the Oakland light six. The story is without foundation, and on the contrary, the plan is to vastly increase the pressure in putting the name Pontiac before the public.

"There would be nothing gained through a consolidation of the names. In fact I think that when a manufacturer produces a motor car in a certain price class and popularizes it, then introduces another model in a lower price class but under the same name, he detracts from the prestige that the owners of the higher priced model enjoy. Oakland appeals to a certain class and the Pontiac to another. The consolidation of the name would only confuse the public."

AUTO RACERS BUY OFF-SEASON CARS

With the 1926 A.A.A. racing season practically at close, many of the star drivers have invested part of their winnings from the track in new automobiles to use during the winter months.

Nine of them have purchased 1927 Buicks. This group includes Peter DePalo, the 1915 A.A.A. champion; Frank Lockhart, winner at Indianapolis; Earl Cooper, Dave Lewis, Bob McDonogh, Fred Comer, Frank Elliot, Cliff Woodbury and Bennett Hill.

Judging from the praise given their new cars, these drivers are more enthused than ever over the overhead valve engine, which now not only powers their cars on the track, but also the autos they use for personal driving. Their selection of the latest model Buick is considered a very high indorsement for the car by the Buick Motor Company.

NEW PLAN FOR TRAFFIC EXPLAINED

Suggested System Would Place Officer on Walks Rather Than in Street

Hugh A. Matiers's suggestion for the arrangement of traffic officers follows:

Where traffic policeman is situated, at point A, as in the chart, he has to watch a 270 deg. angle and is blind to a 90 deg. angle. He is in a dangerous position and is inaccessible to pedestrians wanting information.

At point B, he has to watch 180 degs. and is blind to 180 degs. He is in a dangerous position. His position not very satisfactory for talking to pedestrians.

At point C he is situated on a corner (preferably the same corner at all points) and has to watch only 90 degs. No vehicular traffic is blind to him. He is in a safe position. Pedestrians can question him without danger and he does not have to move his body and his intensity of vision is tripled as compared with Point A.

The present pedestrian lines of traffic are prolonged from street lines thus encouraging pedestrian to cut corners and stand in path of vehicular traffic.

By moving back pedestrian lines to position shown in "C" the corners are kept clear.

By placing the control position always on a uniform geographical corner, drivers of vehicular traffic will know where to look for the traffic policeman.

At the present time police on the same day may be dressed in blue or tan uniforms, or may simply have civilian clothes with a police cap, thus rendering identification difficult by the driver.

With situation as outlined in "C," anyone standing under the canopy has control of traffic no matter how dressed. The semaphore on top of canopy could be ten feet high for good visibility.

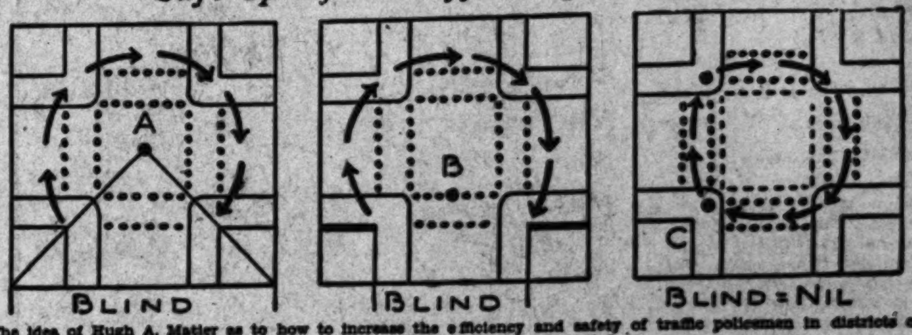
Cost would be nominal. It is not intended that this is for the permanent system or to take the place of automatic signals, but where these signals do not exist this could be used.

Any electrician will install for a cost of about $20 a square box hung from four wires from the four corners of buildings such as are at Seventh and Grand, showing stop and go in colored lights with a bell, the policeman to stand at a corner and control them.

WOULD REPEAL LAW

A report received by Collins & Lusby, distributors of Stearns-Knight cars, says that a movement has been started in England to abolish speed laws and some other traffic regulations. They plan to hold drivers responsible for carelessness.

Safe Spot for Traffic Cops Suggested



The idea of Hugh A. Matier as to how to increase the efficiency and safety of traffic policemen in districts out of the main traffic district is charted here.

OPEN FACTORY BRANCH

The Republic Motor Truck Company, Inc., of Alma, Mich., has opened a direct factory branch in Pittsburgh, Pa., to serve the interests of Republic truck owners, in the greater Pittsburgh.

The new factory branch is located on Baum Boulevard. A. A. Blattner, a prominent figure in truck circles in Pittsburgh, has been appointed branch manager. Blattner, because of his long association with truck owners, and especially with truck conditions peculiar to that territory, is exceptionally well equipped to shoulder the manifold responsibilities of his new position.

The new Republic branch in Pittsburgh is a bona fide branch in every sense of the word, and is controlled and operated under the selfsame policies which are in force at the Republic factory itself. A complete stock of every Republic model manufactured is maintained at Pittsburgh at all times, with a sufficient reserve supply to insure quick delivery to Republic dealers throughout the territory.

SURVEY COMPLETED

"The proposed highway from Beverly Hills to Mulholland High Way through Coldwater Canyon will soon be a reality," says C. A. Gasbel of the Reeve Gartzmann organization, Oakland-Pantiac distributors. "The survey has been completed and actual construction work will soon be undertaken."

SHOW SPEED

"Leaving Los Angeles at 5 in the morning, Chet Crank and Carl Palmen reached Oakland at 10 minutes after 5 the same evening, having covered the 422 miles in their Oakland roadster in a total elapsed time of twelve hours and ten minutes," says D. S. Baker, service manager for Reeve Gartzmann, Oakland-Pontiac distributors.

The Finest "Eight" Performance

Within Reach of Thousands

For many years, those able to pay top prices for motoring luxury have bought eight-cylinder cars as a matter of course.

But it remained for Hupmobile, with its efficient development of the straight-eight, to bring the finest of eight-cylinder performance to a far wider market.

Almost from its appearance two years ago, the beautiful Hupmobile Eight became the largest selling straight-eight in the world.

It arrived at a time when motor car buyers were beginning to seek something more than the old standards of performance and value; something other than price as a mark of prestige.

And so completely did the Hupmobile Eight meet the conceptions of a new value, and a totally new kind of smoothness, that discriminating buyers swept it to an immediate and overwhelming success.

When you first drive the beautiful Hupmobile Eight, you will be amazed at its fluent power, its dashing get-away—its ease of handling and riding. You will want this car for what it alone can give you in brilliant performance, in luxurious motoring, and in economy of eight-cylinder operation and upkeep.

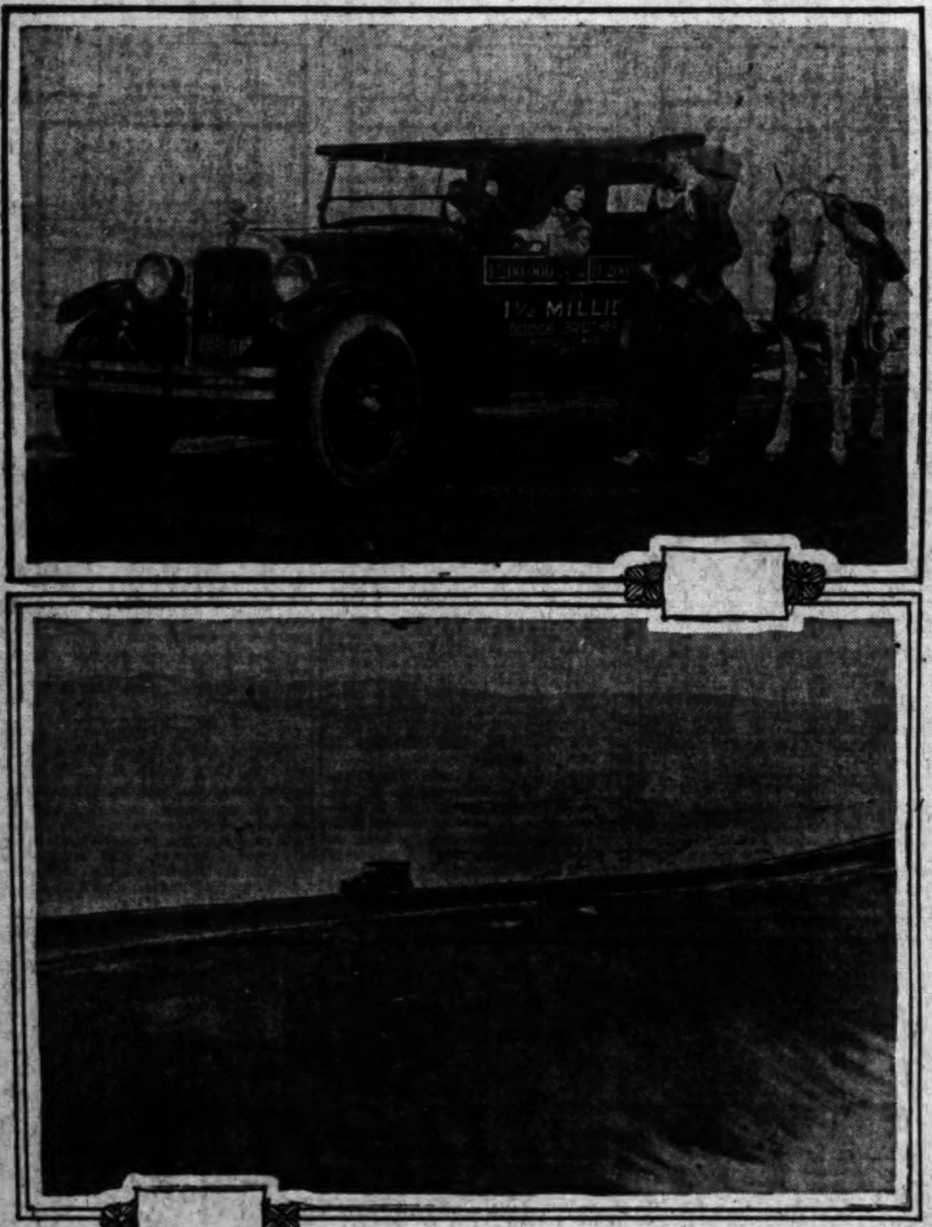
DODGE BROTHERS
MOTOR CARS

Down Near the Southern Border



Engineering genius and oil have halted the walking mountains, as the Indians call the Sand Hills between Holtville and Yuma, and now enable transcontinental motorists to roll with safety and comfort over this sandy barrier which was formerly spanned by a rickety plank road, the skeleton-like remains of which may be seen in the foreground. The famous Dodge Brothers road scout and exploration car, "Old 1,200,000," encounters weary "Cowboy Joe," who for no good reason at all is on his way to Yuma, a-foot and a-horse, to punch "ccows" as he naively explained it.

SAND CANYON ROAD PROVIDES NEW OUTLET

SAN FERNANDO, Oct. 23. (Exclusive)—Residents and property owners in Sand Canyon, near Rattlesnake Canyon, north of San Fernando, have begun work on a road up the canyon to join the road which leads in from Acton, according to W. B. Folger, who has just returned from that vicinity, where he has been looking after mining interests and the progress of the road survey now being conducted in Pacoima Canyon by the county engineers. The Sand Canyon road will give the residents a new outlet and facilitate mineral developments, declares Mr. Folger.

OIL CHANGES

High-pressure motor lubrication, together with the oil filter and air cleaner on the 1927 Chandler, make frequent oil changes unnecessary for owners. In fact, it is only necessary to change oil a few times a year, state service executives, and not every 500 miles as most motorists are accustomed to.

DEDICATE YUMA ROAD

With impressive ceremony entirely in keeping with the importance of the occasion, El Centro and Imperial Valley towns last week dedicated the six-mile paved boulevard that replaces the old plank road through the desolate Sand Hills country between Holtville and Yuma, according to word brought back by a scouting party sent out by the Albertson Motor Company, Dodge Brothers dealers for Los Angeles and vicinity.

This six-mile stretch is now a paved boulevard over which transcontinental traffic may proceed in comfort without thought of the stealthy movement of the treacherous sand dunes—called walking mountains by the Indians—which often obliterated the old plank road.

In a country that compares in desolation to the remote reaches of the Sahara and whose mountainous dunes have served as the setting for many a desert movie thriller, modern roadbuilders have constructed a cement highway that promises to defy the concerted attack of wind and sand. A twenty-foot-wide pavement now winds like a black ribbon through the dunes.

The permanent paving plan adopted was accomplished by scraping together a great dike of sand, parallel to the old plank road, and by interminable watering and tamping this dike was made into a firm foundation for the cement and asphalt surface. To prevent wind erosion of the embankment slopes, one of the most important items in the success of the plan, huge quantities of oil were spread on each side of the dike, forming an oil cake that weighs down and prevents the sand from shifting over the road.

Airplanes to Try Altitude Climb Stunt

One of the most spectacular aviation events in the West will be staged at Clover Field early next month as a feature of the reception to the Josephine Ford, the tri-motor Fokker plane in which Lieutenant-Commander Byrd flew over the North Pole.

According to word received here by Capt. Charles H. Babb, secretary of the Southern California chapter of the National Aeronautic Association from Milburn Kusterer, advance representative of the Byrd polar tour, the Josephine Ford will arrive here for a three-day exhibition, between November 5 and 9.

Kusterer advised Capt. Babb that he would arrive here Monday, and would then be able to arrange a definite day for the arrival of the famous plane and the ensuing reception which is being planned by prominent aviation officials and leading organizations.

Interested in the advancement of aviation, officials of the California Petroleum Corporation offered to sponsor an official airplane altitude contest and an air circus to be participated in by leading pilots flying the newest type ships recently perfected in surrounding airplane factories.

Capt. Babb was requested to take charge of the program and arrange all details, bringing the attempt to establish a Pacific Coast altitude record under the official observation and jurisdiction of the N.A.A.

Crack pilots of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps have been invited to participate in the Clover Field air meet staged in honor of the arrival of the Byrd polar plane. Officials of the California Petroleum Corporation also offered to play host to these visiting pilots during the air meet and reception, if arrangements could be made to have them present.

POSTPONE MEETING

Because of a delay in the building program at the Bushey plant where a meeting of tire and rubber dealers of Los Angeles was scheduled for the night of October 29, that meeting has been indefinitely postponed, it is announced by George Bellis, president of the Los Angeles Automobile Trade Association.

Jefferson to be Paved in a Few Months

Contract to improve West Jefferson street from Ninth avenue west a distance of about two miles has been awarded by the Board of Public Works to Wells & Bressler, Santa Santa Ana engineering contractors, members of the Southern California Chapter of the Asciated General Contractors of America, at $218,369.54. The westerly terminus of the improvements is at the intersection of Exposition Boulevard with Jefferson street at a point 122 feet west of Cochrane avenue.

The West Jefferson street project, otherwise known as the Jefferson Street and Mansfield Avenue Improvement District, involves more than 600,000 square feet of eight-inch cement concrete pavement and several incidental items including a storm drain and a sanitary sewer in addition to a complete street ornamental lighting system along Jefferson street between West Boulevard and Mansfield avenue.

The construction time limit for this improvement is placed at 150 working days by the City Engineer's office, but every effort will be made to have the main thoroughfare completed and opened to traffic within four months after work is started. Construction activities are scheduled to start early next month.

CLOSE AVENUE 64

Avenue 64 has been closed for resurfacing between La Loma Road and Colorado street, advises the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

From Two Recent Local Shows

Tommy Harris and the Fanchon and Marco Sunkist Beauties have been performing the past week [illegible] theater. The Rickenbacker was a feature of the Biltmore salon.

Used Car Men Organize New Association

Used-car dealers of Los Angeles have formed an organization to be known as the Bonded Automobile Dealers' Association, and have received an offer of co-operation from the Better Business Bureau of the Los Angeles Advertising Club in the work of putting the used-car business on a better plane, according to L. W. Andrews, secretary of the organization.

The Better Business Bureau, it is explained by Manager Ferris R. Miller, is interested in seeing that dealers in used cars do not advertise cars without clearly stating they are dealers, as required by the city ordinance. The object, he says, is to protect buyers who answer advertisements giving a private address, thinking that in doing so they are dealing with owners rather than dealers.

Officers of the Bonded Automobile Dealers' Association are R. Leslie Kelley, president; Charles W. Porter, vice-president; Harvey Goodwin, treasurer; L. W. Andrews, secretary, and the following directors: Archie Scott, J. F. Harmon, E. M. Gregory, W. H. Cook, A. A. Peterson.

Rickenbacker is Sensation in Auto Show

One of the biggest surprises of the inclosed-car salon at the Biltmore was the new Rickenbacker super vertical 8-90 European sedan which was expressed to Los Angeles for its initial bow.

It was the center of interest for throngs who visited the salon daily, according to Harry A. Sperl, president of the local distributing firm. Sperl says:

"I am firm in the conviction that a superautomobile has been built and I believe that car to be the new Rickenbacker 8-90 European.

"One of the interesting features of the motor is the dual carburetor installation which I believe provides the most perfect curburetion ever devised for this type motor. So far as I am informed this is the first standard straight eight in America to have two carburetors instead of the usual one.

"The terrific power developed by this new Rickenbacker motor makes it the snappiest performer I have ever experienced."

Marvelous Getaway... ...without a Knock or a Jerk or a Jiggle!

THE smart new 1927 Chandler is certainly a shining example of everything that is fine in a motor car. Fine design; fine construction; fine appointments, and—fine performance, than which there is nothing finer.

What will impress you at once is the whispering quietness of the car in action—and its quick-as-a-bullet getaway when you step on the trigger! And on steep hills, the new Chandler just naturally out-pulls anything in sight!

Chandler requires less care than any car you've ever been used to—thank's to Chandler's "One Shot" System of centralized chassis lubrication. And in addition, Chandler offers many, many other advantages—such as an air cleaner, an oil purifier, 4-wheel brakes, thermostatic heat control, self-adjusting shackles, etc., etc.

Oiling System Frees Motor From Trouble

"Efficient oiling and sealing systems that mean long life and freedom from engine trouble in motoring are features of the Diana light straight eight automobiles that owners appreciate," declares Don F. Smith, distributor of the Diana and Moon in Southern California. "Recent improvements in these [illegible] in the Diana account for the [illegible] with which the Diana has been able to make many long-distance [illegible] records, he stated.

The most recent demonstration of the Diana's efficiency in this [illegible] has just been made by R. G. Baumann of the Julian Petroleum Company who made a test run from Los Angeles to Chicago, via Denver and Omaha, a distance of [illegible] miles.

"While Baumann did not set a speed record, he did wish to know how the Diana would behave when pushed along at good speed with the crankcase filled with Rainbow [illegible] Oil," said Mr. Smith. "The crankcase holds seven quarts and was filled just before leaving here and [illegible] At Chicago the seal was broken and it was found that only one quart had been used and the remainder of the oil was in fine condition."

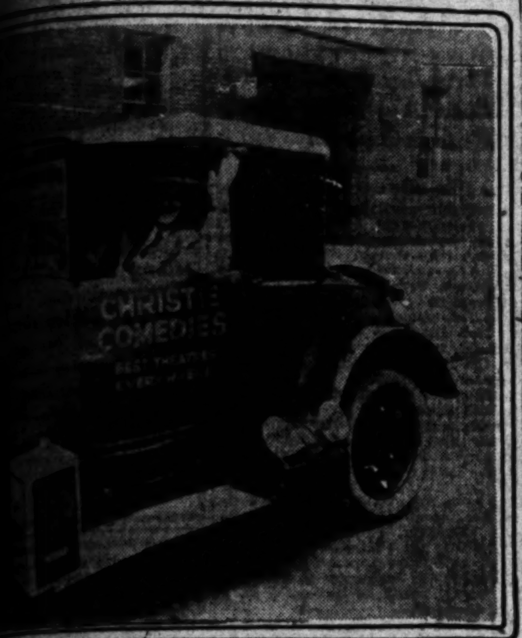
...CAR CROSSES CONTINENT

...h Citroen Being Driven Here



Pat Dowling, Christy Comedies Official

ANOTHER transcontinental record has been established in which Pennzoil played an important part. Unlike the Studebaker and Wills Sainte Clair trips, the newest record was not one of speed, but the record of the smallest automobile ever to attempt the trip from New York to the Pacific Coast, according to word received here by Carlton Christian, district sales manager of the Pennzoil Company in Los Angeles.

Driving a French Citroen, one of the smallest stock automobiles ever made, Pat Dowling, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation for Christie Comedies, left New York August 31 for a business trip across the continent, expecting to arrive home in Hollywood within a few weeks.

During the trip across the continent, Pat will stop in some 300 cities to book Christie comedies.

On the front of the car is the legend "Paris to Hollywood." Pat uses the slogan as he secured the diminutive automobile from a steamer that landed from Paris a few hours before the start.

Pat immediately christened the car "Doodle Bug" and Miss Ann Pennington—she of the tinkling feet—broke a bottle of christening fluid over the hood.

Upper Piston is Oiled by Patent Device

Automotive engineers agree that the ordinary oiling system does not give adequate lubrication to the valves and cylinders says C. C. Bogardus. The lower part of the cylinder is sufficiently lubricated but in the upper part the oil is soon thinned out by the gasoline, causing friction, heat and consequent loss of power. In the case of the valves, these are ordinarily only lubricated as far up as the cam shaft and push rods. Poor compression, leaky rings and sticking valves are a natural result of the usual lubricating system.

The Automobile Club of Southern California, after exhaustive tests, has adopted a type of auxiliary lubrication for its patrol cars which is said to improve the efficiency of these cars fully 50 per cent. This new system has the effect of providing perfect lubrication in the vital parts of the car that heretofore have been inadequately oiled.

In the new system an oiler is attached to the vacuum tank. This oiler is filled with Up-Cyl-Oil, a non-mineral oil that is impervious to the deteriorating influences of gasoline. The oil is drawn into the cylinder along with the gas, the correct proportion of lubricant being regulated by a valve on the oiler. The oil distributes itself evenly over the cylinder walls and provides a constant, uniform film between the pistons and the walls, thus sealing the combustion chamber and the valve seats in it. The result is an extreme flexibility and efficiency in the motor and unusual freedom from motor trouble. Tests made by the Auto Club have shown that cars using the Up-Cyl-Oil system run twice as far before requiring mechanical attention as cars without it. Many motorists do not use the oiler attachment in using Up-Cyl-Oil, but introduce the oil directly into the gasoline tank.

Guard Rails Save Fenders at Doorways

A disfigured fender may be the aftermath of a traffic jam, or again it may mean that the motor-car owner keeps his machine in his own private garage, says P. Martin Steinkamp, president of C. & W. Motors Inc., local Kissel distributors.

"More often than not these little private garages are so narrow that one has to drive just so to get in and out, and a misjudgment of a few inches may mean a bent or dented fender and a spoiled disposition," he says.

"I know of a number of car owners who have learned a lesson by such an experience. In the first place, they have sworn never to cramp the entrance in their building plans for another garage. They have obviated the liability of another bent fender by installing guard rails in the corners of the door opening, or little wooden or concrete guiding blocks. They have found that a piece of piping attached to each corner will solve the problem of entering the building without damage. If the car is pulled over a bit too far to the side, the tire will strike the pipe and swerve the machine enough to make a safe clearance."

CHASSIS REINFORCED

The big six Chandler chassis has been reinforced and made more durable by the addition of a tubular cross member which completely eliminates all possible strains and stresses that usually bring chassis distortion while traveling at fast speed over rough roads. With its seven sturdy cross members and one-piece aluminum motor base support, the chassis is now one of the most rigid and durable among the finer cars of the world.

NOT ONE AMERICAN CAR LASTS AS LONG AS REO—NOT ONE

You'll find the end of the Reo road is three years farther on

IT is a pleasant road, this highway that the Reo owners follow.

And it is the same highway for all, dipping gently past the white houses of New England, stretching far away across the fruitful plains of the Mid-Country or curving dizzily where the sagebrush meets the pine and the long grades lift to the Sierras' summits.

Ever and ever, it is a carefree highway, running past the pitfalls that halt the ordinary car—that spoil the promise of an early start to somewhere by weary hours of roadside repairs or garage delays.

For the Reo—every Reo—is built to go and keep on going whether across the city or across the continent. Its chief purpose is to let you forget everything but the joy of uninterrupted, comfortable, economical going.

Spendthrift of miles and miser of money

A Reo is a spendthrift of miles, tossing them behind it effortlessly, always eager to reach out for those ahead that it may turn them into merry memories.

And Reo is a miser of its owner's money. Its first cost is lower than the average for cars of its size. A tank of gas and a drink of oil carry it a long, long way.

But more than economy in gas and oil—for they amount to less than 20% of the cost of owning a car—are the great savings that come to Reo owners on the items of depreciation, upkeep and repairs.

These items total almost 60% of the yearly cost of motor car ownership. And it is here that Reo brings down costs. For Reos seldom need repairs—ask any garage repairman about that.

And when repairs are needed, in most cases they can be made more easily and quickly than on ordinary cars. That's due to Reo's advanced engineering design. The proof of it can be readily seen by coming in and asking to be shown a Reo chassis.

Reo's road is three years longer

The road that every automobile travels leads to just one place—the junk pile. But ordinary cars reach there long before Reo . . . three years before on the average, according to accepted records of automobile life.

That means less depreciation cost per year. It means higher resale value.

It is the chief reason why travel down the Reo road is so carefree, for the construction that makes Reo live so much longer means that during the usual life of a car, it must be free from troubles.

Light in weight, good to look at Reo has proved that long life and light weight are possible. The Reo Sedan is the lightest six-cylinder sedan of its size in America. It is good to look at. It is comfortable. Head room is ample, leg room enables you to stretch out, yet seats are high enough so that long drives are not wearying.

Come in and see it

Come in and see the Reo models—there's one to suit your needs and a choice of colors to please your taste. Slip into the driver's seat; head out of the garage for a long drive. Then you'll begin to feel the pleasure of the Reo road whose end is three years farther on than that of the average American car, whose miles are miles of enjoyment, whose ways are those of economy.

Try one out today.

HARTZ CINCHES DRIVING CROWN

Can Lose Next Two Races and Still Win

Second Place Best Possible for Lockhart

Contest at Culver City Due on November 28

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—It is certain that Harry Hartz, internationally known A.A.A. race driver, who has had more looks at the promised land than Moses ever had, is to descend into the valley which flows with milk and honey.

Harry, who has been the most consistent performer in American Automobile Association racing circles for four years, but who never has won a Three-A championship, got what the wrestlers term a strangle hold on the top of the ladder in the series of races at the Salem (N. H.) mile-and-a-quarter board track on the 13th inst. He won the big event, a 300-mile race, and took second in two twenty-five mile events. This is an old story now to racing enthusiasts, but the official standing of the drivers issued today by the contest board, A.A.A., gives certainty to what had heretofore been only a guess.

TOTAL 2789

Hartz's point total is now 2789 and should he fail to place in the remaining race programs at Charlotte and at Los Angeles, and Lockhart win both, Hartz would lead by fifty-nine points.

Frank Lockhart, Los Angeles motor meteor, who came flaming out of the West in this, his first year of big-league competition, may still finish second in the championship, if he can maintain his 305-point lead over Peter De Paolo, the 1925 champion driver. It is almost safe to hazard a guess that the finish for this year will be Hartz, Lockhart and De Paolo, for the first three places.

The year coming to a close has seen no walk-aways by first-line drivers—they have had to fight their way as the marines did at Belleau Wood, inch by inch. Lockhart, with the impetuousness of youth, made Harry Hartz extend himself to stay out in front. Frank attacked the job of getting to the top in whirlwind style, forcing Harry to the highest point in his driving career to keep ahead. The Salem race results pushed Peter Kreisse, young Knoxville (Tenn.,) hurricane from twelfth to ninth in the standing. Duray, who drives a sister front-wheel drive to Kreise's, passed up the line from eighteen to fifteenth.

INCREASE SPEED

The race program just run demonstrated one thing particularly—the problems that have made life miserable for the drivers due to the advent of the ninety-one-and-a-half-cubic-inch racing cars are being mastered. The speed is gradually rising since the first race run with the new cars on May 31 at Indianapolis. Hartz qualified at 136.3 miles an hour at Salem. The second sprint race was won at 130.39, and 130 miles per hour is plenty fast. In a few more months so well will the boys have their fleet charges under the bit that it may be expected they will approach the speed of the 122-cubic-inch cars in time.

The two remaining race cards of the season will be a program of short races at Charlotte, N. C., on November 11, consisting of two twenty-five-mile races, a fifty and 150; and a 250-mile race on the Culver City track at Los Angeles on November 28.

The standing of the first five drivers in the championship race is Hartz, 2789; Lockhart, 1780; De Paolo, 1475; Hill, 995; Comer, 620; Frank Elliott being tied for fifth place with Comer.

CHILD DEATH GAIN LEAST

Adult Fatalities Increase Fastest, According to Recent Survey

Indicating that safety training in the schools and protective measures for children on the streets are of practical benefit, figures of the National Safety Council recently received by the Automobile Club of Southern California show that only a slight comparative increase is being registered in child auto fatalities. According to the records, deaths to children less than 15 years of age increased only about 3½ per cent in 1925 over 1924 throughout the country, while the fatalities among adults increased about 14 per cent in the same period.

OUTLOOK FOR SMALL FACTORIES IS BRIGHT

F. B. Sears, president of the Elcar Motor Company of Elkhart, Ind., in addressing a recent meeting of Elcar distributors, described very convincingly the future he prophesies for the smaller automobile manufacturer. It is his firm belief that there will always be a place in the sun for the manufacturer whose output is relatively modest in quantity. "It is my belief," Mr. Sears said in part, "that since there will always be a rather large number of car buyers who want and demand special features which cannot be supplied in cars produced in tremendous quantities on a standardized pattern, the smaller manufacturer will always be sure of a market if he is capable of producing a car of distinguished appearance, which will be unique by virtue of its distinguished appearance and because its owner can be sure that every other car is not a duplicate of his own."

High Rental is No Worry to West Family

The shortage of good home sites and the high cost of rent will never bother Mr. T. E. West and his daughter Remona, who have made their home in their Chandler palace-on-wheels for the past several years. The Wests enjoy housekeeping in their Chandler, for they have already covered more than 66,000 miles, traveling over the highways and byways of the United States and Canada.

Mr. West, who is an architect and builder, is also an ardent motorist. Stopping at Chandler factory headquarters in Cleveland on his way to the sunny Southland for the winter, he extolled the performance ability of his Chandler and reminisced in a most interesting manner over his travels for the past several seasons.

"We average about 200 miles a day in our Chandler, with the exception of Sundays," he said, "for then the roads are so crowded that it is pretty much of a job trying to maintain our average mileage. Fortunately we have escaped accidents and have not even a bump or scratch anywhere on the car, despite the rather large amount of driving we do."

CAR ORDERED FROM FRANCE

Ordered by letter from France, where he was globe-trotting, and ordered after he had inspected the prize motor-vehicle wares of a half-dozen European countries where they make much of exclusive, custom-built motor cars at exhorbitant prices, a five-passenger Dietrich-bodied Lincoln sedan was scheduled to be delivered this week by Maddux, Inc., to Dr. J. A. Oakley, retired physician of Los Angeles.

In ordering the new car, it was disclosed by Carl Miller, the Maddux representative who handled the order, Dr. Oakley turned in his former Lincoln—a 1921 model, which had gone 65,000 miles, and with such service as to determine Dr. Oakley on a new one of the same make.

"Similarly," said Miller yesterday, "D. A. Goodwin ordered a Lincoln in connection with a European trip. There was this difference, however, that Dr. Oakley is just returning from abroad; Mr. Goodwin just getting ready to sail. His will be a special Judkins model with a two-passenger body, and will be delivered to him immediately on his return, six months hence."

J. Dabney Day, president of the Citizens' National Bank; J. Leslie Barneson, General Petroleum Company; George I Cochran, president of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company; Francis Beckett, also of the Pacific Mutual, are some of the Blue Book registrants of new Lincolns that have just taken delivery at Maddux headquarters, it is announced by James Kane, manager of sales and service.

OCEAN PARK MAN LEADER IN CONTEST

Charles J. Carr, Franklin automobile dealer of Ocean Park, was one of the winners in the national contest for salesmen conducted by the Franklin Automobile Company during the three months ending September 31, last. Two other California salesmen participated in the awards.

The competition, covering the third quarterly phase of the "Franklin twenty-fifth anniversary sales contest," was among all Franklin salesmen in the United States, awards being made to the men who delivered the greatest volume of new business. Interpretations of new business in accordance with the rules of the contest applied to all sales made to non-Franklin owners.

New Topanga Road Open to Travel Soon

Within the next three or four months motorists will be able to travel over a forty-foot highway from Girard city limits to the top of the pass on Topango Canyon Drive. Work of widening this highway, grading and surfacing it with oil and screened rock has just been started and will be pushed to completion.

The contract is in the hands of James Martin, who has set a gang of men to work clearing away the brush where thirty culverts will be laid. Other gangs will soon be busy with the widening work. The contract calls for nearly two miles of new road to be constructed at a cost of $60,090.42.

Don P. Smith, distributor of Moon six and Diana light straight eight motor cars, sent a new Moon six-sixty roadster out over the road last week to get some pictures of the present highway which he will keep until the new link is completed to show the contrast between the two. There is a clause in the contract providing that the road shall be kept open while the rebuilding work is going on.

Because of the numerous fills it was decided to put on an oil screen surface for the present until every part of the road becomes settled, when it will be paved with concrete.

Lock Too Good for Careless to Appreciate

Surprising as it may seem, the automobile owner does not wish to take any trouble to protect the investment he has in his car. In fact, it makes him angry to be forced to do so. That is the conclusion that the Olds Motor Works reached when, in the course of bringing out the new Series E models, a positive locking device was installed which automatically locked the car when the ignition was turned off.

So many were the protests from Oldsmobile owners that the company had to modify the lock so the motor could be shut off without locking the switch.

That is the inside story of the new Oldsmobile ignition lock as received from the factory by Clair R. Savage, sales manager for J. W. Leavitt & Co., Oldsmobile distributors for Southern California.

"The mechanism of the lock is such that after the key has served its function of unlocking the ignition it becomes an obstacle in turning on the ignition system," says Mr. Savage. "Therefore, the key must be removed from the lock to start the engine. This is the first safeguard forcing the driver to pocket his key before he starts his engine and prevents his putting it back in the switch until the ignition has again been locked as a steel disc closes the keyhole when the switch is turned on."

CARPENTIER CONVINCED BY AUTO

Three-Day Test Proves to Boxer the Value of Car Made in America

Georges Carpentier, World War hero and internationally famous pugilist, recently paid a nice compliment to an American-made car when he indicated his delight with the Gardner eight-in-line after three days' experience with the car.

According to a letter received by Harold L. Arnold, Gardner distributor for Southern California, from L. G. Raynor, Georges was entertained by the Raynor Motor Company, Gardner distributors for Western Washington, during his recent visit in that territory.

A Gardner eight-in-line was placed at the disposal of Georges by Mr. Raynor during his entire stay in Tacoma. Deep regret was expressed by the famous Frenchman when the time came for him to turn the Gardner back to the Raynor Motor Company. However, the itinerary planned for him by the Pantages circuit, on which he is now appearing, made it impossible for Carpentier to keep the car longer, much as he would have liked to do so.

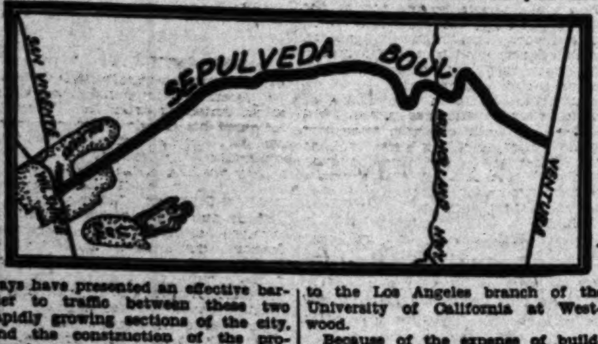
SEPULVEDA IN TRAFFIC PLAN

BY CLARENCE R. SNETHEN
Executive Secretary, Traffic Commission

Sepulveda Boulevard, as proposed, will provide the only easy grade, wide roadway between the San Fernando Valley and the western section of Los Angeles, west of Cahuenga Pass.



The Santa Monica Mountains always have presented an effective barrier to traffic between these two rapidly growing sections of the city, and the construction of the proposed road will offer this much-needed short cut.

For this reason, Sepulveda Boulevard has been included in the second unit of the Major Traffic Street Plan, which will be constructed with the passage of charter amendment No. 7-A, on the ballot at the next Tuesday election.

Connection with the interior arteries of the valley, Sepulveda Boulevard will start at Ventura Boulevard, cross the mountains at an easy grade and connect with Wilshire Boulevard at Sawtelle, from where it will be continued, eventually, to Redondo and Palos Verdes. According to present plans, a short tunnel will be built under the crest of the Santa Monica range, under the Mulholland Highway.

This boulevard will be of great benefit to the San Fernando Valley, as it will offer a new, short route to the beaches and will pass close to the Los Angeles branch of the University of California at Westwood.

Because of the expense of building this road through the mountains, in a hardly inhabited district, it will be necessary for the city at large to pay a portion of the cost. Charter amendment No. 7-A calls for a tax increase of 9 cents per $100 of assessed value, for five years only. This tax increase will bring in about $1,600,000 a year for each of the five years.

All of this money will be used to pay the city share of the twenty projects included in the second unit. As these projects were so distributed as to benefit each section of the city, every voter, no matter where he lives, should approve charter amendment No. 7-A.

MODERN TRUCK HAULS MORE THAN REGIMENT OF COOLIES

Advances that transportation by truck have brought to modern industry were graphically described yesterday by Ethelbert Favary, consulting engineer of the Moreland Motor Truck Co., who pointed out that one of the big Moreland ten-ton trucks has a working capacity of 1280 men.

In the oriental countries, Mr. Favary declared, the common mode of transportation of goods, either from vessels or over the roads, is by coolie labor. The average Chinese coolie is capable of carrying 100 pounds. Taking a ten-hour day for purposes of computation one can carry this 100 pounds ten miles, allowing for a return the same distance empty handed. Translated into terms of present-day shipping this is one-half a ton mile per day. And this, according to Mr. Favary, is giving the coolie "all the best of it."

The big Moreland ten-ton truck, working but eight hours, and being driven at an average speed of sixteen miles an hour, travels 128 miles a day—a very conservative estimate, Mr. Favary said, as many go much farther. Allowing the truck only half this distance for pay loads, it travels sixty-four miles daily, and with ten-tons' capacity, has a rating of 640 ton miles. Comparing this with the half-ton coolie rating it can do the work of 1280 of them.

That transportation by truck is also vastly cheaper than it would be with coolie labor, as cheap as it is, was shown by Mr. Favary.

The average coolie receives but ten cents a day, he said. The 1280 men who would be required to do the work of a ten-ton truck would be paid, at this rate, $128 a day, a great deal more than it would cost to operate a truck doing the same amount of work including all charges of interest, depreciation and any others which might be assessed against the truck. Quite obviously hauling by truck is a great deal cheaper than paying a man the occidental scale of wages for his time and also paying him for the use of his team of horses and wagon.

"The wisdom of hauling by truck is daily becoming more apparent to everyone," said Mr. Favary. "The modern six-wheeled, dual axle drive truck with ten-tons' capacity can be driven over present-day highways with less damage than other models and with a greater pay-load capacity. Four driving wheels, each brake-equipped, give an equable power distribution and double braking safety—the latter an angle on crowded thoroughfares and intense traffic that furnishes food for much thought."

CARS WITHSTAND STORM

From out of the desolation and restoration in hurricane-swept Florida have come unusual tales of queer storm accidents, and the havoc wrought by the terrific storm with millions of dollars' worth of automobiles. In the holocaust which virtually stripped the Southern State's magnificent winter resort sections, destroyed crops and fruits of all kinds, and made homeless nearly 16,000 persons, the tales of rescues attempted and effected are awe-inspiring.

The Rev. E. B. Madeira, pastor of St. John's Church in Hollywood, Fla., hurried to the door of the parsonage on September 18 to see the deafening hurricane swooping down upon the city. "I saw my home damaged, my garage blown away, and destruction wreaked on every hand," the Rev. Madeira wrote, in a letter addressed to the Chrysler factory. "Through the terrific wind and rain and the smashing of buildings all about us, my Chrysler roadster stood unharmed where the garage had been. As the worst of the storm blew over I dug away the timbers and other wreckage and stepped on the starter. The motor started at once and every day and night since then that car has contributed valiantly in the distribution of food and other relief to the less fortunate."

Another story from the Chrysler factory tells of the experience of Marguerite B. McKinley of Fort Myers, who was visiting in Miami Beach when the storm came. She was marooned for more than nineteen hours in the home of a friend whose waves swept into the house, filling it with water to a depth of fifteen inches.

After the storm had cleared she cleaned more than a bushel of seaweed and other debris from under the hood, and backed out into the street, where not a car was standing with top intact. The water was still running above her knees. Following the abatement of the flood water she drove back to Fort Myers without any mechanical adjustments having been made to the Chrysler.

THOMAS HEADS BRANCH STORE

W. E. Thomas

THE appointment of W. E. Thomas, former service manager of the Lord Motor Car Company, as manager of their new Hollywood branch store has just been announced by Harry A. Lord, president of the Jordan distributing organization.

"The promotion of Mr. Thomas to his new post is the direct result of his marked executive ability as manager of the service and used-car departments, and his devotion to the interests of the company in the years he has been with us have earned him this new position of greater responsibilities," said Mr. Lord.

"To fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Thomas's promotion, I have appointed H. F. Bensfield as new manager of our city service department. Ever since he came to us he has taken a keen interest in the proper functioning of all phases of our business, and has submitted a great many ideas for the betterment of service. His knowledge of this work, his unmistakable executive ability and the fact that his personality readily wins him friends for the organization have won him this promotion.

"We have always taken great pride in our service department, for we long ago recognized the vital importance of efficient service to our customers, and in our twenty years selling and servicing cars in Los Angeles believe we have maintained a high standard. Many of our staff of mechanics have been with us since the early days of the automobile in Los Angeles.

"It is a well-known fact that a well-conducted service department is a prolific source of new-car business, and that the prestige of many sales organizations depends to a great measure upon the efficiency and personnel of their service organizations, and we fully appreciate the importance of this work."

Dealers Meet in November at Elsinore

The 1926 annual convention of the Southern California Automotive Dealers' Association will be held November 20-21 at Elsinore. This announcement, authorized by President J. Harold Wilson of Riverside, was given out at association headquarters here yesterday by James E. Granger association manager, and secretary of the Los Angeles Automobile Trade Association.

Delegates will attend from Los Angeles, Pasadena, Riverside, Bakersfield, San Diego, Santa Ana, Anaheim and other points where local trade associations are a part of the Southland body. It is anticipated there will be an attendance of at least 200.

DIRT HARMUL TO LINING IN BRAK

"Few people realize the amount of dirt and grit that gets into the brake lining of their cars," say Strout & Pickering of the Brake Shop, Inc. "They also have no idea of the braking power that is reduced by these foreign substances and the consequent lessening of the ability to stop in cases of emergency. When a driver notices this he should lose no time in having his brakes tested and adjusted. It is then the lining is found impaired by the dirt and gravel that have found their way in and the necessity for relining becomes known."

HEADLIGHTS A PROBLEM

Lack of sufficient light is a much more common cause of accident than is glare, statistics show, asserts the October issue of the Journal of the Society of Automotive Engineers. It defines the ideal headlight as one that shows with sufficient clearness all that a driver needs to see when the road ahead is free from approaching vehicles, and that projects very little light to the spot occupied by the eyes of an approaching driver.

Obviously no system of lighting can accomplish both objects at the same time. As roads are neither level nor straight, the eyes of an approaching driver may occupy almost any position in the pattern of light thrown by the lamps, hence no adequate lighting is possible that will not at times cause glare. Any practical system, therefore, must be a compromise.

The light beams thrown by lamps mounted rigidly on the car can be adjusted to any desired angle with the horizontal, but when once adjusted all changes in direction, both horizontal and vertical, of the axis of the car must be followed by the axis of the light beams. The requisite compromise in angle of tilt lies between an axis high enough for illumination of the road and low enough to avoid the eyes of an approaching driver. The best possible compromise of this kind gives at times only 100 to 200 feet of visible distance on the road surface, as when approaching the foot of a hill, whereas on topping a hill the maximum light is thrown into the eyes of an approaching driver. No adequate lighting of road signs, pedestrians or other objects at the side of the road seems to be possible with this type of lighting.

A compromise effected by devices for tilting or dimming the lamps involves changing the light pattern when meeting other cars. The driving light may give the best pattern for open-road driving and the meeting light the best possible illumination compatible with the interests of both drivers.

On all roads where touring speeds are safe very little light is needed or desirable on the road surface within 50 to 100 feet, but when meeting other vehicles bright illumination is needed in this area and on the shoulder and right-hand side of the road. This makes it imperative that practically no light should be projected above the horizontal at any time, and the driver, in self-protection, is forced to depress his own lights, thus automatically protecting the other driver from glare.

The safety feature might be enhanced by arranging the system so that switching from one adjustment to the other would be accomplished by pressure of the left foot of the operator, the depressed beam being the one in use except when the driver holds the button down.

INLAND ROUTE CLEAR

The inland route to San Francisco is clear of all detours as the ten-mile detour between Modesto and Salida has been eliminated, states a bulletin from the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Women Drivers Find Appeal in Brougham Type

Manufacturers of fine motor cars, especially those of the closed models that appeal to women, know that the judgment of appreciative women is usually a criterion of the value of any extensive improvements made in the body design of their cars, declares Don P. Smith, distributor in Southern California for the Moon six and Diana light straight-eight automobiles. Women drivers who have seen and tried the new Diana brougham have been delighted with the recent improvements accomplished in this model for the safety and convenience of both driver and passengers, Mr. Smith stated.

"Mothers especially appreciate the extreme roominess in the rear seating compartment of this new two-door model, as it gives unusual freedom of movement and the utmost comfort to passengers. Children can be carried in the rear seat in perfect safety and comfort," said Mr. Smith. "They cannot open the doors and a woman driver can tour for miles, chatting comfortably with a front-seat friend, without the least fear or worry for her little ones.

"Not only has unusual roominess been obtained by the engineers through their use of extensive steel construction in the body, but the ventilating system is simple and adequate and is easily controlled by the driver without stopping the car or changing position. A slight raising of the windshield is sufficient to provide a gentle current of air through the entire car."

CHEVROLET

"The Bathtub Test"
—plowing through water to prove Chevrolet's ability to perform efficiently in all kinds of weather. This is just one of the many tests to which Chevrolet cars are subjected at the General Motors Proving Grounds.

Performance proved beyond all doubt!

Out on the curves and straightaways of the General Motors Proving Grounds—over rough and rutted roads, through blistering heat and bitter cold, through rain and slush and mud and snow, Chevrolet performance is proved before it is enjoyed by owners!

Here testers drive, night and day, until the speedometers register 20—30—40,000 miles and more! Here during the long, steady grind—every mile of which is driven under observation—materials and designs are constantly analyzed and checked; performance, wear and repairs are tabulated! Here the collective genius and experience of Chevrolet and General Motors engineers is utilized to assure buyers an investment of utmost soundness and satisfaction when they purchase a Chevrolet!

BEACH ARTERY IS PROPOSED

Mountain-to-Sea Highway is in Contemplation

Road Would Have Terminus in Long Beach

Hundred-Foot Path is Aim of Participating Cities

Having as their objective a major highway which shall be continuous from the Sierra Madre Mountains to Long Beach, the West San Gabriel Valley Highways Committee composed of citizens of Alhambra, San Marino, Arcadia, Pasadena, South Pasadena, San Gabriel and Monterey Park have launched a movement for the opening and widening of Baldwin avenue in Arcadia and Rosemead avenue in Monterey Park, which, with its connection will form a link of highways in a straight line from Sierra Madre to the sea.

Rights of way for the proposed boulevard extension are already secured south of Valley Boulevard, and preliminary work will be started on Baldwin avenue next week. The plan is to make a boulevard 100 feet wide along the entire stretch, and to put through the improvements under the Mattoon Act. Intercommunicating roads between Pasadena, Sierra Madre, Arcadia and Monrovia will also be taken care of under the proposed improvements.

William J. Fox, chief engineer of the Los Angeles County Regional Planning Commission has been meeting the representatives of the several cities involved, and has approved the plan. A. M. King, of Monterey Park, chairman of the Valley Beautiful Association, has been active in securing rights of way, and it is believed that the eight miles of highway will be well under way inside of a month.

Add Victoria to Stock of Studebakers

A big six custom victoria, the latest addition to the Studebaker custom line of inclosed cars, is now on display in the showrooms of Paul G. Hoffman Company, local Studebaker dealers. This newcomer to the ranks combines with the beauty, refinement and comfort of the custom sedans, the intimacy and smartness of the personal coupe—and in addition, the abundant power of the big six motor, equaled in rated horsepower by only seven other American automobiles costing two to four times more.

So adroitly have the designers of the big six custom victoria planned its interior that there is ample seating and leg room for four adult passengers, yet there is not the slightest suggestion of bulk in its trim lines. Two passengers are carried in the wide, deeply cushioned and form-fitting lounge seat which is set at the right and slightly to the rear of the driver's seat. The third passenger rides in the auxiliary seat, which is high-backed, deeply upholstered and affords complete relaxation, even on long tours. When not in use, this auxiliary seat folds under the cowl.

Unusual luggage-carrying space is provided. Behind the driver's seat is a compartment for small parcels, a notable shopping convenience. Under the rear deck is a commodious locker for baggage.

The grace and poise of the low-swung, sleek body is accentuated by the lustrous lacquer finish of Croatan green with ebony belt, striped in ivory. Supplementing the smart color scheme of the exterior, the interior is finished in rich, harmonizing tones. Upholstery is in fine Chase mohair with broadlace trim. Butler finish hardware, opal iridescent dome light, silken window shades and toggle grip reflect the completeness of appointments.

Varied Model Trucks Found to be Asset

Different model trucks for different type loads are proving popular with Southern California business firms, according to the views expressed yesterday by L. C. Leiber, motor-truck sales manager of the local factory branch of the International Harvester Company.

"The International line of motor trucks includes models that will meet every motor transportation requirement," said Mr. Lieber. "From the new light special delivery truck of less than ton loads to the Model 103 with a capacity of 10,000 pounds you will find these trucks doing speedy hauling at low cost under a wide variety of conditions.

"More and more firms requiring a variety of sizes and types of body equipment are standardizing on International trucks. The American Wholesale Hardware Company of Long Beach is one of the many firms taking advantage of the completeness of the International line."

Legal Overloads--

The law in California prohibits a greater load on any one axle of a highway vehicle than 18,000 pounds.

Moreland four-wheel-drive, six-wheel trucks can legally carry loads above their rated capacity.

They operate more economically — earn greater profits and comply with the law.

Get the story of Moreland six-wheeler patented dual-axle trucks. It will pay you.

DETOUR PASSES CLIFF RELICS

Main Road Now Under Construction to be Open in Week

There is a detour jus teast of Flagstaff, Ariz., on the National Old Trails route, according to the touring department of the National Automobile Club, which is, at the present time, in good shape. This detour takes one past the ancient cliff dwellings at Walnut Canyon. It is expected that the main road will be opened within the next week and this will throw into use a well-surfaced highway to Winslow. There are two routes to the Grand Canyon from the National Olds Trails route, one by way of Maine, which is in the best shape at the present time and the other by way of Williams which is quite rough due to recent heavy rains in that section.

DIRT TRACKS INCREASE IN POPULARITY

Converted Stock Cars Used by Youthful Race Drivers on Coast

The majority of followers of the speedway sport are of the opinion that the day is past when stock cars have any part in automobile racing in America.

Since the expensive special racing cars have been developed by Harry A. Miller of Los Angeles and the Duesenberg Brothers, it is true that the automobile built for transportation purposes has no chance on the speedways; but there is more dirt track racing in the United States today than ever before. It is more than a coincidence that the champions of the American Automobile Association classics of the present day are the "sand lot" drivers of a year or two ago.

Frank Lockhart, the Los Angeles racer who won the international sweepstakes—the annual 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Speedway—and several other sensational victories of the past season, is a graduate of the dirt track. Only three years ago young Lockhart was piloting a four-cylinder American-built car he had converted into a racing mount after it had been driven over thousands of miles on California highways.

With the money he won with his first racing car—the built-over stock touring model—Lockhart bought an antiquated Miller special. With the purses won with this car he bought one of the new ninety-one-cubic inch speedway specials and it now fighting it out with Harry Hartz for the 1926 championship award of the A.A.A.

In many of the "sand lot" racing events in the United States during the past three years the Star car has played a leading role. Hundreds of youngsters who aspire to win gold and glory on the board speedways, where the pace is slow at 120 miles an hour, have taken Star cars and worked them into racing mounts, which have been fast enough to win fat purses for their youthful owners.

One of the outstanding "minor league" speed merchants of the Pacific Coast today is Mark Owen of Spokane, Wash. Young Owen of a Star car that has been built over into a dirt track racer and which is recognized as one of the fastest cars on the dirt tracks of the West.

During the racing season which has just ended Owen has won five first places and placed in the money a score of times. The Spokane speed demon hopes some day to follow in the footsteps of the famous Lockhart and already is a dangerous contender on the dirt tracks even when entered against drivers with more expensive automobiles than his Star.

MONKEY WRENCH IS MUCH-NEEDED TOOL

Is the monkey wrench ,which came as part of the equipment when you bought your car, an idle investment? According to D. R. McBryde of the McBryde Lubricating Service here, it shouldn't be.

"Every car owner should take out his monkey wrench occasionally and go over his car looking for a chance to use it," McBryde says. "Work will always be found, as the vibration of the car has a way of loosening things up which is unbelievable. Especially is this true of the spring clips. As these clips hold the springs upon their seats, they are subjected to considerable strain and in a few months of driving, the nuts will frequently work themselves loose."

Carbon Deposit in Motors is Trouble Cause

Accumulation of carbon in motors is affecting 20,000,000 motor-driven vehicles daily in the United States and owners are spending $420,000,000 yearly to have this substance removed, says a statement made by an eminent engineer and just received here by L. J. McCracken, manager of the Willys-Overland-Pacific Company. This report also says that 90,000,000 working hours are lost by engines because of carbon yearly.

"Poppet-valve motors accumulate thick deposits of carbon on the piston heads and cylinder walls that seriously affects the operation of these motors by reducing power and economy and causing 'carbon knocks,'" said McCracken. "It has to be removed by mechanical means for a satisfactory chemical solution for the trouble has not been found. The engine has to be either partly torn down and the deposit scraped out or it must be burned out through the use of oxygen.

"But there are 500,000 motors running throughout the United States that do not require this work. They are the Knight sleeve valve type such as powers the Willys-Knight cars. The operation of the Willys-Knight engine and others of its type is such that whatever carbon accumulates in the cylinders helps the engine by sealing it against compression leaks."

Two Added to Sales Staff of Wills Dealer

Each identified with the automobile industry since 1910, except during the time they were in army uniforms, two new salesmen were added to the sales personnel of the Wills Sainte Claire Motor Company last week.

They are T. E. Lokey, formerly of Dallas, Tex., where he was first introduced to Motor Row, and D. Chisholm.

Mr. Lokey was an aviator during the war and formed a high opinion of the Liberty motor, used in the government airplanes. The Wills Sainte Claire motor is of the same design, H. C. Wills, president of the company, being on the board which finally passed the specifications of the motor which was declared the last word in power. For nearly two years he was commanding officer of the 258th Squadron at Wilbur Wright Field and has a knowledge of motors not usually embraced by automobile salesmen.

Mr. Chisholm has been on Automobile Row in Los Angeles for several years in different capacities and has a large acquaintance in the city. He is expected to prove a decided asset to the Wills Sainte Claire Motor Company sales force.

Soon after war was declared in 1914, together with many other young men, he went to France where he enlisted in the French Foreign Legion, serving with that famous organization three years, when he was discharged on account of wounds received and returned to the United States. He entered the Legion as a private and was discharged as a lieutenant.

GREASE WOULD SAVE MILLIONS OF DOLLARS

It is estimated that America's 20,000,000 motorists travel 190,000,000,000 miles each year in their cars (average mileage per car between 9000 and 10,000 miles,) and spend more than $19,500,000,000 in operating costs.

Of this total operating expense, American motorists waste hundreds of millions of dollars annually through improper lubrication, claims J. V. Whitbeck, vice-president in charge of engineering of the Chandler-Cleveland Motors Corporation.

"Fleet owners who keep close tab on the amount of money it takes to run their cars, have lowered operating costs from 1 cent to 1 3-4 cents per mile through proper chassis lubrication," he continued.

"This saving is an average reduction in operating costs per car of more than $130 per year to the individual motorist. If it were possible for every motorist to have his car thoroughly and dependably lubricated at all times it would mean an annual saving of millions of dollars."

CRYSLER SALES ARE HOLDING AT PEAK

Despite the fact that at this time of year automobile factories usually face certain seasonable declines in sales which in turn affects production, the Chrysler Corporation at the present time is producing 800 cars a day, according to reports received here by Greer Robbins Company, Chrysler distributors for Southern California. "This is partly because of the very satisfactory public acceptance of the new Chrysler '50,' recently introduced," says Frank B. Hughes, sales manager for Greer Robbins Company.

SEPULVEDA IS MADE LONG THOROUGHFARE

SAN FERNANDO, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—The recent action of the Los Angeles City Council in voting to change the name of a portion of Brand Boulevard from near Roscoe street to Mission Acres to that of Sepulveda avenue, now means that Sepulveda is one of the longest thoroughfares for automobile travel in this part of the State. It extends from a point just south of San Fernando, through Mission Acres, across Ventura Boulevard, over the low range of mountains and two the sea. When the Coast end of the boulevard is completely improved with the work now being planned motorists may go almost directly from the United States Veterans' Hospital, three miles north of San Fernando, through to the ocean without being bothered with heavy traffic.

MAKE ARIZONA TRIP

In 1915 the Zahn brothers, including Dr. L. Paul Zahn of Hollywood, a Franklin owner since 1914, drove a big six Franklin through the Navajo country into the San Juan River Basin in Southern Utah, the first automobile to penetrate that section. Last year, in May, Charles J. Carr, Franklin dealer at Ocean Park, and Rupert L. Larson of Franklin Camel fame, visited the Rainbow Natural Bridge and Navajo Mountains in the Franklin Camel III, the third of the line of air-cooled scout cars. Dr. Zahn and Carr, being anxious to revisit the Southern Utah-Northern Arizona country, and to take their families, arranged a fifteen-day trip to cover the points of scenic, historical and archaeological interest, from which they have just returned.

The party consisted of Dr. and Mrs. Zahn, and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Beldin (Dr. Zahn's daughter,) in a 1924 Franklin touring car, and Mr. and Mrs. Carr in a 1926 Franklin sedan.

In general the route of the 2250-mile tour was from Los Angeles to Zion National Park via Las Vegas, Nev., thence to Cedar Breaks and Bryce Canyon, after which the two Franklins were headed for the North Rim of the Grand Canyon, where the great Kaibab Forest remains almost untouched by the hand of man. While at the North Rim Carr visited the Wylie-Way Camp and renewed acquaintance with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. McKee, who have charge of this resort, the Franklin Camel I, with Carr and Larson, having visited all these points in 1922.

PROVE GAS CLAIMS

Making a test to prove claims of Willys-Overland that the Overland Whippet gives thirty miles to the gallon of gasoline, a representative of a leading business magazine established a record of 30.6 miles recently. The test was observed by William Leininger, petroleum engineer with the Pierce Petroleum Corporation. The car was a Whippet sedan from the St. Louis branch of Willys-Overland.

A report of the test was received here by L. J. McCracken, manager of the Willys-Overland-Pacific Company, stating that the speedometer on the car showed that it had been run 1074 miles, and was thoroughly broken in before the test was started. That a fair average might be secured, the course selected included an uphill climb with a return downhill over the same route.

"According to the report," says Mr. McCracken, "road conditions were perfect, the surface being bituminous macadam. There were three passengers in the car.

"On the uphill run the Whippet gave 28.8 miles to the gallon, and on the downhill trip gave 32.4 miles, making an average of 30.6 miles. The car was driven at speeds between twenty and twenty-five miles an hour.

"The magazine representative declared after the test that the appearance of the car in the market making economy claims among the light makes of cars which constitute the vast bulk of automobiles is a matter of first importance to the petroleum industry."

NAME CURES FOR MOTOR ACCIDENTS

Three main principles essential for the prevention of automobile accidents which should be inaugurated by national, State and local authorities are: (1) engineering revision of streets; (2) regulation of traffic and respect for and enforcement of traffic laws; (3) education of motorists and pedestrians. This is the belief of the National Safety Council which has just closed its fifteenth annual congress in Detroit, it is reported to the public-safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

FRANKLIN COUPÉ

New Price the Lowest at which any Franklin closed car has ever been offered. Special fall showing of this great 25th Anniversary Car Now Ready

At this astonishingly favorable price—by far the lowest at which any Franklin closed car has ever been offered—the great popularity of this Coupé is certain to soar to new heights.

How eagerly motorists wanted a car of just this description was evident the moment it appeared. Heavy demand compelled an output double that originally scheduled, and pushed it to a place in Franklin's total production never before reached by any closed car but the Sedan.

And how widespread has been its influence on car builders can be seen on every hand today. This Coupé has revolutionized personal closed car design.

Its narrow steel front pillars, introducing the greater safety of clear vision, have spread through the industry like wildfire. Its broad single seat has shown owners and makers how to combine lounging roominess for two with chummy comfort for three.

Its soft leather trim has given new impetus to the vogue for leather upholstery in closed cars. Its use of the fully covered cabriolet-type rear quarter and curving side-irons has greatly widened the popularity of those style details. And its extra wide doors and extra large luggage spaces—notably that made possible by the smart English coach-boot rear—have also proved highly desirable features.

But only Franklin style and Franklin construction principles can weave these details into a whole so perfect in design and performance.

Only Franklin is cooled as are the newest airplanes: by air—free from all radiator trouble. Only Franklin is flexibly built throughout—free from the usual jolt and jar. Only Franklin is so free from the inertia and pounding of useless extra weight.

And only this Coupé takes such marvelous advantage of these principles. Exceptionally low-slung, with its uncommonly light-weight top, it rides with a steadiness free from side-sway, and drives with an ease which is unusual even for Franklin.

If you want the most distinctive—if you want the best performing—if you want the finest—of the new-day personal closed cars, come and see this marvelous Franklin Coupé, now at the lowest price at which any Franklin closed car has ever been offered. Available also with rumble seat at slight extra cost.

PRICES OF OTHER FRANKLIN TYPES ARE NOW AS FOLLOWS:

They also discovered that Mr. Nies, who has year in and year out watched the pageant slowly change from clicking hoofs to perfected motor cars, is a strong advocate of the all-steel modern automobile such as the Essex.

"This is real steel," remarked Mr. Nies, as he examined the rigid body of the new all-of-steel Essex six coach. "Man and boy, I've studied iron and steel for over thirty-five years. I've seen some marvelous developments in the hardening processes of steel. I saw it in the old days when it was almost as brittle as iron and not much better. I want to tell you that the use of steel in such cars as your Hudson and Essex bodies and the excellent steel used in the frames, axles, etc., certainly is a huge improvement."

WOMAN OPENS STATION

REDLANDS, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—A new service station in these days is not anything to get excited about, but a most complete station in every respect and with one of the owners a woman is not so common. Mrs. A. N. Slogan Only Announcing of Improvement

Arousing widespread interest among the southland motorists, the words "Now Drive the Car" announce in simple and characteristic manner the recent vital improvements which Dodge Brothers have made in their product, according to M. C. Albertson of the Albertson Motor Company, Dodge Brothers and Graham Brothers dealers for Los Angeles and vicinity.

"This simple invitation to try the car and note the results," declares Albertson, "is typical of the advertising policy of a manufacturer whose statements have always enjoyed implicit confidence, thanks to a twelve-year-old reputation for avoiding extravagant or spectacular advertising claims.

"It is an inflexible policy at the factory that the reputation of Dodge Brothers Motor cars for dependability, long life and endurance must be upheld. Everyone of these changes, in fact, means increased manufacturing cost—they were adopted for the sole purpose of giving the owner a quieter, smoother running car.

"Although I have watched a succession of refinements for the last twelve years, I confess that I had no conception of the surprising change that these major advances could make in the operation of what was before a quiet, easy-riding, thoroughly satisfactory car.

"In line with Dodge Brothers policy of constant improvement without yearly models, refinements are constantly being made, each being adopted as soon as the exhaustive tests have proved beyond doubt that the change would improve the performance and increase the value of the car."

DU PONT ANNOUNCES NEW TOP MATERIAL

The perfection of a new rubber deck material, known as "Everbright Pontop," has recently been announced by E. I. Du pont de Nemours & Co. The new material has been placed on the market after years of experimenting in order to develop a fabric that would embody all the requirements of body builders. It is waterproof and has a permanency of finish heretofore unknown in rubber deck material. The makers claim for it unusual durability and lasting beauty. Due to the fact that it has a rubber base, it is unaffected by climatic changes and remains soft and pliable under all conditions.

Nerney Gives Big Program for Shriners

They were fighting for seats at the big Shriner's luncheon given last Tuesday, in the supper room of the Biltmore Hotel, when Stephen S. Nerney, erstwhile Lincoln Motor Car dealer for the Hollywood, Beverly Hills and Wilshire districts, presided. Mr. Nerney presented an all-star program for the gathered nobles and when the festivities subsided it was proclaimed the best meeting this year.

Nat Farnum, a former vaudeville artist, was master of ceremonies and presented six big acts of entertainment that went over like a Grauman first-night attraction.

Probably the reason Nerney put over his program as he did was that on this very morning he delivered three Lincoln motor cars to three world-famous motion-picture celebrities out in Hollywood. Wallace Beery, Pauline Fredericks and Ford Sterling were the customers.

SCENES DRAW THRONGS

"Lookout Mountain Crest overlooking Hollywood and the ocean is the mecca of thousands of motorists who make the winding climb to the summit to view the belvedere by day and by night," says L. A. Hannan, sales manager for Reeve Gartzmann, Oakland-Pontiac distributors. "This is one of the outstanding viewpoints of the city and many homes are now under construction there."

BALDWIN HEIRESS CONSENTS TO ROAD

ARCADIA, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—Mrs. Clara Baldwin Stocker has indicated to the Board of Trustees of this city that she will give her consent to the dedication of rights of way through the Baldwin ranch for an extension of Colorado street, Pasadena, through to Monrovia, if her sister, Mrs. Anita M. Baldwin, also signs. A committee is now endeavoring to get a hearing with Mrs. Baldwin, but if no satisfactory arrangement is made with her before November 4, next, the sponsors of the highway will force a way through under condemnation proceedings, it is stated by Chairman A. N. Multer of the local Board of Trustees.

Palomar Mountain
Sealed in High Gear!

PILOTED by "Shorty" Shurtleff, non-professional driver from S. G. Cook & Co., Gardner Dealers in San Diego, a Gardner Imperial Sedan made the strenuous high gear ascent of Palomar Mountain West Grade at an average speed of only 11 miles per hour! The car was strictly stock except for removal of bumpers and spare tire.

Two newspaper men, Nelson Roberts of the San Diego Union-Tribune and Don Cook of the San Diego Sun, locked the Gardner in high gear, and kept it under observation every instant of the run. They found the gear-locking device intact when Shurtleff checked in at Bailey's Resort.

Road conditions were the worst imaginable; rainwater ditches had been dug across the road at intervals of about 50 feet and generally closer on the steepest pitches. These ditches checked the speed and pounded the car unmercifully.

In spite of obstacles, the car made the run without a stop.

A duplicate of the Gardner Imperial Sedan that made the run is now on display in our salesroom. We will gladly demonstrate it to you without obligation.

GENERAL LAUDS TRUCKS

Quartermaster Corps Officer Tells of Results of Tests on Highways

Recent criticism directed against six-wheeled trucks has led operators of that type of vehicle, equipped with dual axles and driven by four rear wheels, to point out a published report of Brig.-Gen. Albert C. Dalton of the Quartermaster Corps of the United States Army, in which the general gives the results of exhaustive tests made by four-wheel trucks and those of the six-wheel type, with four-wheel drive.

"State highway engineers have been justified in the continuous and serious complaints they have advanced against the constant destruction of the roads by the pounding effect of old variety trucks," says Gen. Dalton in his report.

Officials of the Moreland Motor Truck Company, manufacturers of six-wheel, dual-axle trucks, take the same position. "We are for anything that will save the roads," declared Watt L. Moreland, vice-president and general manager of the concern, "but wholesale condemnation of trucks, regardless of type, is an injustice to those which tests have shown can be operated without damage to the highways."

Gen. Dalton gives the result of the experiments conducted to determine the pressure of different types of trucks on the roads, saying in part:

"Every improvement in transport vehicles is a substantial gain in national defense, particularly in a country like the United States, where 85 per cent of the world's automotive vehicles are produced. Hence we view with singular gratification the recent contribution of the Transportation Service of the Quartermaster Corps in developing a six-wheel truck for army use that combines the following advantages:

(a.) A greater load with less subsoil pressure.

(b.) A truck speed up to forty-five miles per hour with full cargo capacity from five to seven and a half tons.

(c.) Increases road carrying capacities by decreasing road damages and insuring greater tonnage in less road space.

(d.) Flexible double rear axles insure evenly distributed pressure without pounding shock, either against the road or counter-action of such force on the truck and its contents.

Better-Made Goods Get the Advertising

"There's always a reason for leadership—nationally advertised accessories and supplies for motorists are leaders because they are made better—must have superior features or there'd be nothing to advertise" says Hal R. Baker, general sales manager for Western Auto Supply Company in discussing the effect of national advertising upon merchandise value.

"Manufacturers who seek national distribution, and back up their sales efforts with national advertising, know that when they create a widespread demand for their goods, superior quality must be there to prove their printed assertions if they would hold public favor. That is why articles one sees advertised in the newspapers are, on their merit, always leaders in their respective fields.

"The tremendous sales volume of such articles as Schrader tire gauges, valve insides and caps; Malco windshield wipers, S. & M. spotlights, National Mazda lamps, Hassler stabilizers, Champion spark plugs and countless other leaders among accessories and supplies has been attained through more than printed claims—each of these articles has individual features to distinguish it from other similar merchandise, and the telling of these features through the media of the printed page has educated the public to a point where they demand the best always.

Brakes Most Important for Rainy Season

Smooth, quick-acting brakes are absolute necessary to safety in these days of crowded city streets and high speed on the boulevards, points out Walter M. Brown, exclusive Hollywood dealer in the Stutz vertical eight line of motor cars. He also states that perfect equalization is necessary to prevent skidding, particularly on wet streets.

"The new safety Stutz is equipped with nonleaking hydrostatic brakes that are inherently equalized and positive," said Mr. Brown. "There is nothing on them to adjust and no working parts to get out of order. Each brake is divided into six shoes which are uniformly actuated by an expanding tube, giving equalized braking pressure at every point on the wheel. The entire system is of continuous tubular construction

SPECIALISTS TAKE TO REPAIR FIELDS

This is the age of specialists in automobile repair work as the result of motor car owners demanding speed and good workmanship combined, says J. Benjamin Fahy, head of the downtown "Acre of Service" repair plant. Speed is essential because owners do not want their cars out of service an hour longer than necessary, and the work must be done well if the repair shop proprietor hopes to remain in business, he declares.

"In the large shops these specialists do just their own kind of work and nothing else," explained Mr. Fahy. "They have special tools in many cases and do the same kind of work so often that they gain amazing speed and accuracy."

BUICK EXECUTIVES VISITING COAST

Factory Officials Make Survey of District

CALIFORNIA is the "white spot" of the nation. This statement is given with the authority of E. J. Poag and E. N. Steger, executives of the Buick Motor Company who, accompanied by Peter S. Steenstrup, district factory representative, arrived in Los Angeles last week after a survey of the Pacific Coast district.

Messrs. Poag and Steger have been making a first-hand survey of conditions of the country for the last two months and were joined in Seattle by Steenstrup for the trip down the Coast visiting Howard Automobile Company officials and members of the Buick dealer organizations. What they found on the Coast verified the figures that had been prepared on this area by Steenstrup.

While in Los Angeles the officials conferred with Harold W. Tuttle, assistant general manager, and other members of the executive forces of the Howard organization here, adding more enthusiastic figures to the Buick statistics they have been gathering.

"Probably the most graphic summary I can make regarding California is that it is running second to New York in Buick sales," said Poag, who probably has at his finger tips more statistics on the automobile situation nationally than any other man in the industry. "It has outstripped Ohio, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Michigan and all the other States in the number of new Buicks being purchased, New York alone standing between it and the head of the list.

"This reflects not only Buick popularity, but also a healthy buying power here. In fact, the purchasing power of the Pacific Coast is above the national average. While agriculture here has not escaped some setbacks it still is in much better condition than other sections of the country. In fact, it may surprise you to know that the rancher income in California is greater than the urban income of several of the eastern sections. This is an unusual condition, but one which means much for the general prosperity of California."

Booster Brake Simple Device, Claims Dealer

New standards of safety in motor car operation have resulted from the employment of a vacuum type booster brake that is operated with very slight foot pressure, according to William E. Bush, distributor of Pierce-Arrow motor cars in the Southern California territory. This device has just been introduced here on the new series 36 Pierce-Arrow line in which it is standard equipment.

"The device is simplicity itself," explained Mr. Bush. "It consists of a cylinder which is connected with the intake manifold of the engine. Suction of the engine creates a vacuum in the cylinder. When the brake pedal which controls the mechanism, is depressed the outside air rushes into the cylinder at the rear of a piston. This piston slides forward, stopping the car. When the pedal is released, air is admitted into the forward portion of the cylinder, allowing the piston to slide back.

"The device releases a pressure of 280 pounds to the braking mechanism. It allows the brakes to operate with very slight foot pressure and permits shorter emergency stops than old type brakes. There is nothing new to learn in using it except that less foot power is required."

Stunt Plane is Arrested Within City

Although aviators may think their lofty profession gives them full privilege to look down on motorists, the ground pilots can still tell them a thing or two.

Motorists long ago learned that it doesn't pay to talk back to traffic officers. Aviators are fast coming to that conclusion since the new city ordinance prohibiting stunting and low flying over the city is being enforced.

Frank Clarke, pilot of the Calpet plane, and Al Johnson, wing walker and pioneer "Black Cat," put the new ordinance to a test last week in a hair-raising demonstration directly over the Security Bank Building, where the administration offices of the California Petroleum Corporation are situated.

The stunt was suggested by the Calpet balloon, which soars some 600 feet above the offices of the company and carries a huge cut-out banner with the Calpet slogan, "More Power to You."

Test Rubber Insulation on Ignition

Many unique principles of physics are employed in tests of various sorts applied to materials, finished parts and assembled articles. A curious method of testing the rubber insulation on electric cable is by means of ozone. This new method is called the corona test, and is described by F. L. Haushalter of the B. F. Goodrich Company, in the October issue of the Journal of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

The effectiveness of the test depends upon the production of ozone by an electric current of high potential voltage, up to 15,000 volts being used, which breaks apart the atoms of oxygen in the air. The oxygen atoms then reunite in groups of three, forming ozone, which has a much more active oxidizing effect than ordinary oxygen. According to one theory, corona, which usually is detected by a purple glow and a hissing sound, is the result of a bombardment of gas ions, which multiply with increasing velocity as the potential of the electric current is increased, and the corona is started by the energy of the rapidly moving ions necessary to produce ionic saturation.

Soft vulcanized rubber insulation cracks quickly when subjected to the ozone if the rubber is stretched even a small amount, according to Mr. Haushalter, who states that crude unvulcanized rubber cracks in even a shorter time when stretched, but that when under compression neither vulcanized nor unvulcanized rubber cracks under this test. Protective coatings of cellulose or fabric mitigate and often prevent cracking of the stretched rubber. Curiously, however, the more the rubber is stretched beyond a certain degree the more it resists the action of the ozone, due, perhaps, to the greater hardness of the rubber under the higher tension.

A rubber insulated ignition cable used by a prominent automobile company resisted the corona test for one hour without any sign of cracking, while another sample of rubber-covered cable cracked noticeably in three minutes. Cable that will stand the test better than any other is perhaps one covered with vulcanized rubber that has a high permanent set or compression, says the author, as the surface tension, when the cable is bent, is a great deal less than occurs when cable protected by live rubber having a low permanent set is bent.

MUST MAKE MONEY

"The Oakland Motor Car Company knows that a successful sales organization must be built up of dealers who are making money," says Reeve Gartzmann, Oakland and Pontiac distributor, "and to assist dealers to achieve success, eighteen of the district representatives of the company are taking an intensive course in financial training, accounting, advertising and sales development."

SILENCER SUCCESS

"To ride in the new Oakland is a treat," says L. A. Hannan, sales manager for Reeve Gartzmann, Oakland-Pontiac distributors. "The rubber-silenced chassis gives the car a freedom from mechanical noises that brings a new sensation in driving."

BULRUD BUYS OAKLAND

"L. J. Burrud, well-known advertising man has just purchased another Oakland six," says L. A. Hannan, sales manager for Reeve Gartzmann, Oakland-Pontiac distributor. "Its power on hills, ease of handling and economy won the approval of himself and wife."

Death Threat is Met Twice Daily in City

Every automobile in Los Angeles county crosses a grade crossing on an average of about twice each day according to estimates made by the county grade crossing committee. There are now approximately 500,000 motor vehicles registered in the county and nearly 500 grade crossings. Many of these crossings are not considered extremely hazardous although none of them are accident proof.

This estimate takes into consideration crossings of the three steam railroad lines and the rapid speed lines of the Pacific Electric Railway.

During the course of a Sunday afternoon drive, it is a common occurrance for a motorist to cross from three to four, to a score of grade crossings, each one a potential death-trap.

"Every automobile driver in Los Angeles county, must, of necessity, cross a large number of railroad rights of way during a month's time," said David R. Faries, chairman of the committee. "Each time he does this, he is forced to accept a hazard to life and limb. Only by separating grades may this crossing danger be eliminated.

"Wigwags and other safety devices are of great value in warning the public of danger, but they are not infallible. Despite precautions required of the railroads, many instances have been reported of automobile drivers operating their machines on railroad grades. Sometimes accidents and deaths result.

SEPARATE GRADER

"There is only one sure device, and that is the grade separation. To construct grade separations at dangerous crossings, a county bond issue of $5,000,000 No. 2 on the county ballot, has been submitted to the voters of the county at the November 2 election.

"Passage of this issue will in no way relieve the railroads of their share of the burden. They will have to pay half of the cost of separating grades in every case where a grade crossing is replaced, according to a policy laid down by the State Railroad Commission.

"All of these separations will not be constructed in the county. The railroad commission will order the separations regardless of city boundary lines.

"Vote for county bond issue No. 2. Help to curb the loss of life at grade crossings."

YUMA DETOUR SURFACED

Due to paving on the main route east of Yuma it is necessary to use a temporary route which has been well signed, states a bulletin from the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California. This temporary route is gravel surfaced and is in good condition.

MIDNIGHT TONIGHT ZERO HOUR FOR CONTEST NAME BALLOTS

Get your ballots in before midnight tonight!

That's the warning sounded by J. M. Sterling, manager of the Paige Company of Southern California, distributors in this section for the Paige and Jewett motor cars.

Mr. Sterling had reference to the $10,000 name contest for the new Jewett sedan, which has been conducted the past month. That sum is being offered by the Paige Detroit Motor Company, manufacturers of the Paige and Jewett cars, for a suitable name or phrase of not more than six words, which, in the estimation of a board of three judges, best describes the new car.

CHANGES SEEN IN REO

The late fall series of Reo passenger cars which are now being received by the Reo Motor Car Company of California show several improvements in body design and an important change in the ignition arrangement.

The top has been extended two and one-half inches, giving the car a longer, lower appearance, and a larger sun visor. The back has been rounded more gracefully and other minor changes in construction are noted.

Added to the dash assembly on the late fall series is a gasoline gauge, and the instrument panel also carries the ignition and lighting switches for the first time on Reo's recent passenger-car line. These were formerly on the steering post just below the wheel.

CUSSING DRIVER CRITICISED

The tendency to heap abusive language upon the apparent perpetrator of some little infraction of road etiquette is one of the most deplorable traits still to be found among some motorists, particularly men.

"No man ever displays how little and mean he is as when he sticks his head out of the side of his car in a snarling, pugnacious spirit, to address sarcastic remarks to some motorists who, admittedly, is playing the dumb-bell on the highway," remarks P. Martin Steinkamp, president of S & W Motors, Inc., local Kissel distributors.

DIVISION OF GENERAL MOTORS CORPORATION

The 26 International Trucks owned by the Mayhugh Trucking Company will be seen at work on the West Pico Boulevard, Venice Boulevard, Wilshire Boulevard, San Fernando Valley Highway, and other important construction projects.

Mayhugh owns
26 International Trucks—and standardizes on them!

"I FIND that International Trucks earn me a greater profit than any other make I ever owned," said Claude Mayhugh as he ordered a number of 2-ton dump trucks for service on the 70-foot West Pico Boulevard paving project. "Having used a great many different trucks, there was no question in my mind as to the make of trucks that I should buy, but I was undecided as to the size best suited for the fast batch hauling necessary on this job. Speed turned the trick; I make mighty good time with my 2-ton Internationals.

"In heavy excavation hauling, such as I encountered on the [illegible] Pit Dam project near Monrovia, I use the larger Internationals most successfully."

Claude Mayhugh has standardized on Internationals because their ability to do all work at comparatively small cost enables them to earn real dividends for the Mayhugh Trucking Company. Now, when new contracts demand additional trucks he meets the situation by choosing new Internationals of the size and type best suited to the work to be done.

The experience of this local firm, identified with some of the biggest construction projects on the Coast, is typical of the experience of other International owners in all lines of business. Let us point out to you some of the reasons why International Trucks will solve your hauling problems.

The International line includes Speed Trucks, Heavy-Duty Trucks, and Motor Coaches. Also, the McCormick-Deering Industrial Tractor.

GES SEEN IN REO

Reo a standard gear shift and standard control, have given new impetus to Reo sales, according to an analysis just completed by Herbert [illegible] Woodward, president of the company which distributes the Reo product in California.

The principal mechanical improvement seen on the late fall series [illegible] is the automatic spark control, which has been added to replace the old type. The spark lever has been allowed to remain on the quadrant, but this is merely for the convenience of those who may be prejudiced against automatic control and wish to change back to the former system. Robert [illegible] Rohne, sales manager for Reo, predicts that there will be no demand for such a change in Southern California, where the majority of drivers find their way into the mountains frequently, and will appreciate having the control of their ignition and timing taken care of automatically.

Not a Shock Escapes

MARTIN
Shock Absorber

For absolute automobile comfort, there must be shock absorbers to snare the shocks that get away from the springs.

Furthermore, the shock absorbers must stop every shock. If even one gets away you feel the jar or the jolt and the purpose of the shock absorber is defeated.

The Martin has two shock absorbers to stop these shocks—the small shock absorber to cushion the small bumps and the big shock absorber to control the big ones.

Nor is there ever any need of readjustment due to use or temperature changes. The Martin Shock Absorber is guaranteed against breakage for the life of your car. Free service if you need it.

LOUIS B. MILLER
WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE
SAN FRANCISCO to NEW YORK
83 hrs 12 min
Elapsed Time

Across the continent twice in record time is the mark set by Louis B. Miller in a Wills Saint-Claire roadster, which he owns. Breaking records is his hobby. He was in Los Angeles a few days ago with his distance-defying gas vehicle and led a parade through the business section. Miss Jeanne Navelle, featured player for Famous-Players-Lasky, rode with Miller and had the fast trip of her young life.

WANTS FASTER TRAINS

With a record of having traveled overland from one coast to another faster than any other human, Louis B. Miller, San Francisco business man, is back in the Bay City after a visit her in which he preacher the doctrine of faster train transportation.

In the Wills Sainte Claire roadster, which has twice set a transcontinental record, Mr. Miller led a parade of eleven Gray Goose cars through the business section, ending at the City Hall, where he delivered messages of greeting to Mayor Cryer from the executives of New York City, Boston, Providence, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Toledo.

HAS MOUNTED ESCORT

Preceded by two motorcycle officers, the parade wound its way through the streets, giving thousands an opportunity to see the car which was driven from San Francisco to New York City in eighty-three hours and twelve minutes, the fastest time ever made by any vehicle from one coast to another. The average speed was forty-one miles an hour.

In the record-making car with Mr. Miller in Los Angeles rode Miss Jeanne Navelle, featured player for Famous Players-Lasky. She later declared that she had had many automobile rides in her brief years but that the one here eclipsed them all. "Do you know I think Mr. Miller can't drive slowly," she naively asserted, as she was handed from the car at the Biltmore, where a luncheon had been arranged for several Los Angeles residents interested in faster train schedules across the continent.

In his talk at the luncheon Mr. Miller declared that the existing slow schedules are costing the business men of the Pacific Coast many thousands of dollars monthly. His time from San Francisco to New York City was ten hours and thirty minutes faster than the fastest train schedule.

Mr. Miller interspersed his pleas for faster trains with some of the incidents which occurred on the trip across the continent. Some of them were amusing—and some weren't.

GIVEN BIG SIREN

The big siren mounted on one of the running boards was given him by Governor Scrugham of Nevada. When Mr. Miller went through Carson City last year he slowed to the legal speed limit, as he does through all cities. When the Nevada executive presented him with the siren he said he wanted to see some speed through the capital city.

"We got into Carson City at 3:20 a.m.," said Mr. Miller, "and there were 2500 people out to see us go through. We drove through the city at sixty-five miles an hour and the Governor told us on the way back that we certainly had shown some speed."

Mr. Miller paid a tribute to the State when he said, that with a population of but 80,000, a road program has been completed which is a credit to it. Two years ago, he said, it took from two to three days to drive across the State and today it may be dope in seven and a half hours.

FREE FROM NOISE

All 1927 Chandler models are equipped with a patented self-oiling, self-compensating shackle device which not only regulates the tension on shackles, but also exerts a gentle snubbing motion to the springs when traveling over rough, bumpy roads.

DISPLAY VICTORIA HERE NOW

New Model Hupmobile is Popular Victoria; Colors a Feature

The new Victoria on the Hupmobile eight-cylinder chassis is now being displayed at the showroom of Greer Robbins Company, Hupmobile distributors for Southern California. "The Victoria has long been a favorite among those who demand exclusive and individual body types," says A. R. Reedall, manager.

"Body colors have been selected to accentuate the original pleasing lines of this model. The lower body is finished in Southfield light green; the belt and rear deck in Monte Carlo darker green with black upper body; beading is black with thin white striping on belt, hood louves and wheel hubs. The upholstery in gray wool mohair with button tufting gives an attractive tone to the interior compartment.

"Comfort for passengers is assured by the generous dimensions in all seats. The rear seat, fifty-two inches wide, gives ample room for three passengers. Arm rests and deep back cushion springs further add to the comfort of the luxurious body. A luggage compartment in the rear deck is convenient for carrying grips, traveling bags or small parcels.

"Thirty-inch doors and tilting front seats give easy cacess to or exit from all seats. The right front seat folds completely under the cowl when not in use. Both front seats are adjustable for height to suit the individual owners."

Build Inner Tube to Resist Heat Danger

"Because California boasts the best roads in the country and miles and miles of pavements stretch out in every direction, motorists are inclined to think when they see smooth, glass-like surface that they should tax their cars and tires to the limit," states Frank T. Price, president and general manager of Nelson & Price, Inc., distributors of India tires.

But the very smoothness of the pavement creates another element in itself that is just as severe on tires if not more than ruts that are common in roads of other States. And that is—heat. Heat generated through traveling at high speed over miles and miles of pavement already heated scorchingly hot by the sun's rays. Add to this, the fact that the air in California is mostly free from moisture and that the sun beats on the tires the majority of time, and you have a tire deterioration which is worse than anything else. When the heat becomes especially intense, the pressure in the casing often rises to dangerous levels before the motorist is aware of it. Then, too, the heat tends to devulcanize the layers of the carcass, to dismember them and develop air pockets within. Moreover, the heat is hard on the inner tube.

The India true blue inner tube is heat proof and is built to combat the destructive elements—the sun's rays and dry atmosphere. High speed which generates high heat that overcures ordinary inner tubes and causes them to split, wear through and easily puncture is overcome in this tube.

Fat Man Finds Auto That Fits After Search

Nobody loves a fat man, even less most motor car manufacturers. At least this is the opinion of Frank "Fatty" Alexander, 425-pound comedian of Joe Rock Productions. When the rotund funster decided to take unto himself a new car he found that the designers of a good many automobiles did not take into consideration the man with a "corporation" and it was not until he visited the Reo showrooms that he found a machine that combined quality, class and roominess to his satisfaction.

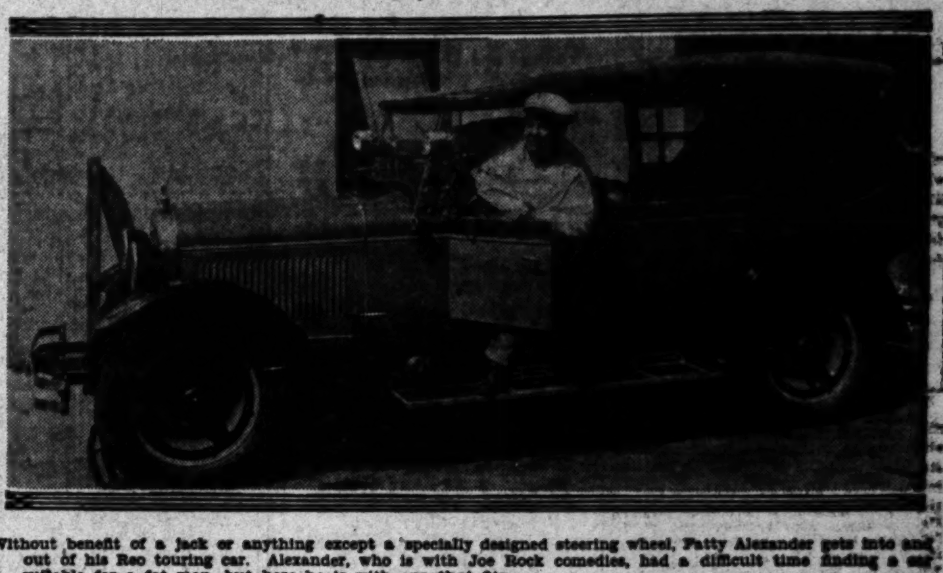
In the 1926 Reo touring car Alexander found a car that he could get in and out of without the aid of a derrick. Moreover, the distance between the steering wheel and the rear of the front seat permitted his huge bulk room to breathe while driving. These qualities caused "Fatty" to plunk down his check and drive away to the studio in a brand new Reo car.

EAGLE ROCK ROAD OFFICIALLY OPENED

The entire Fourteenth Road District participated on Friday in the opening of Glassell avenue, a parade starting at 2 p.m. from the end of York Boulevard, proceeding to San Fernando Boulevard, through lines of residents waving flags and tooting horns. H. G. Warren, president of the Occidental-York Valley Improvement Association, was grand marshal of the parade, his aides being R. C. Blackmer, Secretary William Butler of the Eagle Rock Chamber of Commerce, H. I. DeVol and C. W. Olsen.

It is a great relief to patrons of Occidental College and the people of Eagle Rock and York Valley to have this important route into Los Angeles open. This city is brought almost a mile nearer Los Angeles by the opening of the road. The people of East Glendale also are using the road in preference to the other routes.

No, This Is Not a Two-Ton Truck!



Without benefit of a jack or anything except a specially designed steering wheel, Fatty Alexander gets into and out of his Reo touring car. Alexander, who is with Joe Rock comedies, had a difficult time finding a car suitable for a fat man, but here he is with one that fits.

MARTINDEL BUYS FIRST CAR

"He had never owned a motor car!" said people in amazement, referring to Edward Martindel, noted motion-picture player. This peculiarity marked him as a man apart in the most highly motorized industry, motion pictures, in the most highly motorized State, California. Martindel could have gone about without a collar and received only indulgent smiles; he could have talked in the pig-latin of our boyhood and had his conduct explained as an eccentricity of genius—but to be without a motor car was something none could understand.

For over 50,000 miles Martindel rode in taxicabs. To and from the studio; to and from his clubs; to and from various affairs, beaches, theaters and whatnots, Martindel pursued his way in taxicabs. The sound of a clicking meter rang in his ears whenever the clicking of a camera shutter did not.

At last Martindel took the leap into the unknown. For wenty-five years he had dallied with the idea of motor-car ownership, examining the cars owned by his friends, and those he saw on the road from the windows of his taxicabs. Although it took years to decide to buy a car, after the decision was made, it took him only minutes to choose a Packard six sedan from the salesroom of Earle C. Anthony, Ins.

"I never thought I could learn to drive," says Martindel. "I was afraid I'd slice into a telephone post and hole in one, into a storm drain. I always know I would buy a Packard, when I did take the leap—and a Packard is too good looking a car to put into the rough! That's why I'm going to ride in the back seat for a while."

CAR SHIPMENTS SHOW NINE-MONTH GAIN

Harold L. Arnold, Southern California distributor for Gardner motor cars, has just received word from Russell E. Gardner, Jr., president of the Gardner Motor Company, Inc., St. Louis, that actual factory shipments of the Gardner eight-in-line show a full 50 per cent increase for the nine months' period beginning January 1 and ending September 30 last, compared to the same period of 1925.

The NEW INFLUENCE on all fine motoring

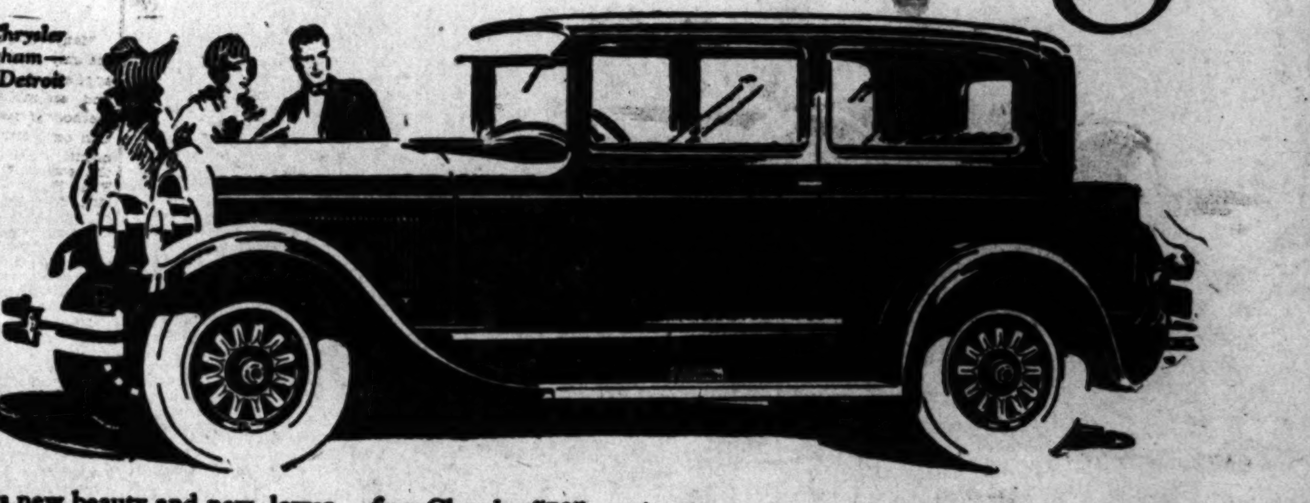
New, Finer Chrysler "70" Brougham—$1525, f. o. b. Detroit



With its new beauty and new, lower prices joined to proved and unmatched superiority of performance, dependability, roadability, economy and long life, the new, finer Chrysler "70" exerts even more emphatically the influence which for the past three years has meant nothing but Chrysler.

Since the announcement of the first Chrysler the motor car industry has endeavored to emulate and imitate Chrysler design and practice, Chrysler performance and appearance.

But never for a moment during these three years has it been possible to mistake any other car for a Chrysler, or a Chrysler for any other car.

And now, with the coming of the new, finer Chrysler "70"—at its new, radically lower prices—the gap between Chrysler and the commonplace, Chrysler and the conventional, is made even more marked than ever.

Newer, more exquisitely graceful bodies of exclusively Chrysler design, newer, more distinctive silhouette—newer luxury of comfort—newer, greater riding ease—newer richness of upholstery—newer, finer hardware and fittings—newer refinements in controls and lighting—newer, more attractive color blendings far in advance of current harmonies—with basically the same famous chassis, unchanged save for refinements.

Thousands upon thousands of enthusiastic motorists are hailing it as the turning point in motor car body design—the forecast of the new vogue in motoring for years to come.

You simply must see and drive the new, finer Chrysler "70". That's the only way you can fully appreciate its new beauty, combined with phenomenal and unchanged performance.

Resort Notes

In addition to the regular weekly gathering for observatory night last Friday, the Mt. Wilson Hotel and Bungalows reports a guest party of eighty students from the University of California, Southern Branch, under the direction of Dr. F. C. Leonard of that institution. The party reached Mt. Wilson by special stages late Friday afternoon, having dinner at the hotel, after which they listened to the weekly illustrated astronomical lecture preceding the visit to the sixty-inch reflecting telescope. The party stopped at the resort overnight and returned to the Southern Branch campus Saturday noon.

Summer weather and plenty of mountain breeze and sunshine every day are making Mt. Wilson a delightful spot. A partial list of guests recently registered at the Mt. Wilson Hotel and Bungalows are as follows: E. Nelson, Otto Wagner, Mrs. W. H. Hatton and Mrs. A. H. Moore, all of Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Munhall and Mr. and Mrs. W. T. S. Munhall, all of Pasadena; Mrs. E. Tonopolsky, Beatrice Llewellyn and J. F. Nalls, all from Mt. Lowe Tavern; Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Lewis from Beverly Hills; H. O. Cooper and wife from Brea, and Mrs. Edwin J. Onlsen from Glendale.

HALLOWEEN AT SWITZER'S

The annual Halloween party is always one of the outstanding events of the year at Switzer-Land in the upper Arroyo Seco Canyon, and this year's celebration was no exception. The Switzer-Land Club planned and carried out very elaborate decorations for the party. Besides the usual Halloween games and dancing, an unusual treat was furnished in the appearance of Mme. Beatrice Bowman, recently with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company of New York. Mme. Bowman is a friend of Jerome Shopper, the popular impersonator, who also appeared on the program. An enjoyable time was experienced by all present and the consensus of opinion was in favor of more Halloween parties at Switzer-Land.

SANTA BARBARA FISHING IS GOOD

Deep-sea fishing just off Santa Barbara is reported at this time to be excellent by H. J. Doulton, proprietor of the Miramar Hotel and Bungalows, in Montecito, three miles south of Santa Barbara.

Mr. Doulton maintains a power launch at the hotel for the use of his guests.

That popular hostelry has long been a favorite overnight and longer stopping place for automobile travel between Los Angeles and Santa Barbara and points farther north.

SANFORD IS BOOSTER

R. E. Sanford, proprietor of the Casa Loma Hotel in Redlands, is a booster for the climate of his city as being unusually beneficial for asthmatic and bronchial affections.

The Casa Loma Hotel is an excellently operated American and European-plan hostelry.

Many scenic drives are to be found in the Redlands vicinity.

ANNUAL PARTY AT OAK GLEN

The annual Halloween party at Oak Glen Lodge, in the mountains fifteen miles east of Redlands, was a decided success. The trip through spookland, the spooks' banquet, and the can-mewing contest all combined to lend the necessary weird atmosphere to the occasion.

Many of the guests were present in costume and later in the evening dancing served to round out a well-spent day.

ALTA MAR ALWAYS OPEN

The Alta Mar Apartments at 1107 Prospect street in La Jolla is open throughout the year. Comfortable accommodations are offered there to sojourners in the delightful city of La Jolla.

RAINBOW CLUB INCREASES SIZE

Leigh Garnsey, manager of the Rainbow Angling Club, announces that the membership list of that club continues to grow with rapid strides. The club has been visited by good-sized crowds daily during the fall season and trout now being caught average ten inches in length.

San Fernando Road Will Get Improvement

SAN FERNANDO, Oct. 30. (Exclusive)—San Fernando Road from the city limits of Burbank to the Newhall tunnell is going to be improved with a new surface in places where needed, wide shoulders and dips to take the place of bridges on Radford avenue, Pendleton and Strathearn streets, according to Councilman Charles H. Randall. It is expected that actual work will begin on the Burbank end of the highway by December 15, provided no unforeseen complications arise, while a start is expected to be made on the other end of the road by January 15. Plans are now being prepared in the Engineer's office at Van Nuys. San Fernando Road is one of the big arteries of auto traffic in the valley and the improvements are being made imperative by the large amount of traffic and the general condition of the road at present.

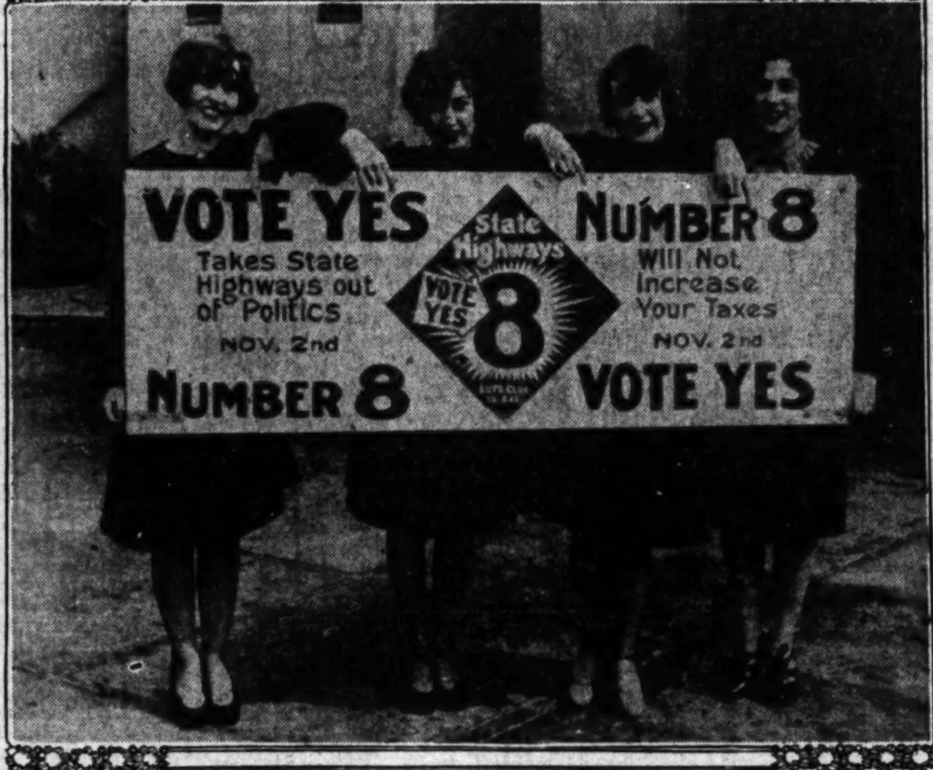
Long-Distance Air Pilot to Visit America

Sir Alan Cobham, England's long-distance flying ace, who has soared through space, according to estimate of the London Daily Mail, a total distance of 500,000 miles, will come to the United States early this month to lecture upon the national and international transportation possibilities in the new airplane motors.

Cobham, who returned to London the 1st inst. after a 28,000-mile round-trip flight to Port Darwin, Australia, was made Knight Commander of the British Empire by order of King George in recognition of the service performed in proving the feasibility of the late airplane engines for regular air transport service to the Antipodes.

In all three of his historic flights, which have included in addition to the Australian one, a 17,000-mile hop to India and a 16,000-mile jump to South Africa and return, Cobham has been using the air-cooled type of engine.

"X" Equals "8" on the Coming Ballot



Girl employees of the Automobile Club of Southern California are highly enthusiastic over State Highway Measure No. 8, to be voted upon November 2. Here we have a few of them adding their smiling support to the measure by flashing one of the campaign signs before voters who pass Automobile Club headquarters. Left to right, they are Alice Moran, Grace Mitchell, Florence Gibbs and Rose O'Meilia.

THE MOTOR VEHICLE IN COURT

SILENT WITNESSES

Skid marks and other signs on the pavement following automobile accidents are frequently brought out in trials and make out the conclusive proof necessary of negligence or want of negligence of one of the parties. Such silent witnesses are not always conclusive. To be so they must be convincing to the jury.

"Common experience and observation teach us that strange and astonishing things sometimes happen in the world of physical phenomena, and accidents sometimes happen in manner unaccountable. For these reasons an appellate court must be careful not to give to dogmatic and undemonstrated conclusions respecting natural laws precedence over the testimony of apparently credible witnesses; and the mere fact that the admitted circumstances make the story of the witnesses seem improbable will not justify a reversal by an appellate court upon the ground that the verdict is contrary to the evidence," is the observation of a California court some years ago, and it has just applied the same reasoning in a case where the defendant insisted very strenuously that visible marks left by his car on the pavement flatly contradicted all the evidence on the plaintiff's side.

A cloud of smoke, caused by the burning of grass or brush along a railroad to the west swept across the State highway within the limits of the city of San Diego, Cal., as George O. Marston was driving his car northerly at a speed of twenty-five miles an hour. In his testimony on the trial he said it was from 75 to 100 feet wide, and that when he first observed it, half a mile away, he reduced his speed to fifteen miles an hour. He further testified that as he was about to enter the pall of smoke he saw an auto stage of the Pickwick Autostages, Inc., coming diagonally toward him, his car being at the time on the right hand side of the road; that as soon as he saw it he made an effort to drive his car still further toward the right, but that before he could leave the paved highway the auto stage struck his car with terific force, wrecking it and causing personal injuries to himself.

The driver of the auto stage, corroborated by some of his passengers, testified that he was on his right or the westerly side of the highway; that when entering the smoke screen he was traveling at the rate of twenty miles an hour, but slowed down to about eight or ten miles an hour; that the highway was twenty feet wide, and that his right wheels were about six or eight inches from the westerly edge of the pavement.

The auto stage was injured in the collision so that the front left wheel was broken and the drag link, or rod running from the steering gear to the spindle pin and controlling the front wheels, was bent. The vehicle dropped down on the spindle pin, dragged for a few feet, and then turned toward the left, proceeding thus for about thirty-nine feet, where it came to a stop. The northerly end of the mark made by this spindle pin on the pavement commenced about six feet, two inches east of the westerly edge of the pavement and appeared in a diagonal mark from the west side to the place where the stage came to a stop on the east side.

Marston's testimony was corroborated by the driver of a car following him, who further said that after the collision the auto stage traveled five or six yards before its left wheel came off.

There was a verdict for Marston, and the defendant appealed. In affirming the judgment, the District Court of Appeal, Second District, Division 2, of California (248 P. 930) said:

"We think the evidence was sufficient to justify the conclusion of the jury. An Appellate Court will never disturb a verdict where there is some substantial evidence to support it. But appellants claim that respondent's testimony is conclusively demonstrated to be false and impossible by the marks which were made upon the pavement by the spindle pin of the auto stage. This mute testimony, say appellants, shows 'unmistakably and conclusively that the stage was upon the west side of the road at the time of the collision,' and that respondent's testimony is impossible 'in the face of these telltale marks.' There would be much force in this contention if a witness for respondent had not testified that the auto stage traveled some five or six yards before its wheel came off, for the most positive testimony may be rejected as inherently improbable when its falsity appears from a consideration of the undisputed circumstances or from the laws of nature. But until the wheel came off the axle, thus permitting the left front end of the stage to drop, the spindle pin did not touch the pavement. Until then no mark was made to tell the course of the stage whilst traversing the five or six yards."

A WHIMSICAL DEFENSE

It was one of Thomas Hood's whimsicalities that enabled a Coronor's jury to bring in a verdict that Miss Kilmansegg was guilty of suicide, "because her own leg had killed her." Guy Halbert of Long Beach, Cal., had the same idea in mind when he defended himself against a charge of manslaughter with an automobile by contending that there was a variance between the information and the proof, in that the information charged that the automobile driven by him "did then and there collide with and strike a human being, to wit, Frank Jones," etc., whereas the evidence was limited to the fact that his automobile struck, not Frank Jones, but only the automobile in which Jones was riding.

The collision occurred at 1 o'clock at night at the corner of State street and American avenue, Long Beach. Jones was driving south on American avenue, and after he had passed the center of the intersection his car was struck by another car belonging to Halbert. Jones's car turned over in such a manner Jones was crushed and injured so that he died before morning. Halbert's car stopped but an instant and then drove on. No one got out of the machine, or went from it to the injured man. In his prosecution for manslaughter, the chief difficulty of the State was in identifying Halbert as the driver of the car at the time of the accident. This was done to the satisfaction of the jury, and a verdict of guilty was rendered. The District Court of Appeal, Second District, Division 1, of California (248 P. 969) has affirmed the verdict, and with reference to the contention referred to, raised on the appeal, says:

"We are of the opinion that the terms of the charge are sufficient to include a personal injury caused by collision between two automobiles. It would be an unreasonably narrow construction of the statute to hold that the crime there defined can not be committed unless the automobile of the offending party actually touches the person of the injured human being. Unquestionably, a personal assault may be made by a blow delivered against the clothing which covers a man's body. Under the circumstances of an automobile collision a blow given by A's automobile to B's automobile, whereby B's automobile turns over upon and injures B, is in effect a blow delivered against B's body. This being so, the variance in the proof, for which appellant argues, is not established."

BRIEFS

Failure of motor bus operator to notify his insurance carrier of action against him for damages for personal injuries, as required by policy, held to bar any recovery by plaintiff in such action from insurance company.—153 N. E. (Ohio) 206.

Intervening petitioner, asserting ownership and seeking to prevent forfeiture of automobile under National Prohibition Act, tit. 2, sec. 26, must show good cause to the contrary (Comp. St. Ann. Sup. 1923, sec. 10138½ min.)—13 F. (2d) (U.S.) 1019.

One purchasing an automobile under fraudulent representations of condition and fitness for purpose for which sold may keep it and sue for difference in value of property he should have received and that delivered, or tender it back, if of any value, and rescind contract for breach of warranty, and recover what he gave therefor or its value.—286 S. W. (Tex.) 326.

Where personal injuries of the plaintiff were caused by the negligent acts of a policeman while driving an automobile belonging to the city, and while engaged in the performance of a governmental duty, such automobile being driven in violation of the law of the road and traffic regulations, the city is not liable, though no reasonable necessity existed for such violations, and though the city may have countenanced and acquiesced in unnecessary uses of its automobiles by its officers and employees, and in their reckless driving of the same.—209 N. W. (N. D.) 1002.

State Awards Contracts for Highway Work

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 30. (Exclusive) The award of nearly $600,000 in reconstruction contracts for State highway work in Contra Costa, Ventura and Los Angeles counties was announced here today by the California Highway Commission. The awards were authorized at a recent meeting of the commission and are as follows:

Contra Costa county—Grading and surfacing on improved alignment of 1.8 miles between El Cierro and Valona, at the approach to the Carquines Straits bridge; awarded to Tieslau Brothers of Berkeley; bid, $173,109.80; engineer's estimate, $192,728.10.

Ventura county—Reconstruction, with second story concrete pavement, 20 feet wide, and a section of seawall, of 8.35 miles of narrow pavement between Ventura and Seacliff; awarded to J. F. Knapp of Stockton; bid, $389,499; engineer's estimate, $437,698. Rebuilding of this section is urgently needed.

Los Angeles county—Building of two reinforced concrete bridges across La Placerita Creek, one-half mile north of Newhall; awarded to L. F. Lipp of Los Angeles; bid, $13,934.70; engineer's estimate, $15,260.

SALES INCREASE

"Sales of Pontiacs and Oaklands in Illinois have increased to such an extent that in recent months they have enjoyed fifth place in registrations," says L. A. Hannan, sales manager for Reeve Gartzmann, Oakland-Pontiac distributor here.

RUSHES ACROSS COUNTRY

Styles change, even in the matter of setting cross-country records. A few years ago, the man who started out to set a cross-continent mark traveled in a car stripped down to racing trim, and carrying nothing in the way of a load except spare tires and spare parts that might prove necessary. Last week, however, Col. Ed Fletcher of San Diego, president of the Dixie Highway Association, revealed the new fashion in setting road records. In his personal Cadillac sedan, which he had driven over 17,000 miles in the past year, and with three companions and 800 pounds of luggage in the car, Fletcher set out from San Diego at 4 o'clock on Wednesday morning and rolled into Savannah, Ga., at 3:15 on Saturday morning, just seventy-one hours and fifteen minutes on the way between the Pacific and Atlantic.

"It is doubtful if a run of this nature was ever before made by a car which carried such a heavy load as did Fletcher's Cadillac," said J. F. Brown, Southern California manager for Don Lee, Cadillac distributor. Vol. XLIV. SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 31, 1926. HUMOR

GUMPS
OH, WHERE IS MY WANDERING BOY TONIGHT?
SIDNEY SMITH
NOT KNOWING THAT THE OLD PROSPECTOR HAS RECOVERED HIS MEMORY AND WILL SOON BE ABLE TO GUIDE UNCLE BIM TO THE CITY OF GOLD, THE THREE FRIENDS, TO ESCAPE DEATH AT THE HANDS OF THE WOLF AND HIS BAND OR THE HORRORS OF SLOW STARVATION IN THE CITY OF GOLD, RESOLVE TO STAKE THEIR LIVES ON THE SLIM CHANCE OF FINDING A REAR EXIT FROM THE MIGHTY CAVERN SURROUNDED BY A THOUSAND DANGERS. THEY BRAVELY MARCH ONWARD THROUGH THE ENGULFING DARKNESS IN A DESPERATE EFFORT TO ESCAPE-
THIS INSIGNIFICANT PERSON BELIEVES AUSPICIOUS OMENS WILL ATTEND OUR JOURNEY THROUGH THE CAVE OF DARKNESS-
WE'LL START AS SOON AS I FINISH THIS NOTE I'M LEAVING FOR MY UNCLE BIM-A DARK CAVE, SEZ YOU- IT'S BLACKER THAN THE INSIDE OF A WHALE- AND YOU MAY LAY TO THAT-IT IS WRITTEN, DARKNESS IS THE MOTHER OF DANGER-
WAIT HERE, TILL I COME BACK- I JUST THOUGHT OF SOMETHING-
WHILE I'M HERE I MAY JUST AS WELL TAKE SOME MORE OF THOSE LOOSE NUGGETS-
THIS IS JUST LIKE MOUNTAIN CLIMBING- WE'LL FASTEN OURSELVES TOGETHER WITH THIS ROPE - IT WILL PREVENT ACCIDENTS-
THIS PERSON OF STUNTED INTELLIGENCE ADMIRES YOUR WELL THOUGHT OF DEVICE-
MAY THE ALL SEEING ONES GUIDE OUR MISERABLE FOOTSTEPS-
HOLD FAST, MATE, AND WE'LL HAVE YOU SAFE ON DECK BEFORE YOU CAN SAY JACK ROBINSON-
I HOPE THIS ROPE DON'T BREAK-
HELP!
IT HAS BEEN TRULY SAID LIFE IS SWEET- EVEN THE BLIND BEGGAR WILL REFUSE TO CROSS A ROTTEN BRIDGE-
I WONDER HOW WIDE THAT CREVASSE CAN BE?
IT HAS BEEN WRITTEN, AMONG THE BLIND A ONE EYED MAN IS KING-
I CANT SEE A THING AND I DON'T HEAR THE NOISE OF THE STONE LANDING ON THE OTHER SIDE-
THE PERSON SPEAKING FIRMLY BELIEVES WE STAND ON THE EDGE OF AN UTTERLY BOTTOMLESS PIT-
THE STONES NEVER REACH THE BOTTOM- THIS MUST BE THE DEEPEST HOLE IN THE WORLD-
LET US PROCEED WITH CAUTIOUS FOOTSTEPS AROUND THE EDGE OF THIS WORTHLESS CRATER- IT HAS BEEN SAID WHERE THE MIND INCLINES THE FEET LEAD-
NOW, WHAT WILL WE DO? WE CAN NEVER CROSS THIS TERRIBLE PLACE-
LET US SEEK DAY LIGHT WITH UNCLOSING EYES-
GOLLY, IT'S DARK- THIS IS JUST LIKE TRAVELING AROUND IN A BOTTLE OF INK-HOUR AFTER HOUR THE THREE ADVENTURERS GROPE THEIR WAY THROUGH THE SOMBER CAVERN- WEIRD CRIES, ANGRY SNARLS AND HISSES TELL OF UNKNOWN BEASTS AND REPTILES THAT PROWL IN SEARCH OF PREY, BUT IN SPITE OF ALL OBSTACLES THE THREE FRIENDS PRESS ON-

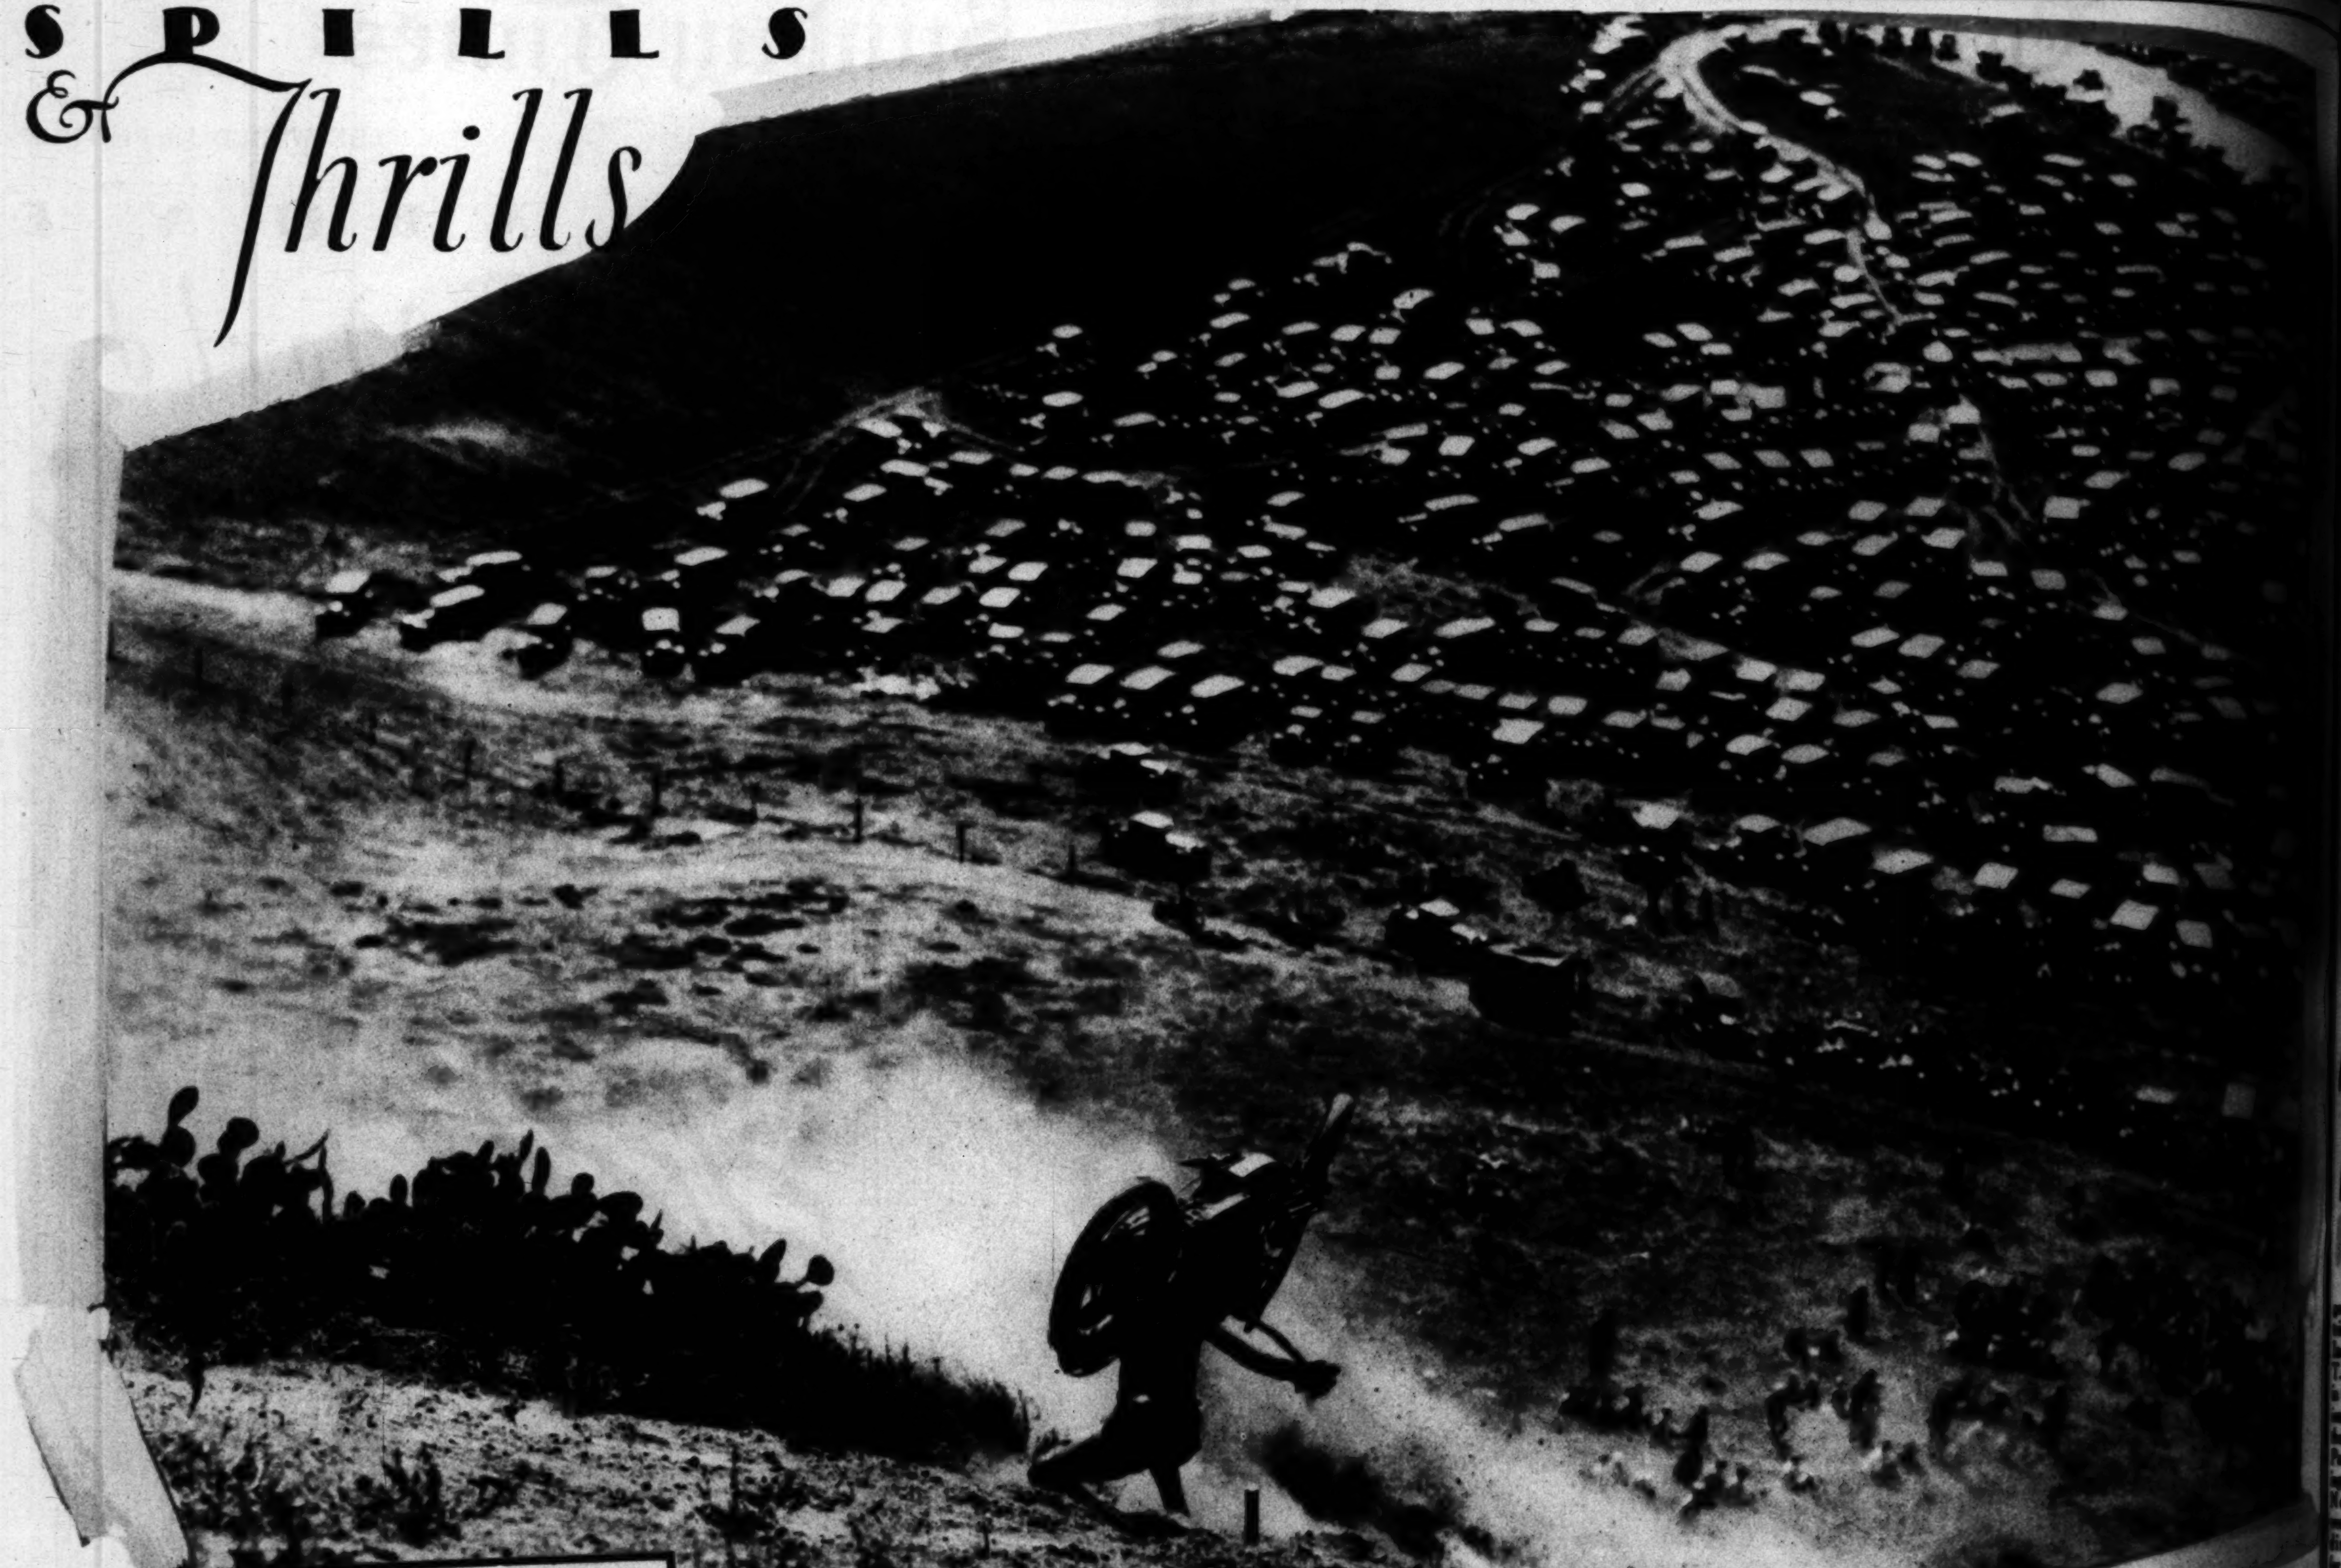
SPILLS & Thrills



Jack English supplying a little excitement for the cash customers at San Juan Capistrano's annual hill climb. English's motorcycle did a somersault half way up the 74-per cent grade, but the rider managed to get out of the way of his bucking steed. A number of riders conquered the hill with their roaring mounts. The best time 10 8-10 seconds, for the 500 feet of sky-going travel was made by Sprouts Elder of Fresno. Note the parked autos of the onlookers and the highway in the distance. —Pacific & Atlantic.

Sea-hawk figures that tall, bare pole beats a tree when it comes to watching for visitors that might interfere with the incubating business. This nest is on top of a telegraph pole at Leonardo, Monmouth county, N. J. The sea-hawk mother left her nest when the inquiring photographer hove into view, but soon came back again.—Herbert Photos, Inc.

And the umpire called him out! Lazzeri of the Yanks supplied one of the thrills of the fourth game of the world's series at St. Louis by trying to stretch a double until a three-base hit. This unusual photograph appears to indicate that Third Baseman Bell missed him as he slid into the base, but Umpire Hildebrand thought otherwise.

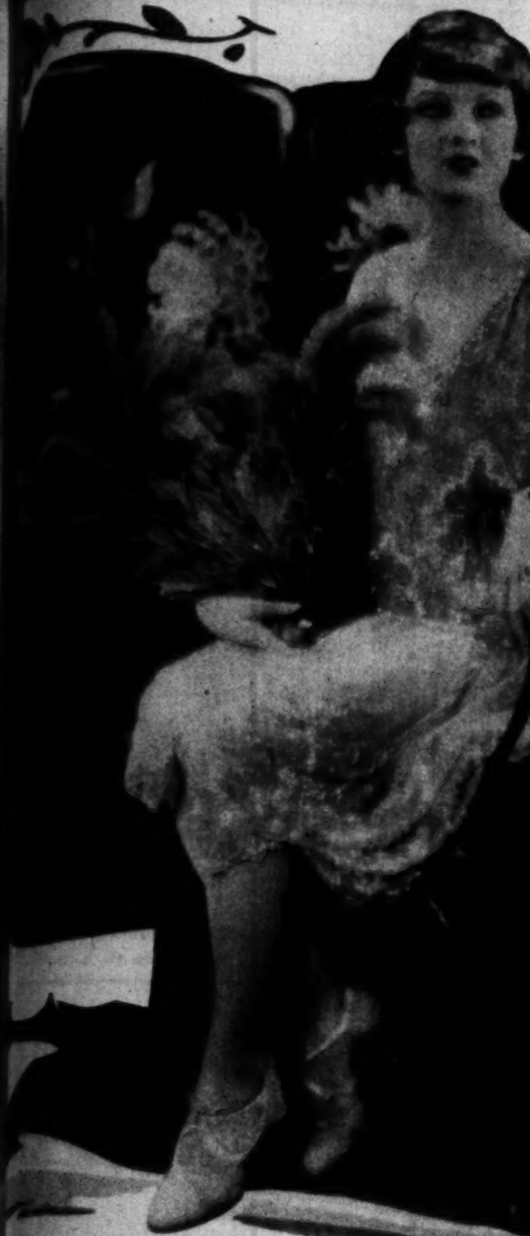
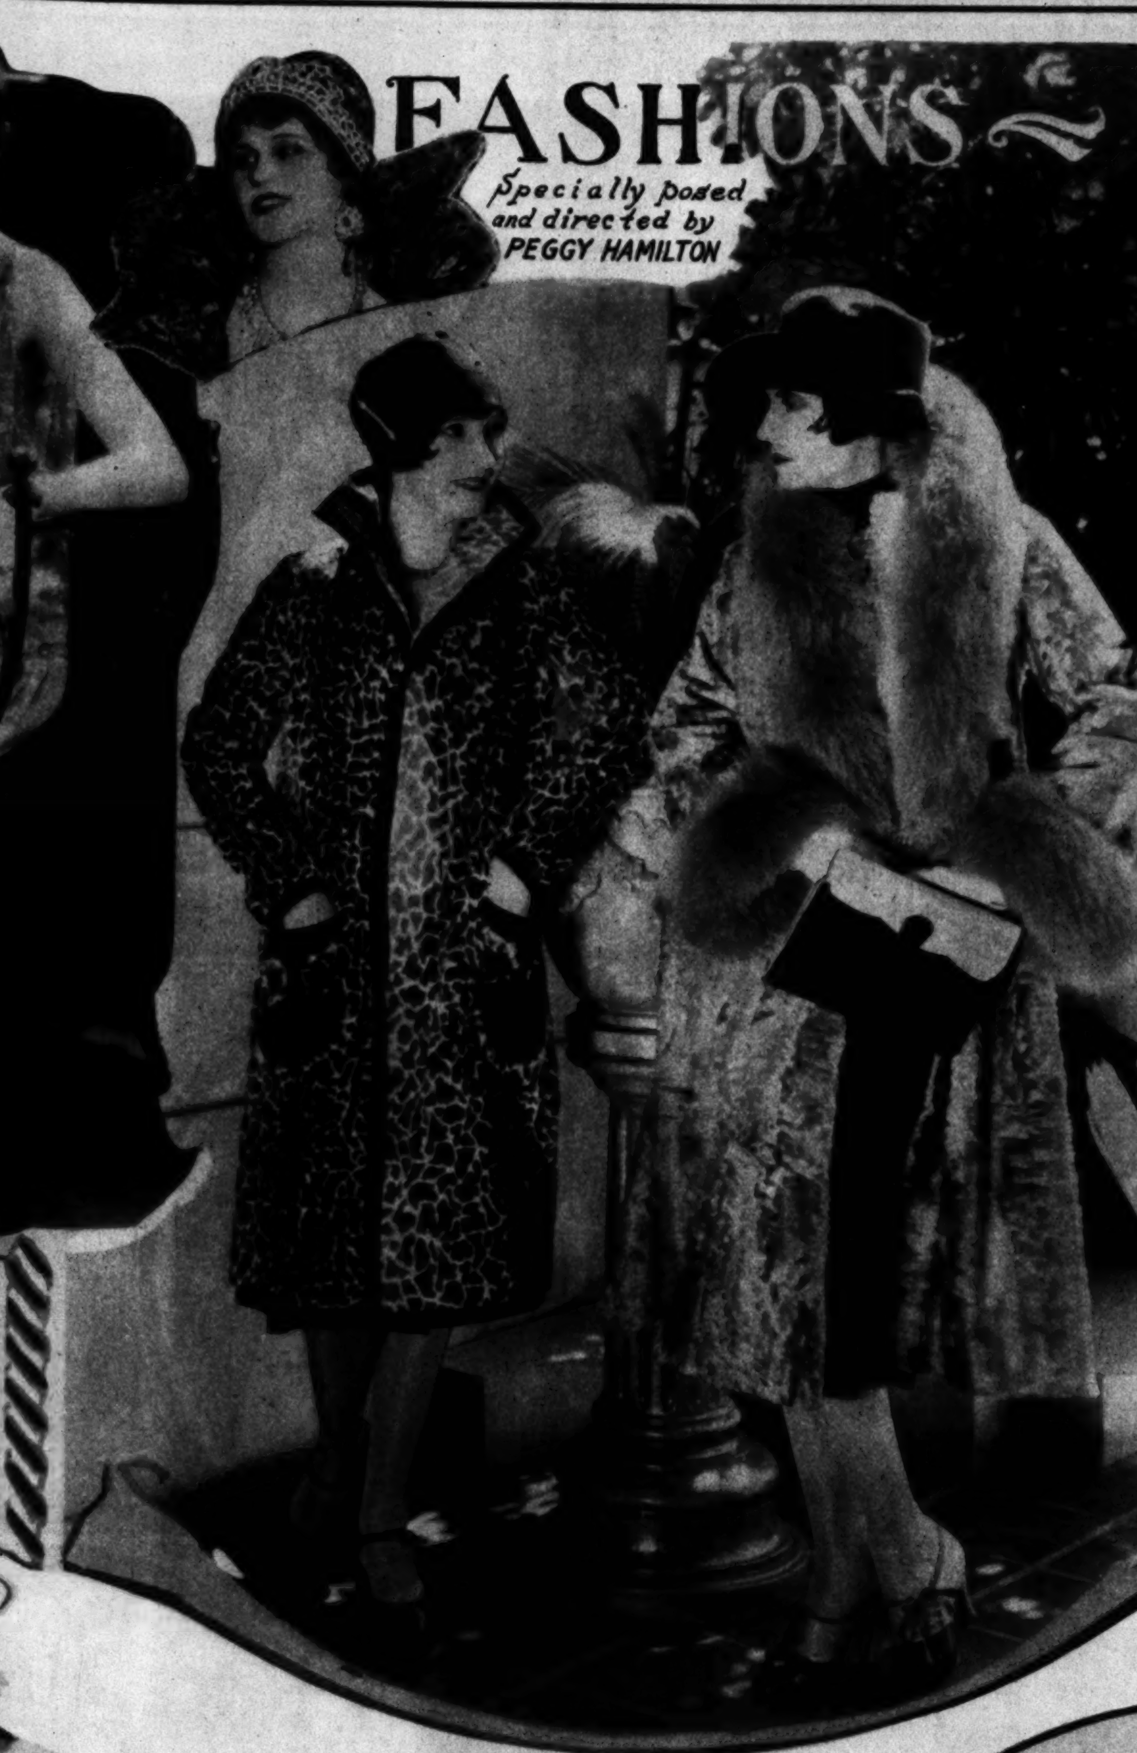
FASHIONS

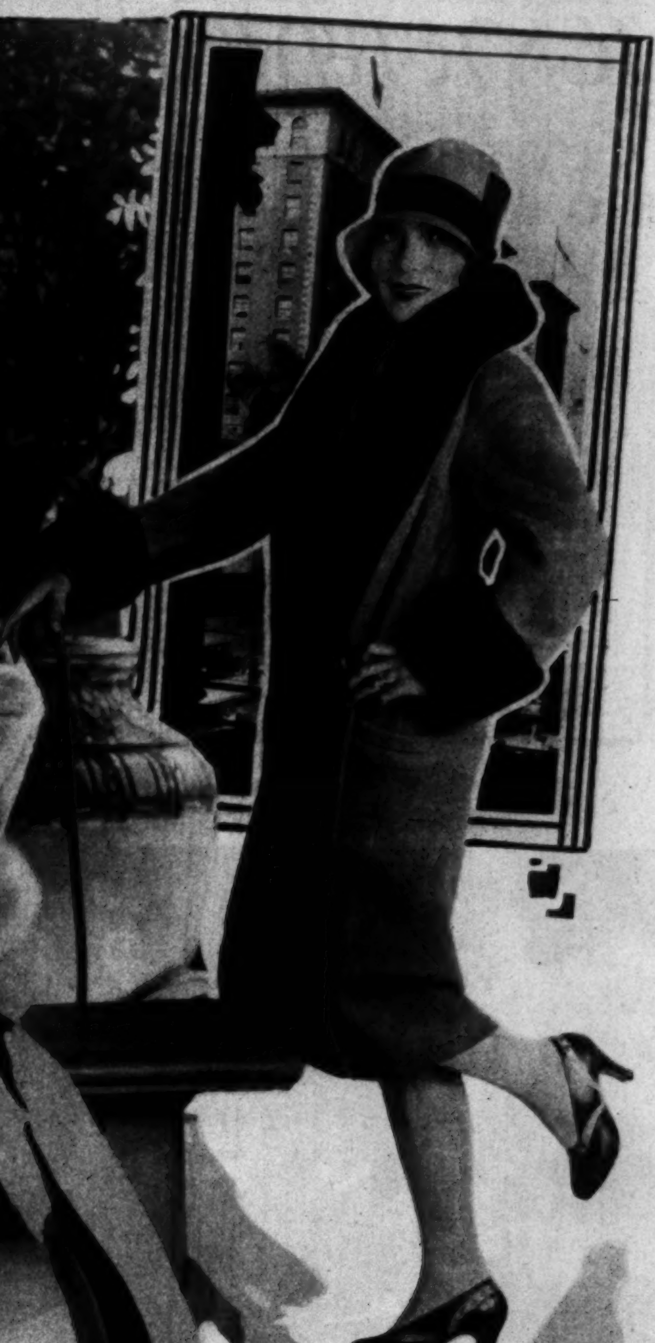
Specially posed and directed by
PEGGY HAMILTON



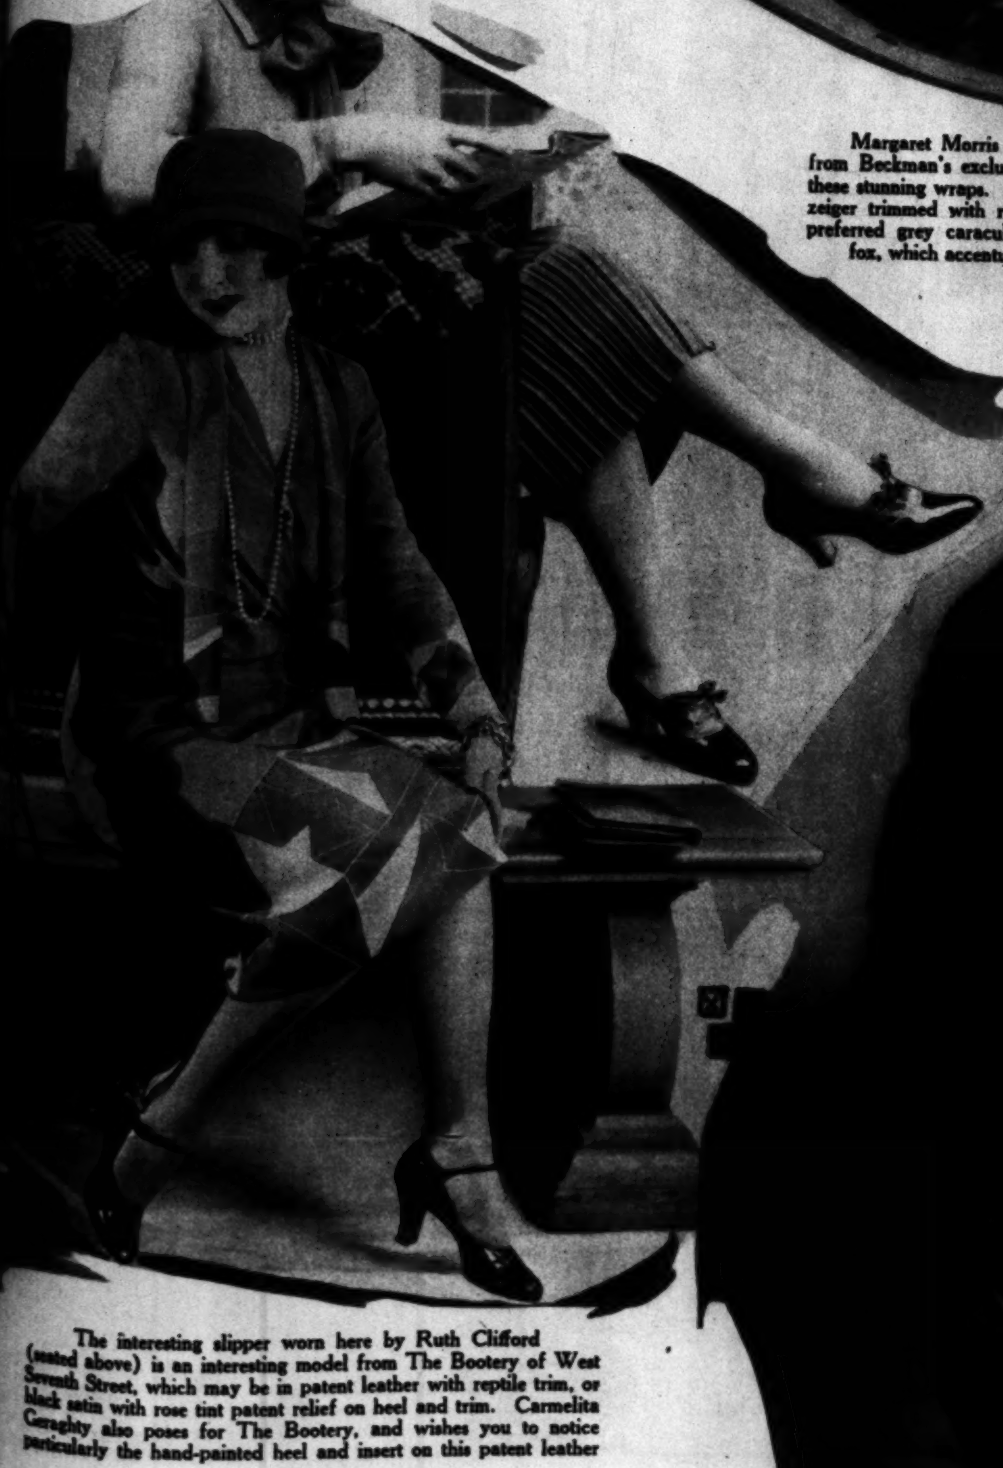
Myrna Loy displays here this gorgeous gown of romance silk marquisette, elaborately in sequins and silver beads, for Walter Switzer's, of Westlake Square and The Woman's Salon of the W. Mather Company, Pasadena, who announce that modern section of the "Fash-Pageant," to be given by Shakespeare Club of in Henry E. Huntington's Library Gardens on November 6, all gowns, and gorgeous bridal imported especially the occasion, will be exclusively by them, the personal direction of Peggy Hamilton.



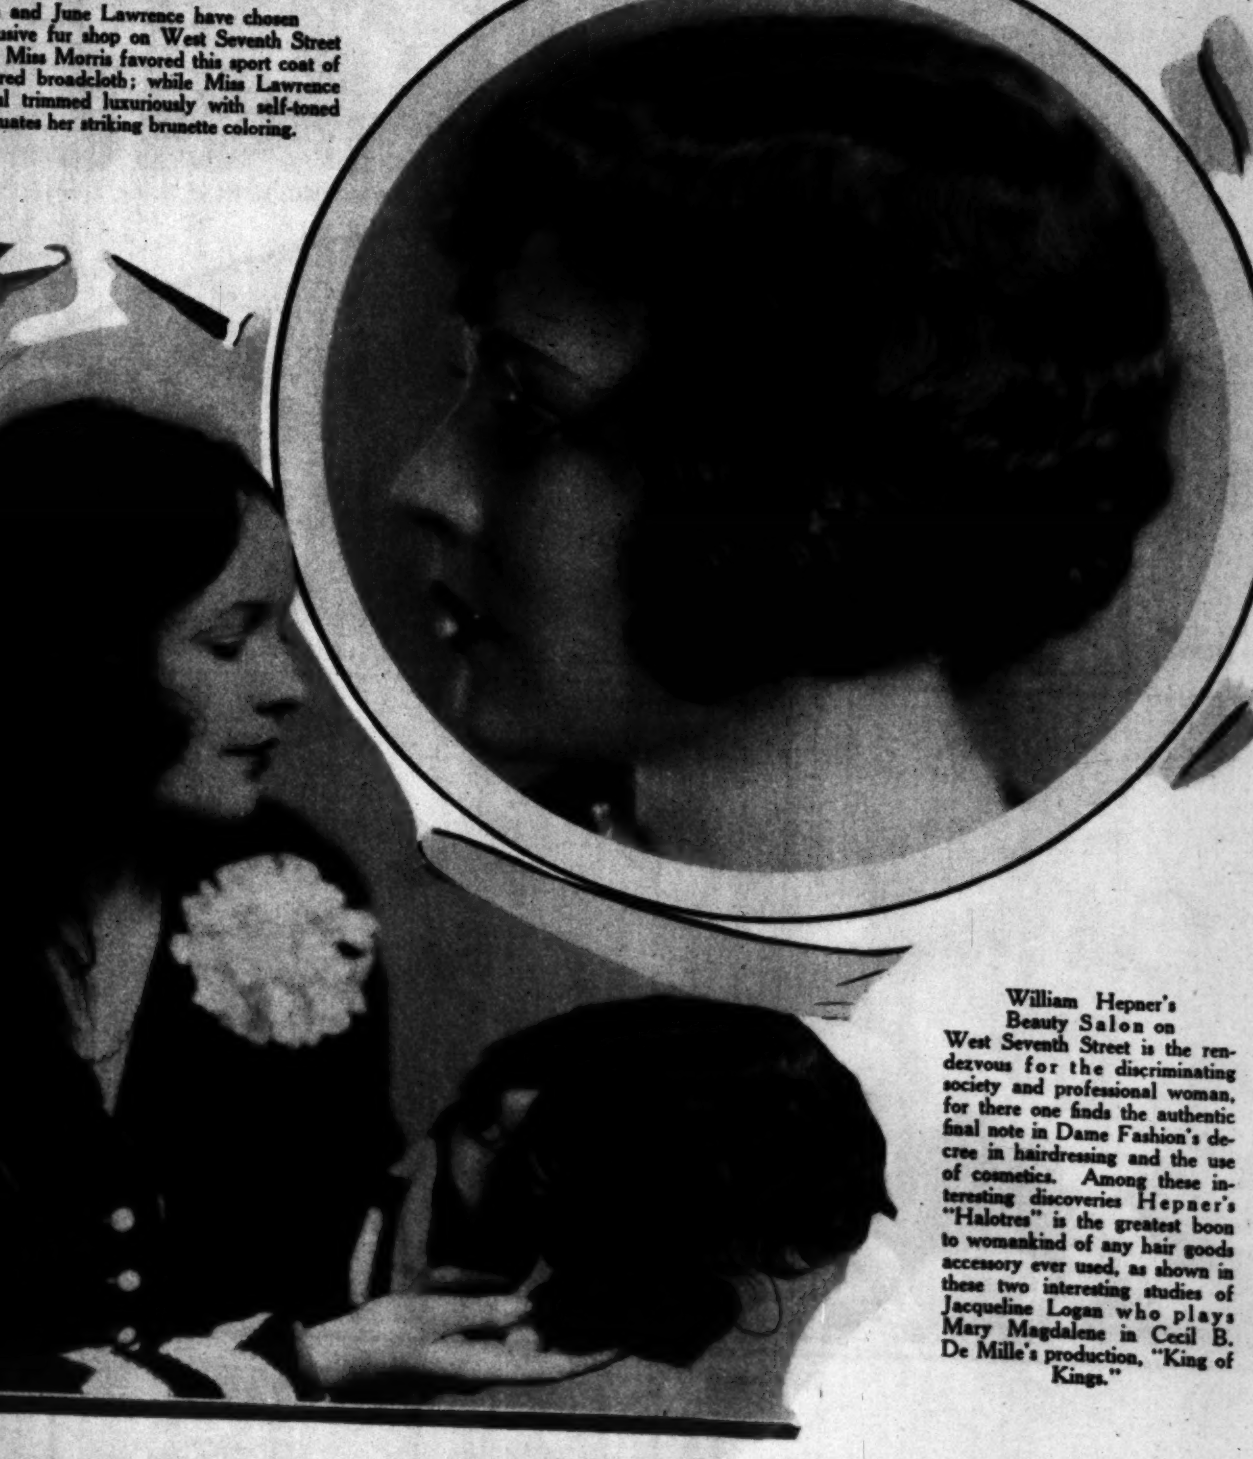
Margaret Morris and June Lawrence have chosen from Beckman's exclusive fur shop on West Seventh Street these stunning wraps. Miss Morris favored this sport coat of zeiger trimmed with red broadcloth; while Miss Lawrence preferred grey caracul trimmed luxuriously with self-toned fox, which accentuates her striking brunette coloring.



Dolores Del Rio, who is to appear in Edwin Carewe's production, "Resurrection," displays here for Harris and Frank's Women's Sports Department this elegant wrap of imported camel's hair, with lovely shawl collar and cuffs of beaver. Chiffon weight felt hat from Crofut & Knapp.



The interesting slipper worn here by Ruth Clifford (seated above) is an interesting model from The Bootery of West Seventh Street, which may be in patent leather with reptile trim, or black satin with rose tint patent relief on heel and trim. Carmelita Geraghty also poses for The Bootery, and wishes you to notice particularly the hand-painted heel and insert on this patent leather pump.



William Hepner's Beauty Salon on West Seventh Street is the rendezvous for the discriminating society and professional woman, for there one finds the authentic final note in Dame Fashion's decree in hairdressing and the use of cosmetics. Among these interesting discoveries Hepner's "Halotres" is the greatest boon to womankind of any hair goods accessory ever used, as shown in these two interesting studies of Jacqueline Logan who plays Mary Magdalene in Cecil B. De Mille's production, "King of Kings."

YESTERDAY at the UNIVERSITY of SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Founded Oct. 6, 1880, with a faculty of four members and an enrollment of fifty-nine students, the University of Southern California is now celebrating its forty-sixth anniversary with a record of almost continuous growth that has put it among the nation's leading educational institutions. When the university was founded, Los Angeles had a population of 11,145 and the college site was considered "pretty far out of town." Today the university has an enrollment of over 10,000 students, with a faculty of over 400 members, so its growth has been comparable to that of Los Angeles. On this page are reproduced some photographs intimately connected with the history of the university.

Magical—unforgettable—
the touch of a beautiful hand

Nothing else has such power to plead, persuade—to charm, to console—nothing else can speak so movingly and eloquently as a beautiful hand.

Don't let your hands become mere household drudges—the skin rough and red, the cuticle ragged—all the white loveliness that should be theirs drowned in the dish-pan, or rubbed away at scrubbing or cleaning!

A new way to care for much-used hands

Your hands can keep their fresh, soft, young look in spite of housework. Today there is a new preparation especially made to take care of much-used hands—to heal roughness and chapping, soften hard cuticle, and give the skin a smooth, beautiful texture.

This new preparation is Jergens Lotion. In Jergens Lotion benzoin and almond, combined with other healing ingredients, form a clouded, silvery liquid—deliciously fragrant—which gives instant relief to hands roughened or chapped by housework. It leaves no disagreeable stickiness—your skin absorbs it instantly.

Every time you have had your hands in water—use Jergens Lotion, and see how lovely it will make them; smooth, soft, with an apple-blossom whiteness!

Special Introductory Offer!

Jergens Lotion is 50 cents a bottle at all drug stores and toilet goods counters. To introduce it we have made arrangements with our dealers to honor the coupon below for 15 cents towards the purchase of one bottle.

USE THIS COUPON — SAVE FIFTEEN CENTS

THIS COUPON, signed with your name and address, entitles you to a fifty cent bottle of Jergens Lotion for thirty-five cents if presented to your dealer before October 3, 1926. Clip the coupon and use it today. Andrew Jergens Co. of California, Burbank, Cal.

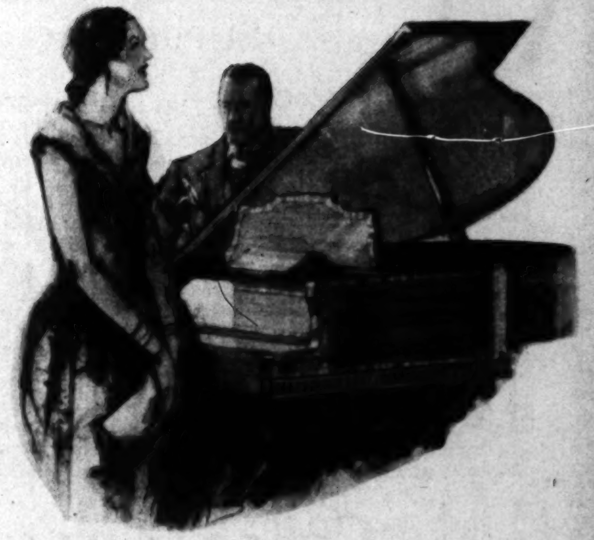
Fun at Home with the DUO-ART REPRODUCING PIANO



The Duo-Art plays wonderful accompaniments for singers and violinists. Pianists who assist Kreisler, Zimbalist, Spalding, Hempel, Schumann-Heink and other world-famous artists, are recording these Duo-Art Accompaniment Rolls. They are invaluable as personal lessons in interpretation and style.

"WHEN Youth and Pleasure meet" — in modern living rooms, they seem to gravitate unerringly toward the Duo-Art! Just the whisper of a Charleston, the barest suggestion of a song—and immediately the Duo-Art becomes the life of the party.

Youngsters today simply must have the newest, the latest, the best. That is why they would rather have the music of the Duo-Art than any other.

When they want the very latest Charleston, one of Broadway's most famous dance pianists plays it for them on the Duo-Art. That marvelous new number by George Gershwin? Why, the composer himself is seated at the piano!

The acknowledged masters, the experts in their field, are recording the music for the Duo-Art, whether it be modern or classic. The youngsters dance at home to rhythm that no cabaret could rival. And Mother and Dad have Paderewski, Josef Hofmann—a hundred incomparable masters—to charm them in the quiet hours.

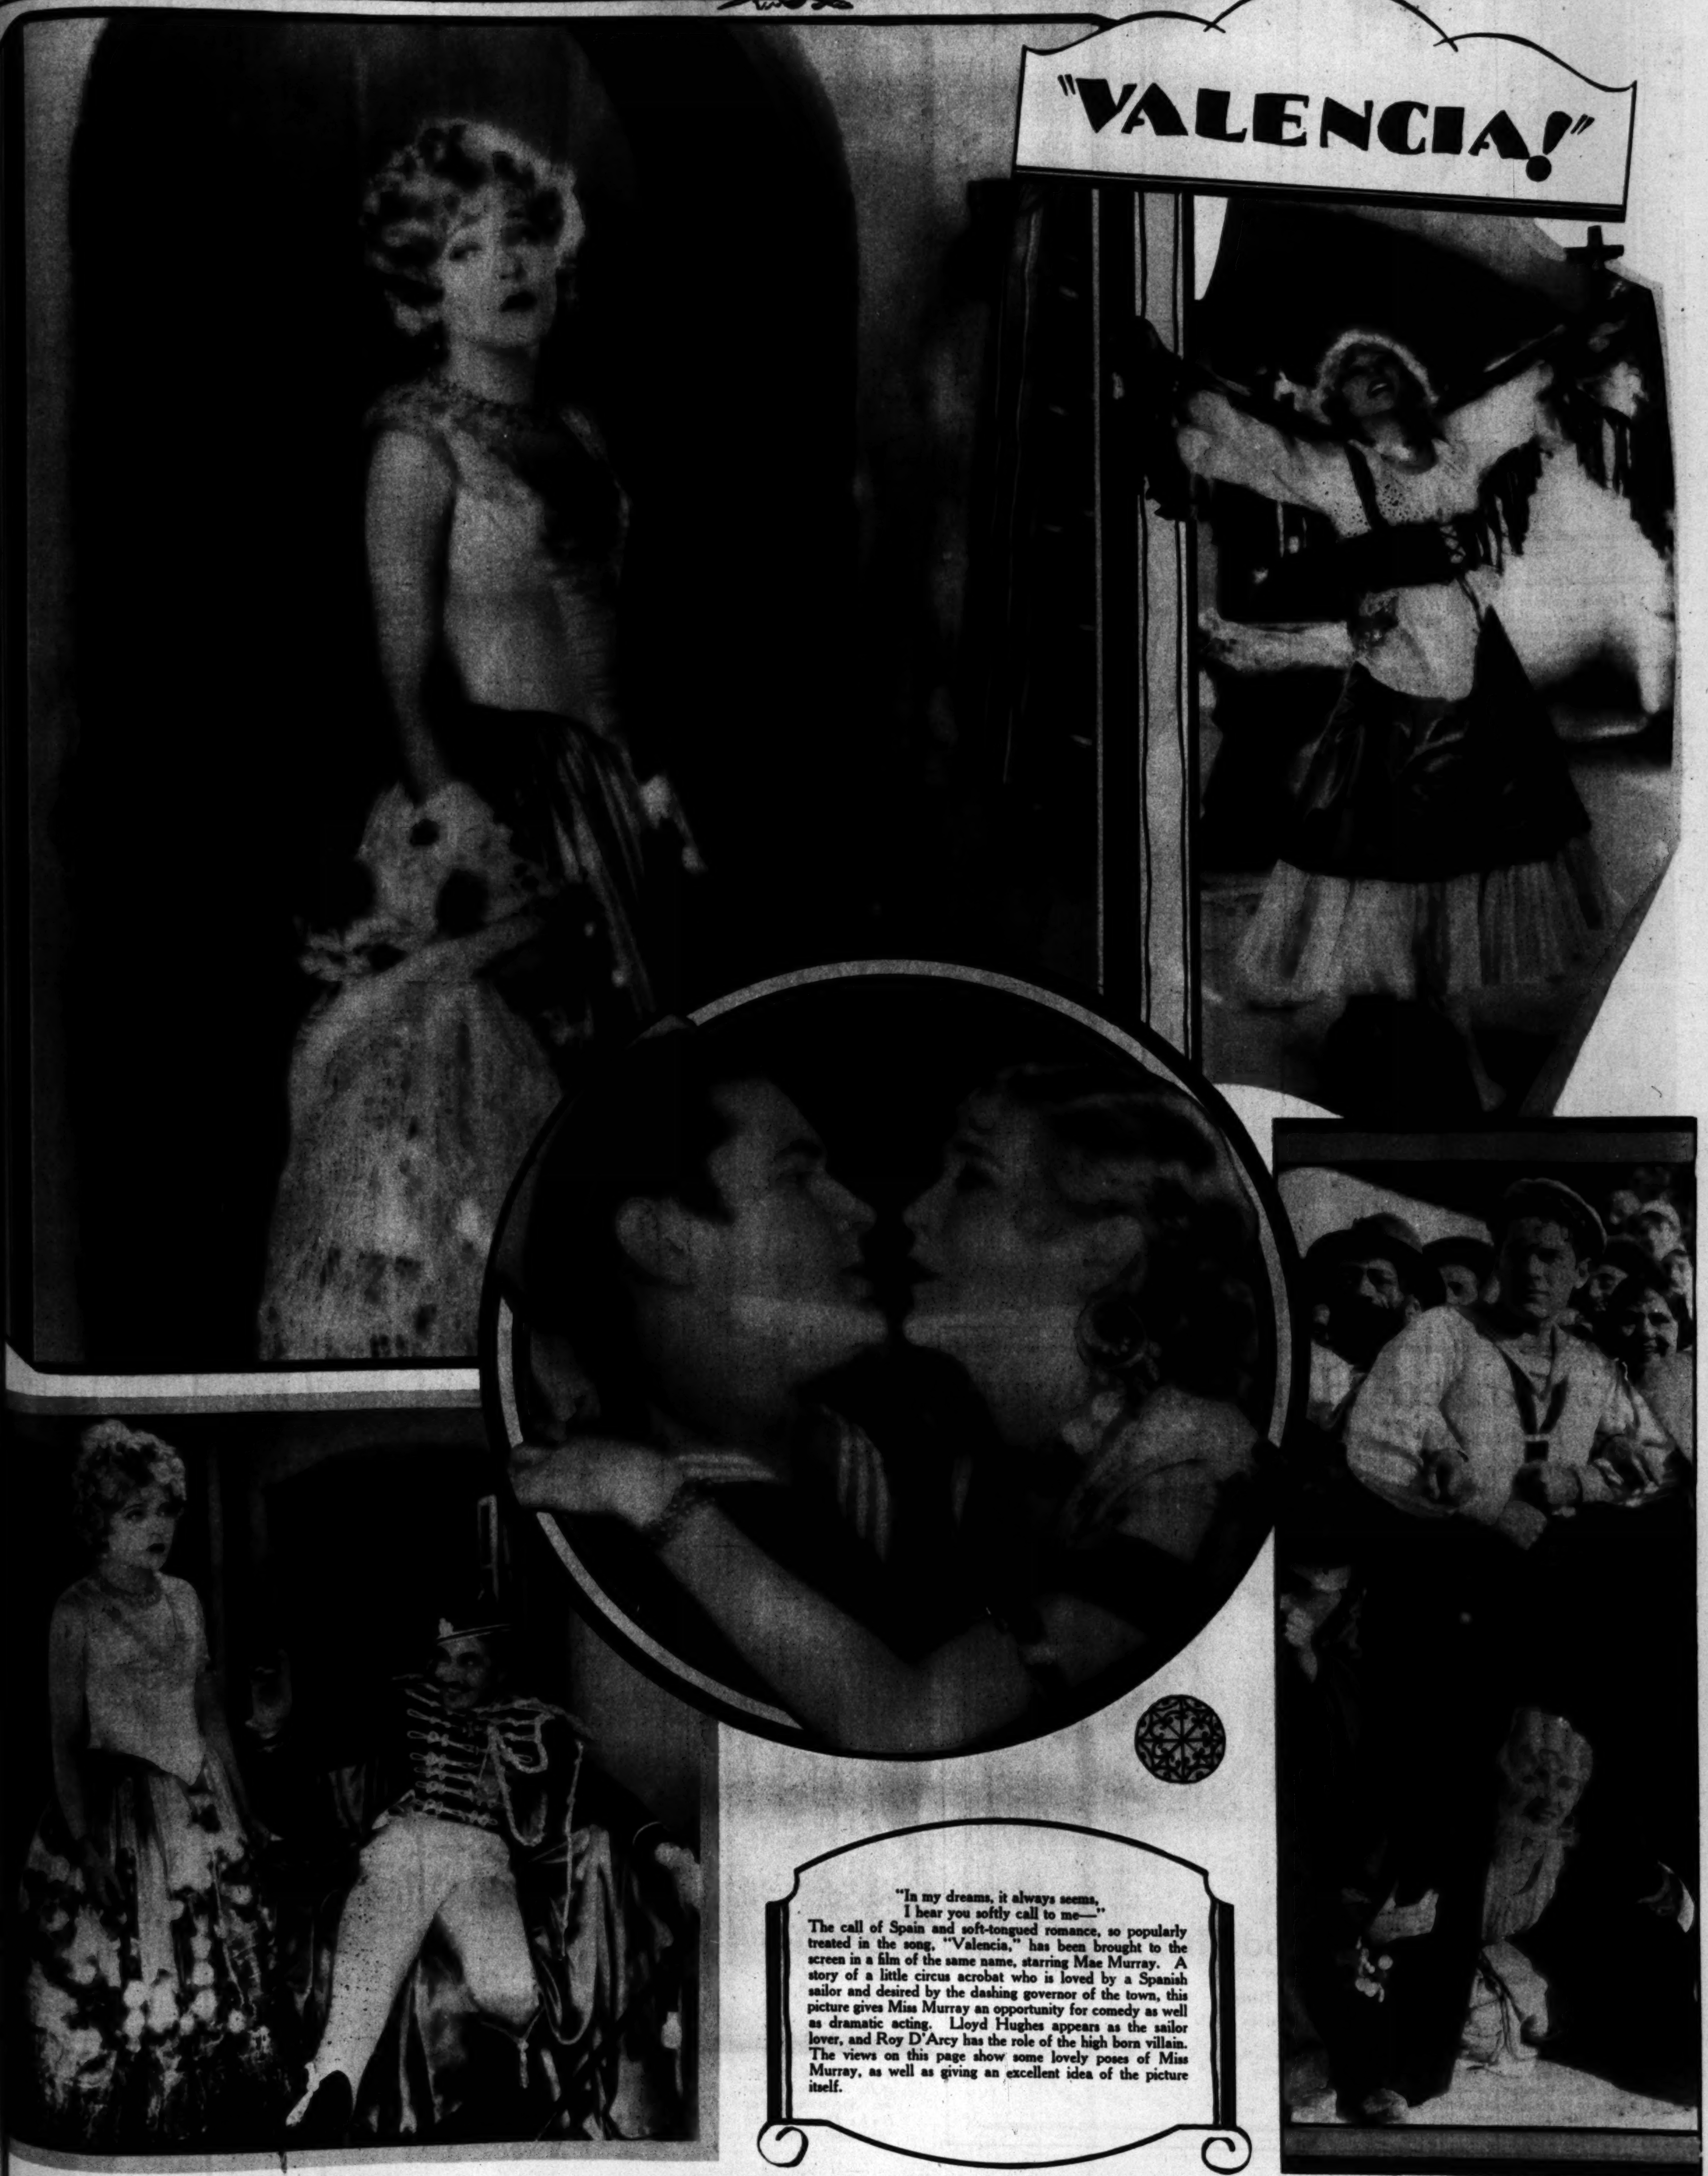
Los Angeles The Pre-view Sunday Times

DAY MORNING, OCTOBER 31, 1926

Edited by EDWIN SCHALLERT

"VALENCIA!"



"In my dreams, it always seems,
I hear you softly call to me—"

The call of Spain and soft-tongued romance, so popularly treated in the song, "Valencia," has been brought to the screen in a film of the same name, starring Mae Murray. A story of a little circus acrobat who is loved by a Spanish sailor and desired by the dashing governor of the town, this picture gives Miss Murray an opportunity for comedy as well as dramatic acting. Lloyd Hughes appears as the sailor lover, and Roy D'Arcy has the role of the high born villain. The views on this page show some lovely poses of Miss Murray, as well as giving an excellent idea of the picture itself.

SHADOWLAND

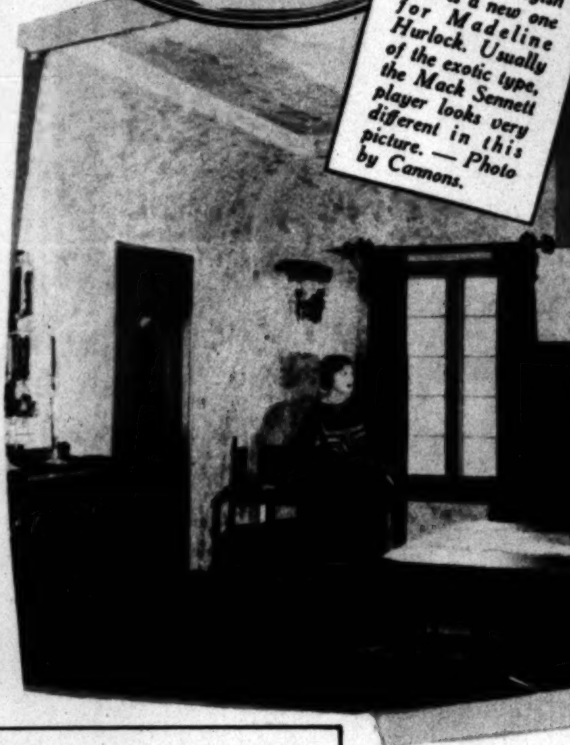
"Scenery"

Quite a fetching pose of Clara Bow. Small wonder that she was chosen to enact the title role in Elinor Glyn's "It." Judging by this glimpse, Clara has plenty. —Photo by Richee.

Right—By popular demand! Kathryn Perry's portrayals of the young wife in "The Married Life of Helen and Warren" series of domestic comedies for Fox have become so popular that she will complete the new series before resuming any other roles.—Photo by Seely.

It's the cats—! This view shows Bodil Rosing and Nancy Nash comparing their latest possessions. Miss Nash is a newcomer to the screen and plays the lead in "The City" for Fox, in which Miss Rosing, a veteran trouper, also appears.

Right—A boyish pose is a new one for Madeline Hurlock. Usually of the exotic type, the Mack Sennett player looks very different in this picture. — Photo by Cannons.



Who wouldn't be a home-body in a place like this? Ruth Clifford, fetchingly posed in a corner of her Beverly Hills dining room.

Iris Stuart is the newest of the Paramount players. She is supporting Bebe Daniels in "Stranded in Paris."

UNDER the LIGHTS

BY WHITNEY WILLIAMS

A NEW dramatic star is in the ascendent.

Or, rather, a star of comedy drama.

ALICE DAY

A very clever little girl whose name is Alice Day—incidentally, the only girl Mack Sennett has elevated to stardom since Mabel Normand. Inasmuch as the comedy maestro apparently does not believe in feminine stars, limiting his choice to just these two, that alone is ample evidence of her charm and ability.

Alice is to be Raymond Griffith's leading lady in "The Waiter From the Ritz," a picture whose very title promises unlimited merriment for those who enjoy rare comedy. While the production in the main is to be a comic endeavor, there will be opportunity enough for Alice in the way of dramatic acting—as her role will call for a certain amount of straight work, leaving more of the comedy to Griffith.

These Scene Stealers!

Just a few of the most famous—or, perhaps, notorious—scene-stealers in the business.

Without a doubt, Wallace Beery heads the list, but running him a hard race—Raymond Hatton, Andre Beranger, Ernest Torrence, Charlie Murray, J. Farrell MacDonald, Frank Campeau, Tom Wilson, Lucien Littlefield, George Cooper, Chester Conklin, Mack Swain, Ned Sparks, William Mong, Otis Harlan.

In a scene with any of these worthies a leading man may as well revert to the background—he will, anyway, for he will be scarcely noticed. Call it anything you like, but when any of these gentlemen of character decide that a scene should be theirs, the others in that particular bit of action may as well give up the ship.

A Question of Future

Can Billie Dove repeat her performance in "The Marriage Clause"? That is a question Hollywood would like answered.

BILLIE DOVE

Previous to the release of the Lois Weber picture no one was aware that Miss Dove was an actress. She had never before revealed any evidence of emotion, always merely walking through her scenes.

With the showing of "The Marriage Clause," however, one of the finest performances [illegible] glimpsed. Miss Dove [illegible] finesse, her every [illegible] artistry. And that [illegible] wonder.

Lois Weber is a [illegible] director. Instead of [illegible] a player a general [illegible] scene, and allowing [illegible] inject his or her own [illegible] she very definitely [illegible] move, down to the [illegible] head to the very [illegible] flicker of the eyelash. [illegible] the player has no [illegible] plan out anything for [illegible] self.

Miss Dove was under [illegible] veillance, this [illegible] There is no real [illegible] one may judge which [illegible] work and which Lois Weber's [illegible] fact remains that the [illegible] was most unusual—[illegible] looked for.

Dorothy Gish

I want to know!

Why some producer [illegible] Dorothy Gish for a series of [illegible] dramas—instead of permitting her to waste away in English films?

The younger Gish has one of the most amazing personalities on the screen. Essentially she is a comedienne—but drama also has seen some of its best [illegible] her hands. A more [illegible] tress than her sister, [illegible] has that spontaneity and [illegible] so popularizes an artist.

But, as is their [illegible] producers do not seem to [illegible] talent when they see it—[illegible] are they in putting under [illegible] contracts sweet goody [illegible] with fluttery orbs and [illegible] laughs.

The Inevitable Result

These director-star [illegible] are becoming quite the [illegible]

The most notable [illegible] King Vidor and John [illegible] Crosland and John [illegible] Browning and Lon [illegible] William Seiter and [illegible] There are many [illegible] but these associations [illegible] outstanding.

In the case of each [illegible] and star have worked [illegible] so many pictures that [illegible] established a certain [illegible] a result, are turning out [illegible] traordinary productions. [illegible] combination of Vidor and [illegible] that managed "The Big [illegible] and "Bardelys the [illegible] Crosland and [illegible] achieved "Don Juan," [illegible] and Chaney that offered "The Unholy Three" and "The [illegible] Mandalay," Seiter and [illegible] completed such comedy [illegible] "Skinner's Dress Suit," [illegible] Home" and "What Happened to Jones." Unions of [illegible] sonalities that might well be [illegible] lated.

Dolores del Rio is looking forward to the day she will interpret the role of Carmen on the screen. She is well equipped for the part, being of Latin blood herself and having lived a number of years in gay Seville.—Photo by Cannons.

Then Monte Blue told Stella and me how, when he had made a picture in San Quentin and was about to leave, a condemned man to whom he had been kind begged him to stay and be with him at the last. "Just to have a friend close at hand—I have nobody," he told Monte.

"However, I was saved the ordeal," said Monte, "because the young man's sentence was changed to life imprisonment."

"I don't know," said Stella, "how I ever can dance after listening to those sad tales."

But Bob Leonard's dancing talents won her over, and presently she was stepping as gaily as though nobody in the world had ever been hanged.

As usual, when Kathleen Key entertains, her party is a huge success. She was hostess recently at a large affair at the Gables Beach Club.

Bert Lytell need have no fear of lacking friends, judging by the group that wished him well on his opening night. Over a hundred greeted him from the front rows when he made his appearance.

DOLORES DEL RIO, clad in a lovely silver gown with long, flowing sleeves and form fitting, told me about how she was looking forward with great joy and without the least fear to playing Carmen, because of her having lived in Seville a long time and having studied the cigar and cigarette girls at close range.

"They are a world in themselves," she said.

Carmelita Geraghty kept the guests at both Bert Lytell's and Kathleen's party in a state of merriment with her inimitable wit. She is to play opposite Tom Mix in "The Last Trail."

Miss del Rio is, alas, losing that charming accent.

"I know every word of English in the world now!" she exclaimed, "why, I can even write letters!"

Miss del Rio is taking up her dancing again for the part of "Carmen," by the way. She is a wonderful dancer, who charmed all Hollywood at private parties with her Spanish stepping, but she says she has lately rather let her art go by the board.

"Of course, I wouldn't let anybody double for me in the picture," she said. Which is a relief, since we know that nobody could possibly do her own dancing justice!

CARMELITA GERAGHTY came, her dark beauty more glowing than ever, and amused everybody with her delightful wit.

Tom Mix told us of being at the Bankers' Convention meeting, and then as usual kidded the proceedings.

"The only difference between a banker and a pawnbroker," he said, "is that in the case of the pawnbroker you get a ticket and you can get your watch back if you have the money!"

George K. Arthur has a very lovely blonde English wife, who is a sculptress. At present she is modelling the hand of Mrs. Gish, mother of Dorothy and Lillian, and she is also modelling in one group the heads of the two daughters of Louis B. Mayer.

"THOSE poor dear bankers from the convention must be just all fagged out!" cried Stella. "You see, there are fresh relays of picture stars and picture flappers in the evenings to take the place of those who have worn themselves out entertaining all the afternoon, while the bankers themselves don't get a minute's rest."

"Still," I said, as I eyed a couple of these important men of the business world who were dancing with Helene Chadwick and Carmelita Geraghty, "I will say I don't notice any of them ordering up substitutes!"

Kathleen Key seems rather to have captured a young banker for herself. At least she danced a lot with him. He is Leonard Cushing, of New York, and whenever you saw a couple strolling along the beach absorbed in talk, it was usually Kathleen and Mr. Cushing.

WE HAD gone to the Gables Beach Club for luncheon and the party, which was being given by Kathleen in honor of Otto Kahn and some of the other bankers.

Charlie Chaplin was there, and I'm sure those bankers couldn't have been disappointed in Charlie as a humorist, as he was in gay mood, telling stories and delivering himself of clever jokes the whole afternoon.

He and Kathleen reminisced over the days when Charlie was making "The Kid," and Kathleen, a little school girl, was playing a child part.

"One morning," Kathleen reminded him, "I worked in your picture, and I was supposed to go to school in the afternoon. But you, Edna Purviance and some of the rest of us stayed talking so long, and I was so thrilled to be talking to you, that I was an hour late for school, and came near to being fired."

A lot of the very nicest girls in pictures were there, including besides those mentioned, Marceline and Alice Day, Bebe Daniels and others.

"I don't see any actors except Chaplin, Jack Pickford and Ward Crane," I commented.

"Just money versus art," said Stella, "with the girls, I am sure, hardly knowing how to choose between them!"

ROYAL
FRUIT FLAVORED GELATIN
RASPBERRY

From FRUIT ALONE
its fresh fruit flavor is made

"No other gelatin has such an aroma of fresh fruit."

THINK of it! Just from the pure juice of the fruits themselves Royal Raspberry, Strawberry, and Cherry derive their delicious flavor. While the cool refreshing taste of Royal Orange and Lemon comes only from the oil of real oranges and lemons.

No synthetics or artificial flavor. No "gluey" smell or taste. (Pure gelatin has neither!) You can rely on this new product as you have always relied on Royal Baking Powder.

Until you taste it, you can hardly believe how delicious Royal Fruit Flavored Gelatin is. How different from any other gelatin you ever tasted. Women—everywhere!—write us: "A delicious flavor not found in other brands." "The good fruit taste other gelatins lack." "We like Royal Fruit Gelatin nine times better than any other!"

Ask your grocer for it by name. Royal Fruit Flavored Gelatin. The red package, the same color as the Royal Baking Powder can.

ALMOND FRUIT MOULD: Dissolve 1 package Royal Cherry Gelatin in 1 cup boiling water. Add 1 cup cold water. When it just begins to thicken, pour small amount in large mould. Allow to set, tipping mould to coat sides. Arrange 2 or 3 halves of canned pears sliced, ½ cup white grapes, halved and seeded, and ¼ cup blanched almonds, halved, in design around mould. Add more gelatin to cover and chill until firm. Mix remaining fruit and nuts with rest of thickened gelatin and pour into mould. Chill until firm. Serves six.

FIVE FLAVORS

Strawberry, Raspberry, Cherry—with delicious flavor from the fruit juices. Orange and Lemon with delicious flavor from Oil of Orange and Oil of Lemon.

MAXWELL HOUSE COFFEE

... Just a touch of special richness —and it has swept the country

"Good to the last drop"

How swiftly that touch of extra goodness has spread its fame across the continent! Only a shade of difference in flavor—a bit more mellow, a little richer—but what added pleasure it brings to those who love the good things of life! Long ago, this blend of coffees was perfected in the South. Soon it became the first choice of the cities of Dixie. Today, in just a few brief years, Maxwell House Coffee has captured a long list of great cities in the West and North. It has rapidly become the largest selling high grade coffee in the country. New contentment at breakfast and dinner awaits you in its full-bodied flavor.

It is pleasing more people than any other coffee ever offered for sale

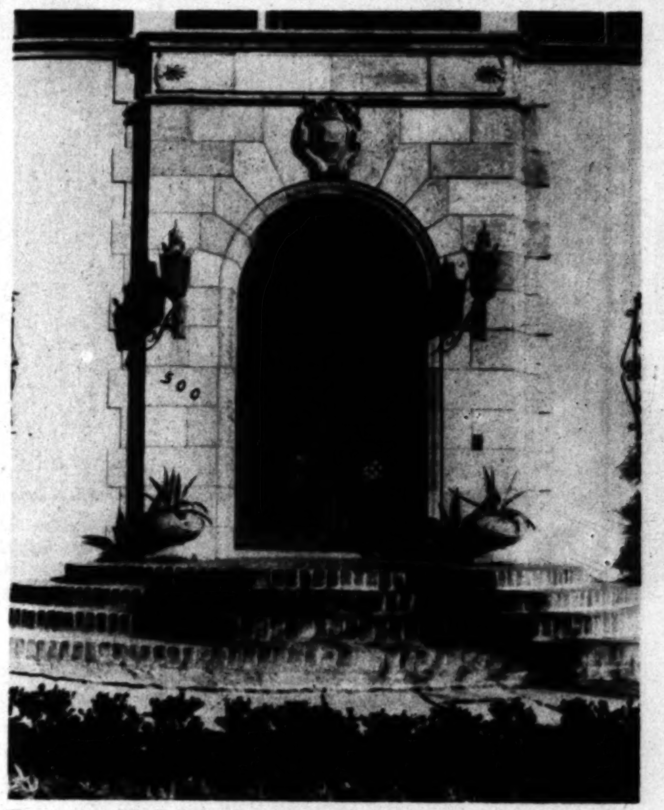
HIGHLIGHTS—for the FUTURE

"The Lady in Ermine"—in the person of Corinne Griffith. The star plays this role in her latest picture, its plot being woven about the Austrian invasion of Italy in 1810.

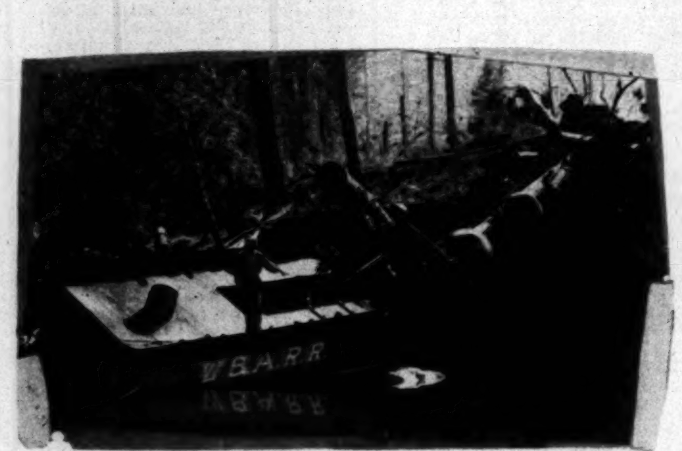
All that is left of "The Cruise of the Jasper B"—at the end of the picture. This comedy drama stars Rod LaRocque, with Mildred Harris his leading lady. Plenty of action, thrills and comedy are promised.

The Limehouse! A glimpse of Colleen Moore in a scene from "Twinkletoes," whose action takes place entirely in this quarter made famous by Thomas Burke.

War again—but, in this view, its pleasanter side. In "Corporal Kate," both Vera Reynolds and Julia Faye are entertainers near the front.



Two especially designed bracket lanterns add a final touch of beauty to the imposing entrance of the Asa Call home, 500 South Hudson . . . Stanton, Reed & Hibbard, architects. These lanterns were designed and made by artisans of The Forve Company, Inc. (formerly Forve-Pettebone Company), in their studios at 818 South Figueroa. Other interesting examples of distinctive lighting equipment are being displayed at these studios now.



Realism to order! In Buster Keaton's new comedy, "The General," a train plunges from a burning trestle—just to give the public a thrill. The picture is of Civil War vintage, incidentally costing more than any Keaton has heretofore produced.

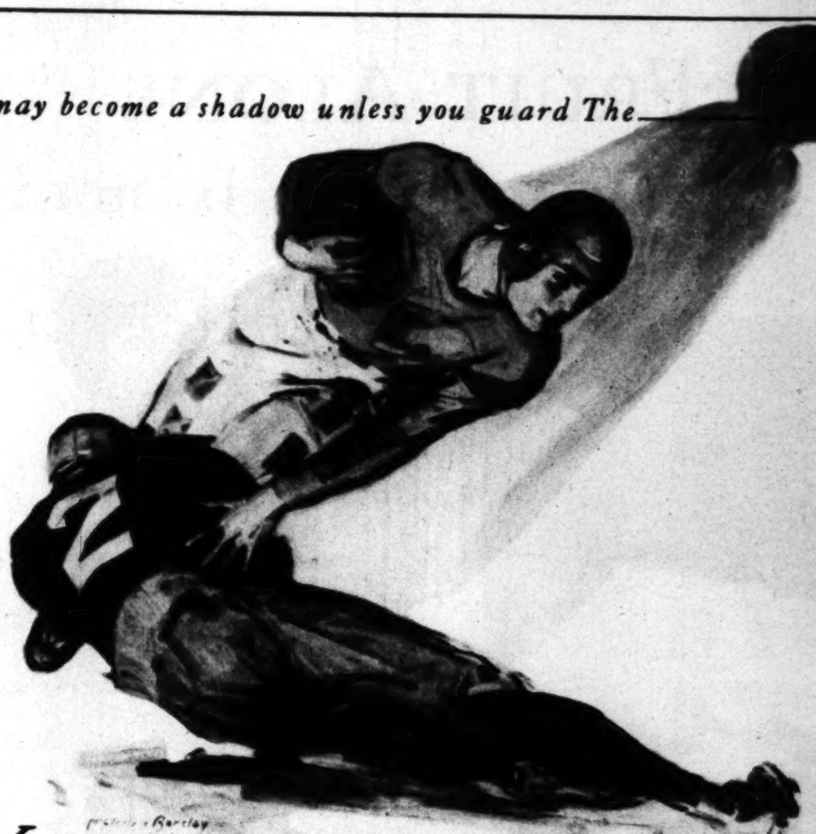
Health may become a shadow unless you guard The ——— Danger Line



Keep health playing on your side

Safeguard the brimming vigor of youth

LIFE is such a wonderful game—if you keep health always on your side.

On health depends the youthful freshness, the vitality, the eagerness to do, which mark the "successful."

For you, this new knowledge of The Danger Line may be the secret of health. Both medical and dental authorities tell us that thousands are constantly losing stamina, alertness, "pep," because of decayed teeth and infected gums! That many, too, are stricken with serious disorders for the same reasons.

Think of it! Attacked by heart disease, kidney disorders, neuritis—and perhaps needlessly! For so often proper care of the teeth and gums would have avoided them.

This is the danger

No tooth-brush can reach into the pits on the grinding surface of your teeth, or between your teeth along The Danger Line—the tiny V-shaped crevices where teeth and gums meet. As a result food particles collect there. They ferment. Acids are formed. Unless these acids are neutralized, they cause decay or dangerous gum infections such as Pyorrhea.

Squibb's truly protects

It is as a safeguard from dangerous mouth acids that Squibb's Dental Cream was developed. It contains more than 50 per cent of Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, long recognized as a most effective means of neutralizing mouth acids. Every time you use Squibb's Dental Cream, tiny particles of Squibb's Milk of Magnesia lodge in the crevices on your teeth and at The Danger Line—bringing safety and affording protection afterwards.

Squibb's Dental Cream not only cleans beautifully, but keeps your breath sweet. Contains no abrasives or astringents. Eases sensitive teeth and soothes irritated gum tissues. On sale at all druggists—only 40 cents for a large tube.

The evidence is interesting—but where is the proof? Priscilla Dean avers she caught these fish while locationing on the Santa Cruz Islands for "Jewels of Desire," a Metropolitan picture.

Brothers under the skin—and every other way! Jackie Coogan shares an ice cream cone with Robert. What greater test of affection than this?

"Your Fat
Will go as mine did"

For 19 years women have told women about Marmola Prescription Tablets. Told how easily, how pleasantly they ended excess fat. No exercise, no dieting required.

Mark the result today. Countless women keep slender with Marmola. You meet them in every circle. Over-fat figures are the exception now. People are using over a million boxes of Marmola every year.

You know that Marmola must be safe and efficient, else it never could have gained such a place. Then let it do for you what, for years, it has done for others. Excess fat is a blight to beauty, health and fitness. Let Marmola show you how others control it. You'll always be glad you know.

All druggists sell Marmola at $1 a box. Or it is mailed direct in plain wrapper by Marmola Co., 1701 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

CHARMOSETTE
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. Pat. Dec. 22, 1925.

The New Washable Elastic Without a Single Flaw

Charmosette—the new, superior, tested fabric has qualities found in no other elastic—and the faults of none! It is obtainable only in The Gossard Line of Beauty.

Gossards in Charmosette wear three times as long as any other foundation garment and are easily kept fresh and immaculate throughout their long service. May be laundered daily in hot or cold water—will not pull out of shape or lose their elasticity.

Charmosette may be cut at any angle and altered to please—will not run, pull, tear or break. New Gossards are thus fitted perfectly to your figure—cannot "ride", bulge, or ripple.

The new Gossard Line of Beauty in Charmosette and Royal Batiste—a new material with the beauty of satin and the durability of finest brocade—includes the most fashionable, practical and satisfactory foundation garment for your every requirement.

Remember, you can obtain garments fashioned with Charmosette in all cities, but only in stores which regularly carry Gossards, and only in garments honored with the Gossard label.

Pictures of Health . .

They conquered the common ills—found glorious vital health—
by eating one simple food

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active, daily releasing new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes regularly every day, one before each meal: on crackers, in fruit juices, water or milk—or just plain, in small pieces. For constipation dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before meals and at bedtime. Dangerous habit-forming cathartics will gradually become unnecessary. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days.

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. L-171. The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

Tom Thorp (center), well-known football referee

"WHILE HEAD COACH AT A LARGE UNIVERSITY the members of the football squad were taken down with boils. I tried every known remedy—no results. A trainer of another university team recommended Fleischmann's Yeast. Soon after giving my players Yeast the boils began to disappear."
Tom Thorp, Rockville Center, L. I.

"MY ENERGY BEGAN TO FLAG. I became nervous and irritable. Then I discovered Fleischmann's Yeast. I ate three cakes a day and in six weeks, marvel of marvels, I found I was not so tired. I was no longer nervous and irritable."
Ethel Y. Gins, Indianapolis, Ind.

"SINCE MY LITTLE BOY HAD PNEUMONIA I have given him Yeast to build him up. He has improved rapidly. I find too that I never have to give him a laxative. With Yeast he is absolutely regular."
Mrs. Felix Griffin, Baltimore, Md.

"CONSTIPATION WAS MAKING ME ILL. I suffered from intestinal pains at all times. One of my friends suggested that I take Fleischmann's Yeast. Now the pains are gone and I feel one hundred per cent better."
Julius C. Andrews, Hopewell, Va.

FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST

THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—aids digestion, clears the skin, banishes constipation.

"I HAD BEEN TROUBLED WITH INDIGESTION accompanied by dizzy spells. I tried Yeast and it brought great relief. My dizziness disappeared in a month or so. I felt better in every way. Now I just take the Yeast occasionally to keep my stomach in really good condition."
Hatty Lininger, Miami, Fla.

Ideal Raisin Pie

Recipe contributed by Miss E. Millman, Loma Linda, Calif.

PASTRY

2 cups Globe "A1" Flour
1 teaspoon salt
⅔ cup shortening
Cold water, about ⅓ cup

FILLING

2 cups raisins
1½ cups water
1 lemon
1 small orange
6 level tablespoons flour
1 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt

FOR PASTRY—Mix flour and salt, chop in shortening to make a coarse mixture, add water a little at a time, using barely enough to make a stiff dry dough. Divide and roll into two rounds for a large pie pan. Cut slashes in top round.

FOR FILLING—Place raisins and water in a saucepan and place over fire. Thoroughly mix the sugar, flour and salt and add to the raisins. Stir and cook until thick, remove from fire and add the grated rind of the lemon and half the orange and the juice from both lemon and orange. Partly cool and place between the crusts. Bake in hot oven until crust is nicely browned, then reduce heat to moderate and bake ten minutes longer.

2 cups Globe "A1" Flour
1 teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons melted butter
½ cup chopped raisins
2 tablespoons shortening
⅔ cup milk
¼ cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Sift flour with salt and baking powder, cut in the shortening and add milk to make a soft dough. Turn out on floured board and roll into a rectangle one-fourth inch thick. Brush with the melted butter, sprinkle with the brown sugar mixed with the spices, dot with the raisins and roll up from long side like a jelly roll. Cut in three-quarter inch slices and place on greased baking pan cut side down. Bake in hot oven about 20 minutes.

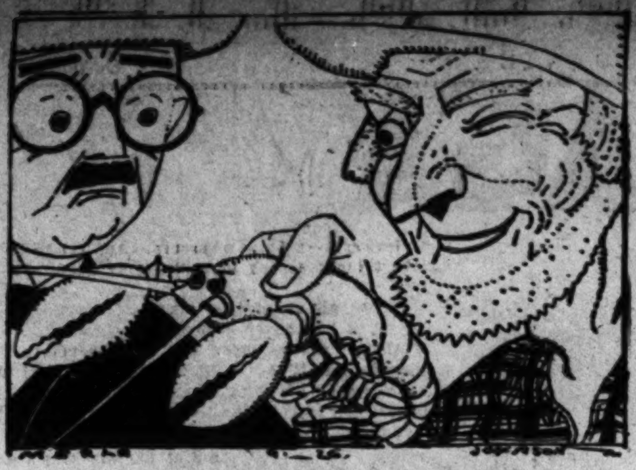
Running a Lobster Farm

By James J. Montague



"Had a good bit o' luck with my pots," he said cheerily.

FOR a landsman, and a city landsman at that, to attempt to run a lobster farm was injudicious. I know that now. One lives and learns.

Also it is unwise for an urbanite to imagine that all those who reside away from the roar of the subway are necessarily free from guile. That also has been taught me by that most pitiless of school masters, Experience. Today I could not be tempted to rear lobsters for the market. But tomorrow, like as not, somebody will come along and persuade me to raise great auks, or gila monsters. I was born incautious, and incautious I shall remain to the end of my days.

The lobster farm idea, I must admit, was original with me. Rowing up the cove one day I saw a little bight, with a narrow entrance, and it occurred to me that, if it were separated from the cove by a lath fence like those on the floating lobster ponds, young lobsters could be incarcerated there and fattened till they grew to the legal length and beyond. I had bought lobsters by the pound, and was aware that they brought a prodigious price when sold to the ultimate consumer.

I thought about the idea all that night, and the more I pondered over it the better it looked. With me thought is to action what kerosene is to fire. The next morning I went down to the bight, found out who owned it, and broached my plan to him.

He heard me without twitching a muscle of his face, cogitated for some time and then allowed:

"That looks to me like a smaht scheme, mister. Funny that I been livin' man an' boy in these pahts for sixty year and never thought of it myself. Was you callatin' to buy my bight?"

I told him that if the price was made reasonable I might think of it. I also told him that I would pay him for the young lobsters for stock, as he had a number of pots in the cove and a wide acquaintance among other lobstermen. He said that he wished he could enter into partnership with me in an enterprise that seemed so promising, but that his wife was peculiar and made a terrible fuss if he undertook anything new. However he would be glad to sell me the bight at a price to be agreed on by the local real estate dealer and the postmaster, and he would guarantee to get me small lobsters—providing they were of the legal length of three inches—from his friends, at the market rate.

So the deal was concluded, and with blithe spirits I started the foundation of my fortune.

I thought the figure for the bight and the land surrounding it was a little high, but the real estate agent and the postmaster assured me I was getting it almost as a gift, and that they couldn't understand how I had got around the owner the way I had. "He must think a heap of you personally, and figure you're a terrible bright man," they said, "or he would never have let you have that property so low." I smiled contentedly and said we understood one another.

In a week I had the bight fenced in, with a gate through which to drive in fish for the lobsters to eat, and in another week the place was tenanted with three thousand young but active lobsters. Then the serious business began.

It was my job to keep my charges contented, and to do that they had to be well fed. All the used fish that the markets had left over I bought and threw into the bight, but they were so inadequate to the needs of the inmates that there was a fight over every fish—a bitter fight which always resulted in the loss of a number of claws, and the consequent deterioration in the market value of their owners.

I saw that I would have to find some new and better means of providing provender, and at last hit on the plan of hiring another boat with a man to operate it, and a long seine, and bringing in herring from the deep sea.

The seiner advised me to haul the herring out and take them to the bight in the boats, but it struck me that it would be easier to bring them in, as it were, on the hoof. So every morning we would go out to sea, stretch the seine between our boats and move slowly toward the corral, dragging tons of reluctant herring along with us. Arrived at the bight we would open the gate, prod the herring from behind and send them wriggling and squirming into the maws of the lobsters.

Soon there were so many herring in the bight that the water fairly boiled with them. There were no more evidences of any lobster fights, and all seemed to be serene. The man I had bought the property from congratulated me on the success of my feeding scheme and predicted a brilliant future for the business.

But the work of seining was increasingly difficult as the weather began to get stormy. If I did not bring in a haul of herring every day the supply gathered there would disappear. Many a chilly morning I went down to the bight only to find no herring there, and confronted with the stern necessity of going out to sea after more. When I became fagged and lay late in bed some of the natives would be sure to come up and tell me that my lobsters were hungry and must be fed or they would die.

At the end of the season, I figured that it was time to take a little profit, and after making arrangements with a dealer in the nearest large city to take part of my stock off my hands, I went down to make an inventory.

There were no herring in the pond, but I expected that, I was content to feel that the lobsters to be sold had had a big meal the night before, and would be in prime condition for the market.

But when I began to look about for lobsters, and discovered none, I grew uneasy. Round and round the bight I rowed in a boat, gazing intently into the clear salt water, and not a lobster was visible. I took a boat hook and prodded the bottom, thinking perhaps that they might be so fat they did not feel like walking about. There was no result.

Then I began to explore the outside edge of the bight. Under a low-hanging bunch of juniper, I discovered a tiny stream, flooded only at high tide. I got out of the boat and followed it. The course led straight for fifty feet, and then turned and ran under the homestead of the man who sold me the property. As I stepped on his front porch he was just casing up a crate of fat lobsters.

"Had a good bit o' luck with my pots," he said cheerily. "Sending a few to market on my own account this morning."

Of course I couldn't prove anything. But I am as certain as I am that I am an ignoramus in business that every one of my lobsters filed out of that overflow directly into a net which my friend had set for them. And if the lobsters preferred that route to the night clubs to mine, what could I do?

I have retired from the business now, but it still has possibilities for a man of more caution, and if any one wants to buy a bight, a herring seine, two boats and the good will of a business that might in time turn into a gold mine, I should be very glad to hear from him.

CARQUÉ
"Kar-Kay"
This Name Stands for the Ideal of Natural Foods

FOR 20 YEARS Carque Products have been sold to America.

Otto Carque's little store sowed the seed of NATURAL FOODS in 1906.

From Maine to Arizona and from Florida to Washington intent people have been eating their way to efficient HEALTH.

Such people are nationally-minded; when they find that California foods are so good as CARQUE PRODUCTS prove to be, their orders come in every mail, every day from everywhere.

DEPENDABILITY. That is what your neighbor has subconsciously in mind when he reorders from CARQUE: he feels (without having to consider) that he is buying A BRAND OF HONOR.

No Carque product has been depleted of natural elements, processed to improve looks at expense of natural food-value, or treated to preserve it or to alter its natural composition or taste.

CARE OF THE BODY

to take its place.

In the grafting process the grafted piece of bone is absorbed by the bloodstream in practically every case, and after several years nothing is left.

In the scraping process, Nature is entrusted with the task of creating new bone tissue.

Both of these processes have been proved eminently unsatisfactory.

Osteomalacia is essentially a diet-deficiency disease. Not only are the elements for calcification absent in food but also those foods which are used are bone-leaching and calcium-abstracting.

For instance, every man, woman and child consumes almost one hundred and fifty pounds of white sugar in one form or another.

I know of no more powerful calcium-leacher than white sugar. It is undoubtedly responsible for many cases of osteomalacia.

Osteomalacia is also a disease of mineral and vitamine starvation and last but not least, it is a disease associated with rickets and sunshine-starvation.

Good liberal doses of natural foods containing the vitamines and mineral salts, together with sunshine in sufficient quantity—these are the best medicines that one suffering from osteomalacia could possibly use.

Care of the Child

The Thymus Gland

Perhaps at no period of life do the glands play as important a part as they do during childhood, from birth to puberty and then later during the decline of life—that is, from the menopause to death.

In early life the glands govern, both directly and indirectly, the entire development of the body as it will be.

A healthy shrub will produce a strong tree. As the child is, so is the man.

The entire process is governed carefully by the action of the ductless glands.

The sensitivity of these glands to inflammation is most pronounced during early childhood. The fact of the matter is that scarcely a disease occurs in which there is not an inflammation of the glandular system.

There are hundreds of glands throughout the body, some more important than others. Of those which play a great part in growth, the thymus perhaps takes the lead, at least until adolescence has been fully established.

Itself weighing scarcely twelve grams at birth or the weight of about six nickel pieces, it plays so important a part that any degeneration of its function seriously disturbs the metabolism of the entire body.

Specifically, the function of the gland is not well known.

It has been believed that it governs the development of the bones, especially the hardening process. It is also believed that the emotions and state of nerves are to a large extent governed by the thymus gland.

When this gland is inflamed and enlarged, sometimes the situation becomes really serious. The breathing may become difficult and in severe forms, a true asthma may occur.

Usually the thymus gland atrophies at adolescence. When it persists and remains enlarged, it may give rise to diseases of the kidneys, rickets or hyperthyroidism with a resultant stunting of growth.

In most cases, however, enlargement and thickening of the thymus are usually associated with a corrolary enlargement and thickening of the entire glandular system of the body.

In almost every case one will find constitutional symptoms which are directly responsible for the thymus enlargement. It is these conditions which must be overcome.

As a rule, the blood stream is charged with the by-products of faulty metabolism which, in their turn, come from a super-refined, irrational diet.

In most cases sane dietetic measures of themselves will be the only action required toward reducing the enlarged gland.

Even a short fast of twenty-four to thirty-six hours will sometimes work wonders in making the inflammation subside.

Like every other inflamed organ, the question of cure is intimately associated with elimination.

Induce elimination by the means which have been advocated in this department for many years and there is no reason, whatsoever, why diseases of the ductless gland should not respond in the same wholesome fashion.

ARE YOU SUFFERING from painful affliction of the feet, broken down arches, callouses, bunions, etc.?

Ready-made Arch Supports are an unsatisfactory makeshift because everyone's foot is different and the displaced bones, enlarged joints and deranged ligaments complicate matters still further.

We make supports from carefully prepared plaster of Paris casts and alter them to accommodate changes brought about by the wearing of the supports. In order to give relief and lasting satisfaction it is imperative that the foot be restored to as normal a shape as possible. We have an extensive experience in the correction of flat-foot, broken down arches and other deformities of the feet, and are able to promise our clients comfort and relief in every case.

It is not necessary to wear clumsy shoes with our supports; on the contrary, we often restore daintiness of appearance to feet badly deformed and unsightly.

New Home Treatment For Gland Troubles

Medical authorities agree that 65% of all men past middle age (many much younger) are afflicted with a disorder of the prostate gland. Aches in feet, legs and back, frequent nightly risings, sciatic pains, are some of the signs—and now, a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science has written a remarkably interesting Free Book that tells of other symptoms and just what they mean. No longer should a man approaching or past the prime of life be content to regard these pains and conditions as inevitable signs of approaching age. Already more than 10,000 men have used the amazing method described in this book to restore their youthful health and vigor—and to restore the prostate gland to its proper functioning.

THE RED CITY

By John
Stephen
McGroarty

ON a day long since forgotten by the world, a wandering Scotsman named Bryce, an expatriate from the hills of heather where he was born, found himself among the Wasatch Mountains in Utah.

He was a peculiar man and perhaps somewhat dour, as Scotsmen sometimes are. Anyway, it is certain he wasn't fond of crowds, and was happiest when alone, which is to say that he may have been a wise man. And, if all this was true; if Bryce liked solitude and the solitary life, he picked out a grand place to enjoy himself. The Wasatch country is as lonely as death, even now. And when Bryce was there, it was still lonelier.

But, after all, this solitary wanderer must have experienced surprises and thrills and a series of adventures beyond the lot of all except a very few men who had lived before his time, or who have lived since. He wandered day by day through a land of ancient fires that died ages ago, but which left the deathless colors of their flames upon every pigment of rock and sweep of earth their fiery tongues had scorched.

It is an amazing land—this country of Southern Utah, unknown to white men when Bryce, the old wanderer, stumbled into it with his pack train of gray burros. It is only just now that the world is beginning to know about it.

Some one has called it "The Land of Cyclopean Steps," which is, from one aspect, eloquent enough. It descends from the tabled summits of the Wasatch Sierras, beginning at a height of 11,000 feet, in a series of plateaus down to 3000 feet above the sea. Terraces and palisades of gigantic proportions overawe the sight at every turn of the winding trails. Rocks and earth erosions of flaming colors greet the eye and bewilder the senses. The heritage of the volcanic ages of the earth; and the gift of deluges that followed after. And, still after that, the wizardry that sun and wind have wrought.

Hundreds of miles in extent is this vast wonderland, vivid not only with geologic color, but also with trees and flowers and the incomparable flora of desert landscapes. And, today, to all this is added the green little river bottom farms where the Mormons have builded villages with poplar-shaded streets, to meet which we passed through canyons so gorgeous with autumnal glory that it is a wonder praises of New England autumns were ever sung. "It is a library of the ages in vivid bindings," said a geologist who read with wondering eyes its gorgeous pages. And it may be that it was really this land that the Quaker poet saw in his vision when he sang:

> "Touched by a light that hath no name,
> A glory never sung,
> Aloft on sky and mountain wall
> Are God's great pictures hung."

But, to get back to the old Scots wanderer, Bryce.

The way it was, he had come out of a black lava bed fringed with a forest of firs and aspens, in the Wasatch. A great plain opened out before him, and to his left, shouldering like a huge promontory into a sea, was the mountain called now in honor of Padre Escalante, a Franciscan friar who had wandered through Utah in the days when Spain was flinging her new world empire far north from South America and Mexico. But, it is doubtful that Escalante ever saw this Red City of which we are now to tell, and which seems destined to forever hereafter bear the name of Bryce.

On the morning of the day of which we are speaking —away back in the '50s—when Bryce had rubbed the sleep out of his eyes, he gazed in petrified astonishment across the great plain to where in a vast amphitheater of the farther hills under a green sweep of majestic pines stood a city that appeared to his vision to be larger than his native Edinburgh. A city whose spires and domes and castellated walls were of the flame of red gold, with here and there a tower and a spire of gleaming white.

The man must have doubted his senses, practical-minded, steady-nerved Scot though he was. It does not appear that he kept a journal; and he has left us no record of his travels. But we know that he were not human if he did not go a-tremble from the sheer shock of the sight of this stately city of flame that blazed upon his vision from across the plain in the desolation of a wilderness in which even the camp fires of the Utes were not to be seen.

All that one has to do to know what Bryce's emotions were on this stupendous morning is to put oneself in imagination in his place.

It may well be that he was in no hurry to move nearer to the Red City that changed in color with every passing hour—now jasper red, now vermilion, and again to orange chrome toward sunset. We think he took plenty of time to be cautious, after the traditional manner of a canny race.

How did he know but that the Red City was inhabited by a cruel and warlike citizenry that would slay him as though he were a stray dog the moment they caught sight of him? Could he not plainly discern, even from his distant camp, the city's bristling battlements? Parapets behind which bowmen and catapults might well be hidden. He could see sentinels on the walls—strangely motionless, it is true, through the long hours of the day, but motionless because, perhaps, they were so tense upon the slightest movement he might attempt to make.

Bryce had no thought of turning back and getting away while the chance was good. No man was ever so craven-born that he would not risk life to set foot within those crimson citadels that were more mystical than human eyes had ever seen.

What he doubtless did was to advance by night and lie in hiding by day behind rocks and clumps of chaparral.

At last as he came sufficiently near, Bryce received his second shock. It was all an optical illusion. The Red City was a dead city. Or, rather, it was a make-believe city—a freak of nature. And yet the most glorious thing that any man, living or dead, had ever beheld.

It was all simply the magic of erosion, but it was magic as had never been before. And even when the truth had dawned upon the Scots wanderer, it was a long time until he could make himself feel sure that there were not living people, or certainly the ghosts of once living people, lurking somewhere in the shadows and colonnades to inhabit the place.

Bryce pitched his camp at the Red City's gates and made there his home. And that is how the spot has since come to be called "Bryce Canyon," although it is not a canyon. But, you can't stop people from fumbling at names. And once a name gets a foothold, it is hard to pry it loose.

People who have seen both the Grand Canyon of the Colorado and Bryce Canyon are invariably asked which they like best—the commonplace way of putting a mighty question. But, it is a foolish question. The two are wholly dissimilar except for the fact that they are both erosions, the one the same as the other. The Grand Canyon is so big and vast that the senses are overawed by it, and, to a sensitive imagination, it is fearsome and oppressive. While Bryce, on the contrary, is intimate and friendly almost as soon as one has recovered from one's first gasp of astonishment.

Throughout these scenic wonderlands of the West and in other parts of the world guides will point out to the traveler freaks of tree and clay and rock that by a more or less violent wrench of imagination can be seen to bear resemblances to animals, human beings, towers, churches and other things. But, at Bryce even the dullest imagination stands in no need of prodding or coaching.

There it is, plain for any eye to see—the Red City of the Dead. A city molded by wind and rain in an architecture so bewilderingly beautiful that one thinks sadly of human genius that falls so far short of what God can and does do.

I had not looked on Bryce more than a moment when the memory of ancient cities I had seen in Spain came vividly to mind. Particularly did it remind me of Toledo as I had seen it on a never-to-be-forgotten morning rising in glory above the tawny waters of the Tagus upon which the genius of Goth, Saracen, Moor and Spaniard has been spent throughout the long, mystical centuries; the oldest city, they say, left standing in the world.

When you ask a Toledan how old his city is, he will answer and say that when the sun first lighted the earth its rays shone on Toledo.

Let that be as it may, and be Toledo ever so old, it is still as young as the mushroom that was born overnight, compared to Bryce.

The Red City is of the ages, and not merely of the centuries. It was begun when the earth was heaving in the first throes of birth. And it is not yet finished.

I would say that the Red City is dominated by its cathedral, as all cities should be. "First seek the Kingdom of God," says the Book, "and all things else will follow." It is the first thing that holds the eye—this vast church with a tower like Rheims; and its walls and pilasters and huge buttresses of jasper red. You cannot get inside it, of course. But if it were that you could do so, I would think that you could bring with you a greater number of worshipers than St. Peter's can hold. And, in the city there are also mosques for the Moors and synagogues for the Jews.

The cosmopolis of the centuries is the Red City, for here also are the hanging gardens of Babylon, green with pine and manzanita; pagodas of India and the Orient; castles of Spain; pyramids of Egypt; leaning towers that rival Pisa; ruins of Yucatan; suspension bridges; walls that shut out the sky save for great windows broken through them; white statues of Greek gods set upon vermilion pedestals; the Pope on his triple throne; and—carved no doubt but lately by sculptors of the winds and rains—a serene image of Victoria, Britain's great mother-queen.

What new fantasies the Red City will have to display to the man of ten thousand years from now we must wait to know when his time comes to greet us on the yonder side of Jordan. And yet, we perhaps shall have lost interest in the matter by then; but I am certain that old man Bryce will want to know, and that he will wonder if the embers of his camp fires remain on the spot where he flung his tent and became the Red City's first and solitary citizen.

I have told the Mormon farmers in the little green nooks of the hills where they have reared their daring rooftrees that they have seen their last days of loneliness. The world has found a pathway to the Utah's wonderland, and the feet of countless thousands will soon be upon the way.

∴ The Wheel ∴

The wheel on which we have been placed spins
'round.
We cannot guide or stop it as it goes,
But we must meet our friends or face our foes
Like any other creature, firmly bound,
That stands erect or grovels on the ground.
Our helplessness in every hour grows,
For chance and change can strike us bitter blows
Where tender love and lasting loss are found.

From time to time our comrades disappear,
Although we cling to them with eager hands.
Each one of us will sometime run his race,
And leave the earth with faith or doubt or fear.
Though great or small, each mortal only stands
Upon the wheel of life a little space.

that the league is frequently called upon to make investigations and demand compliance with the law. In some instances the plea of ignorance of the law is put forth; in other cases, open defiance is manifested. In the minds of some school employees, personal opinions seem to weigh more than clearly defined laws on the statute books of the State."

Infantilism

It takes all sorts of people to make a world. And it takes all sorts of people to fill in the observations of the health writer.

A glance about us reveals every type of physical extremes. Some are tall, some short; some lean, some stout; some magnificently formed, others distorted, awry and misfigured.

Unfortunately, Nature makes us pay the toll for many of our indiscretions and crimes we commit against her. Sometimes this toll is extended with biblical exactitude "even unto the fourth generation."

The innocent must oftentimes pay the price for the guilty. Why this should be so, I do not know. It is. That's enough.

One of the most pitiful of these distorted conditions is what is technically known as infantilism, the failure or arrest of growth with a general retardation of body and mental development.

Here and there, especially in our circuses, we see a true case of dwarfism.

There are extremes, however. The stunted, dwarfed man or woman of four feet two or therabouts is much more common. Sometimes it is the result of heredity.

Before infantilis of this type we are relatively helpless. These cases, fortunately, are the exception rather than the rule.

It is the infantilism or failure of development due to our own misdemeanors that we are more concerned with; for instance, down South where thousands of children have been affected with hookworm disease, an ailment totally unnecessary, unwarranted and easily prevented, were they but to get away from their salt pork, sorghum molasses, corn bread and white-flour diet.

Hookworm is a disease that has stunted thousands.

Next to this comes another great regional disease which could have been easily eradicated ages ago—malaria.

Were we more inclined to spend our many millions toward health conservation by the proper measures of sanitation and hygiene instead of the millions we are now spending in the vain pursuit of this "bug" or that "germ," malaria would long since have been wiped off the map.

Then we have syphilis taking its full toll of human growth. Hereditary syphilis is a stunting disease of the first order.

Finally and perhaps the most important of all the causes for infantilism are the two most prominent social causes today—alcohol and tobacco.

Notwithstanding our poorly enforced statutory laws to the contrary, the terrible stuff known as "moonshine" goes down the throats of scores of thousands of our children who have not yet reached the age of physical maturity.

Every dog-fancier knows that he can stunt the growth of his pups by feeding them whisky in their food. Its action is the same in the human.

Then we have a situation where our children are taught to use tobacco in its various forms.

We may establish all the legal barriers we please. Yet, for the practical consumption of tobacco there is scarcely an obstacle preventing any boy or girl of any age from procuring all he or she wants.

These are the facts of the situation.

The solution is evident. Correct the social abuses of alcohol and tobacco with our children and the spread of infantilism is speedily checked.

Osteomalacia

This may sound like one of those medical stumpers but in plain English language, it means nothing more nor less than softening of the bones.

In essence, it means that the calcareous deposits of the bones are either not being formed or are being extracted by the blood. In a very short time the bones become too weak to support the appended structures.

In osteomalacia there is a true bone degeneration.

Characteristic of the one-sided reasoning of medical philosophy, of which modern surgery is a branch, it seems that the "cure" for a disease lies in its surgical removal. Consequently, the victims of this disease, in one case, submitted to surgical grafting and in the other, to surgical scraping.

The theories in both are very clear.

In surgical grafting, the hypothesis is based upon the fact that when new bone tissue is added to diseased bone tissue, in some cases it forms a nucleus for a healthy growth which counteracts the diseased growth.

Bone grows from definite nuclei which radiate in all directions.

Bone tissue consists of an immense number of these small nuclei. When these are destroyed there is no center from which growth can ocur.

Consequently, the theory is that if one transplants healthy bone to the diseased area, new nuclei are formed from which good new bone is created in the diseased area.

The other theory is even less plausible than this. It is nothing more than the scraping away of diseased bone, leaving nothing Proper Care of the Feet!

"Buster keeps me on my feet so constantly, Bernice, that I simply never get them rested. I'd love to go to the reception, but don't believe I could stand up that long and keep smiling!" Mary laughed as she made these remarks—but Bernice could see she was in deadly earnest, at that.

Leaning forward and putting her hand fondly on her friend's shoulder, Mary urged her to go to Walk-Over's right away and buy some MAIN-SPRING ARCH SHOES.

"They say they 'Put Pep in Your Step,' my dear—and I can vouch for it! Do you remember when mother was so ill last year and I was at her side for weeks and weeks? Well, I had the same problem you have. I needed so to be sweet and cheerful—yet my feet had me half-crying all the time. Good old Dr. Manning asked what the trouble was—and then told me that most of his trained nurses wear Princess Pats or Reliefs with built-in Main-Spring Arches. I took his advice and have been stepping around on happy feet ever since."

"But Tom will have a fit if I wear ugly shoes!"

"Tom will think they are another pair of style shoes, my dear! They come in smart leathers and shades and are delightfully chic."

Children who have been absent from school with a non-quarantinable infectious disease, such as measles, mumps, whooping cough, influenza, chickenpox, pneumonia, scabies, impetigo, trachoma, pink eye, etc., must have a readmittance card from the City Health Department or their deputies, which include physicians and nurses of the School Health Department and private physicians commissioned by the City Health Department, as per attached list.

"'Class III. Children who have been absent from school for five days or more on account of illness, must have a readmittance card from the City Health Department or someone deputized by them as in Class II.

"'Class IV. Children who have been absent from school for a period of less than five days on account of a nonreportable disease (as for instance a slight cold) may be readmitted by the principals.

"'Class V. Children who have been absent for other known reasons than illness may be readmitted by the principals.'

A New Important Ruling

"At a regular meeting of Health Commissioners, held April 22, 1926, the following resolution was adopted:

"'That all regular licensed practitioners of medicine and surgery in the City of Los Angeles be authorized to readmit by certificate to the public schools, all fully recovered cases of nonquarantinable diseases occurring in their practice.'

A Child May Not Stay Out

"To go to a show; to take a dancing or music lesson; to run on errands for parents, such as going to the drug store, postoffice, bank, grocery, etc.; to go to the city, or downtown; to take care of or help take care of children; because someone else in the family is ill and help is needed; to cook, wash, sew, etc.; because he needs shoes or other clothes.

"Children who have actually contracted smallpox, and whose parents do not want them vaccinated, may be excluded from school for fourteen days from date of last exposure. Any school child or adult who has been directly exposed to smallpoxe may be put under observation quarantine for a period of fourteen days. A contract of a contract may not be excluded or quarantined.

Weighing and Measuring

"The State Supervisor of Physical Education has ruled that weighing and measuring constitute 'physical examinations,' except when done for the purpose of classification. Pupils filing exemption cards are not subject to weighing and measuring in any of the grades when undertaken to determine conditions of malnutrition, underweight, etc. Pupils who have filed exemption cards and who desire to enter athletic games in the schools, may be weighed and measured for the purpose of classification only.

Sports

"A student cannot be deprived of the privilege of taking part in the athletic sports provided for by the Physical Education Act.

"Directors at times refuse to allow students who have exemption cards filed, to enter the games. Their argument is that unless a pupil submits to the heart and other physical examinations and tests required, they will not assume the responsibility for accidents or bad after-effects which might occur. Such discrimination may be overcome by the parent filing a written statement (in addition to the exemption card) relieving the school of all responsibility in such matters.

Law Enforcement

"The law providing for exemption of public school pupils from physical examinations, under certain conditions properly complied with, is so often disregarded by school nurses and other school employees,

The Emerald Pendant

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

Illustrated by Samuel Cahan

"QUEER thing coming across you outside the cathedral like that," Captain Faulkener, the chief constable, remarked as he established his two guests—Flip, the white dog, was of the party—at a comfortable table in the coffee-room of the Cathedral Arms. "Only last night I was thinking about you."

"We really wandered down this way quite by chance," Goade observed. "I hadn't meant to come so far south."

Faulkener ordered his luncheon and sipped his aperitif.

"Jolly idea of yours," he remarked, "to spend this six months' leave wandering about quietly. The most tranquil county I know, Devonshire."

"Is it?" Goade murmured. "I was thinking of trying Mexico."

"Eh?"

"I mean to say that somehow or other Flip and I always seem to be nosing our way into other people's business. We've had one or two quite strenuous weeks in the most unlikely places."

"You certainly did see through that Unwin affair," Faulkener admitted. "Shocking thing too! Where are you going from here?"

"We haven't any plans," Goade admitted. "Now I'm so far south, I shall make for the coast."

A man, passing down the room, paused to exchange a word with Faulkener, who introduced him presently to Goade.

"This is Mr. Goade from Scotland Yard, Manton—Major Manton, the governor of our prison here."

"I know Mr. Goade quite well by name and reputation," Major Manton declared.

They talked for a moment. Then the latter passed on and Captain Faulkener leaned toward his companion confidentially.

"I didn't ask him to lunch, Goade," he said, "because I wanted just a word with you privately."

"Not another case, I hope?"

"No, not exactly that," Faulkener replied, after a moment's hesitation. "There's a little matter here that's bothering me. The person chiefly concerned doesn't want me to appeal to Scotland Yard. I thought if I could interest you, you might see if you could straighten it out for us."

"Tell me about it," Goade invited resignedly.

"That's just what I'd rather not do. I'd rather you heard the story from the person chiefly concerned. You can spare half an hour this afternoon?"

"I suppose so," Goade assented, without enthusiasm. "I meant to spend the rest of the day here, anyhow."

"I'll put your name down at the club," Faulkener suggested. "There's a decent rubber of bridge there in the afternoon. Can you be ready for me at four o'clock?"

"Certainly."

At four o'clock, Faulkener led the way to the close and rang the bell of a very picturesque, red brick residence, ivy-covered and with a strong ecclesiastical flavor. A dignified butler answered the summons and ushered them into a spacious library, where a tall and rather pompous-looking man, with the nether garments of a dignitary of the church, was seated at a writing table, dictating letters to a secretary. He waved her away and rose to welcome his visitors.

"Dean," Captain Faulkener said, "this is Mr. Goade, of whom I have spoken. Mr. Goade—Dean Followay."

The dean shook hands and indicated two easy chairs.

"I haven't said a word to Goade about this little trouble," Faulkener went on. "I thought I'd like him to have the details from you in your own words. If I might venture upon a word of advice, Dean, I'd keep nothing from Mr. Goade. You'll find," he continued, turning to his companion, "that the case is just as simple as it is embarrassing."

The dean inclined his head. He had a long, rugged face with an unusually large mouth, shaggy eyebrows and iron-gray hair. Without being exactly of ascetic appearance, he gave one the impression of a man whose lines had not always been cast in the easy places.

"I think," he began, his finger tips pressed together, his eyes fixed upon Goade, "that my friend Faulkener has used the right term to describe our position. It is embarrassing. I shall tell you the story in as few words as possible, but it is necessary to enlarge for a moment on matters of my personal history."

"I should like you to tell it to me in your own way," Goade said.

"I started life as a curate with no private means," the dean continued; "I have never been possessed of private means. I have a large family, and my stipend left no room for luxuries. The care of my children, therefore, becomes an important matter to me. I have four daughters, the eldest of whom is twenty years old. I will be quite frank with you, Mr. Goade. It is our ambition—the ambition of their mother and myself—to have them comfortably settled in life. There is not a great deal of young society in this neighborhood. For this reason, my wife and I were exceedingly gratified when, a fortnight ago, we received an invitation from the Duchess of Exeter for our daughter to join her house party at Exeter Park. Our daughter made her preparations and departed. She received the most delightful hospitality, but she returned here in a state of great distress."

The dean paused for a moment and played with his watch chain.

"I should explain," he went on, "that my daughter, Florence, had a godmother, a great friend of my wife's—the Princess Shibolzky—an English lady, married to a Russian. We always hoped, as the Shibolzkys were very wealthy and had no children, that my daughter—might benefit by the association. The revolution, however, changed all that. The Princess died in something approaching poverty. She, however, left to Florence the one remaining piece of her famous collection of jewels—an emerald pendant of great beauty and, I believe, great value. We received the jewel only a month ago. A local jeweler valued it at some two thousand pounds, and when the invitations from Exeter Park arrived, I was making inquiries with a view to having it insured.

"Against my wishes, my daughter decided to take the jewel with her. She had; it appears, a green evening dress, and the effect of the jewel, I must admit, was exceedingly pleasing. I confess that I should have had it insured before allowing her to depart with it, but I did not. She came back without the jewel and with a very distressing story. It is a story of a few words only, and it is one which she shall tell you herself."

The dean rang the bell.

"Will you ask Miss Florence to step this way," he instructed the butler.

The young lady duly appeared—a dark, handsome girl, almost as tall as her father, but not in any other way resembling him. The dean introduced her, and Captain Faulkener placed a chair.

"I want you to tell this gentleman, Mr. Goade," her father said, "how you lost your jewel. You must tell him exactly what you have told us."

She made a little grimace.

"It is a horrible business," she said, "but this is just what happened: The platinum clasp was very strong indeed, and could be opened only by pushing the two ends together. Several people admired it, and Lord Geoffrey, who danced with me quite a lot, seemed particularly struck with it. Toward the end of the evening, he asked me to sit out on the terrace with him. There was a slight breeze, and he insisted upon fetching me a wrap. We talked for some time, and more than once I saw the jewel flashing, and even remember thinking what a wonderful color it seemed against my dress.

"When we went in, Lord Geoffrey unfastened my scarf himself. He was quite a long time doing it, talking to me all the time, saying, in fact, rather nice things. He left me inside the room and took the scarf away. Before he came back, some one had claimed me for a dance. I had scarcely started it before I noticed that my emerald had gone—chain and all."

There was a short silence. Then Goade said, "I won't waste your time, Miss Followay, by asking useless questions. Evidently you believe that Lord Geoffrey took it?"

"What else can I believe?" she asked. "He insisted upon the scarf, which was really unnecessary. He was a long time drawing it away, talking in a rather bewildering manner all the time. He went off directly we entered the ballroom—and the emerald was gone."

"You spoke to him about it, I suppose?"

"I did, as soon as I could find him, I looked for him everywhere, but he seemed invisible for at least an hour. No one seemed to know where he was. When, at last, I discovered him, he was in the room where wine and refreshments were being served, sitting alone. I went up to him and told him that my emerald was gone. I had already searched the terrace where we had been sitting, but he insisted upon going back there again. I suggested that he should look in the scarf, and he went and fetched it, but there was nothing there. He seemed very distressed and promised me that he would do everything he could, but he begged me not to make too much fuss at the time, as the duchess, who is very old-fashioned, detests anything of that sort."

"The duchess," the dean explained, "belongs to the old-fashioned school. The idea of a jewel robbery in her house would have filled her with horror. It is quite certain that my daughter would never have been invited there again if we had put the matter in the hands of the police in the usual way."

"She was told, I suppose?"

"Naturally. Florence mentioned it the next morning. The duchess seemed very cold about it."

"I tried to explain that it was valuable," Florence interposed, "but she simply said that if it had been dropped, the servants would find it. If they did not find it, I would probably discover it among my belongings at home."

"I know nothing about the family," Goade admitted. "Are they wealthy?"

"Sufficiently so, I believe," the dean replied.

"And this young man, Lord Geoffrey?"

"From all that one hears, one would consider him a remarkably well-conducted young man," the dean replied. "He is the eldest son and represents the southern district of the county in Parliament. He is spoken of as very promising."

"Any private means?"

"So far as I know, none, except his allowance from his father, which is, however, no doubt adequate."

Goade reflected for a moment. Suddenly he looked across at the young lady.

"Tell me the rest of the story," he suggested pleasantly.

She started, visibly perturbed. A little social workers and others who supervise the physical aspects of education.

CARE OF THE BODY

Anyone who wants a printed copy of this bulletin may write to the Public School Protective League, Union Bank Building, Los Angeles.

Rights and Responsibilities

"The opening of school each fall brings many problems to teachers and parents alike. In order to be of the greatest possible service in solving such problems, the Public School Protective League sets forth in this bulletin information concerning certain school laws and the rights and privileges of students attending the public schools of California.

Attendance Compulsory

"The Compulsory Education Law provides that all minor children over three and under eighteen years of age must be registered once each year by parents or guardian, at a public elementary school in the district in which he resides. The time fixed by law for this registration is the first full week in October of each year. Information concerning age, sex, nationality, residence, and occupation of parents, must be given. Neither the parents nor child may be questioned as to religious connections or beliefs. No physical examination can be required at time of registration nor at any other time.

School Age

"Children between the ages of eight and sixteen, if in proper condition mentally and physical examinations are not compulsory. or private, full time. From sixteen to eighteen years of age part-time attendance is required.

Exceptions

"The Attendance Law provides exemption from school attendance for those children whose mental or physical condition is such as to render inadvisable attendance at school or application to study, provided that a regularly registered physician's certificate shall be filed with the school authorities. In case of prolonged absence inquiry may be made, and parents required to furnish further certificate as to physical condition. While the law recognizes only a physician's certificate, similar certificates made by other practitioners will usually be accepted.

Physical Examinations

"Boards of school trustees and city boards of education may, but are not required to, provide for health supervision of the pupils enrolled in the public schools, and for that purpose may appoint nurses, oculists, physicians or dentists as physical inspectors and directors.

"It should be clearly understood that cal examinations are not compulsory. Section 1618-A of the Political Code of California provides for the exemption of children whose parents file a written request therefor.

"School authorities may not touch or question a pupil who has an exemption card filed, as to physical condition. But if from a visual inspection the pupil is suspected of having a contagious or infectious disease, that child may be sent home. The usual procedure then is that someone from the local city health office (to whom all such cases are reported by the school authorities) is immediately sent to inspect and diagnose the case. Parents are informed that the law authorizes the health department to investigate any case of suspected contagious disease, and make calls to ascertain progress of the case. Quarantine cards and restrictions may be placed on the premises by an authorized agent of the city health department. No vaccination, serum, inoculation nor medical treatment of any kind may be enforced under quarantine.

"There is no provision of law for filing exemption cards for children under eight years of age. Parents are informed, however, that there is no law compelling them to accept the officious services of health officers and nurses who seek to reach into the homes and supervise the health of the younger children. State medicine has not been established in California, and paternalistic tendencies should be consistently guarded against and resisted with a full knowledge of the rights of parents to care for the health and welfare of their children.

Permits to Return

"Permits from a health department for readmission of school children who have been out of school for a three-day period cannot be required under the law, except where each absence is due to illness of a contagious or infectious character.

"Attention is called to the following from a Special Bulletin, No. 26, issued from the office of the Superintendent of Los Angeles city public schools April 16, 1926:

"'To All Principals, Directors and Supervisors:

"With reference to the readmittance of school children who have been ab-

How Is Your HEALTH?

We feel that it is as much a function of the California Clinorium to advise people how to keep well as it is to restore them to health when they are sick. With his experience of more than 25 years, Dr. Shingle is able to give whose stomach has almost gone back on him, told us the other day about how he used to eat beefsteaks with a quart or two of beer, all the trimmings and a heavy pastry to finish. "I heard other men talk about stomach trouble, but I'd laugh at them and say I was an ostrich and could eat anything. Now I wish that ten years ago I had gone to an expert and learned how to live right and I would not be here now taking treatments."

Every day we hear, not only the stories of what caused their illness, but how they have been trying to get back to health. So many think is all that is needed, just as did a business man who had diabetes. The urinalysis made at several intervals always showed sugar, but he thinks a diet is all he needs. You may eat foods that are properly combined for your needs, but if the digestive organs do not function as they should the food alone won't help you.

flush of color came into her cheeks.

"What do you mean—the rest of the story?" she demanded.

"You are keeping something back," Goade complained. "Nearly everyone does. It is such a waste of time."

She remained silent for several moments.

"Well, there is only this," she admitted, at last: "I met Lord Geoffrey when I was staying in London with my godmother. He became quite attentive to me. It was through him, I am sure, that I was asked to Exeter Park. Since that night, however, he has not called or been near me. He was not there when I left in the morning. He seems deliberately to have avoided me. I couldn't help telling him about my loss, especially as he was with me when it happened. It seems, however, as though he resented it."

"A little unreasonable on his part," said Goade.

"Decidedly unsportsmanlike," Faulkener murmured.

"The point is, however," the dean confided, "that the young man is expected here this afternoon for tea. He was lunching with the bishop today. My wife was also a guest, and she invited him. He accepted after some hesitation, I understand."

"I should rather like an opportunity of seeing him," Goade acknowledged.

"That opportunity will be forthcoming," the dean said.

"And in the meantime, Miss Followay," Goade inquired, "which would you prefer—the return of your jewel or the exposure of the thief?"

She hesitated.

"I should like my jewel back, of course," she admitted. "I should like also to make the thief confess."

The butler threw open the door.

"Tea is served in the drawing-room, sir," he announced.

"You will join us, I trust, Mr. Goade," the dean invited. "You will then have an opportunity of meeting this young man."

They crossed the hall and entered a very pleasant drawing-room with French windows leading out to the lawn of the close. Goade was presented to Mrs. Followay, a handsome but tired-looking replica of her daughter; to a clergyman and his wife, and to Lord Geoffrey Fernell.

Lord Geoffrey was a young man, tall and thin, with a slightly studious air and a reserved manner. He conversed very little with anyone. Even when Florence went over and sat by his side, he seemed to unbend very slightly. He dismissed a recent session in the House of Convocation with the visiting clergyman, and exchanged a few words with the dean upon a bill which he had recently supported, dealing with some ecclesiastical matter. His manner, however, was marked with a certain aloofness. After he had gone, Mrs. Followay sighed.

"I can't think what's happened to Lord Geoffrey," she declared. "It almost seems as though you had offended him, Florence."

Florence set down her cup and turned toward the door. It appeared to Goade, who opened it for her, that there were tears in her eyes. He heard her run up the stairs, and she waved him a little adieu with one hand, her handkerchief in the other.

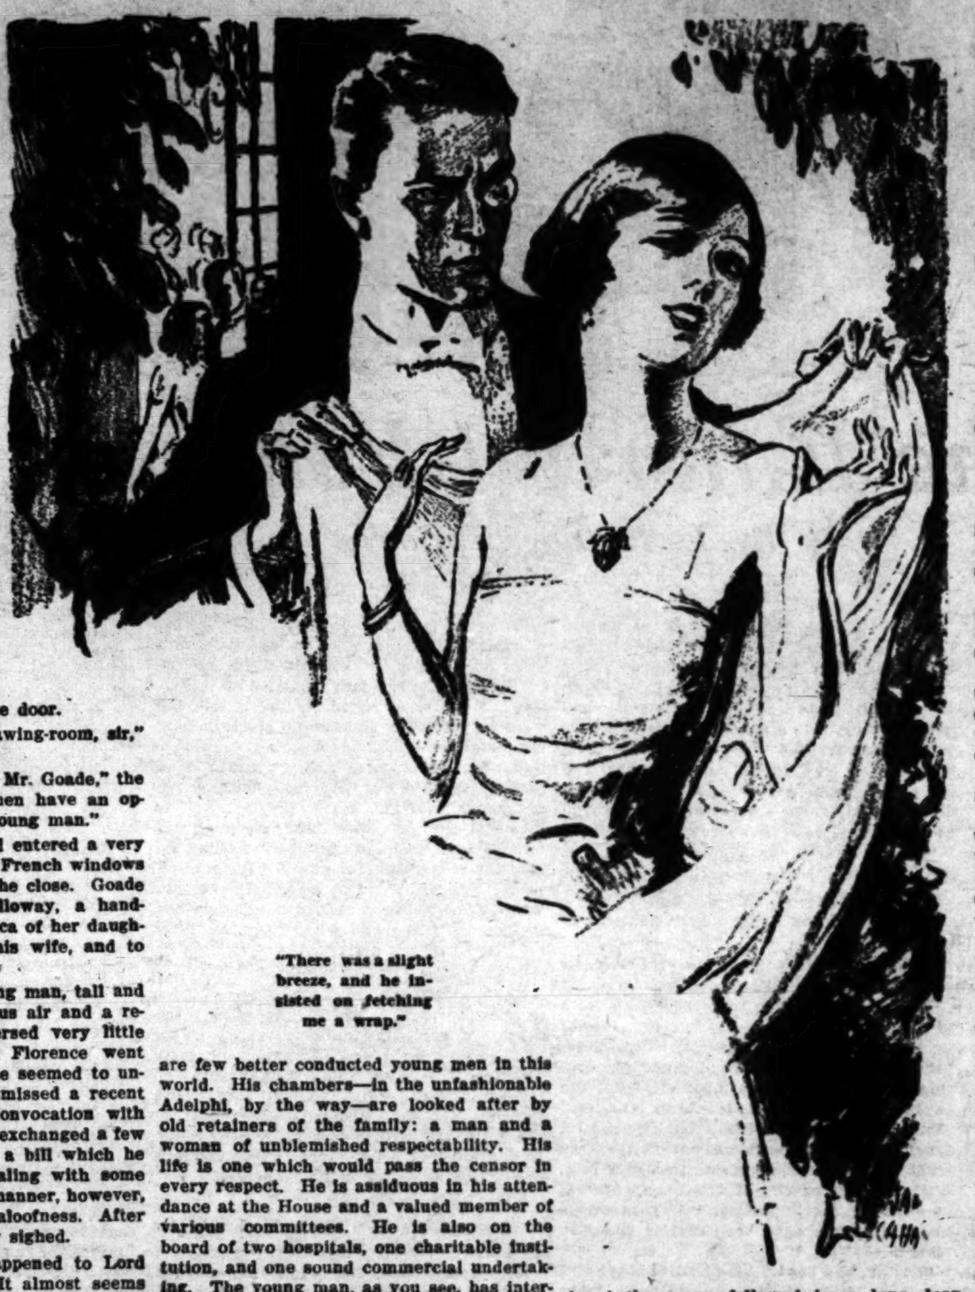
"A nice girl," Faulkener remarked, as the two men strolled across the close toward the club.

"Very nice indeed," Goade assented. "I like her better than the young man."

"I think she's got hold of a mare's nest. The idea of a man in Lord Geoffrey's position robbing a girl for the sake of a trifle isn't credible. What do you think, honestly, Goade?"

"I agree with you."

"That's what makes the whole thing so difficult. The Followays want to recover the emerald, naturally. On the other hand, they've already irritated the young man, and they're deadly afraid of upsetting the rest of the family. You see, they absolutely dominate society down here, and old Followay's got three other daughters coming on. That's why he was so anxious to have a word with you. He daren't come to us officially. He doesn't want to offend the Exeters, but he does want his emerald. There you are, Goade. It's up to you."



"There was a slight breeze, and he insisted on fetching me a wrap."

"Thanks," Goade remarked dryly. "Looks so easy, doesn't it?"

Goade spent a few days in the meadows and around the quiet countryside adjoining the city. He bought a fishing rod and took lessons with some success. He also painted assiduously for several afternoons. On the fourth morning, he received a budget of communications by post. He went through them, whistling softly to himself. Presently he rang up Faulkener, who appeared without undue delay. They strolled into the coffee-room for lunch.

"Well, my friend," the chief constable inquired, "how is the great work proceeding?"

"Somewhat unexpectedly, to tell you the truth," Goade confessed. "I know all about Lord Geoffrey Fernell. Apparently—and I have every confidence in my dossier—there are few better conducted young men in this world. His chambers—in the unfashionable Adelphi, by the way—are looked after by old retainers of the family: a man and a woman of unblemished respectability. His life is one which would pass the censor in every respect. He is assiduous in his attendance at the House and a valued member of various committees. He is also on the board of two hospitals, one charitable institution, and one sound commercial undertaking. The young man, as you see, has interests. He attends the theater, but he eschews musical comedy. He is a strenuous golfer, an occasional polo player, although this season, I understand, he has taken to tennis instead. His friends are all of a highly superior class. He has no entanglements, and so far as one can gather, no extravagances. The Duke of Exeter should be congratulated. He has apparently—so far as this dossier goes—a perfect son. There will be a perfect hereditary legislator to follow in his footsteps."

"That sounds all right," Faulkener observed. "Anything else?"

Goade proceeded with his lunch for a moment.

"Unfortunately," he admitted, "there does appear to be another trifling incident on the other side of the ledger. Without the slightest doubt, on the seventh of July—that, I think, was the day after the dance at Exeter Park and the day upon which Lord Geoffrey returned to London—the emerald pendant was pawned in Holborn for one thousand pounds by a young man giving the name of Geoffrey Fernell and answering to the appearance of Lord Geoffrey."

"Bless my soul!" Faulkener gasped.

At a somewhat early hour that afternoon, a formidable assemblage of visitors was ushered by the butler into the [illegible] library of Exeter Park. Florence entered first, pale, but determined. She was followed by the dean, angry, yet nervous. Faulkener, considerably embarrassed, came next, and Goade, with Flip—who had evaded the servitors at the door—under his arm, brought up the rear. The butler waved them to chairs. If he felt any surprise at this unusual visitation, his face showed no signs of it.

"His grace shall be informed of your presence, sir," he announced, with a little bow to the dean—after which he took his leisurely departure.

The four maintained a grim silence during their period of waiting. Presently the door was thrown open, and an elderly lady, so true to type that she reminded one of Du Maurier's duchesses of Punch repute, entered the room, followed by a long, lean man with frosty, blue eyes and a thin mouth. The duchess seated herself in a comfortable chair; the duke stood by her side.

"To what," the latter asked, scrutinizing the little group through his eyeglass, "are we indebted for this, may I say, unexpected visitation?"

"Your Grace," said the dean, "I assure you that it is with the greatest reluctance I have come here this afternoon. Nothing but a strong sense of duty could have induced me to intrude upon you a matter as disagreeable to ourselves as I am sure it will be painful to you."

The duchess raised her lorgnette for a moment, then closed it with a snap.

"Has your daughter come to make a fuss about her bit of glass?" she asked coldly. "My servants have already had orders to restore it as soon as it is found."

"That bit of glass, as Your Grace calls it," the dean continued, "is a very valuable emerald pendant bequeathed to my daughter by her godmother, the Princess Shibolzky. There is, I fear, no chance of your servants being able to restore it, for its presence has been discovered in a pawnshop in London. I may add that, notwithstanding Your Grace's disparaging reference to it, the jewel was pawned for a thousand pounds."

"And by whom?" the duke asked.

"I regret to say, Your Grace, by your son," the dean announced, pausing for a moment to give his words full effect.

It was, at any rate, an achievement to have surprised two people who seemed incapable of feeling of any sort. The duchess's expression was one of disdainful horror. The duke's jaw had fallen a little. Incredulity was written in every line of his face.

"By my son! By Lord Geoffrey!" the latter gasped. "I never heard anything more ridiculous in my life. Dean, are you aware of what you have said? Am I to look upon you as being concerned in this—I can only call it conspiracy?"

"Let me understand this matter," the duchess said. "There will be more to be heard of it later. Steps will be taken. I understand you to say that your daughter, on returning from her unfortunate visit here, confided to you that her pendant was lost and expressed the opinion that it had been stolen by Lord Geoffrey?"

"That is true," the dean admitted. "I cross-questioned my daughter in every way, but there was no shaking her conviction."

"Let her speak for herself," the duchess continued, with all solemnity. "Young woman, have you come here to accuse my son of having stolen your pendant? My son! Lord Geoffrey! The heir to the dukedom!"

"I didn't want to come," the girl replied, with a little tremor in her voice. "If Lord Geoffrey had asked me for the pendant, I should have given it to him. The fact is, though, that he took it. I felt practically certain that his fingers undid the clasp when he was taking that wrap away. Almost directly after he left me, I saw that it was gone. Now it has been discovered in a pawnshop in Holborn, pawned under the name of Geoffrey Fernell."

The duke moved slowly across the room and rang the bell.

"There is only one way to end this unpleasant scene," he announced. "You shall repeat your statement to Lord Geoffrey himself."

There was a brief silence. The butler entered and was requested to invite the presence of Lord Geoffrey. During the interval, the duchess once raised her lorgnette to her eyes.

"And who is the person with that disgusting dog?" she asked.

"Your Grace," Goade replied, "I regret that my presence is an offense to you, or the presence of my dog. I can assure you that I am here against my will. My visits are often paid in that way. My name is Goade—Inspector Goade of Scotland Yard."

The duchess' hand trembled. She turned toward the dean and her voice should have terrified him almost more than it did.

"You mean to say," she demanded, "that you have had the wickedness, the colossal impertinence, to place this matter in the hands of the police?"

"Your Grace," the dean confided, "on the evidence before us, I might reasonably have considered it my duty to do so. As a matter of fact, however, Mr. Goade is here unofficially. We consulted him as a friend of Captain Faulkener's. Our only desire was that the matter might be cleared up without undue delay and without publicity."

The duchess was speechless. Just at that moment, Lord Geoffrey entered. He was in tennis clothes and carried a racket under his arm. For a moment, as he stared through his monocle in surprise at these unexpected visitors, he bore some slight resemblance to his father.

"Hullo!" he exclaimed. "Why, how are you, Miss Followay? How are you, Dean? I wanted you for tennis, Faulkener. What's this little gathering all about?"

"You may well ask, Geoffrey," his mother said somberly. "You will remember that it was at your solicitation that we invited Miss Followay to spend a few days with us recently."

"Well, what about it?" the young man inquired.

"You may also remember," his mother continued, "that Miss Followay mentioned something about having lost some article of jewelry—a pendant, I think it was?"

"I remember it quite well. We had the place thoroughly searched. Beastly sorry and all that, but the thing couldn't be found."

"The dean is here this afternoon to inform us that the article in question has been discovered in a pawnbroker's shop in Holborn," the duchess declared—"discovered, it appears, through the agency of the gentlemen with the dog, who comes from Scotland Yard. These people assert that the

As the disease progresses, the chest pain takes on a paroxysmal nature. With it, the patient will usually feel cold, numb and sometimes blue in the extremities.

As a rule, when the stomach is bad, the angina is bad. The two are directly and intimately related.

What is IT—that Mrs. Eleanor Glyn has started peoples' tongues wagging over? Some call it personal magnetism, some call it sex appeal. I will tell you what IT is—vibrant electric health!

When you meet a vigorously, buoyantly healthy person can't you instantly feel their magnetism? That's IT. You won't find this characteristic in weaklings.

I sometimes think that 99 per cent of the world's population is sick. So few people, after they pass the rollicking years of childhood, ever again know what it is to feel full to the finger-tips of glad, untiring energy and enthusiasm for life. Thousands of so-called "incurables" are treated here at the Health Center, 1000 West Seventh street, for diseases that hundreds of thousands more are daily inviting upon themselves by wrong living.

It is reassuring, however, that we can give back hope to the hopeless by natural healing methods. I will never forget the look on one young man's face as he thanked us for his recovery from inflammatory rheumatism. He came to us a physical wreck, tortured by almost constant pain. After a series of Marathon Bio-bloodwash Baths, supplemented by colonic lavage, scientific massage, and Prof. Ehret's Mucusless Diet, he was a new person. And he looked, acted, and talked like a new person.

It is hard to make people believe the wonderful recoveries effected by our Marathon Bio-bloodwash Baths, from such diseases as rheumatism, gout, asthma, catarrh, diabetes, hemorrhoids, tumors, obesity, etc. Read what Bernarr Macfadden says about this treatment in an interesting booklet we distribute free at the Health Center.

Buoyant health depends on four principal factors—correct breathing, correct posture, exercise, and correct eating. I can soon show you what I mean about breathing, posture and exercise, if you will attend my classes at the Health Center gymnasium. The men's class meets at 6:30 Monday evenings; special women's classes Tuesday and Friday mornings at 10 o'clock and Thursday evening at 6:30 and 8 o'clock.

And if you will come and eat with us at the Health Center Corrective Eating Cafeteria, 1000 West 7th Street, you will see correct diet exemplified. The delicious balanced menus served here daily from 8:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. are a revelation. There is a special 35 cent plate luncheon that I help to plan myself.

I receive many letters from people outside the city, asking what not to eat and what to eat and where genuine health foods can be obtained. Blue Mondays are nearly always the result of gluttonous Sundays. The body can eliminate only so much waste matter without assistance. Take a dose of Innerclean Intestinal Laxative, the aromatic herb-vegetable compound perfected by Prof. Arnold Ehret, originator of the famous "Mucusless Diet Healing System." I do not know its equal for removing the toxemic poisoning effects of overeating. You can get Innerclean for 50 cents at the Health Center and all druggists. If you send a postal card to the Innerclean Mfg. Co., 846 East Sixth St., they will send you a generous sample free.

I could keep on stretching this column to the end of the magazine, but they won't let me. Come to the Health Center every Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock and hear my free health lectures. Friday evening at 8 o'clock Dr. Philip M. Lovell, the popular editor of this "Care of the Body" section of the Sunday Times, will deliver another of his most interesting lectures. Admission is absolutely free—come early and be sure to get a seat.

Outside of its very marked symptoms of chest pain and its associated tremendous destruction of vitality, authorities do not agree as to the exact nature of this disease.

During the height of the attack, whether the more serious condition is the syncope or inability to breathe, or the actual paralysis of the heart muscle itself, definitely we do not know.

Of all the theories dealing with its cause, the most likely is that dealing with nutrition, gas pressure, constipation and resultant autointoxication.

It has been clearly demonstrated again and again that when these organs are made to function normally and adequately, the symptoms readily subside.

The emotional elements undoubtedly play their part. Angina pectoris will usually come as a sequence to ill-spent emotions and in turn will induce an emotional exhaustion practically of a convulsive type.

There is no specific cure known. It is nothing short of the reversal of the entire process by means of which the angina was gradually produced.

First and foremost, the diet should be corrected so that at no time is there an excessive consumption of food.

The characteristic great American dietary of meats, condiments, spices, coffee, tea, sugars and stimulating beverages should be discontinued. In its place, the dietetic regimen should consist of nothing more than fruits and vegetables simply prepared.

Rest is vitally necessary. Every effort should be made to make the environment harmonious, free from anxiety and all forms of irritation.

Drugs should be studiously avoided. The common medicinal method of treating this disease is via digitalis and morphine. One depresses the heart; the other paralyzes the nervous system of sensation and consciousness. Both inevitably bring on the climax much more rapidly than it would have come on without their use.

Angina pectoris need not be considered as a fatal disease.

Correction of those factors which have produced it—diet, emotions, sex life, faulty elimination—can ultimately overcome the painful nature of this disease.

The School and the Child

With the opening of school, many problems arise.

There are far too many controversies between the parents and the school authorities concerning the rights and privileges, the duties and responsibilities of both.

I am publishing below a statement of the law on physical examinations and school attendance as presented in a bulletin issued by the Public School Protective League.

This bulletin discusses the functions and limitations of the school as related to physical examinations and health service.

Parents who have children at school should read this bulletin for its comment on their relation to nurses, doctors, dentists,

Kidney Troubles
Quickly Relieved by Use of Amazing Natural Sap of Mexican Maguey Plant

OUT of Mexico comes a wonderful natural remedy for kidney troubles. It is called Agmel and has been successful in 85 per cent of Bright's disease cases treated. Hundreds of endorsements received. In many cases urine showing over 50 per cent albumin has been cleared in one month. Stops getting up nights, corrects bed-wetting and relieves prostatitis.

Not a Drug—Not a Medicine

Agmel is not a medicine. It is the concentrated sap of the Mexican Maguey plant, exactly as it comes from the plant except for removal of water. Contains no drugs or alcohol.

Maguey sap has been used 1000 years in Mexico to treat disease. It has long been recognized by medical science and European and American specialists have for years been sending wealthy patients to Mexico to drink it for kidney disorders. Now by new process it is available in U. S. for first time.

Natural Yeasts, Vitamines and Organic Minerals

Agmel is a pleasant, uncooked syrup-food, rich in vitamines, minerals and yeasts which rebuild sick tissues so that failing organs again function with glowing strength. Agmel is also laden with Agavose, a form of sweet found only in the Maguey, which is readily assimilated and creates vital energy that overcomes disease. Doctors recommend Agmel.

Complete information and literature free at any Owl Drug Store. Agmel demonstration office also maintained at address below, where this pleasant remedial food may be tasted free; or a letter will bring valuable free literature.

Maguey Plant, Source of Agmel

I am one of the vast army of people who have looked upon testimonials as a joke, but Agmel has not only cured me,—it has also converted me, and this unsolicited letter is sent you in the hope that it may influence others afflicted as I was, who would be similarly benefited if they would only give your wonderful remedy a trial.

I was a sufferer from chronic kidney trouble for fifteen years. One quart of Agmel seemed to effect a complete cure, but I continued the use of it upon returning to the business world, as the long hours and arduous duties require superior strength. My friends look upon my cure as miraculous.

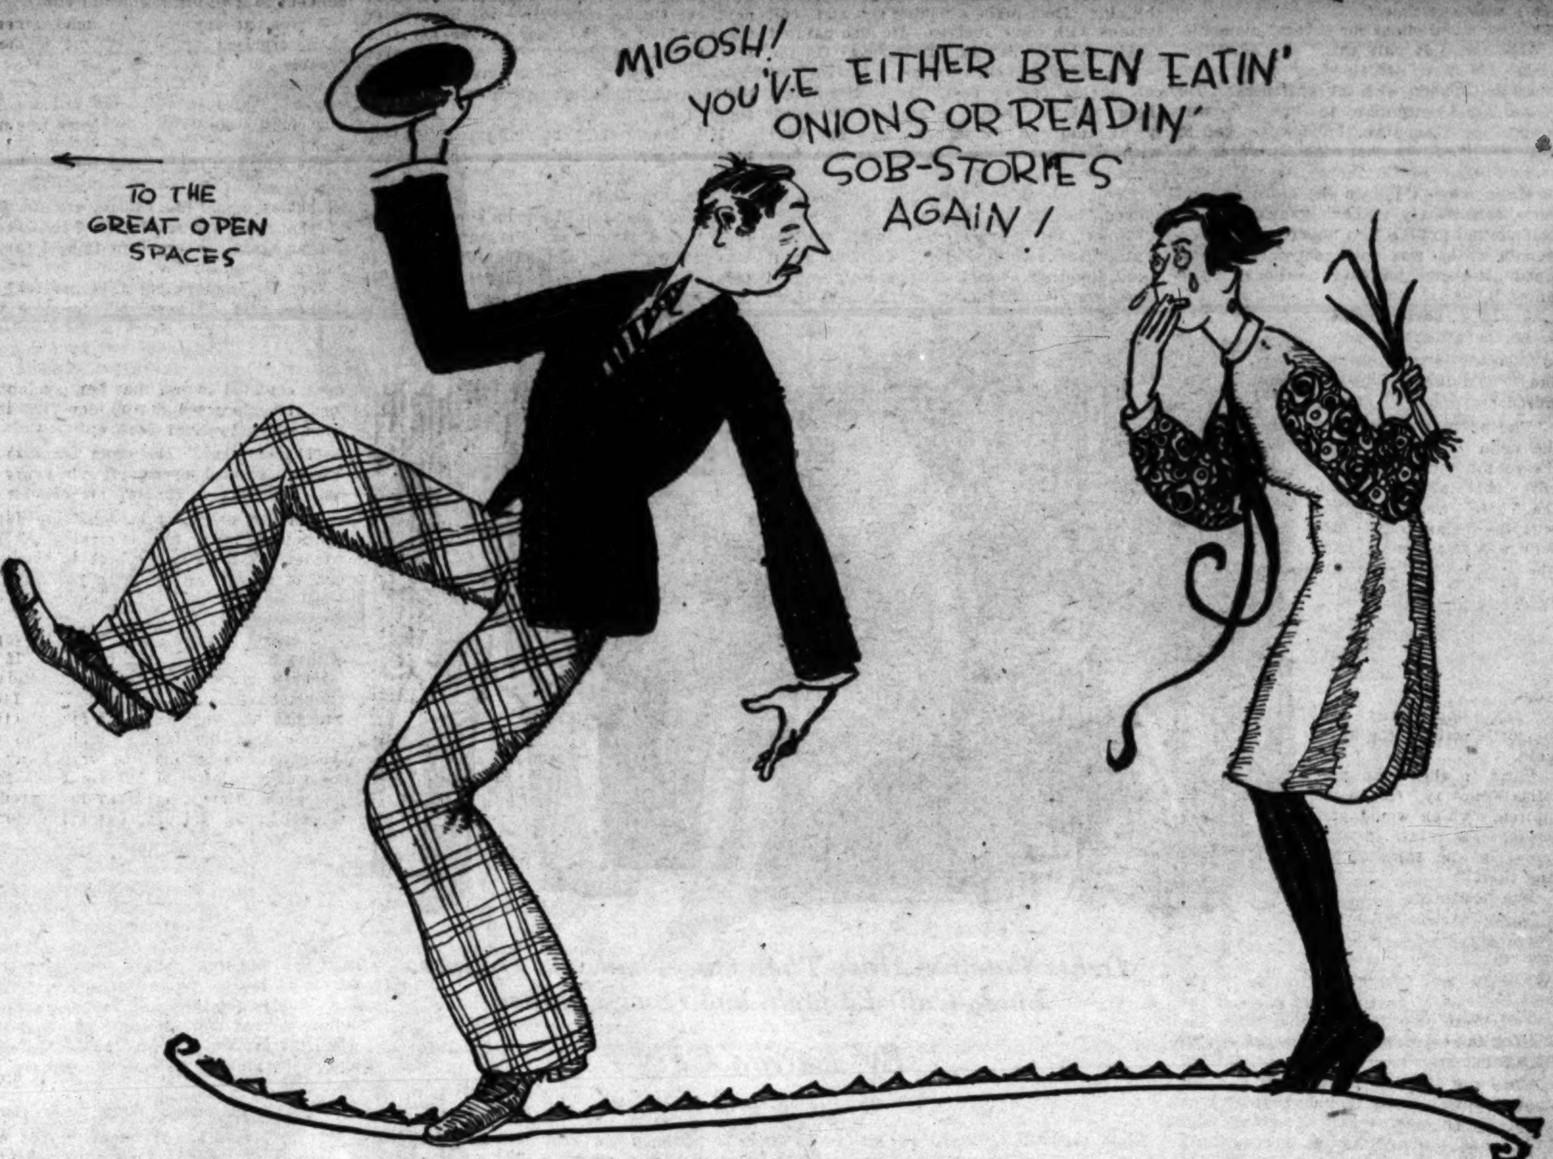
Y MODERN SOB-STORIES



MIGOSH! YOU'VE EITHER BEEN EATIN' ONIONS OR READIN' SOB-STORIES AGAIN!
TO THE GREAT OPEN SPACES

By Alma Whitaker

SOB STORIES, like onions, are plebeian but popular. Of course they have no standing in literature. We equally despise the people who write them and the people who weep over them. We are almost as ashamed to smell of a sob story as we are to smell of onions. But both are likely to creep into the very best society.

Certain sophisticated male writers like to whet their biting satire upon sob stories—especially those emanating from "sob sisters." It is a bit disgusting to write with poignant, heart-stirring sympathy, pity-culling eloquence about unhappy human beings. And still more reprehensible to read and sniffle over the stuff.

But that doesn't prevent editors printing 'em sometimes and even their most intellectual and sophisticated subscribers reading them surreptitiously and shedding a few shameful tears—even if they are apt to repudiate it as a lot of "maudlin piffle" later on.

Ever so often we writers break out into a heart-tearing sob story, which we could not possibly have written as well if we had not felt it. Yet we are ashamed—and scornfully dub our effort "potboiling" with a cynical little shrug. I've caught myself at this . . .

It is in confessional mood that I admit reading sob stories and sheddfing tears over them. And I find that a sob story that leaves me sniveling and heart-broken is most refreshing—does me a world of good. I believe that weeping over other people's sorrows and unhappy plights—about which I am not expected to do anything—is quite a blessed relief. It gets a lot of something unpleasant out of my system. It makes me feel nice and virtuous, without any uncomfortable sacrifices.

Three of the best sob stories I have surreptitiously absorbed and wept over recently have been about little old mothers. Yes, I find I can write quite poignantly about little old mother myself. Adorable little old darlings who have liv d a life of devotion and sacrifice for selfish, unappreciative families, and now find themselves unwanted burdens in their old age. Or maybe the little old mothers of horrid rich prosperous children who have grown ashamed of her . . . Or maybe some brave, independent old dear whom everyone has deserted, and who, after a life of labor and virtue, faces a pauper's grave.

I can picture their poor toil-worn fingers, their sunken eyes through long nights of watching, their backs bent with untiring service. I have the utmost admiration and exalted appreciation of these little old mothers of the sob stories, and I breathe with the relief of aching gratitude when some small grandchild pops up in the last paragraph to bring tender solace with baby prattle and tiny twining fingers into poor old grandma's too-prolonged life. Reward, indeed. As I read, I feel that all her life of sacrifice was justified. She had reaped her reward. What more sublime solace than baby prattle and twining fingers? I smile happily through my tears, even as the little old mother is doing in the story . . .

But . . . oh, dear. There is something peculiarly discouraging about the story somewhere. It took such dickens of a time for her life of devotion to reap even that meager reward. I appreciate that the dear never looked for reward—I would not have liked her half so well if she had. Of course, it is her sublime selflessness that really enchants me. She is the sort of mother all yearn for—and treats disgustingly when they get her. Dear me, sweet sacrificial little old mothers do seem to be dreadfully bad for the family—I mean, don't you know, not good for their dispositions. . . . One would not wish to ruin one's own family's dispositions with too much sacrificial devotion . . . very bad judgment.

And then of course if there was no sympathetic understanding sob-story writer around to revel one's life of devotion . . . and could one count upon the final solace of the baby's prattle and twining fingers, and which particular baby available would prove an all-encompassing reward?

Oh, well, don't you know, one can see why grandma tries to keep flapperish and bobs her hair, and evades a little of the toilworn finger stuff as much as possible. There is some excuse for her. There is something too dashed significant about these forlorn little old mother stories that are so prevalent. They may not soften the hearts of selfish children toward little old mothers, but they certainly give young mothers a hint of prospects.

Ahem. Perhaps that is why the sob story is so despicable. Because it shows sacrifice so pitiful and unavailing, because it shows that the more tangible rewards seem to go to the harder hearts . . .

There is, for instance, the neglected, deserted wife story. Oh, the neglected, deserted wives I have wept over! Such dear sacrificial creatures to be so badly treated! Glaring examples of unappreciated virtue. When they help hubby save and "get on," wear their old clothes, slave themselves wretched, do their whole jolly duty—only to be deserted and neglected, and reproached for not keeping themselves pretty and interesting . . . poor, poor darlings.

Well, now I admire all those wives' sacrificial virtues tremendously . . . but don't you know, after reading about one of them, you can see for yourself that a personal career, a club or two, a few charge accounts, perhaps a little peep into politics—even if it does mean a little mild neglect for hubby and the children—could have most reasonable and justifiable lures. There is nothing in those neglected wife sob stories to impress one with the advantages of sacrificial devotion.

Why, yes, of course, sob stories, viewed from that angle, could be almost immoral!

I can see where they are liable to reduce the crop of sacrificial little old mothers and devoted wives to a minimum.

I had hoped that there was something ennobling about being able to weep with tender sympathy over a sob story. I have thought up wonderful alibis for myself. I have snorted that the sophisticated cynics were hard, materialistic, sneering creatures, without human sympathy.

But now I am not so sure. I think one of the reasons I enjoy those good cries is because I know I am not expected to do anything about it for the sorrowing heroine of the sob story. If reading them made me want to rush out and protect little old mothers, or comfort and cheer neglected wives and show their husbands the error of their ways . . . well, then, they would at least be a good influence. But I am quite content to do my little sob, smile bravely through my tears, use my handkerchief efficiently and dismiss the little old mother or the sad neglected wife from my mind. And I am quite likely to overlook the attractive virtues of the next little old mother I meet and never know or care whether she is combating a great sorrow, and would almost certainly consider a neglected sacrificial wife as a bit of a fool . . .

But there is always a good market for sob stories. All about brave little boys supporting widowed mothers, and sad little cripples, and out-of-work husbands with sick wives and starving children, and captains who went down with their ships, and boy prisoners crying for their mothers, and broken-hearted parents whose sons and daughters have "gone wrong," and repentant sinners pleading for mercy . . .

And everyone of them is true, true, true. . . . We love these stories of pluck, and sacrifice, and devotion, loving anguish, salvaged virtue . . . especially and particularly, we love sacrifice, sacrifice, sacrifice—er, in our sob stories.

Perhaps sob stories are more like onions than I thought. They both create artificial tears that don't mean a thing. The dietitians call onions "Nature's Scavenger"—not nourishing but cleansing. . . . Dr. Axel Gibson says that onions never affect the perfume of the breath of a person in good wholesome condition.

Which is perhaps why some of us are ashamed to smell of a sob story . . . explain, apologise, repudiate, despise . . . We took it to clear our systems of a lot of undigested emotions.

CARE OF THE BODY

By PHILIP M. LOVELL, N. D.

Arthritis Deformans

(A radio talk by Dr. P. M. Lovell over KHJ, The Times.)

In a general way we can divide the ailments of the body into two groups; that is, those which upon recovery leave no aftereffects, and those which leave their tell-tale signs in the form of physical or mental defects.

Fortunately for mankind, almost all the ailments we are heir to heal of themselves and leave neither sign nor trace. A few, however, such as infantile paralysis, typhoid fever, scarlet fever and arthritis deformans leave their imprint on the human body in the form of mishapenness of impairment of function.

One disease concerning which very little has been done in the way of dissemination of popular knowledge is arthritis deformans, generally understood as "rheumatic arthritis deformans."

The name defines exactly what it says; rheumatic, dealing with the type of pain and symptoms; arthritis, meaning inflammation of the joints, and deformans, pertaining to the deformity which comes as a sequence to this disease.

Susceptible Individuals

The sufferers from this ailment number thousands.

It is present in every walk of life, in both sexes, in every occupation, at all ages and in all parts of the country.

There is nothing sectional, limited or provisional in the ailment. It may affect the small child as well as the aged man or woman.

Symptoms

Classified as one of the chronic, long-drawn-out diseases, its symptoms are exceedingly painful and undesirable. The sharp-shooting quivers and darts throughout the affected areas are something which every sufferer knows, yet which more or less defy description.

From the standpoint of anatomy and physiology, the ailment shows itself in a thickening and enlargement of the joints.

Bones slide upon one another as the muscles pull them to and fro. In most cases we call this process flexion and extension.

Like all hard surfaces moving upon one another, lubrication is necessary.

The mechanics of the body are analogous to the mechanics of any machine. That is, friction must be minimized by lubrication.

The Synovial Sac

Nature furnishes the lubricant where bone meets bone in the form of a membrane filled with a lubricating oil. We call this the synovial memrane which is filled with synovial fluid.

It is for this reason that there are no grating harsh noises or noticeable friction when we move the various bones in relationship to one another.

When we have such a condition of disease, where these synovial membranes are no longer filled with their lubricating synovial fluid but instead are filled with crystaline salts, we have the background of rheumatic arthritis deformans.

In terms of simple mechanics, we substitute harsh, grating salts for the soft, flexible lubricating oils between the bones.

You can readily appreciate, from this, that in a very short time the tissues adjacent would become thoroughly inflamed.

Enlargement of Joints

Almost all inflammations are usually associated with hypertrophy, that is, enlargement of the tissues involved.

It is for this reason that sufferers from rheumatic arthritis deformans so frequently have atrociously enlarged joints.

These joints may be in any part of the body where two bones meet.

The process is, indeed, very simple.

First, we eat as we should not, especially of the concentrated proteins which putrefy and decay in the digestive system.

Very shortly, the kidneys and other eliminative organs cannot discharge these waste poisons. They enter the bloodstream freely. The circulation carries them to every portion of the body. They find a ready affinity inside the synovial sac.

Two bones cannot occupy the same space at the same times. Consequently, the synovial fluid is driven out and the uric acid salts and urea (for such they are) take the place of the synovial fluid.

Presto! The clinical picture is completed! Rheumatic arthritis deformans is the result.

Causes

In its ultimate analysis, with scarcely an exception, its cause is traced backward to the dietetic crimes we commit against an over-lenient Nature.

Unfortunately this disease very frequently goes beyond merely deforming its victim or inflicting its painful sufferings upon him.

In far too many cases, the heart membrane also bears its burden of toxic wastes and undergoes the same degeneration. Consequently, heart trouble very often is a sister ailment to this disease.

The direct and intimate relationship between the digestive and eliminative organs and the actual disease can be attested by any sufferer.

He knows that when constipation is more severe, that when the stomach gases popress him, his rheumatism is worse.

Neither pain depressors nor kidney stimulants counteract the state of the blood or overcome the congestion of the uric acid salts in the various inflamed and enlarged joints.

Elimination

The only solution to the problem lies in the reversal of the means by which this accumulation of toxic salts took place. It was the blood which carried them to the various affected joints; it must be the blood which shall take them away.

There is no other way to dispose of these accumulated morbid wastes excepting through the blood circulation. In turn, the blood circulation must be given an opportunity to disengorge its own accumulations.

For this purpose, the kidneys must be kept open and active. There is nothing which will do this more than a sharp, radical change of diet, especially such a diet that places the minimum of strain or burden on kidney activity.

The flesh foods, eggs, the stimulating alcoholic beverages and all of the refined starches act in a derogatory manner on kidney activity. Consequently, these foods should not be included in the history.

For the early phases, a diet of uncooked fruits and vegetables is most favorable for immediate relief.

Hydrotherapy

Hydrotherapy in the form of immersion baths, shower baths, hot compresses and hot fomentations may be used quite effectively to allay the pain and soothe the inflammation.

Some authorities say that hydrotherapy also tends to favor absorption of the salts through the skin.

We do know, for a certainty, that the application of heat in any one of a dozen different forms such as the hotwater bottle, electricity, the electric blanket or the many forms of applying hot water undoubtedly overcomes the pain and distress more quickly than any drugs possibly could.

The advantage here lies in the fact that these are external remedies which in no way pollute the bloodstream, poison the tissues or call for a future accounting.

"Curing" Enlarged Joints

Finally, let me mention a word or two about the ultimate cure of this condition.

I have stated in this department before that rheumatic arthritis deformans is curable. This statement must be qualified to some extent. What I really mean is that the inflammatory portion of the disease yields to sane drugless treatment.

Once the joints are enlarged, however, I do not know of any means of reducing them. The enlarged joint is there to stay and one might just as well adapt oneself to the situation.

There is no reason, whatsoever, why even enlarged joints cannot be used almost as efficiently as normal ones provided, of course, the inflammatory condition has been done away with.

In sane diet, in hydrotherapy, in sun baths and in various similar drugless aspects of treatment will one find a more rational solution to the problem of rheumatic arthritis deformans than by any other means.

Angina Pectoris

One of the commonest groups of symptoms encountered is what is frequently known as the "breast pang."

This ailment has been known for a long time. What it really consists of is not really understood.

For want of a better name, it is labeled angina pectoris, the technical phrase for breast pain.

Besides the symptoms of the disease, not much is known aout it. Post-mortem autopsy reveals that generally there is an associated hardening of the arteries.

It is for this reason that to a large extent angina pectoris is associated with high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries.

Whether it is merely a symptom of a general systemic condition or whether it is a more or less distinct disease, is not so much the question.

Its symptoms are fairly evident. At first there is a sensation of uneasiness or distress, somewhat analogous to gas pressure. Gradually the pain increases and before very long it becomes piercing and acute. ometimes there is dizziness or nausea with it.

Again, there may be sensations of shoot-

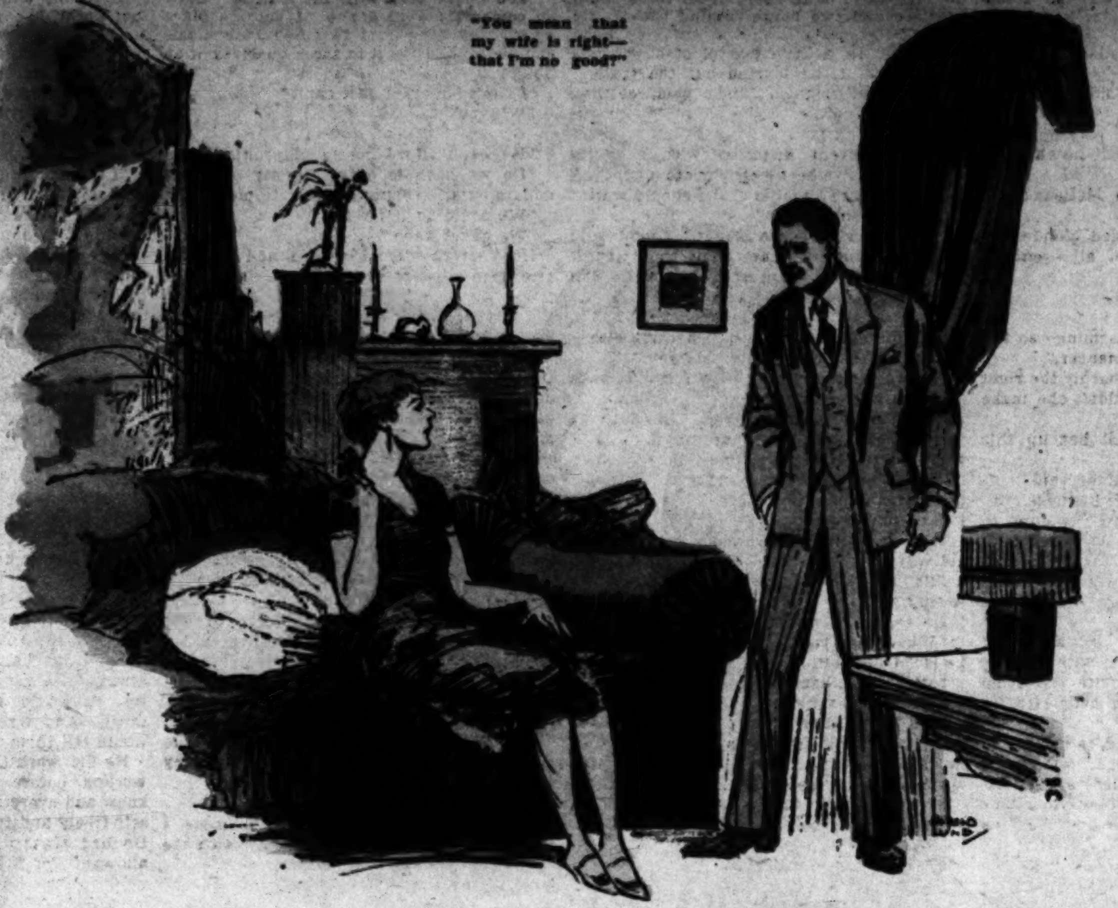
The Wife Who Wouldn't Play



"You mean that my wife is right—that I'm no good?"

Debts Totaling More Than One Thousand Dollars. Linda Called a Halt, and Harry Balked

By Lucian Cary

Illustrated by Harold Lund

HARRY ASPINWALL whistled a gay little air as he pulled out bureau drawers and found a dress shirt and studs and collars and white ties. Most men object to dress clothes, particularly full-dress clothes, and only yield to them because they are afraid of their wives. Harry didn't feel that way. He was a tall, lean young man with fine shoulders—the kind of man who looks well in a swallowtail coat or riding breeches or anything else with a touch of swank—and he liked parties. Particularly he liked going to the first annual ball of the Greenfield Country Hunt Club.

Harry was an automobile salesman. He sold that great car, the Hurstwood Eight. He liked driving a Hurstwood Eight—as who does not? He liked the kind of people who bought the Hurstwood Eight. He liked doing the kind of thing the kind of people who bought the Hurstwood Eight did—riding to hounds, for instance. Harry was not a horseman, but he fully intended to be. He had ridden enough the previous summer to dare this fall to ride with the hunt and jump a dozen stone fences of that solid and forbidding kind that the Puritan fathers raised in Connecticut.

When he had tied his white tie to the last perfection of neatness and given it the very slightest pull—the pull that takes the curse off the carefulness—Harry stood well back from the mirror and looked himself up and down. His mind was full of pleasant thoughts. He thought that his face looked strong and that the dress coat Tabler's had made for him was beautifully cut and that the evening dress he had helped his wife pick out that day in New York was the best evening dress she had ever had in her life and that she was the prettiest woman in Fairhaven, or in the whole of Greenfield county and—where was she?

He was suddenly aware that all sounds in the room next his had ceased. He opened the door. She wasn't there. She had come upstairs to dress at the same time he had. She couldn't have finished dressing so soon. He called, "Linda!" There was no answer. He ran downstairs. She was in the living-room bending over a long flat box, the kind of box in which evening dresses come from the shop. She had laid the box on the sofa and she was busy tucking tissue paper around something in the box. She wasn't dressed.

"What's the matter?" Harry asked.

Somehow or other it is given to women to put the fear of something—the hereafter, perhaps; or lightning; or just the dark—into men and to do it with no more than a word and a look. Linda had neither height nor weight to give force to a blow. She was pretty and slim and girlish as she stood there and looked at Harry. When she spoke, she spoke three words in a quiet voice. But Harry flinched as if she had hit him with something—the family hatchet, say.

"I'm not going," she said.

Harry sat down in the nearest chair. He knew he was in for it. But he was a brave man as men go, and Linda was not the kind of young wife who makes scenes. She had never in the five years of their marriage made a scene. She had a singularly even and agreeable disposition, and in that subtle struggle for supremacy that occurs in every marriage, however loving, her method had always been that of letting Harry have his way.

In his dull masculine fashion, Harry was half aware that her gentle submissiveness did not always mean that he got what he wanted. He had several times been on the verge of perceiving that it was no particular good winning an argument with Linda if he was reduced to the state of mind in which he couldn't bear to take the rewards of winning.

Linda proceeded to finish her task of tucking tissue paper around the things in the box, to put the lid on, and to tie it there. The moment she finished, Harry had a thought.

"Is that your new dress you're packing up?" he asked.

Linda gave him a grave look, with so slight a lift of her eyebrows that he could not be sure she had lifted them.

"Yes," she said. "I'm sending it back."

Harry lost the calm he had been forcing upon himself. He blew up. He blew up as a well-made firecracker blows up when the fuse has burned down to the powder—without a murmur.

"What for?" he roared.

Linda picked up the box in her arms, walked across the room to the doorway, and paused, like a well-trained actress making her exit.

"Because," she said, "it's just too awfully expensive. We can't possibly afford it."

"You mean you aren't going to the hunt club ball because of that dress?"

"Yes," she said.

"But that isn't reasonable," he cried. "It isn't logical. There's no connection between the price of that dress and going to the ball."

Her answer was to run upstairs with the box in her arms. For a moment he thought [illegible] have seen that she was [illegible] [illegible] and had gone up [illegible] But he knew better. [illegible] at home. How would he explain her absence at the ball? He couldn't explain it.

He went to the foot of the stairs and called her.

"Just a minute," she called back. "I'll be right down."

He stood leaning against the door frame, waiting for her. The dress had cost three hundred dollars, or precisely the amount of his commission on the sale of one Hurstwood Eight touring car. He reflected bitterly that he had once sold four Hurstwood Eights in one week. Why couldn't a man who was able to turn twelve hundred dollars in one week, buy his wife a three-hundred-dollars dinner dress once in five years.

Linda came down the stairs. She had put on a serge dress, which was evidence that she didn't intend to change her mind about going to the hunt club ball, but her manner, as she sat down in a corner of the sofa, was friendly.

"I'm sorry," she said. "It's awfully mean of me to refuse at the last minute this way. But I've got to do it. I won't spend money we haven't got for things we don't need—not any more."

"I can make more money."

"Of course you can. And you always make me think you're going to. You've sold me to the idea that the way to make money is to spend it. You did it again today when we bought the dress. I was silly; I knew we couldn't afford it. But it's the kind of dress a woman dreams about. And it was a bargain. And you insisted that charging it would only give you something more to work for this month."

"It would too."

Linda shook her head.

"Don't you know this is November—you'll be lucky to sell four cars between now and the first of the year."

"I've sold four cars in one week."

"Yes, and ever since you've felt that we really ought to live at the rate of fifty thousand a year. Don't you realize that was in the spring, when people are buying cars, not in November and December?"

"That dress won't have to be paid for till after the first of the year. Might even stall them till February or March."

"It won't ever be paid for—at least not by us," said Linda passionately. "I'm going to take it back tomorrow."

"But—" he began again.

"Please, Harry," she said, "let's not try to talk now. You haven't time. It's five minutes of eight now, and you've got seven miles to drive."

"Do you think I'm going without you?"

She smiled sweetly. Harry didn't know whether he wanted more to slap her or to kiss her.

"Of course you are."

"What'll I say to everybody?"

"Say anything you like—say I've got a headache or the heeby-geebies. Tell the truth."

"What is the truth?" he asked hotly. "Why do you suddenly turn on me like this and spoil my evening because I wanted you to have an especially nice dress?"

She jumped up and her eyes flashed and she stamped her foot.

"The truth is that when I got home tonight the grocer called me up again and asked for a check—we haven't paid him anything for more than three months. Katie asked for her wages, and I had to put her off. I had to cajole the laundry into leaving your dress shirts. I've got three dollars and seventy-five cents in my purse upstairs, my bank account is overdrawn, and in my desk are more than a thousand dollars in unpaid bills. I can't stand living that way. I won't live that way."

"What are you going to do about it?" he asked meanly.

"I'm going to strike," Linda answered gravely. "I'm going to try doing what I'm doing tonight—refusing to spend money we haven't got, refusing to go places we can't afford."

"The hunt club," Harry said, with what he intended to be biting sarcasm, "costs a hundred dollars a year."

"Yes," she answered, "a hundred dollars for the annual dues. Last month's bill for meals and things was sixty dallors. And it costs thirty-odd dollars a month to keep a horse there. And your riding kit cost two hundred dollars and mine cost nearly as much. At the present rate, the hunt club is going to cost us two thousand dollars a year and we can't afford it—not when the grocery bill isn't paid." We can't afford anything as long as the grocery bill isn't paid."

"What it all comes down to is that I don't make enough money to satisfy you. Ten thousand dollars a year isn't enough for two people to live on nowadays."

"I should be perfectly satisfied to live on ten thousand dollars a year, Harry."

"But we have ten thousand a year, and you aren't satisfied."

"That isn't true," she said, "and you know why."

"Why?" he asked bitterly.

"Because you insist on living as if we had fifteen or twenty thousand."

"I suppose you don't live that way too. I suppose you think I spend more than my share."

"Harry, if you'll give me an allowance of a hundred dollars a week, I'll run the house on it and buy all my own clothes and provide my own pocket money. You can have all the rest for the car and your own personal expenses, and I'll be perfectly satisfied."

"I'll give you an allowance of a hundred and fifty a week," he said tartly.

"A hundred will be plenty if I get it every week."

"All right," he said grimly.

He turned to the front door. He had never left her this way before. He had never left her for an evening without kissing her good night. But he would be hanged if he would kiss her now, after the things she had said. And how could he give her a hundred dollars every week, when it would take all the money he could earn in the next two months to pay the most pressing bills?

"Good night," he said, and shut the door behind him. He walked to the garage without looking back.

Harry woke up the next morning with that uncomfortable feeling, one half of which is due to having stayed up late, and the other of which is due to the growing suspicion that you made a fool of yourself the night before.

Linda looked in at his door while he was still trying to decide to get up and, seeing that he was awake, announced that she would bring his breakfast up on a tray. She came back with it in a jiffy—a tall glass of iced orange juice and golden toast and two soft-boiled eggs and a pot of coffee, fresh and fragrant.

"Did you have a good time?" she asked

Her Husband's Fourth Stenographer

An Episode in the Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters

"WILL you leave your things in here?" Mr. Coleman ushered Helen to his room.

Where was Mrs. Coleman? Her room adjoined—but the door was closed.

Not dressed yet? No, more than that. Something wrong.

Mr. Coleman receiving them. No reference to his wife.

The very air charged with—what? The moment they entered, Helen felt it.

On tiptoes before the high mirror, she fluffed her hair. No powder on the chiffonier. Austere military brushes and a leather collar box.

In the library, Mr. Coleman was pouring the cocktails. Only three glasses!

"My special mixture. No, very mild, Mrs. Curtis—you'll like it."

"Hello, Frisk!" Warren greeted the friendly Airedale. "'Member the time we took you fishing?"

The excited tail shouted gleeful reminiscence.

Their attention centered on the dog, Helen watched Mr. Coleman.

Obviously under a strain.

Should she ask for Mrs. Coleman? No, something checked her.

Warren had not asked. Was he, too, conscious of something wrong?

The maid, a capable Swedish girl, soon announced dinner.

The absence of their hostess now too conspicuous to be ignored. As they entered the dining-room, Mr. Coleman offered a constrained,

"You'll have to excuse Mrs. Coleman. She's not at all well."

"Oh, I'm sorry," murmured Helen, suppressing all solicitous inquiries.

But her thoughts less compliant. What had happened? If she were really ill—why hadn't he postponed the dinner?

Whatever it was, he did not wish to dwell upon it. Even Warren, sensing that, made no comment beyond a brief regret.

At the table, Helen tried to bridge the awkwardness by admiring the Sheraton sideboard—a recent acquisition.

The hors d'oeuvres and soup were perfectly served. Hilda's face impassive. Whatever the dissension in the household—she remained stolidly unperturbed.

The talk drifting to foreign exchange now. The franc. Warren denouncing inflation. Mr. Coleman contributing only preoccupied assents.

The telephone!

"For Mrs. Coleman, sir." Hilda's disconcerting announcement.

"You take the message, Hilda. Say Mrs. Coleman is ill."

A poignant silence. Mr. Coleman staring at the glass he was circling.

"This trout's great," brusqued Warren. "Can't beat a good lake trout."

No response. Mr. Coleman still intent on his glass.

Then pushing it back with decisive abruptness,

"I might as well tell you. We've had a quarrel. Serious one."

"Huh, they all seem serious at the time," shrugged Warren.

"This one is. Climax to—a lot of things. We're on the rocks this time."

"Oh, I hope not," faltered Helen, when the pause grew unbearable.

"Rotten for a man to talk—but you'll hear it anyway. Grace is insanely jealous—of my stenographer!"

"Nothin' so serious 'bout that," Warren stabbed at a mushroom.

"You'd think not. But I've discharged three girls for no reason at all—just to satisfy her. Now it's Miss Wells. She's [illegible] even attractive—not to me, anyway. [illegible] Grace has that same insane idea. [illegible] obsession!"

Another pause. Again circling the glass.

"I told her when I let Miss Gorman go—'never again.' Now I've had Miss Wells six months—and it's the same story. Either I discharge her or Grace leaves me. It's not a question of Miss Wells. I could give her a couple of weeks' salary and get her another job. But it would be the same thing with the next."

"Surely not," defended Helen, "Mrs. Coleman wouldn't be so unreasonable."

"It's an obsession. But I won't discharge Miss Wells! I'm through!" the dishes shook with his emphasizing fist. "Now it's up to her."

"See here, that's not so serious," protested Warren. "You're not goin' to split over a girl in your office?"

"That's not the point, Curtis. Easy enough to let Miss Wells go—but in a few months I'll be up against the same thing. Have to choose between my wife and my stenographer. I can't be shackled by such insane jealousy."

"Maybe it isn't so much jealousy as—Oh, I don't know how to express it," flushed Helen. "But some women always want to—to prove your love. A sort of—"

"Test? Yes, that's part of it. But I won't stand for that either—not any longer. When I let Miss Gorman go—I told her 'never again'!"

"Queer kink," muttered Warren. "You've fallen for it every time—now you won't. Maybe that'll bring her around."

"You wouldn't think so from the scene just before you came. Too late to phone—or I'd have called off the dinner."

"Perhaps if she let me see her," ventured Helen. "If I could talk to her—"

"It's gone too far. Grace had better go away—Europe for a few months. Give us both time to think this out."

"Not a bad idea," agreed Warren. "When you get away from a thing—you always get a better slant."

"Well, forget what I've said. We'll have to work it out some way," Mr. Coleman dismissed the subject.

The rest of the dinner constrained. The conversation forced. Desultory.

When the coffee was served, Helen, with an inaudible excuse, left the table.

She felt Mr. Coleman's glance follow her, [illegible] crossed the hall. [illegible] the closed door now. [illegible] she [illegible]. Then turned the [illegible]. Locked.

"Mrs. Coleman!" her voice [illegible] not to reach the dining-room.

The door opened reluctantly.

"I couldn't go away without seeing you," Helen now in the room.

Mrs. Coleman still in her dinner gown. An expensive embroidered crepe, now sadly rumpled. Reddened eyes. Hair disheveled.

"So he told you?" defiantly, dropping back on the bed.

"He couldn't help it," championed Helen. "He's all broken up."

"If he cares more for that stenographer than for me—Don't look like that—you've only heard his side. I won't stay here and be humiliated. If she's more to him than I am—"

"You know she isn't. Aren't you just obsessed with that idea?"

"That's what he says! But why should he be so anxious to keep her?" passionately. "His face when I asked him to discharge her! He got fiery red—then white. Doesn't that prove—"

"It proves what you've done by your unjust suspicions. Please don't be offended! Perhaps I shouldn't say all this—but you're making yourself wretched over nothing."

"Then if it's nothing—why doesn't he prove it? Why don't he let her go?"

"Don't you see—it's not just letting her go? It's his pride. No man can let his wife dictate his business—discharge his stenographers one after another. You think Warren would do that for me?"

"Wouldn't he?" avidly. "Not even if you were so unhappy—"

"Why, nothing I could do would make him discharge Miss Lewis."

"You mean he'd let you leave him before he'd give up his stenographer?"

"Yes, knowing he was in the right. He'd be like a rock. I could no more move him than—" straining for a comparison sufficiently strong. "Think what you're doing—these humiliating tests! How can you want to break him like that?"

"I don't know—I don't know why I do it," sobbingly. "Something drives me on—I can't help it! I worship him and I always feel he doesn't care enough."

"So you're always testing his love? The surest way to kill it."

Frisk up on the bed now. Whimpering. Licking the hands that hid her face.

"What shall I do?" desperately. "I've gone so far—I can't give in now. If he'll only let Miss Wells go—Oh, I'll never, never ask him again! You talk to him. Tell him just this once—just to save my pride."

Helen stood by helpless. The futility of reasoning with her now. She would have to fight it out alone.

"I'd better go back now. They'll think it strange I'm staying so long."

Only an abandoned sobbing from the pillow, as Helen stole from the room.

When she entered the library, Warren rose with an abrupt,

"Think we'd better trot along. Now, don't take it too seriously, Coleman. Things usually straighten out. Don't want to butt in, but anything we can do—let us know.

No lingering tonight. Warren fairly swept her out.

When they reached the street, he swaggered ahead, his angry strides and prodding cane an outlet for his suppressed volcanics.

"That pin-headed neurotic! Discharging his stenographers!" with a snort. "Well, she's the one who'd get the bounce from me."

"Yet she's making herself sick over it—she's crazy about him!"

"Huh, queer way of showin' it."

"It's an obsession—to test his love. Dear, some women do that," running to keep up with his strides. "They can't help it. A sort of emotional indulgence."

"Well, he'd better ship her off for a few months. Maybe that'll bring her to her senses—if she's got any. Coleman's to blame, too. If he'd put his foot down the first time—she wouldn't pull these repeats. How many girls has she made him fire?"

"Didn't he say this was the fourth? But she says if he'll let this one go—she'll never—"

"Huh, if he falls for that again—I'm off him. Any man who lets a jealous jane put him through hoops like that—well, he's a prize sap!"

"Dear, that's what I told her. That I could no more make you discharge Miss Lewis—"

"What's that? Discharge Miss Lewis?" explosively. "Not till I'm ready for the padded cell. If you ever staged that stunt—Well, you'd be laid off so quick it'd make your head spin. Here, sprint up—let's nail that taxi!"

He shook his head, as men invariably and women occasionally do in the circumstances. No husband ever has a good time when he goes to a party without his wife.

"I'm sorry if I spoiled the party for you," she said gently.

He looked at her; she was so fresh-skinned, so delicately pretty, so gentle—he couldn't believe she was the same person who had seemed so hard-boiled the night before.

"I mean, of course," she said, "I'm sorry I had to do it. I—I can't take back the things I said."

He had thought she did, but he chose to ignore that.

"Do you remember Doris McLean?" he asked abruptly.

"Of course—the curly-headed blonde."

"I played around with her all evening," Harry said.

Linda smiled appreciatively.

"That ought to have done you good," she said. "I thought she was charming—so full of life and such a beautiful dancer."

Harry frowned. This was hardly the right line for a wife to take. Couldn't she make at least one snooty remark?

"I suppose I ought to call her up this afternoon," he said.

"I would if I were you," Linda said.

Harry gave up then and ate his eggs. He didn't know that he particularly wanted to call Doris up. But he was committed to it now. By five o'clock that afternoon he and a dozen others were at Mrs. McLean's house, engaged in that footless but reviving pursuit known as talking over the night before. He didn't get home till half past seven, but Linda greeted him with a smile and a kiss, as if it were quite the usual thing for him to be half an hour late for Sunday night supper.

He had, on Monday morning, to call at the firm's offices in Bridgeport and wangle an advance of five hundred dollars against future commissions. He gave Linda four hundred and suggested that she pay the bills that couldn't be put off, while he went out to sell a car. Unfortunately, it was the season when nobody buys a car.

By Saturday afternoon he was as thoroughly discouraged as he had ever been in his life. He wanted comfort and reassurance. How could he get that from Linda? She knew all the facts. She knew how recklessly he had spent the high rewards of the spring season and how gloriously he had escaped work, ever since he had joined the hunt club and taken to riding every afternoon. So he took Doris forty miles up the Post Road in an hour; spent three hours over tea and two hours coming back. He never got home for dinner at all. And when he did get in, a little fearful of how Linda might take it, he blurted out the truth.

"That's all right," Linda said, settling back in her corner of the sofa. "I think it might be very stimulating to you to carry on an innocent flirtation with a pretty woman. You've been getting into a groove."

"All you care about is that I should work," he said sullenly.

"It isn't all I care about," Linda said gravely. "But I do care a lot about it. It isn't only that I want the bills paid. It's that I want to see you your old self. You used to get a kick out of selling cars. I think you ought to go into something else—something that really interests you."

"There isn't anything else I could make as much money at."

"What of it?" Linda asked. "As soon as the bills are paid, I'll go into anything with you. I'd try living on fifty dollars a week if that was what you got for doing something you liked. Of course I'd rather get a job myself in that case and help out."

"I don't want you to have a job," he said sullenly.

"I'd love it," Linda said. "I haven't enough to do as it is."

He shook his head.

"Why don't you let me fire Katie then? I'd do a lot better job than she does. I'm a better cook than she is."

"To save seventy-five dollars a month?"

"It's more than that. We furnish her with food; and then she wastes twice as much as I would. I think we'd save at least a hundred and twenty-five dollars a month."

"We can't do that," he said testily. "You know we can't."

"Why not?"

"It isn't done—that's all."

"I shouldn't mind; in fact, I'd like it."

"Well, I wouldn't," Harry said hotly. "I didn't marry you to get a cook." He glared at her. But she was so sweet he couldn't keep on glaring. "Linda," he cried, "don't you see that you're destroying all my pride in myself?"

She reached out and took his hand.

"I'm afraid I am—a little," she said. "But I just don't know how else to do what I have to do."

"You might play with me a little. Let's go somewhere and dance. I know a place where they have good food and good music and we could drive it in three quarters of an hour."

"I can't honey—I just can't."

"Why not?"

"Because we can't afford it."

"We can't afford not to play either."

"Do we have to spend twenty or thirty dollars on an evening in order to play?"

"We could do it for ten."

"We never have."

He went silently off to bed, and the next afternoon he went out with Doris and spent forty dollars. That is to say, he signed a check for thirty-five dollars and gave the waiter five dollars in cash.

He grew more and more dependent on Doris as time went on and sales didn't pick up and Linda remained implacable. He gave way slowly to the conviction that she didn't love him. One Sunday morning when she brought him his breakfast on a tray, he challenged her.

He said flatly: "I don't believe you love me any more."

"I sometimes feel that way," she said gravely, "but I know it's only temporary. I know you'll come out all right and then I'll love you more than ever."

He spent that evening with Doris. He sat in front of her drawing-room fire and spilled the beans.

"I've decided to get a divorce," he said.

"We all feel that way at times," she said.

"You know what I mean," he answered.

She looked at him. She had nice blue eyes. Linda had blue eyes too, but they were somehow colder.

"No," she said.

"I'm going to get a divorce because I can't stand a wife who won't play with me—who will never go anywhere."

He got up and sat down beside Doris and put his arm around her and kissed her.

"Besides," he said, "I want you. I want you to marry me."

"Marry you!" she cried.

"Yes," he said, "you're the best playmate I ever had. I want a wife who knows how to play."

"Harry," she said, "if I were your wife, I wouldn't play with you either."

"What?"

"Certainly not. There's just one thing in the world I've got to have and that's a chance to answer the telephone without meeting a collector. Do you suppose I'd marry an irresponsible man?"

Harry jumped up.

"You mean you regard me as an irresponsible man?"

"You're impossible," she said.

"I thought you liked me," he said bitterly.

"I do like you. I like you a lot. You're fun, and you're really and truly nice. But I wouldn't dream of marrying you, and neither would any other woman in her right mind."

"You mean you think my wife is right—that I'm no good?"

Doris shook her head.

"I don't say no good," she said. "I said you were really and truly nice. But you're no good as a husband."

"Well, I'll just show you," he said through shut teeth. "I'll show you, and I'll show her."

He snatched up his hat and coat and ran out of the house and climbed into the Hurstwood Eight that stood, as usual, opposite Mrs. McLean's front door. He drove for miles. But he drove slowly. He was thinking. His only hope was that spring was coming—spring and the season when people buy cars. He was up to his neck in debt. He owned perhaps a hundred-dollar equity in the car he was driving. He had to scramble to get the cash to buy gas for it. But he would scramble. He would show them. And when he had shown them, he would tell them where to get off.

He did work that spring as he had never worked before. He used everything he knew and everything he had. He spent himself freely and fully in his anger at women. He had always intended to give Linda an allowance of a hundred and fifty dollars a week to run the house. She had insisted a hundred was enough. He compromised with himself on a hundred and twenty-five. He made it a point of honor to turn over that

Linda proceeded to finish her task of tucking tissue paper around the things in the box, to put the lid on, and to tie it there.

The CALIFORNIA HOUSE ~ ~ By S. A. Stevens

SOME of our building experts, in the search after the best type of house for California, would have us demolish all old-fashioned houses and replace them with buildings in the Spanish style. This, they contend, is the one and only typically Californian architectural type, because the early Spanish settlers here built this kind of house—of course, in imitation of their old homes in Spain.

But California was not long dominated by Spain and Spanish ideals, and the Americans who followed the Spaniards in the control of California used California wood, hewn in the mountains, instead of adobe, to build a different kind of house which has as much claim to being typically Californian as the Spanish house.

One house sprang from the soil, the other from the trees, but both suggest the region whence their builders came, rather than anything typically Californian.

Following the gold rush that brought Americans across the plains, from the fifties to nineteen hundred, came the post-World-War rush, in which people from all the world invaded this State. Immediately there went up as many types of houses as there were nationalities represented, and each type was representative not of California, but of the country whence these newest home-builders came. None of these types can possibly represent a California development in architecture, although we have here a most distinctive climate, calling for a very distinct kind of house. They only represent just so many steps in California's rapid growth and show how her history was made.

There is something just as appealing in the remnants of the old-fashioned village that we sometimes come across in California, or in a little bow-windowed house, of which there are some specimens still extant, or in an imitation of a Southern colonial mansion built by some homesick Southerner of the Seventies, or in one of the carefully-floored and weather-protected houses of some long-dead New Englander who sought to reproduce here the home he loved in New England; or in fact in any of the types that age has hallowed with clinging memories of those who came here in the years gone by.

The Spaniards, of course, came from an old country where building had become an art developed from first small beginnings; for the New World was discovered while Spain was in her glory and under her most distinguished rulers. And because the early Missions are not only old but are also beautiful, conceptions of men of an old and high culture, they are more worthy of preservation than other old types that followed. They are rightly prized and preserved. But to imitate their style in all new houses as if the Spanish were representative of California and a natural development of soil and environment, is certainly a mistake. Of course if that type is found to be best for this region and also most beautiful, it is possibly wise to tear down perfectly good dwellings to replace them with the Spanish house.

But is this type best? Is it most beautiful? most convenient? Especially, is it a natural development?

Adobe is undoubtedly one of the best building materials that California can produce, better perhaps than wood or such stone as we have here, and there is something charming about the Spanish house. But isn't it a fad of the architects and artists who tomorrow may be advocating something quite different, rather than a spontaneous development, resulting from the environment and native taste?

For there are points in which the Spanish house does not meet the requirements this place. For one thing, open verandas are but little used here except as ornaments; and to be really ornamental, any part of a house intended to be useful must be useable. Yet what is a Spanish house without its arched and open verandas? The Spanish balcony is beautiful in Spain or Mexico where the summers are hot and youths have the habit of serenading their lady loves under windows; but in California, having no such use, they cannot be considered beautiful. You can store things on them of course, but that is not the kind of use that makes for beauty. The native development for verandas and balconies in California is not the Spanish type but the glass porch.

The glass porch may cause the architect to suffer actual pain; but his contention being that the true form of architecture is that which is a natural growth as the result of environment and climate, he must submit to the glass porch as one of our purest developments. So, instead of imitating the Spanish balcony and veranda, why not concentrate upon making the native glass porch a thing of beauty? It may be affirmed with confidence that some of the architects who are advocating the demolition of our old, comfortable houses in faver of a newer fad could not design the best glass porch, with all the features that should be included and excluded to make it best serve its purpose as a pleasant and beautiful place in which to sit. Yet the Spaniards made their kind of porches beautiful, why should not we?

Another point upon which the architects are at war with California native taste is in the matter of colors. The fiat, if we are to judge by recent instances of Spanish architecture, allows only the adobe color, or a particularly glaring bright yellow, which on our elevated hillsides adds another ray unto the California sunshine, making it almost too bright to be borne by the naked eye. The idea that colors are in bad taste obtrudes itself from time to time upon the esthetical scheme of things, and every art seems destined to go through its period of dullness. Before the World War, when prices were at the lowest ebb, we could get very charming table ware at the ten-cent stores. It was gayly and attractively decorated and made in unique shapes and sizes. Then a writer in a magazine article, condemned the ornate cheap china sold in the ten-cent stores. Plain white with a single gold band or a narrow decoration on the edges, only, became the fad. There is still a hangover from that influence so it is no longer possible to get the pretty decorated china in the cheaper stores. That particular idea of "good taste" faded out without anybody's especial effort; but although highly ornamented ware has come in again, the cheaper kinds of ware are still under the influence of that pre-war article, and the people who buy the cheap ware are condemned to "tasteful china," for goodness knows how many years to come.

Friend: What have you taken out of your garden this summer, Jones?
Jones (sadly): Three boys, a strayed cow and miscellaneous chickens.

It is the same tendency that now begins to manifest itself in our native architecture; and since the natural trend of taste in California is toward the ornamental, the charming and the gorgeous, the architect who bans colors in house-finishing is opposing one of the instinctive and fundamental California tendencies—the very thing he is out to avoid. Nature sets the pace, the natives follow. But there is many a marvelous sunset seen from the Palisades in Santa Monica, in the autumn months, that would be toned down to dull grays and browns if some modern artists had a say-so in the matter, and the hills wouldn't be purple and lavender, nor the sky all shades from lilac to saffron, if the architects were consulted. Adobe color might suit them better.

It might be possible to point out other details in which the Spanish or Mexican house does not satisfy California needs and tastes; but suffice it to say that this type does not seem to be any more satisfactory and any more a native development than any others of the many specimens of architecture that have had their day here and died. The architect who wishes to discover and develop the real California house must study the climate and environment and the effect that climate and environment have had on the unintellectual man who follows his instinct and convenience in building, and develop plans along those natural lines, adding to the instinctive and native taste the architect's culture and educated ideals.

Without doubt California profits by being remodeled by first one idealist and then another. But she suffers too. As there is hardly money enough in the world to do over the whole State, or even any single city of it, all at once and simultaneously, the results of these idealist movements must always be somewhat spotty; for before the whole State can be remodeled a new ideal will be advanced and the parts done over immediately discredited.

Laws may govern building in all its phases; but surely it is a mistake to allow a group of men all of one trend of mind to exert absolute influence in deciding questions which should be fixed only after careful consideration by all the parties concerned.

California straight ahead! And personally I find the Spanish house most charming and appealing, for it reminds me of my Spanish ancestors, of whom I haven't any.

jewel was pawned by a young man giving the name of Geoffrey Fernell."

Lord Geoffrey stood for a moment as though turned to stone. Then he threw his racket on a settee.

"My word!" he exclaimed. Then he turned toward Florence.

"Did you think I took it?" he demanded.

"I did," she replied. "I didn't want the scarf. You insisted upon bringing it to me. When you took it off, I felt your fingers on the clasp of the pendant. You took the scarf away, and I believe the pendant was in it. Anyway, you went to London the next morning, and the pendant was discovered pawned for a thousand pounds in your name."

"If you suspected me, why didn't you mention it before?" he asked.

For a moment she hesitated; not, however, with any sign of embarrassment.

"It was my first visit here," she explained. "I didn't wish to cause trouble. I hoped my jewel might be returned."

"I think," the duchess suggested coldly, "that we had better bring this most unpleasant meeting to an end. Is there any further question you would like to ask my son?"

Goade suddenly intervened.

"I should like, if I may, to ask him a somewhat obvious question," he said. "I should like to ask him whether he stole this pendant of Miss Followay's?"

"I thought you had already discovered that," was the unexpected reply. "Yes, I stole it."

"And pawned it in Holborn?"

"Quite right."

"Might one further inquire why you stole it?" Goade continued.

"I needed the money," was the curt admission.

The young man faced his father and mother, both of them now almost in a state of collapse.

"Of course, I'm terribly sorry," he said, "but, after all, I wasn't the only one to blame. I have written you time after time, dad, and told you that it was perfectly impossible for me to keep up my position upon an allowance of two thousand a year. I needed a thousand pounds very badly, and I thought I saw a way of getting it without any risk. I meant to return the thing to Miss Followay later on."

The duchess seemed to have lost all power of consecutive reasoning. She had become a limp, unbalanced person.

"You stole!" she murmured. "Geoffrey! Our son! You stole from a girl!"

"The trinket," the duke announced tremulously, "shall be returned."

"I am not quite sure," Florence said coldly, "whether that will meet the case. You do not know exactly why Lord Geoffrey asked that I should be invited here. I should like to tell you. I saw quite a good deal of him in London. Since he came down here, I don't think that he has treated me very well. One hears now that he has become attached to a young lady in London at the Duke of York's Theater. Did you steal my pendant to buy presents for her, Lord Geoffrey?"

The young man turned toward the door.

"I've had enough of this," he declared sulkily.

He would have left the room, but Goade intervened.

"I am afraid, Lord Geoffrey, that I cannot permit you to leave just yet," he announced.

"What do you mean?" the duchess gasped.

"Your Grace," Goade said gravely, "your son has confessed to a theft. If Miss Followay desires to prosecute—"

"Prosecute!" the duchess shrieked.

"Prosecute!" the duke groaned.

"Why not?" Florence rejoined. "Your son has treated me very badly. He paid me attention in London and has simply ignored me here. It seems to me to be the natural course to take."

Lord Geoffrey led her aside.

"With your permission," he said, turning to his father and mother, "I will discuss this matter with Miss Followay. I will give my word [illegible] gentleman," he added, turning to Goade, "not to leave the place."

He threw open the door and they left the room together. The duchess turned to the dean.

"Dean," she begged, "I think that you had better perhaps add your persuasions to the persuasions of my son. I rely upon you to see that your daughter does not remain obdurate. If Goeffrey took the trinket at all, he must have taken it as a joke."

"He could scarcely have pawned it as a joke," the dean pointed out stiffly.

There was an awkward silence. Then the door was opened. Florence and Lord Geoffrey entered. The latter wore an expression of great relief.

"It's quite all right," he declared, addressing his father and mother. "Florence admits that it was a joke. She is perfectly willing to say no more about it. We are sending the announcement of our engagement to the Morning Post tonight."

The duchess looked across at Florence, an icy gleam in her eyes.

"So this is your price!" she exclaimed.

The dean rose to his feet with dignity.

"Your Grace," he said, "if you take that attitude—"

The duke intervened.

Geoffrey patted his father on the back and whispered in his ear. The duke nodded.

"I will see my lawyer tomorrow," he promised. "You shall have a town house and an adequate allowance."

Captain Faulkener rose to his feet; Goade followed his example. The duke looked at the latter anxiously.

"Under these circumstances, sir," he said, "[illegible] that no further action on my [illegible] be necessary."

"[illegible] in Miss Followay's hands," Goade replied.

"And I," she murmured, "have made terms with the enemy."

Lord Geoffrey clambered into the car between Goade and his fiancee.

"Goade," he confided, "you were good."

"I was what?" Goade inquired.

"Good," Lord Geoffrey repeated. "You played the Scotland Yard sleuth marvelously. Difficult people, mine, but you scared them all right."

Goade pinched Flip's ear for a moment.

"You young people," he remarked, "did quite well. There were times when I scarcely realized myself that the whole thing was a plant."

Travel Broadens One

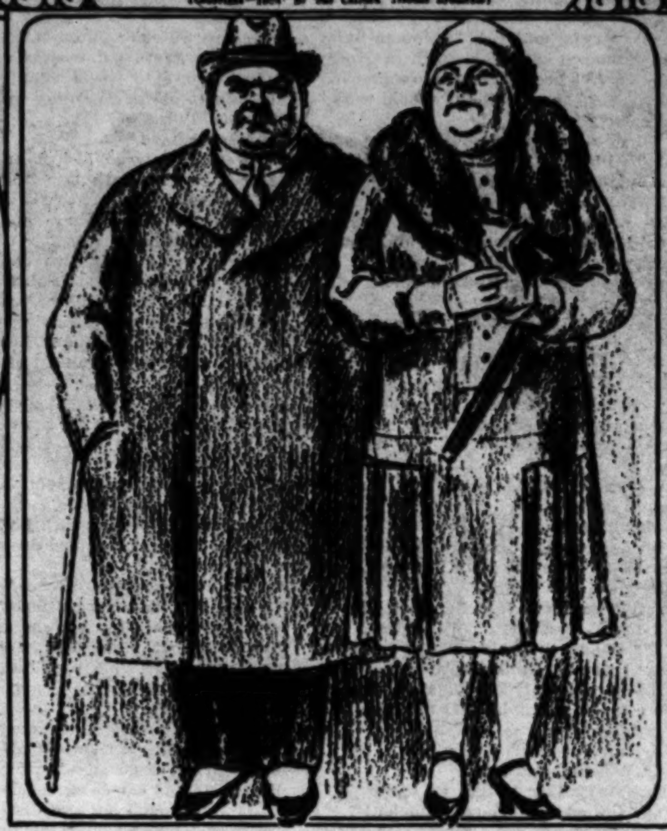
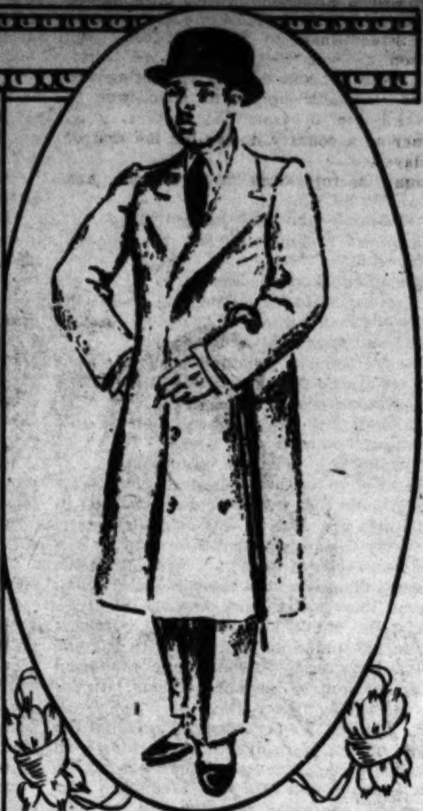
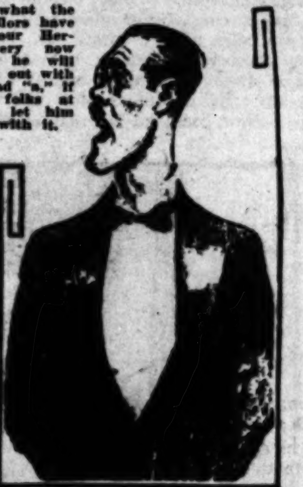
Meet Marilynne Quinn and Desire Schutyberger, both "studying" in Paris. As Marilynne is telling Desire, it isn't so much what you learn abroad as it is the perfectly wonderful contacts one makes. "Why, only this very morning," Marilynne is telling Desire, "I was introduced to a man who is a friend of a man who knows some one way up in the business end of the Chicago Opera Company.



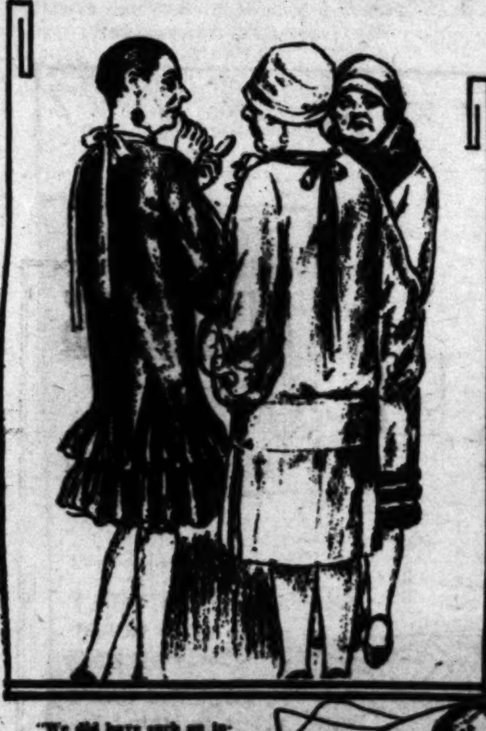
Mr. and Mrs. Fred Crunch-Smith have eaten largely at the best hotels and cafes in London, Paris, Vienna and Berlin. They gave up the Scottish Lakes trip because a friend told them the food around the Trossachs was simply impossible. Both have come home very much broadened by their trip.



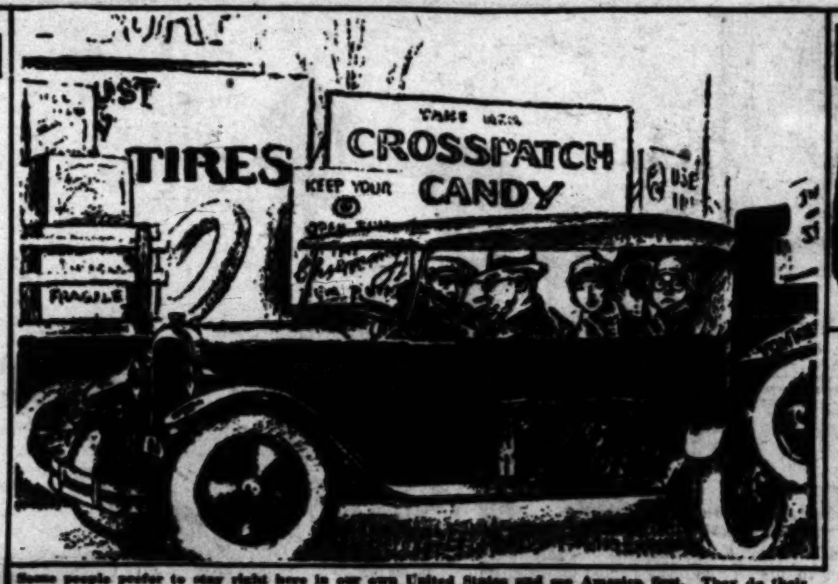
Look at what the London tailors have done to our Herman! Every now and then he will come right out with a big, broad "a." If only the folks at home will let him get away with it.



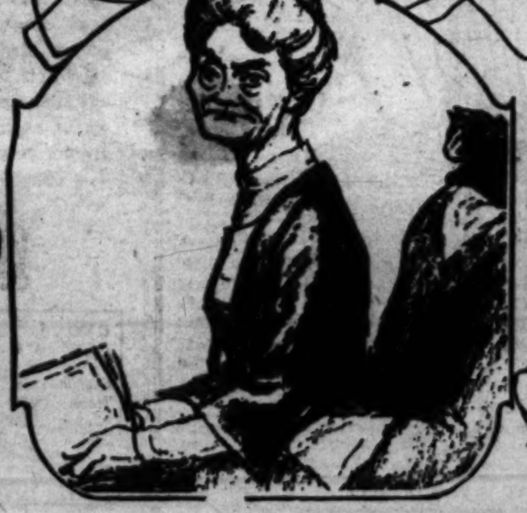
Here, if you please, is J. J. Boom, serio-comic baritone, who is going to sing at the concert aboard the good ship Acme of the Royal Glue Line. Mr. Boom's selected piece will be a simple little ballad about a fickle, fickle sunbeam and a red, red rose. Very sad. If there is an encore, and O, let's hope there will be, J. J. will render "Come Away, Death," with his own setting.



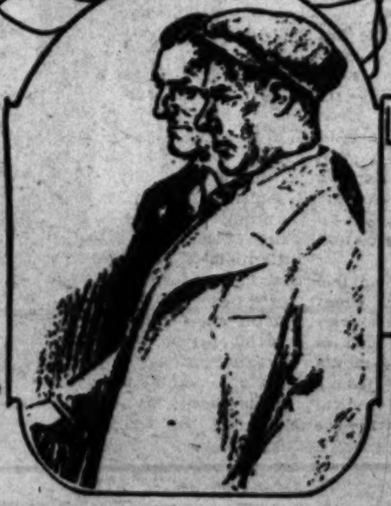
"We did have such an interesting time in Paris. We met some perfectly charming Americans who knew just where to go, and saw loads of interesting people. My dear, there wasn't a day we didn't meet some one we knew from home!"



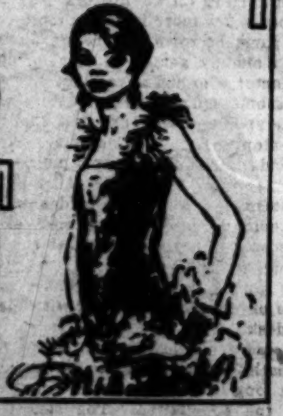
Some people prefer to stay right here in our own United States and see America first. They do their traveling along broad highways replete with invitations to stop by at the Chummy Tearoom, the Dew Drop Inn, and Ye Olde Time Antique Shoppe, where the prices are just as broadening as the tourist rates on the continent.



Then again, some say that the best and most broadening of all is to sit right in the privacy of one's own home and read the National Geographic Magazine from cover to cover. Maybe they're right.



Poor Roscoe is three days out on the S. S. Pandemonia. Drink has done it. He is being helped by a friend to go from the bar to his stateroom on C deck, a very rough journey. Yes, siree, a life on the ocean wave is very broadening to some of the boys.



In case you missed them in the U. S. A. you can see a lot of American shows in London. And in Paris you can make up for never having seen a colored revue by spending an evening at a "Revue Negre." (Meet Miss Babe Johnson of Paris and Lenox avenue, New York City.)

Put it Over

A French Deputy paid a visit to London and while there, as a mark of courtesy, was invited to addres the House of Commons. He did so, and paid a glowing tribute to England and its governmental machinery, and he gradually led up to the climax: "And the crowning achievement of your governmental system is that your governmental departments do not cockroach upon each other."

There was considerable laughter among Britain's worthy legislators, one of whom shouted: "Haven't you used the wrong word?" and he was told what the right word was. Not being at all flustered, the Deputy proceeded: "My good friend here has called my attention to the fact that I have gotten my poultry references mixed. Of course, when referring to your governmental departments I meant to say they do not hencroach upon each other."

The Members of Parliament understood this tribute and applauded vigorously.

Nature's Pearl

The aviator's wife was taking her first trip with her husband. "Wait a moment, George," she said. "I'm afraid we'll have to go down again."

"What's wrong?" asked the husband,

"I believe I've dropped one of the pearl buttons off my jacket. I think I see it glistening on the ground."

"Keep your seat, my dear," said the aviator. "That's Silver Lake."

Rarin' to Go

A Chicago girl came out to get into pictures, armed with a letter of introduction to an assistant director. He showed her all over Hollywood and finally drove out Ventura Boulevard. Evidently the girl knew her stuff for they hadn't been spooning more than few moments when the A.D., trying to be a wise Hollywood guy, remarked:

"We don't seem to be getting along so good. Look at that couple over yonder. They know how to spoon!"

"Gee whiz!" exclaimed the Chicago girl. "If that's spooning, let's shovel!"

Retort Courteous

Captain Jones was giving a lecture to the recruits in his company as to their deportment in public. "If a civilian should make offensive remarks," he said," and try to induce a quarrel in a public house, a well-conducted soldier should drink up his beer and go away quietly."

At the close of his address, the captain questioned his audience to see if his remarks had gone home. "Now, Private Jenkins, what would you do if you were in an inn and a citizen tried to quarrel with you?"

"I would drink up 'is beer, sir, and 'ook it."

No Chance

A prominent New Yorker, stopping at Coronado, was handed a speed fine in San Diego which he said he did not deserve.

"Oh, well," he remarked resignedly, "it's the same all over the country. As far as justice in a speed court is concerned, you have as much chance as the man who was arrested near Yonkers.

"'But I surely had the right of way,' protested the man. 'How, then, could the accident be blamed on me?'

"'Easy enough,' retorted the arresting officer. 'The other fellow's father is Mayor, his brother is Chief of Police and I go with his sister.'"

Be Clubby

There is a little gate opening into a miniature backyard garden just off Seventh avenue near Perry street, Greenwich Village. Artists sit within at tables on hot afternoons and nights. The gate is painted a lurid yellow, one of the more or less official colors of the Village. There is a bell alongside.

Two bandits once visited the premises. Sightseers have been in the habit of walking in unannounced. Now a sign has appeared on the outside of the gate. It reads:

Friends—Ring once.
Enemies—Ring three times
Bandits—Please phone.

Misunderstanding

An Englishman and an American were walking up the street. The American slipped on the ice and landed rather heavily on the walk. Upon arising he said: "Well, I did that—notwithstanding."

About three blocks later the Englishman got the drift of the remark and laughed the rest of the way home.

When he entered the house his wife said; "Why, what is the joke?"

Replied John; "I was walking with an American who fell on the ice. When he stood up and brushed himself off, he said, 'Well, I did that nevertheless.'"

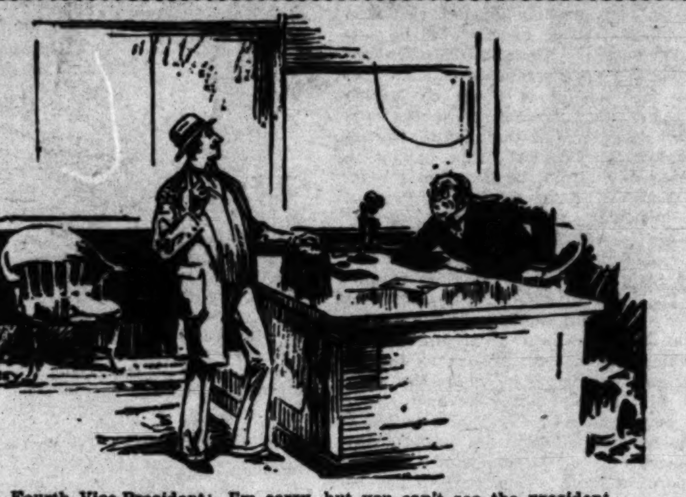
No Joke

Wesley Rogers, the Chicago lawyer, was asked what he thought of the McPherson case. "I will not venture an opinion at present," he said, "although it reminds me of a friend of mine whose wife and son picked on him as the victim of a little joke. Their conversation was prearranged and when they sat down to table the son said:

"'Guess where I saw Dad last night?'

"Where did you see Dad?' countered the mother, as per cue.

"But right here Dad intervened with: 'Here son, take this tenspot and go buy anything you like.'"



Fourth Vice-President: I'm sorry, but you can't see the president.

Bunkoed

William Sigmund was indulging in the popular pastime of roasting France. "Her attitude on the war debt reminds me of Bridget," he said.

"'I'm leaving today,' said Bridget indignantly to her mistress.

"'Why, what in the world is the matter? You've been here only a week!

"'It's your deceit, mum. Yesterday you gave me the keys to the cupboards and trunks and your jewel case, and there's not one of them that fits what you said they fitted.'"

Form Fitting

All loaded down with western regalia, it really did look as if Bill Desmond, the cinema star, had taken on about twenty pounds and the hotel proprietor at the company's favorite location started to kid him.

"Mr. Desmond," he said with mock seriousness, "will you have a room with a bed?"

But Desmond is a good kidder himself, and getting the drift of the conversation retorted promptly: "No, I'll take a bed with room."

Etiquette

A rancher and his son were dining in a down-town hotel when the son got into an argument with a stranger who called the boy an unpleasant name. The young fellow grabbed the table knife, but the father held him back.

"Haven't you got no table manners?" asked the old man.

"But, Pop, you heard what he called me, didn't you?"

"Yes, son, but that is no excuse for you forgetting your table manners. Put down that knife and go after him with your fork."

Nice Compliment

A visiting Frenchman and Chauncey Depew were chaffing each other about the different customs of their respective countries. "But tell me," argued the Frenchman, "why it is that in America your women kiss each other but the men don't? Now in my country the men also kiss each other."

"The reason, as we see it," replied Depew, "is that men have something better to kiss, and the women haven't."

Matter of Gender

At the Logan-street school the other day, the teacher asked a class of youngsters if they knew what a myth was.

Only one in the class volunteered an answer and his was:

"Please, teacher, a myth is a lady moth."

His Preference

Little Ling Kew, a small Chinese boy living in the up to date section of Hongkong, had been brought up in a family familiar with all the latest scientific devices and the best of medical attention.

Ling had many, many brothers and sisters and it was firmly fixed in his mind that every time his mother went to the hospital she returned with either another tiny brother or tiny sister to add to the already numerous offspring.

Little Ling himself had never been to the hospital until one day he fell down stairs and broke his arm. Then the American doctor ordered him taken to the hospital to have it set. As the doctor placed the little chap in his motor car the lad asked: "Must it be, do the Gods decree, that I go into the hospital?"

"Yes, my son," said the American doctor, "but worry not, as even your honorable mother can testify that it is a nice place and soon you will be all right again."

"But doctor," said little Ling Kew, "if I do have to go into the hospital, I do not want a baby—I would like a chow pup instead."

Gentle Hint

Representative Frank Foss said in Fitchburg the other day:

"The French press—not the French government—is showing a very nasty spirit toward America over the French war debts. The French press prints day after day, in a sanctimonious manner, stories of outrages and insults visited on Americans traveling in France.

"It is time we rebuked the French press—politely, of course, after the manner, say, of the Fitchburg host.

"This poor fellow was entertaining guests who didn't know when to leave. Twelve o'clock struck, then one, then two, and finally the Fitchburg host trned to his wife with a pleasant laugh, and said;

"'Hadn't we better get to bed, my dear? Our friends may want to be going.'"

Not Committed

"World Court utterances," said Senator Borah, "are nearly as brilliant as Casey's address at the teamsters' banquet. To climax his remarks Casey said:

"'The swatest mimeries in loife are the recollection of things forgotten.'"

The Harvest

At the Central Hall, Westminster, London, the audience, before the meeting began, was singing some lusty choruses. It was in the middle of one of them when the side door opened, and the speakers and other important persons streamed onto the platform.

There they were marshaled in their places by the busy secretary— "The Bishop of Omega will sit on the right of the Chairman—Sir Alpha Beta, will you come forward?" and so on; and while all this was proceeding, the particular chorus which the audience was singing with all their might and main was "Bring them in! Bring them in from the fields of sin!"

Lim Too Fancy

"Calling a spade a spade is a fad that has gone beyond all sensible limits," remarked George Ade recently. "It has been the excuse and the licence for much 'daring' conversation until most of it is obscene or silly.

"I often wonder what the garage man thought when one of these 'call a spade a spade' girls phoned and asked him to send her legosine?"

Made a Difference

Lynn Reynolds prides himself on his golf and finally persuaded Hoot Gibson to take up the game. After a little play, during which Reynolds had been generous with his instructions, he began to question Hoot to see if the lessons had been remembered.

"How do you address the ball?" asked Reynolds.

Hoot hesitated. "Do you mean before or after I try to hit it?"

Loved the Dirt

Selma Cohen had just engaged a new washerwoman and after explaining what there was to be done, added "My husband has a trick of writing his engagements on his shirt cuffs. I hope you don't mind."

"Shure an' that's all right," answered the washerwoman, "I loves a bit of scandal."

Strangers

The other day an extra man went up to the pay window at Warner Brothers and asked for his John.

"Your John!" exclaimed the cashier, "What do you mean by your John?"

"Well," said the extra, "I call it John because I don't get money often enough to call it Jack."

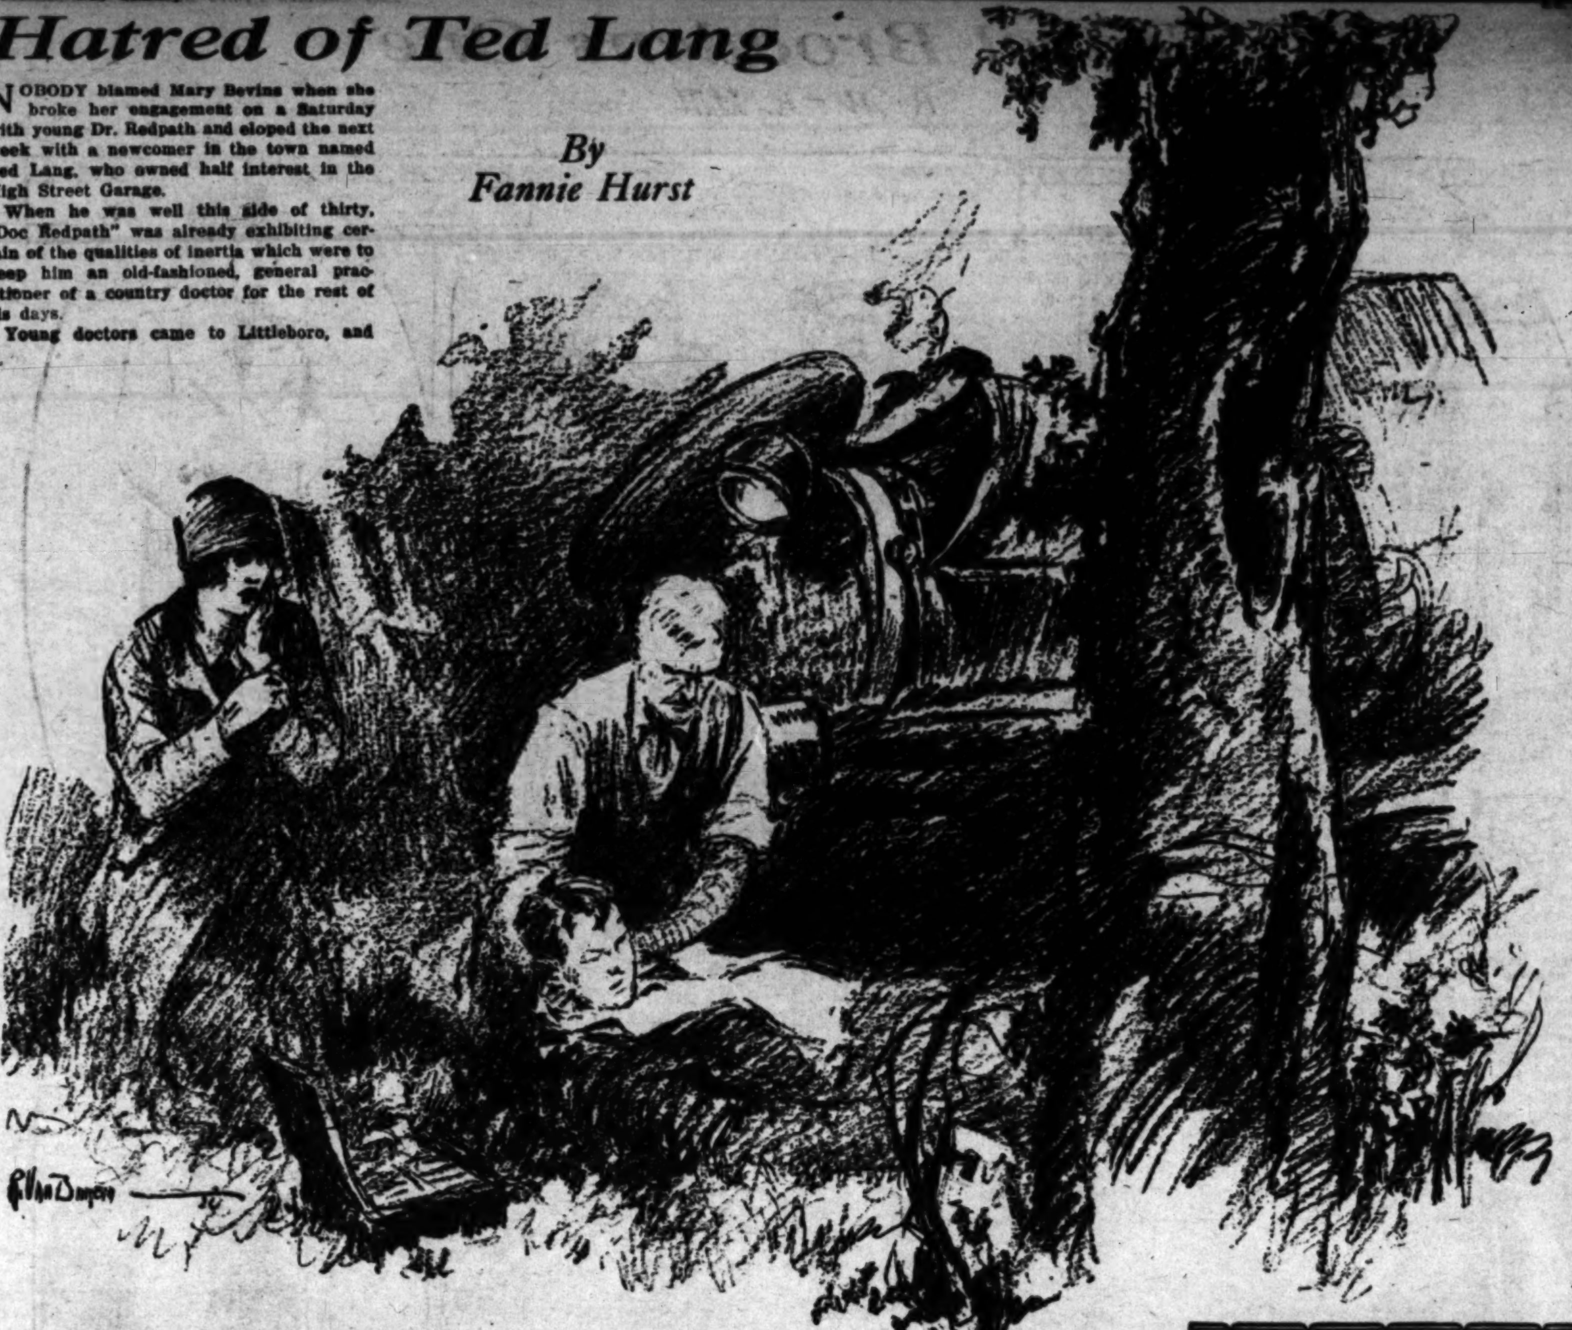
Hatred of Ted Lang

By Fannie Hurst



NOBODY blamed Mary Bevins when she broke her engagement on a Saturday with young Dr. Redpath and eloped the next week with a newcomer in the town named Ted Lang, who owned half interest in the High Street Garage.

When he was well this side of thirty, "Doc Redpath" was already exhibiting certain of the qualities of inertia which were to keep him an old-fashioned, general practitioner of a country doctor for the rest of his days.

Young doctors came to Littleboro, and young doctors left Littleboro, but Doc Redpath stayed on forever.

The age of specialization came in and Doc Redpath's generalization went on.

His sign over the drug store on High street had sagged on the same old broken hinge for the past fifteen years.

New medical blood had come to town. A modern city hospital, with a staff of young men from the East, had been built on the hill. The doctor in his gig had long since been superseded by the doctor in his runabout sedan.

And still Doc Redpath rumbled over the country roads in his dilapidated surrey. Brought the ninth and tenth baby into families where he had the whole brood to his credit. Held on to his old patrons. Developed a few more from the more conservative parts of town. Managed along somehow, a shabby, genial old bachelor of a country doctor who had never "got on."

His offices over the drug store were full of the smells of old dust, and none-too-carefully-stoppered disinfectants. No newfangled fixtures, uniformed nurse or card-index system. Just a front room papered in chocolate ochre with a golden oak desk in one corner, littered with medical papers, stethoscope, boxes and bottles, pills and tablets, and a leather swivel chair with the back gouged in by the doctor's long attitudes of lounging backward with his feet on the desk.

It was a curious paradox about "old Doc Redpath," as he came to be known about town long before he was old enough to warrant the appellation. The laziest man in three counties, indolent, inaccurate in his book keeping, improvident about money matters, the poorest collector in the medical lore of his region, he was nevertheless about the only doctor within a radius of a hundred miles who could invariably be counted on for night calls.

No medical ethics about it, either. Let the patient of one of his rivals call him at three a.m. after all other attempts to get a physician had failed, and without so much as a remonstrance, on went his boots.

The laziest man in three counties. No doubt of that. Mary Bevins had jilted him because, after repeated offenses, he left her standing one day on the stoop of Ingram's Ice Cream Parlor while he ambled off with a stable boy to set the wrist of another stable boy in Delahassie, five miles away, while Jessup, the doctor of that township, sat in the rear of the grocery store and played poker.

Mistaken philanthropy. Impracticable dreamer. Dangerous lack of stability. A life without system, ambition, achievement.

Ted had prospered. Ted loved her. They had a family and had moved to Wintringham, a prosperous town twenty-five miles away. Ted was president of the Chamber of Commerce and Mary, a dear, plump matron with yellow hair which she was always blowing out of her eyes by pursing her lips up, was president of the local literary society and drove her own car and had been to Europe one summer on an eight-week tour with her husband.

If there was one animosity in the world that Redpath had, and over which he had no control, that animosity was Ted Lang.

Redpath, in those first years of the pain of losing Mary, used to be afraid of that hate. Sometimes at night, lying in the little room that adjoined his cluttered office, that hatred rode absolutely red before the closed eyes of Redpath. It made him breathe short and press his finger nails up into his palms and then sometimes, alone there in the dark, cry the bitter, scalding tears of secret, stabbing pain.

If he passed them on the street together, Mary and her Ted, there was always between them a smile, a nod, a pleasantry. In fact he often dined at the Langs. Mary, inherently sweet and ungrudging, easily adaptable, as in love with Ted as she might have been with Redpath, fostered along the friendship diplomatically until they moved away to Wintringham.

In a way Redpath was glad when that happened. Not that it made him less conscious that there lived and breathed the man who was fortunate enough to own Mary, but at least there was no longer his corporeal person to behold, day by day, hurrying along High street, entering and leaving his prosperous garage, and an active part of the life of the community.

It hurt less, somehow, not to have to see it.

The sight of Ted, for instance, running up the front steps of the house they occupied in Littleboro was enough to cut Redpath in two like a knife. Lang going home—to Mary!

One morning, at three a.m., Redpath's telephone-bell rang. It was Mary. She and Ted, returning from a card-party at a country estate ten miles out of Wintringham, had skidded over into a ditch. Not a doctor thereabouts would answer his telephone. She was at a farmhouse calling and as she talked her voice kept slipping off into hysteria.

Ted was lying in a ditch. His head was doubled under him. There was only a horse and gig at the farm house and a miserable one at that. For God's sake, Redpath—come—quick—

At four o'clock, to the light of one match after another, held by Mary crouched there in the ditch beside him, Redpath performed the most precarious operation in the history of his practice. Performed what turned out to be one of the most precarious operations in the history of medicine. He set Ted Lang's broken neck! Ted Lang recovered. Ted Lang lived.

Sometimes at night, lying on his cot in the little room adjoining his office, or driving through the countryside to answer this or that emergency call, the old red hate would swim across the eyes of Redpath.

Hatred of Ted Lang.

the water. To me, flat on the ice, it looked like a mountain.

For fully two minutes it lay on top of the water, an inert mass, spying out the land. Finally it let go a long-held breath. A fountain of water shot into the air with a deafening noise. This was the signal for lightning activity among the crew.

Two men snatched harpoon-bombs and fired. Others grabbed the floaters and reloads. The oomiak was in the water and every man in his place without a lost motion. I was snatched up and thrust into a seat. A paddle mysteriously appeared out of thin air in my hands. In a terse whisper from behind came the command, "Paddle like hell!"

Then the bombs exploded and a monstrous fluke appeared and went down straight in front of us. Next we were floating idly over the very spot where it had disappeared.

The ruffled water slowly calmed. I risked breathing and let my paddle down from mid-air, where I was abstractedly holding it. The harpooner stood rigid in the bow of the canoe. My heart thumped in my ears like a cannon going off.

In the dead silence, the ticking of the trader's watch sounded like an automobile. We drifted idly with the current and waited and watched.

I did not know whether I wanted the whale to come up again or not. Before I could decide, my eardrums were almost split by a terrific fusilade from the ice. All the crew not in the beat were running and firing, as they ran, at a white object back of us. We whirled around and paddled furiously toward the white excitement.

It dived under and around us. It was a beluga whale, with a few rifleholes in it by this time. The bullets continued to spatter about us. Each time the wounded animal came up, it got a harpoon in it somewhere. Finally one of the lines held, and we towed our victim back and heaved it out on the ice.

I saw at least twenty bullet-holes in its once spotless hide. Eskimos are not what men call good sportsmen. They never let one good shot manage the kill. They love shooting and stop only when their ammunition is exhausted.

Reaction set in by this time, and I discovered that I was tired. I walked slowly back to the tent and rolled up in a pile of skins.

I slept a few hours and awoke refreshed. My toilet consisted of getting to my feet and shaking myself. Then I made my way back to the edge of the ice. My former ancient enemies, who were now my best friends, accepted my tobacco and ate some of the food I had carried with me for Jim.

By the end of my fourth day on the ice my grub-box was empty. I made two meals from boiled whale skin, tea and hardtack. My circulation was getting slow and my clothing becoming damp. I was loath to leave the camp, however, because I hoped ardently for the appearance of another whale.

On the night between the fourth and fifth, there was not a breath of air. The water was as calm as a mill-pond. Jim informed me that I might move around and make as much noise as I wished, since no whale would ever come up during that kind of weather. In fact, he thought the run of whales was over.

My opportunity to assist in the capture of a bowhead seemed to be about over. I made preparations for departure, listening carefully to everybody's advice as to what to do in case of a storm or any other untoward event. No trouble was expected, since the weather continued cold and I had nine well-fed dogs and an empty sled.

Nothing can check the first mad spurt of a frisky dog-team. I loosened one hand and waved hazardous farewells as we caromed wildly around the jagged ice. "Eee-yi-yi-yi-shouted Kiasik. "Eee-yi-yi-yi-yi," I echoed.

By the time we reached the large crack from which we had first sighted the trader's flag, we had calmed down considerably. We passed over in decent orderliness. Then we traveled along the side of the lead two or three miles. It had grown perceptibly wider since we had crossed it a few days before.

We were now following the old trail through the rough ice, and I could ride only a few feet at a stretch. Meanwhile I cast apprehensive eyes at the ever-widening lead. It cut the old packice in two clean sections.

The trail coiled in and out along its steep, evil-looking, black side. I shuddered every time we slithered along the edge.

Kiasik suddenly pointed out moving slush-ice in the lead. That meant a current. I did not attach much significance to it; for I was uneducated in ice-lore. A little later Kiasik stopped on the top of an ice peak and surveyed the country. My eyes saw nothing unusual.

After twenty minutes of silent study Kiasik turned to me and announced, "Ice moving." "Yes," I stupidly agreed with him, seeing no reason to get excited. He then pointed all around with graphic gestures, which at last I comprehended. "You mean we are on moving ice?" I gasped. "Eeh-eh-eh," he assented.

A horrified thrill shot through me. We were on the moving side of the ice—and the lead separated us from the stationary side! Stunned, I clung to the sled while we scampered down from the elevation and came out on the edge of the lead. There we saw a recent trail. But it was hopeless for us to try to cross; the lead was fully thirty feet wide.

We spent the next hour and a half in traveling back over our route. We got as far as the crack, only to find that it had opened too wide for a sled to bridge it. We followed along its entire length, until it joined open water. We now knew conclusively that we were on a moving ice-floe. I was very much frightened and worried by this time.

The only thing left was to retrace our steps and head for Ookeruksuk's camp near the other end of the ice-floe. We estimated that the piece of ice we were on was about ten or twelve miles long and perhaps two miles wide.

Its movement was so slow as to be scarcely discernible to the eye. Unless the wind grew stronger or the ice broke in another place, we should be able to travel at a greater speed toward Ookeruksuk's camp than the ice was traveling away from it.

But the memory of the next ten hours is the most nightmarish out of my years in the Arctic. There was no level piece of ice the size of two square feet. The sled was never simultaneously on both runners from the time it left Attoyuk's trail.

I could not keep up with the dogs. I climbed and slipped, fell and crawled, disappeared into crevices from which I thought I should never extricate myself.

A short time after, I became snowblind and could no longer distinguish space from ice. It was impossible to ride on the sled, of course. I should have had my brains dashed out in a few moments. I groped and staggered along behind the gradually weakening dogs.

I fell a number of times and had to lie a long while before I could get up. Kiasik waited and helped me, but finally he imself, as his leg unexpectedly sank hip-deep in a soft, snow-covered spot, sprained one knee and was less able to come to my rescue.

Once, I fell, spraining both wrists, and refused to move. I was blind and dizzy. My entire body was one agonized ache. It seemed the will of Providence that I should lie there, at the bottom of a sharp piece of ice, and die. I closed my eyes, and lapsed into unconsciousness.

I came back to earth protestingly. Kiasik was shaking me. I tried to fight him off, but he, poor boy, clung to me and shook and shook. "Tuvvra, tuvvra! Flag, flag!" he kept repeating. "There, there over there is the flagpole of Ookeruksuk!" I could not see, but I believed him. I staggered up out of the hole and dragged myself along.

Since everything must end some time, we came to the end of the ice—after an eon or two. We had spent just eighteen hours in getting from the trader's camp to our present position. Opposite was Ookeruksuk's camp.

Kiasik fired his gun a dozen times before he received a response from the camp. The lead here was about an eighth of a mile wide. The Eskimos were some time in discovering what we wanted, but at last they launched their canoe and paddled over.

As the two natives who manned the canoe stared at me, their faces broke into millions of smiling wrinkles. They considered it a good joke that I had come out to the whaling grounds. "Hello, white woman!" they called cheerfully. The white woman waved a feeble reply. Then, while I rested quietly, Kiasik, recounted our adventures.

After the nine dogs, the sled, the three natives and I had been ferried across in the comiak, I shook hands with the rest of Ookeruksuk's crew and crept into his tent to rest. The sled and the harness were mended, and I accepted something to eat. I do not know what it was, but I suspect that it was seal-blood soup. It was hot and I drank it gratefully.

Ookeruksuk warned us that the ice was liable to break again at any time and that we had better hurry, since we still had about thirty-five miles of hard going to reach the village. He himself was prepared to move in a second. We listened carefully to his directions and began the last lap of our journey.

While Kiasik rested his knee, I drove the team. I made no pretense of guiding the sled but just hung on and snapped the whip occasionally.

I turned around and said something to Kiasik, and, as I did so, my eyes beheld the sides of the "lake." I gave one shuddering gasp and closed them. I opened them and looked again. The ice was undulating like the top of a wheat field.

"Kiasik, what is that?" I quavered. "Do you see what I see?"

"Ye-es, thin ice," he drawled nonchalantly.

Young ice! Thin ice! No wonder the dogs were pulling like demons. For once in their pugnacious lives they pulled together without a word from the driver. Every dog in the team know what I had not known until that moment; namely, that we were on thin ice and that, if we stopped we should crash through.

Moments passed and nothing happened. I began cautiously to test my breathing-apparatus again. Kiasik had calmly lighted one of my cigarettes. Then his voice sang out threateningly, and I heard the ominous rattle of his whip. I breathed a sigh of relief, knowing that we were off the thin ice at last!

Those last few miles seemed the longest I had ever traveled. I had been just nine days out from the village and during that time had had nothing but cat-naps and very little food. I closed my eyes and dozed fitfully. When next I awoke, the sled was drawn up on the snowdrift on top of my shanty. The natives swarmed around me. Though my breath had turned to chunks of ice on my face and hood, I made an effort to answer their shy, friendly smiles with a frozen smile of my own. During my absence my shanty had been drifted over. En masse, the villagers dug a tunnel down to my door.

Then the only white woman in the world ever to visit a whaling-camp far out on the arctic icepack climbed stiffly down the snow steps to her shanty, closed the door and did the only thing in the world she could have done at that moment. She went to sleep.

hundred and twenty-five every week. With what remained of his rapidly increasing income he paid his most pressing debts, and then the less pressing, until the day came when he didn't owe anybody anything. He celebrated that day by shoving a hundred dollars away in a savings account—the first savings account he had ever had in his life.

He came home all aglow one night because that day he had sold two Hurstwood Eights, making his record for the week six cars. He had earned eighteen hundred dollars in one week. He had a thousand dollars in cash in his pocket.

He burst in on Linda as she was dressing for dinner.

"Look," he said, throwing hundred-dollar bills on her dressing table. "It's yours. It's yours to do anything you like with. I've got more. And I don't owe a cent."

"Oh," she said, "you've won. You've won. And I'm so sorry I did—I did—what I did to you."

"Good Heavens!" Hhrry said. "I never felt better in my life. If you've done anything to me, you've put me on my feet."

"I was trying to help you get on your feet," she wept, "but I'm so sorry I did it the way I did. Perhaps if I'd just been more loving, it would—would have worked just as well and I wouldn't have lost you."

"Lost me!" Harry cried. "Lost me!"

He put one hand on each shoulder and held her away from him, held her so he could look into her eyes. "Why Linda," he said, "you've got me for the first time—if you want me."

"You mean," she said, "that you still love me?"

The tears came to his eyes.

"I love you," he said solemnly. "But you certainly convinced me you had no use for me."

"How?"

"Encouraging me to play around with Doris so hard. And you weren't jealous. You weren't the least bit jealous."

"Wasn't jealous!" she cried. "I was crazily jealous. You can't tell me you weren't in love with her."

"I don't know whether I was in love with her or not," Harry said honestly. "I only know that I love you now. And if you'll just play with me once in a while, I'll ask nothing more of the world."

She flung herself into his arms.

"Of course I'll play with you—now," she cried.

She turned and began to gather up the bills. She cried recklessly, "Let's take the whole thousand and go on a party. What do we care about money!"

THE VIGIL

By W. W. Jacobs

"I'M THE happiest man in the world," said Mr. Farrer, in accents of dreamy tenderness.

Miss Ward sighed. "Wait till father comes in," she said.

Mr. Farrer peered through the plants which formed a welcome screen to the window and listened with some uneasiness. He was waiting for the firm, springy step that should herald the approach of Ex-Sergt.-Maj. Ward. A squeeze of Miss Ward's hand renewed his courage.

"Perhaps I had better light the lamp," said the girl, after a long pause, "I wonder where mother's got to?"

"She's on my side, at any rate," said Mr. Farrer.

"Poor mother!" said the girl. "She daren't call her soul her own. I expect she's sitting in her bedroom with the door shut. She hates unpleasantness. And there's sure to be some."

"So do I," said the young man, with a slight shiver. "But why should there be any? He doesn't want you to keep single all your life, does he?"

"He'd like me to marry a soldier," said Miss Ward. "He says that the young men of the present day are too soft. The only thing he thinks about is courage and strength."

She rose and, placing the lamp on the table, removed the chimney, and then sought round the room for the matches. Mr. Farrer, who had two boxes in his pocket, helped her.

They found a box at last on the mantelpiece, and Mr. Farrer steadied her by placing one arm round her waist while she lit the lamp. A sudden exclamation from outside reminded them that the blind was not yet drawn, and they sprang apart in dismay as a grizzled and upright old warrior burst into the room and confronted them.

"Pull that blind down!" he roared. "Not you," he continued, as Mr. Farrer hastened to help. "What do you mean by embracing my daughter? Eh? Why don't you answer?"

"We—we are going to be married," said Mr. Farrer, trying to speak boldly.

The sergeant-major drew himself up, and the young man gazed in dismay at a chest which seemed as though it would never cease expanding.

"Married!" exclaimed the sergeant-major, with a grim laugh. "Married to a little tame bunny-rabbit! Not if I know it. Where's your mother?" he demanded, turning to the girl.

"Upstairs," was the reply.

Her father raised his voice, and a nervous reply came from above. A minute later Mrs. Ward, pale of cheek, entered the room.

"Here's fine goings-on!" said the sergeant-major sharply. "I go for a little walk, and when I come back this—this infernal cockroach has got its arm round my daughter's waist. Why don't you look after her? Do you know anything about it?"

His wife shook her head.

"Five feet four and about thirty round the chest, and wants to marry my daughter!" said the sergeant-major, with a sneer. "Eh? What's that? What did you say? What?"

"I said that's a pretty good size for a cockroach," murmured Mr. Farrer, defiantly. "Besides, size isn't everything. If it was, you'd be a general instead of only a sergeant-major."

"You get out of my house," said the other, as soon as he could get his breath. "Go on! Sharp with it."

"I'm going," said the modified Mr. Farrer. "I'm sorry if I was rude. I came on purpose to see you tonight. Bertha—Miss Ward, I mean—told me your ideas, but I couldn't believe her. I said you'd got more common sense than to object to a man just because he wasn't a soldier."

"I want a man for a son-in-law," said the other. "I don't say he's got to be a soldier."

"Just so," said Mr. Farrer. "You're a man, ain't you? Well, I'll do anything that you'll do."

"Phh!" said the sergeant-major. "I've done my little lot. I've been in action four times, and wounded in three places. That's my tally."

"The colonel said once that my husband doesn't know what fear is," said Mrs. Ward, timidly. "He's afraid of nothing."

"Except ghosts," remarked her daughter, softly.

"Hold your tongue, miss," said her father, twisting his mustache. "No sensible man is afraid of what doesn't exist."

"A lot of people believe they do, though," said Mr. Farrer, breaking in. "I heard the other night that old Smith's ghost has been seen again swinging from the apple tree. Three people have seen it."

"Rubbish!" said the sergeant-major.

"Maybe," said the young man; "but I'll bet you, Mr. Ward, for all your courage, that you won't go up there alone at twelve o'clock one night to see."

"I thought I ordered you out of my house just now," said the sergeant-major, glaring at him.

"Going into action," said Mr. Farrer, pausing at the door, "is one thing—you have to obey orders and you can't help yourself; but going to a lonely cottage two miles off to see the ghost of a man that hanged himself is another."

"Do you mean to say I'm afraid?" blustered the other.

Mr. Farrer shook his head. "I don't say anything," he remarked; "but even a cockroach does a bit of thinking sometimes."

"Perhaps you'd like to go," said the sergeant-major.

"I don't mind," said the young man; "and perhaps you'll think a little better of me, Mr. Ward, if I do what you're afraid to do—"

Mrs. Ward and her daughter flung themselves hastily between the sergeant-major and his intended sacrifice. Mr. Farrer, pale but determined, stood his ground.

"I'll dare you to go up and spend a night there alone," he said.

"I'll dare you," said the incensed warrior, weakly.

"All right; I'll spend Wednesday night there," said Mr. Farrer, "and I'll come round on Thursday and let you know how I got on."

"I dare say," said the other; "but I don't want you here, and, what's more, I won't have you. You can go to Smith's cottage on Wednesday at twelve o'clock if you like, and I'll go up any time between twelve and three and make sure you're there. D'ye understand? I'll show you whether I'm afraid or not."

"There's no reason for you to be afraid," said Mr. Farrer. "I shall be there to protect you. That's very different to being there alone, as I shall be. But, of course, you can go up the next night by yourself, and wait for me, if you like. If you like to prove your courage, I mean."

"When I want to be ordered about," said the sergeant-major, in a magnificent voice, "I'll let you know. Now go, before I do anything I might be sorry for afterward."

He stood at the door, erect as a ramrod, and watched the young man up the road. His conversation at the supper table that night related almost entirely to puppy dogs and the best way of training them.

He kept a close eye upon his daughter for the next day or two, but human nature has its limits. He tried to sleep one afternoon in his easy chair with one eye open, but the exquisite silence maintained by Miss Ward was too much for it. A hum of perfect contempt arose from the feature below, and five mintues later Miss Ward was speeding in search of Mr. Farrer.

"I had to come, Ted," she said breathlessly, "because tomorrow's Wednesday. I've got something to tell you, but I don't know whether I ought to."

"Tell me and let me decide," said Mr. Farrer, tenderly.

"I—I'm afraid you might be frightened," said the girl. "I won't tell you, but I'll give you a hint. If you see anything awful, don't be frightened."

Mr. Farrer stroked her hand. "The only thing I'm afraid of is your father," he said, softly.

"Oh!" said the girl, clasping her hands together. "You have guessed it."

"Guessed it?" said Mr. Farrer.

Miss Ward nodded. "I happened to pass his door this morning," she said, in a low voice. "It was open a little way, and he was standing up and measuring one of mother's nightgowns against his chest. I couldn't think what he was doing it for at first."

Mr. Farrer whistled and his face hardened.

"That's not fair play," he said at last. "All right; I'll be ready for him."

"He doesn't like to be put in the wrong," said Miss Ward. "He wants to prove that you haven't got any courage. He'd be disappointed if he found you had."

"All right," said Mr. Farrer again. "You're an angel for coming to tell me."

"Father would call me something else, I expect," said Miss Ward, with a smile. "Good-by, I want to get back before he wakes up."

She was back in her chair, listening to her father's slumbers, half an hour before he awoke.

"I'm making up for tomorrow night," he said, opening his eyes suddenly.

His daughter nodded.

"Shows strength of will," continued the sergeant-major, amiably. "Wellington could go to sleep at any time by just willing it. I'm the same way, I can go to sleep at five minutes' notice."

"It's a very useful gift," said Miss Ward, piously, "very."

Mr. Ward had two naps the next day. He awoke from the second at twelve-thirty a.m., and in a somewhat disagreeable frame of mind rose and stretched himself. The house was very still. He took a small brown-paper parcel from behind the sofa and, extinguishing the lamp, put on his cap and opened the front door.

If the house was quiet, the little street seemed dead. He closed the door softly and stepped into the darkness. In terms which would have been understood by "our Army in Flanders" he execrated the forefathers, the name, and the upbringing of Mr. Edward Farrer.

Not a soul in the streets; not a light in a window. He left the little town behind, passed the last isolated house on the road, and walked into the greater blackness of a road between tall hedges. He had put on canvas shoes with rubber soles, for the better surprise of Mr. Farrer, and his own progress seemed to partake of a ghostly nature.

Every ghost story he had ever heard or read crowded into his memory. For the first time in his experience even the idea of the company of Mr. Farrer seemed better than no company at all.

The night was so dark that he nearly missed the turning that led to the cottage. For the first few yards he had almost to feel his way; then, with a greater yearning than ever for the society of Mr. Farrer, he straightened his back and marched swiftly and noiselessly toward the cottage.

It was a small, tumble-down place, set well back in an overgrown garden. The sergeant-major came to a halt just before reaching the gate, and, hidden by the hedge, unfastened his parcel and shook out his wife's best nightgown.

He got it over his head with some difficulty, and, with his arms in the sleeves, tried in vain to get his big hands through the small, lace-trimmed wristbands. Despite his utmost efforts he could only get two or three fingers through, and after a vain search for his cap, which had fallen off in the struggle, he made his way to the gate and stood there waiting. It was at this moment that the thought occurred to him that Mr. Farrer might have failed to keep the appointment.

His knees trembled slightly and he listened anxiously for any sound from the house. He rattled the gate, and, standing with white arms outstretched, waited. Nothing happened. He shook it again, and then, pulling himself together, opened it and slipped into the garden. As he did so a large bough which lay in the center of the footpath thoughtfully drew on one side to let him pass.

Mr. Ward stopped suddenly and, with his gaze fixed on the bough, watched it glide over the grass until it was swallowed up in the darkness. His own ideas of frightening Mr. Farrer were forgotten, and in a dry, choking voice he called loudly upon the name of that gentleman.

He called two or three times, with no re-

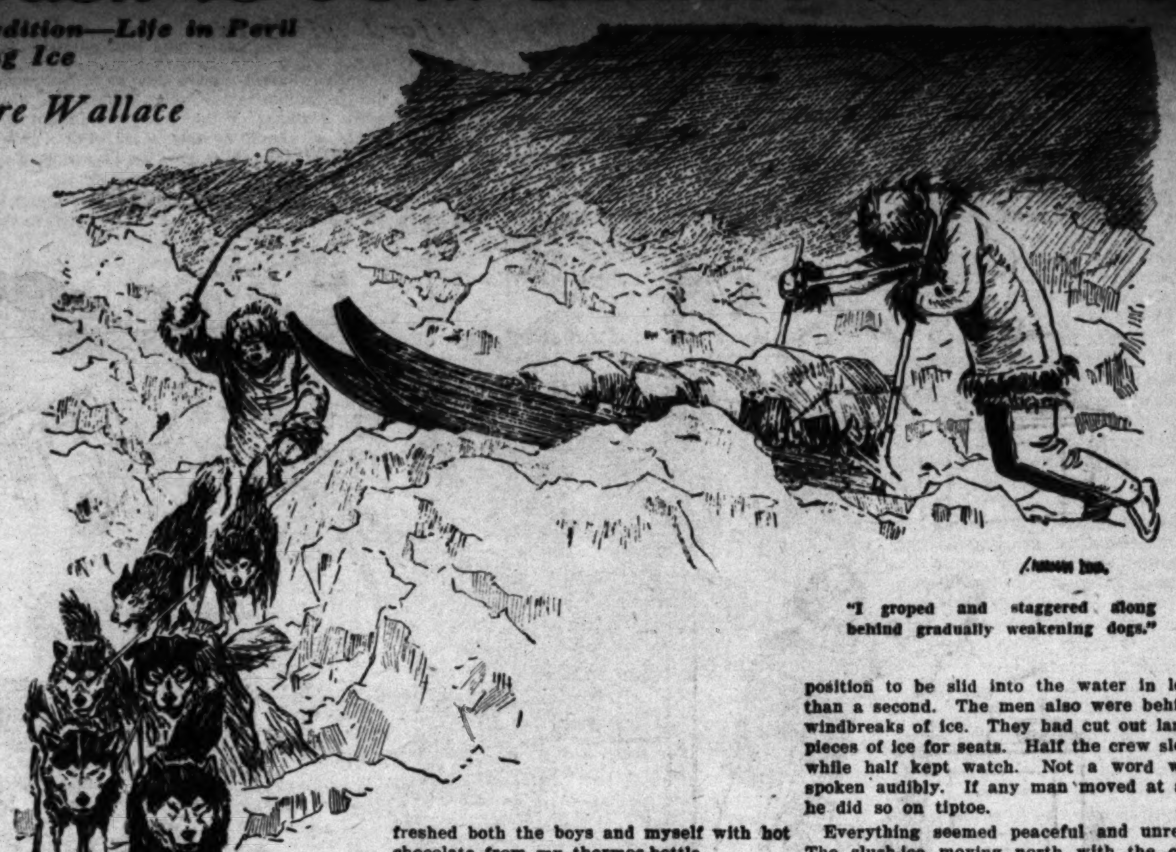
A Girl's Dash to Join Eskimo Whalers

An Arctic Bowhead Expedition—Life in Peril on Drifting Ice

By Edna Claire Wallace



"I groped and staggered along behind gradually weakening dogs."

[Note: Her interest in primitive human beings and her zest for adventure led Edna Claire Wallace into the bleak and bitterly cold polar region. For it was to study the Eskimos that she first thought of going to the Arctic, not realizing then that, if she wished to see anything of the natives, she would have to "winter in." The village where Miss Wallace made her headquarters and from which she set forth on the perilous journey described in this article, is nineteen degrees south of the north pole, and has a floating population of about one hundred and fifty. There she was cut off from the outside world for several months.—Editor.]

JIM, the trader in the Arctic village where I lived, is the only white man along the whole coast of Alaska who still makes a business of whaling each spring. Twenty-five or thirty years ago, the whaling of the Arctic Ocean ranked among the most important industries of the world.

Between twenty and sixty ships and about six hundred men wintered annually around Herschel Island. Today there is no trace of this formerly thriving industry except a few half-breed whaling-camps scattered here and there.

I have listened by the hour to Jim's tales of the old whaling-days. Jim had been shanghaied from a dock in San Francisco many years before and carried far north on a whaler. Two years later his ship was crushed in the ice off Point Hope.

With thirty-eight companions he started to mush over the ice toward Point Hope. He was one of the four who reached the sand-spit. Afterward he married a native woman, and the land of eternal winds and perpetual snows has been his home ever since.

During the long winter I tugged with the idea of going whaling with his crew in the spring. It met with no success. The Eskimo old-timers who comprised the crew would have nothing of a woman in their camp.

Though they were all Christianized and professed no further belief in old superstitions, they were quite sure that whales had an incurable antipathy to women and were mysteriously driven away by the presence of the boot-chewing sex. Beyond telling me of the hardships involved in whaling, which I should not be able to live through, the trader himself was neutral.

I stubbornly maintained that whatever would sustain life for an Eskimo would be sufficient for me. The discussion always ended in a draw. The trader politely evaded giving me his promise to take me, and I refrained from pressing the issue.

In the meantime I made a few more sled and reindeer journeys to isolated native settlements. The weather was truly awful during this period. I was lost in blizzards, forced to live in snow houses off dog-food, had various members of my body frozen and suffered all the hard but not uncommon experiences of dog travelers in the land of the Eskimo. But from each of these jaunts I returned, emaciated, filthy, and weary, it is true, but wiser in Arctic ways.

During April the weather seemed to be the worst of the entire year. Blizzards raged incessantly. The wind blew a full gale every day. The average temperature for this month was forty degrees below zero. The nights were now light, of course, and, like the natives, I had no regular time for sleeping.

One day the thermometer threatened to break itself by registering fifty-eight degrees below. The morning after, when I climbed out of my shanty at about four o'clock, the sun was shining clear and brilliant with two exquisite sun-dogs on each side. This beautiful phenomenon always occurs in the very coldest weather, usually between midnight and four in the morning. I enjoyed the fairy spectacle as long as my eyes could stand the glitter.

Some of the villagers ran to me now and pointed across the sea-ice. I looked and tried to understand what they meant. I finally became aware of a long dark cloud far out over the ice.

Gradually its meaning dawned upon me. It was a water-cloud! There was open water at last! The ice had broken and whaling would soon start. I made my way across to Jim's to have the inevitable discussion. As usual, I lost, and the whalers set off to establish their camp without me.

The last day of May, shortly after midnight, I was standing on the snow-drift on top of my shanty. This was my favorite perch for keeping abreast of village activities. The day was beautiful, with a touch of spring in the air. There was no sun, but the thermometer stood, at twenty above zero. The wind was soft from the southeast.

I saw a sled, which I judged to be the trader's, approaching from the ice. An hour later, when the sled had arrived, the trader's assistant, Kiasik, came to me to borrow my dogs. He had to return to camp at once, and some of his dogs would have to rest. I promised him the dogs.

The sled was already loaded to the limit, and my heart fell as I saw that there was no room for me. I swept the village again and saw a team being assembled in front of Angushuk's igloo.

I dashed over and found that it was headed for the whaling-camp in charge of Nookik, a young boy.

Here was my chance! This boy was a wild Eskimo from the reindeer herds. He could not speak a word of English and almost perished from timidity and embarrassment in my presence. He was as clay in my hands.

With the assistance of Kiasik as interpreter, I bribed the poor youth with tobacco, chewing-gum, candy, and—manna from the gods—a can of sweet potatoes! I silenced the objectives of a horde of his female relatives by giving them a sack of flour and a couple of pounds of sugar.

Before they had time to think up any more protests and while their heads were still dizzy with the flour-and-sugar idea, I marshaled the team up to my shanty. With gestures I showed the dazzled Nookik what I wanted packed.

Then I dressed for the trail, discarding every scrap of civilized apparel and garbing myself completely like an Eskimo woman. This outfit somewhat resembles pajamas with a hood. In only a few seconds I was ready for the great adventure.

We swept up to the trader's door for a final look at his thermometer and barometer. The entire village lined the drift. I waved my farewells at those who had come to see me off, but most of them were too much awed to answer.

For the first few miles the trail was well worn and in spots quite smooth. Where the new ice joined the old pack, the going was rougher. We were finally in the thick of the old pack and had to travel many weary miles over rough ice. It was no longer possible to ride. At seven we stopped for a brief rest at the ice igloo built by the hunters. I opened my grub-box and refreshed both the boys and myself with hot chocolate from my thermos-bottle.

About noon we came to a lead. It had widened, Kiasik said, since he had crossed it twenty hours before. It was now eighteen feet in width, just the length of the trader's sled. The boys threw down into the water large pieces of ice to serve as stepping stones.

I removed my outside fur shirt, made a run and two hops and landed safely on the other side. That lead was only about ten fathoms deep, straight down between solid walls of ice. But when Eliza has to cross the ice, she generally does so; she just shuts her eyes and jumps.

We traveled steadily all the afternoon, making two stops to rest and to eat. Around seven o'clock in the evening we saw the trader's flag from a high piece of ice on the other side of a large crack. The dogs, scenting camp, which means the end of the day and something to eat, put forth a final burst of speed.

We dashed around a large boulder of ice and came out on a level expanse at the end of which was the trader's big tent, pitched as snugly as if it were in a sylvan glade. Smoke curled from the tent, but no one was in sight. We pulled open the flap and found three of the crew rolled in skins. They opened their eyes wide at sight of me and burst into laughter. One old fellow rolled over on his back and kicked his feet in the air in uncontrolled merriment.

Twenty-two hours I had been on the trail, and most of that time had been spent in jogging. I flopped on a skin for a sadly needed rest, motioning to every one to help himself to my peace offering of tobacco. Each one took his exact share. I was sure to be popular as long as this particular chewing-tobacco lasted.

After resting for a half-hour, I sought the trail to the edge of the ice. The tent was pitched about a quarter or a half-mile back from the water, so that no noise would reach the ears of a possible whale. Every little sound is telegraphed underneath the ice and is magnified as it travels. It is said that a whale feeding ten miles away can distinguish sounds made by human beings.

Half-way along the path I met Jim. His greeting was typical. "My God!" he roared. "What in the name of heaven are you doing here?" He did not know whether to laugh or swear. I trotted back to the tent to help him get something to eat.

Between bites of the frozen raisin pie and the roasted ptarmigan that I had brought out, he ranted about what would happen to me if the ice broke and we had to take to the canoe. The point was that, in sudden danger, the crew have to abandon the camp, including dogs and everything else, and live in the canoe until they can reach safety. It would be rather hard for a woman.

The camp was quite shipshape. The oomiak was concealed behind a shield of ice, in position to be slid into the water in less than a second. The men also were behind windbreaks of ice. They had cut out large pieces of ice for seats. Half the crew slept while half kept watch. Not a word was spoken audibly. If any man moved at all, he did so on tiptoe.

Everything seemed peaceful and unreal. The slush-ice moving north with the current made friendly little noises beside me. My eyes closed, and my weary body relaxed without a struggle.

How long I slept I do not know. Some one was shaking me gently. It was my genial companion, Itkelerik. I opened my eyes, but otherwise did not stir. Directly in my line of vision a long gray something was slowly easing itself to the surface of the water without a ripple. I held my breath as the hump of a monstrous bowhead gradually emerged.

There was not a sound nor a motion from the group behind the ice screens. Every eye was riveted upon the increasing bulk of the whale. It loomed up bigger and bigger. Hearing no sound and seeing nothing unusual, it heaved its huge body half out of

Out of the Night

By F. Britten Austin

GEORGE FLEMING was waiting for me on the platform as the train ran into Falmouth Station—six foot of honest simplicity attired in a dirty sweater, a pair of disgraceful trousers, unevenly turned-up, and a battered pair of black shoes.

"Jolly good of you to come, Dickie," he said, making me wince with his hand-grip. "I hope you won't be bored to death."

"Not a bit of it," I answered cheerily. I don't pretent to be much of a yachtsman—though I may say I looked the part far more than George—but I had jumped at his invitation to a couple of weeks 'knocking about' in Cornish waters. There is nothing better for city-jaded nerves than a rest-cure on a smart little yacht with a couple of hands or so to do all the rough work. "I've been looking forward to it."

Handing over my suit case to a zealous small boy, my friend and I set out for the waterside, as we walked, I took stock of him. I had not seen him since last winter. My sister had got hold of him then, and, privately announcing her determination to civilize him, had lured him to several dances where he had presented a figure of pitiably uncouth and tongue-tied misery. I remembered that she had startled us to ribald laughter by an alleged discovery that he was "head over heels" in love with some friend of hers—what was her name?—some Irish girl. It was absurd, of course. George was the sort of fellow that can't look at a woman without getting red in the face. My reading of it was right. There had been nothing in it. The girl had gone back to Ireland, and George—we had rather lost sight of George. He was evasively reticent when I asked him what he had been doing with himself all the year. He had been "just pottering about" up and down the coast. We arrived at the quay.

"There she is!" he exclaimed, pointing to a small, dingy-sided craft, with what appeared to be a wireless aerial mounted on sticklike extensions of her two masts. She was moored to a buoy out among a flotilla of dainty yachts. "There's the Eileen—the one painted black." My heart went down with a bump.

"Why," I said with a ghastly attempt at jollity, "she's a regular liner—wireless and all! That's wireless, isn't it?"

"Yes," he answered. "One of my hobbies, you know. I meant to have taken it down but I had to be ashore pretty sharp this morning to get the stores in. Can't sail with the thing up, you know—gets horribly in the way."

"Oh," I remarked, (we were now walking along the quay to where a small boy in a dinghy was waving to us,) "you don't use it at sea, then?"

"Good Lord, no! I only rig it up when you're all snugged down." (George's speech was apt to lapse into horribly clumsy antitheses, typical of him, somehow.) "I like to listen-in at night, you know, and hear all that's going on—concerts and all sorts of things. Makes life heaps more cheery. It gets a bit dull sometimes all by one's self."

I stopped him on that quayside.

"George," I said, in alarm, "you don't mean to say you sail that yacht alone?"

He laughed. "Of course I do!" he replied. "You didn't expect a skipper and a crew, did you? It's doing things by yourself that makes the fun of it. You'll soon see."

My conception of fun differed. But there was no help for it now and I refrained from comment. A few minutes later, I had lowered myself gingerly into the dinghy where a small boy had sat sentry over an immense assortment of parcels, and George was sculling me out into the harbor.

"Here we are! Catch hold!" I grabbed at a rope hanging over the yacht's side. "Up you go!" By an incredible feat of gymnastics, I scrabbled on board. "Stand by for the parcels!" He handed them up to me—followed himself. "Now then, we'll just stow all this gear and then"—he burst into cacophonous song. "A life on the ocean wave—a life on the ocean wave!" His high spirits were a hideous mockery of my own.

"You never could sing, George," I remarked, by way of giving myself some sort of revenge.

He did not hear me. He had dived down the small companion into the cabin. "Sling 'em all down to me, my lad!" he shouted out. "That's the idea!" He encouraged me boisterously as I passed down the stores. For a minute or two, he rummaged about below, and then he called to me. "Come and have a look round, Dickie." I squirmed down half-a-dozen steps and hit my head on the hatch. "Pretty snug, isn't it?"

The man who invented the word—"snug" had a genius for tact. It is a charming way of saying that one is confoundedly cramped. There was a screwed-down table in the center of the cabin, allowing one just space enough to slither round to an upholstered seat on each side. "Good head-room, isn't there?—when the hatch is up," he said cheerily. I thought there might be. "It's up now, of course, he explained, and that illusion was dispelled.

"What's that?" I asked, pointing to what looked like a closed desk against the forward bulkhead.

"Oh, that's my wireless set—built it myself," he said. "Show it you tonight. Haven't got time now. All hands on deck! —and let's get clear of this confounded harbor!"

For the next few minutes I felt horribly in the way as George busied himself with the tangle of ropes on deck. In an amazingly short time, the wireless was stowed, the jib and mizzen set, and then, almost before I had realized what was happening, we had cast off our mooring and George shouted to me to go to the tiller while he hauled up the main-sail. We began to move through the water.

"Topping breeze, isn't it?" said George, as he came aft and took the tiller from me. "I hate creeping out in a dead calm. It's a paraffin motor and stinks infernally."

"You've got an auxiliary engine, then?"

"Yes. Jolly useful, you know, sometimes. It's under there," he said, indicating with his foot a closed hatch just in front of the tiller. "Look out for the boom! I'm going to tack."

I dodged to avoid the boom of the mainsail as the Eileen came up to the wind and heeled smartly to her new course. She curtseyed prettily to the sparkling waves.

The magnificent Cornish scenery slid away behind us, was soon but a background painted on the lower edge of the blue sky. The day was delightful, and that dusk saw us creeping toward a little cove at the other side of the Lizard, where George said we should be snug against anything short of a westerly gale. The wind had gone down with the sun, and we had to use the motor to arrive at our anchorage.

The steak and onions over which, a little later, we sat in the little cabin were the perfect end of a perfect day. When the last morsel had vanished, George pulled out his pipe, filled and lit it.

"Wash up first," he ordained, "and then we'll hear what the great world has to say to us."

The great world seemed immensely remote as we washed up unreal, in this secluded cove, where the only sound was the faint plash-plash of water against the Eileen's hull as she rocked almost imperceptibly on the incoming tide.

When the task was finished George went briskly to what had looked like a desk against the forward bulwark of the cabin, lifted off the cover, revealed a complicated array of electrical apparatus, coils and knobs and switches, which utterly transcended my understanding. My ignorance of these matters, familiar enough to nearly every schoolboy nowadays, is singularly complete.

"Pretty good set, that, eh?" remarked George with a fictitious nonchalance that failed to disguise the pride in his voice. "Made it myself—every bit of it."

"Wonderful!" I said, with genuine respect. "And can you pick up wireless telephony as well as ordinary signals with it?" I expect it was an absurd question—I have a knack

The Taffy That Had a Kick

By Clifford McBride

[illegible] up anything that's going," he said. "You'll hear presently." He busied himself with fitting coils of wire into sockets and other little adjustments of the apparatus that were meaningless to me.

"Can you send messages as well as receive them?"

"I can," he answered, frowning abstractedly at some little gadget that was obstinate under his fingers, "it means starting up the motor and connecting it with the dynamo. Still, there's not much point in it. I don't want to talk to anybody. I only want to hear. But I have found it useful sometimes—got my position more than once when I was in a fog. The shore station will give it you. Cross-bearings, you know."

This meant nothing to me, but I refrained from further questioning. George had evidently completed his preparations. He gave me a telephone headpiece, with receivers fitting over both ears, and put on a similar one himself.

"Now, listen!" he said. He twisted a knob or two, manipulated a little lever with thumb and forefinger.

I heard a low, confused murmuring that rose and fell as he played with that tiny lever, and then suddenly the faint sound of a human voice, out of pitch like a gramophone that is running down. He shifted the lever a fraction further round the arc it traced—and a man's voice, startlingly loud and distinct, spoke into my ears.

"2LO closing down for three minutes!" it said, with carefully deliberate enunciation. It made me jump, so unexpected was it.

"We've just missed a turn," said George. "That's London Broadcasting Station. Concert from eight to nine. Not bad for three hundred miles off, eh?"

"Marvelous!" I exclaimed. To me, that voice coming out of the void was positively uncanny.

"We'll see what else is going on while we're waiting," he said. "Would you like to hear the ships talking? They work on a 600 wave-length. 2LO works on 560." He shifted the little lever a fraction and I heard a multiplication of little, low-toned raucously-metallic buzzings, irregularly and rapidly reiterated. "That's Morse, of course," explained George. "There's half-a-dozen ships talking at once. Can you hear that louder one?—that must be quite close—ten miles off, and now the shore station's talking. Do you catch the different note?"

George glanced at his watch and switched the lever back to its former position.

The buzzings of the ships ceased instantly. Instead, came that clearly distinct man's voice, louder than George's close beside me.

"2LO speaking. The next item will be a violin solo by Miss Sylvia Smith—Rubenstein's Melody in F."

A moment later, the violin solo began, as full and rich and sweet, the piano accompaniment as ripplingly clear, as if the performers were in that cabin with us. And they were three hundred miles away, with no tangible connection to that little yacht hid in a cove of the Cornish Coast!

To my mind, naively unsophisticated when it comes to the exact sciences, the whole thing was like magic.

I said as much to George, when the violin finished and 2LO once more shut down for three minutes.

He smiled. "You've only heard the fringe of it," he said. "We've only been on the low waves. Let's see what's happening on the higher ones." He took the couple of coils from their sockets, fitted a pair of larger ones, fiddled again with knob and lever.

My ears were filled with a confused mingling of high, piping notes, like a lot of distant flutes trying to get themselves in tune.

"D'you hear the difference on the high waves?" he remarked. "Quite a different note." He adjusted his lever so that one series came clear, a rapid repetition of one squeaking sound. You can't pick it up—mechanically transmitted." He turned the lever again. "There's the Eiffel Tower—do you catch its call sign—FL—FL?" I took his word for it. "They work on 2600. Now we'll see what Germany's doing. Listen!—That's Konigswusterhausen, 2800. They telephone only up to five thirty. They're Morsing now. Nobody but London is telephoning at this hour."

"Is that the highest wave-length—2800?" I asked.

"Good Lord, no! Some stations work on a much higher wave than that. Bordeaux works on 20,450. Would you like to hear it?" He fitted a yet larger pair of coils. "There's no telephony on these high wave-lengths. They're mostly used for trans-Atlantic telegraph work." He manipulated his lever. "Do you hear it? That's Bordeaux." I listened to the irregularly repeat[illegible]

"And is that the highest your instrument will register?" I queried.

"No. I could catch anything up to [illegible]. But there's no point in listening-in on these high waves. There's no use using them. Bordeaux is about the limit. But still we'll have a try if you like. Might hear a message from Mars!" he said, jokingly. He made further adjustments of his apparatus.

There was dead silence. I wondered whether anything had gone wrong with the instrument, so complete was that cessation of the ether-borne murmurs and pipings to which I had been listening.

"Nothing, you see," said George. "That was 25,000. We'll try a little higher." Again he altered the adjustment. "Twenty-eight thousand—nothing." Dead silence—save for the just-heard plash-plash of the waves against our craft. He moved the lever further. "Thirty thousand—Hallo—what's that? He glanced at me in sharp surprise. "Listen!"

"Hallo, hallo, Adler! R.H.Q. speaking. Q Branch wants your report." The voice was loud and clear.

"What's RHQ?" I asked.

"Hanged if I know?" replied George. "Listen!"

Another voice answered in what seemed to be guttural German. We couldn't catch a word of it.

Nice Old Lady: Ah, see the poor young thing with her head bandaged. Got hit with a ball, I suppose.

The first voice spoke again.

"Hallo, Adler!—Fetch Mr. Maguire," it said, on a note of irritation. "Herr Maguire bringen!" The amateurish German was peremptory in its utterance.

"Ja, ja," answered the second voice. "Warten Sie nur."

There was a moment or two of silence.

"What have we got on to?" I asked.

"Can't imagine," said George. "It's a most unusual wave-length for telephony." He frowned at the instrument-board while we waited. Suddenly we both jumped at the new voice—a woman's voice on an accent of wild distress.

"Help! Help!" it cried. "Help—oh!" The voice broke off abruptly, as though the speaker had been snatched away from the instrument. A sharp exclamation from George sent my eyes to him. He was staring in front of him, his broad, honest face twisted in a curiously tense and startled expression. At the same time I thought I heard an indistinct noise of scuffling from the receivers tight against my ears. But it was George's strange look that held my attention for the momen.

"No, it couldn't be!" he muttered, frowning. There was an odd, puzzled alarm in his tone. Before I could ask him what "couldn't be," a man's voice spoke, a different voice from those we had heard.

"Hullo—RHQ?" Then, as though, he half-turned his head to someone behind him. "Take her away! Tie her up somewhere! How did she get loose?" The voice was again clear and full into the telephone. "Hullo—RHQ! Maguire speaking. Is that Cassidy?"

"Sure!" came the first voice. "What's the report?"

"All OK. Five thousand rifles, fifty machine guns, one million SAA and a hundred cases of grenades landed at rendezvous. Handed over to Captain Flanagan. No interference. We got to sea again at six o'clock."

"Good! Say, Maguire, who was that girl screeching just now?"

"She—oh, she's a—a hostage." The awkwardness of the reply was plainly evident. "Some of the boys got loose—burnt a big [illegible] the other end was cynical. "I shall have to report it. What's the name?"

"Connolly."

"My God!" I glanced round to George. He had sprang to his feet, was trembling violently in every limb. "My God!—do you hear that?—Shhh!" He stopped my half-uttered exclamation of bewilderment with a gesture of his quivering hand.

That far-off conversation was continuing.

"What name?"

"Connolly—Eileen Connolly. I've got evidence to prove she's an enemy sympathizer." The speaker was evidently a little uncertain of the way his action was being received. "Father was James Connolly."

George uttered a wild, inarticulate cry, sank back on to the cabin settee like a man who could no longer stand. His face frightened me.

"What's happened to him?"

"He's dead," the voice came with a little, ugly laugh. "The boys burnt him on his own bonfire.

"A Free Stater, you say?"

"Sure. It's one less, anyway."

"I'll report the matter. Hold your prisoner for instructions." The coldly official voice hinted at disapprobation. "Your orders stand—you'll proceed to Hamburg and pick up the second consignment. Good night."

"Good night."

The conversation ceased. There was silence. I turned to George. His face was ghastly, his eyes staring like those of a madman.

"It's her?" he said, "—it's Eileen!"

"But who's Eileen?" I asked, bewildered. "Not—?" And then it flashed on me—my sister's friend! Eileen Connolly, of course—that flirtation of last winter—the very name of George's yacht. "Good Lord!" I said, feebly. "I say, old man, I had no idea there was anything serious between you two."

"There isn't!" he snapped at me. "She refused me last winter—My God!" he went on to himself, "Eileen! Eileen—in the hands of that murdering scoundrel!" He jumped to his feet, flung the ear-pieces from his head to the instrument-board, squirmed around the table to the few clear feet at the end of the cabin. I could only watch him helpless as he paced up and down with his fists pressed hard against his temples. "Oh, I shall go mad in a minute!"

"But what has really happened?" I said.

"What?" He glared at me impatiently. "What's happened? You must be imbecile, man! It's all clear enough. That's a German gunrunner chartered by the Irish irregulars. Maguire's their agent on board. And the damned scoundrel's been doing a little raiding on his own account." He gripped with both hands in the air. "If I could only get hold of him!" He took one or two more paces up and down, and then suddenly turned and flared at me. "My God, Dickie, don't sit there looking like a dummy! Don't you see that something's got to be done?" He was like a maniac.

"Yes, but what can we do?" I asked.

He stared at me, quieted suddenly.

"God knows!" he ejaculated, and sat down in a sudden lassitude of despair upon the settee. "God knows!" he repeated, looking around him with hopeless vacuity. "God knows!" And he buried his face in his hands.

The silence in that little cabin, lit by the slightly oscillating oil-lamp, continued until I had to break the awful tension.

[illegible] "If we're going to do anything about this, we must have clear brains for the problem. Hysterics won't help us."

He looked up, sobered. "You're right, Dickie," he said. "We must get our brains to work. I'm all right now." But he still shook like a man in a palsy, and his face was dreadful in its haggard pallor.

"I dug out a bottle of whisky I had brought in my suit case, poured some into enamel mugs for both of us.

"Now," I said, "drink this, and get yourself steady."

He came to the table, drank it down at a gulp. Then he went again to the wireless set, fitted the receivers again over his ears, listened.

"Nothing," he said. "They've shut off. I thought perhaps—" He didn't say what "perhaps" it was he thought, though I could guess. That girl's terror-stricken voice was still ringing in my ears, too.

He stared at me hopelessly.

"For God's sake, say something, Dickie!" he burst out, at last.

"I'm trying to think," I replied. "I daresay it's all plain enough to you—but it's anything but clear to me. I'm muddled. There's no doubt, of course, that it was a ship talking?"

"Bound for Hamburg—didn't you hear?" he said, irritably.

"Good. Well—whereabouts is she now?"

He got up, pulled out a chart from the locker. It comprised the southern coast of Ireland. There was a spot on it that had been well thumbed—as George's finger went to it now, I had a sudden vision of him brooding alone o' nights in that cabin, bringing himself into a sort of contact with that girl by contemplating on the chart the place where she lived, I said nothing, waited for his words. He glanced up at the cabin clock.

"It's now nine," he said. "They put to sea at six. Three hours. She'd be a fast ship to dodge the patrols. Give her twelve knots. On a course for Hamburg, she'd be about here." He marked a spot on the chart where the fathom-figures were already sparse by comparison with those close to the coast.

"And how far away is that?" I asked.

He got out another chart, placed it upon the table contiguous with the first, measured with a pair of dividers from the indicated point to the Lizard on the second chart.

"About 160 miles."

"She'd pass close here, I suppose?"

"Yes." He made a mental calculation. "About ten o'clock tomorrow—if she does twelve knots. About one, if she's only a ten-knotter. But—" he looked up from the chart to me, "even if she does, how the devil are we going to stop her? We're not a torpedo boat."

"No," I said, filled with a great idea, "but there are plenty of torpedoboats at Plymouth. Can't we communicate with the authorities? Surely they would stop the ship?"

His brows puzzled over the suggestion.

"We could talk to the authorities all right," he agreed, "but I'm sure it would be no good. This is an Irish matter—and who bothers about the Irish these days? I don't think the British government would interfere. They're only too anxious to let the Irish settle their own affairs? They'd merely suspect us of laying a trap to mix them up in a row—what the Irregulars have been playing for ever since the Free State started." I wondered at George's knowledge of these matters, and then remembered that he had the best of reasons for close interest. "Much more likely to send a torpedo boat round to watch us," he concluded.

It seemed a hopeless problem, and I remarked as much.

"It's maddening!" said George. "But—" he glared at me as though I were responsible for our impotence—"somehow or other I'm going to get her off that ship!"

"I wonder how she—how Miss Connolly got to the wireless!" I said.

George snapped at me.

"Broke loose—didn't you hear that brute say so? I expect she was hiding somewhere round the wireless house and heard that German fellow telephoning. Directly he went to fetch Maguire, she must have dodged in, run to the instrument and cried for help."

"And why did they telephone in plain speech, instead of the usual Morse?" I went on, not rebuffed. I wanted to get a clear picture of the whole thing in my head.

"Oh, don't ask futile, silly ass questions!" George looked as if he could hit me for this repeated interruption of the [illegible] to which he strained his faculties. "Why shouldn't they use plain speech? They're on a wave-length that nobody uses—there's no likelihood of anyone listening-in. Can you hear anything now? Of course, you can't—and we're on the thirty thousand-length. There's nothing doing on it—they've got it all to themselves. They might be talking from one star to another. And unless they use cipher, there's no sense in using Morse. Anyone can pick up Morse. But it's much more convenient to talk straight out—less chance of mistakes. They can talk direct without bothering about operators." George was irritably voluble once he started to explain, evidently trying to save time by answering in one complete reply any future stupid questions I might be going to put to him. "You exercise your wits on trying to think of some useful plan, Dickie—and don't worry me with things that don't matter!"

I don't know how long we had sat there in gloomy, baffled silence, when suddenly—I can't recall by what obscure path of thought I had come to it—I found myself contemplating a possibility.

"George," I said, on an impulse, "Can't you talk to that ship?"

"Talk to the ship?" He puzzled at me.

"Yes," I was suddenly all excitement. "Talk to the ship—bluff them—tell them to hand their prisoner over to us. She's passing close by tomorrow morning."

He jumped up with such impetuosity as to hit his head against the cabin roof.

"By Jove, Dickie!" he cried. "You've hit it!" He tore off the telephone receivers from his head. "Keep listening—in case they speak again. I'll start up the motor."

I stopped him before he had got out of the cabin.

"Wait a minute, George!" I spoke with the confident authority of the accepted strategist. My brain was working rapidly now. "Don't telephone yet, whatever you do. Those people in Ireland may be listening. We don't want them butting in. Wait till after midnight. They will probably have gone to bed, but there's certain to be someone on duty on the ship."

"Dickie!" he said admiringly, "you're a genius!" He glanced at the clock. "Two hours." He looked at me, and the sudden excitement faded out of his face. "But—man!—two hours!—How am I going to wait two mortal hours cooped up here? I shall go mad!"

"No, you won't," I said, firmly. I fished a pack of cards out of my suit case. "You are going to pour us out a little more whisky—not too much—and play a nice quiet game of piquet with me to pass the time.

He recovered control over himself.

"All right," he agreed. "But keep those earpieces on. We mustn't miss any messages."

For the next two hours—they seemed an eternity—we sat there, alert for any sound in our ears, playing the most uninteresting game of piquet I have ever sat through in my life. In lapses, during the game he told me shyly and clumsily, something of his feelings for that girl. She was quite evidently the one thing in life that mattered to him. "It was only natural, of course, that she wouldn't marry a chap like him." And since he could not have her he had hidden himself away on his yacht from a world that had become distasteful to him.

"If ever you fall in love, Dickie," he said, looking at me with honest, simple eyes, "you'll understand how much a chap wants to be alone. I only invited you because you knew her and could talk about her."

"Many thanks!" said I, ironically.

We continued our dreary game, forgotten for long intervals in George's halting confidences. "She'll never have me, of course," he said, resignedly and miserably.

"Your call," I reminded him.

We were half through a hand, when suddenly he flung down the cards, sprang from his seat.

"Midnight, thank God! Now we can get busy!"

In a minute or two later I heard and felt the jerky throbbings of the motor as it whirred and flagged and whirred again in its first uneven revolutions. A nauseating atmosphere of paraffin invaded the little cabin. The motor settled into a steady hum where everything vibrated. George returned, wiping his hands on a bit of cotton waste.

He went to the wireless, fitted a mouthpiece to a gadget in front of him, manipulated a few more tiny switches. Then putting on his receivers, he sat down to it again. I drew close, listening also, my heart thumping with excitement.

"Hullo—Adler! Hullo—Adler!" He leaned forward, spoke into the mouthpiece. I could see perspiration glistening on his forehead. "Hullo—Adler!" He switched to receive the reply.

There was no response. George glanced at me—a quick scared look. My thought was the same as his. Supposing there was no one listening on board that ship!

"Hullo—Adler—Adler—Adler!" He fumbled a little with his tiny levers, altering them a trifle at each utterance of the call. "Adler!—Adler!—Adler!" Again he flicked down the switch which permitted the reply to reach us.

It came—startling us both with its uncanny loudness of direct address.

"Ja, ja, Adler—ja. Wer ist's?"

"Adler—RHQ speaking. Fetch Mr. Maguire. Herr Maguire bringen! He turned to me, whispered: "What's 'at once'?" 'Sofort—augenlicklich,'" I whispered back. "Soford—augenblicklich!" he commanded peremptorily into the telephone.

"Ja, ja—he asleep—I go wake him," came the answer, distinct despite the throbbiing of the motor behind us.

George turned to me, the telephone switched off for safety.

"I daren't ask to speak to her, I suppose?"

I shook my head.

"Too risky."

We waited, through long minutes of silence.

Then again a voice came to us, gruffly bad-tempered.

"Hullo—hullo—who's that speaking?"

George's face went grim and hard as he bent forward to reply. It was as if he felt himself face to face with the owner of that now familiar voice.

"RHQ," he said, sharply, authoritatively. "Is that Maguire?"

"Yes. Is that Cassidy?"

"No, it isn't." George, as he explained to me afterwards, tried to speak with the brusque peremptorines of a wartime "brass-hot." "This is Intelligence speaking. Q Branch reports that you have a prisoner on board—a Miss Connolly. She is urgently required at H.Q. for examination. A most important prisoner. She is to be handed over without delay. In the meantime, you will be held personally responsible for her.

"Oh," said Maguire, there was a trace of disappointment in his tone, "shall we put back then?"

"No." George made a gesture of "Heaven forbid!' to me. "What time do you pass the Lizard tomorrow?"

"I don't know."

"Go and find out from the captain!" George's tone could not have been bettered by the most important of staff-officers.

There was a pause in which we listened to nothing but the throb of our own motor working the dynamo.

"About eleven," said the voice suddenly.

"Very well. Tell the captain to go close in to the Lizard. You will be met by a small yawl, flying the signal-flags RHQ. Answer with the same flags, and then send your prisoner aboard of her."

"But who am I to hand her over to?"

"Agents of ours, we've already arranged. All you have to do is to obey your orders." We were fairly safe in assuming that he would not query what to him would be merely another of the mysterious ramifications of the Irregular organization. "Just repeat, please."

The voice repeated the instructions.

"Very good," said George. "Remember—on no account miss that yawl. It might have the gravest consequences—and you will be held responsible. Good night."

"Good night."

There was once more silence.

George turned to me.

"And now to wait till morning!" he said.

We agreed to take alternate watches at the wireless in case any further conversation took place with the Adler. George was to have first watch. Utterly wearied by my long day, I rolled myself in a blanket on the [illegible] and was almost instantly asleep.

I woke to find the light of morning pouring through the skylight and George no longer there. The place shook with the throbbing of the motor and the yacht was pitching heavily. I could hear the thud and splash of seas upon the deck. Mystified, I made my way, lurching and scrambling, to the companion-stairs, climbed out. George, still wearing the telephone-receivers attached by a long wire which went down into the cabin, was in oilskins, steering the yacht through a smother of spray. No sails were hoisted. She was running on the motor.

"Had to clear out!" he shouted at me. "Weather's been worsening since dawn. Not a word from the Adler. Take the tiller while I get a rag of canvas up. We've got sea-room now and can heave-to for a bit."

It was a foul morning. A heavy westerly wind drove a gray wrack of mist and rain over a livid green sea that leaped and boiled at us as our motor thudded us through it. The Lizard was a cloudlike mass only faintly to be discerned far astern of us.

George had looked pretty bad the night before. This morning he looked ghastly, dark rings under his eyes, his features pale and drawn. He had not had a wink of sleep.

"No sense in waking you, old chap," he said. "I couldn't have slept anyhow."

It was an interminable and miserable time waiting for that ship. George lent me a suit of oilskins and with the receivers on the long wire over my ears I sat on the cabin steps and talked to him while he steered. "Don't leave them off for a moment," he had said. "We mustn't miss a word if they speak. I'll navigate the yacht."

Directly after breakfast, he had set a course for a point just off the Lizard and then, in heavy, blinding squalls of rain, buffeted by a sea that grew worse every minute, we cruised up and down in the vicinity of the spot where we might expect to meet the Adler. Our three signal-flags blew stiffly out from the halliards.

"There she is!" cried George suddenly.

Out of the mist emerged a small and dirty-looking tramp-steamer, the black smoke blowing forward over her bows as she wallowed in the following sea. I stood up on the cabin steps to look at her, saw three flags run up to her signal-halliards.

George put the helm over and we came round, beating up toward her, maneuvering to get under her lee.

"She's stopping!" said George. "Look!—they're getting ready a boat!" I could in fact, see a little group of figures busy about one of the davits.

George set the motor on at full power, and pitching and plunging under close-hauled canvas among the waves that crashed over our bows, we came close to her. She had now stopped, was squattering amid creamy-white foam. From her deck men were scrambling into the boat still clung upon the davits.

"There's Eileen!"

George's eyes were quicker than mine, but I also now saw a muffled-up figure hurried by two men along the deck and pushed into the boat. Then they began to lower away. Breathlessly we watched the boat descend on the lengthening ropes, swinging and swaying sickeningly as the steamer lurched and wallowed in the waves. At last it touched the water, was out of sight for a moment, while the davit ropes, released, streamed on the wind.

"Here they come!"

The boat rose on the sea, four oarsmen rowing for all they were worth. Steadily it approached, out of sight one moment, hoisted high the next. In the stern sheets I could see two figures; one of them, certainly the girl. George brought the yacht up to the wind, kept her steady with the motor at half-speed.

The boat was a little more than half-way to us when suddenly a voice spoke into my very ear.

"Hullo, Adler! Hullo, Adler!"

"Hullo, Adler!"

"They're calling, George!" I cried. "Calling up the Adler!"

He glanced at me, but said nothing. I saw his face set hard as he measured with his eye the distance yet between ourselves and the boat.

"Ja, ja—Adler!—Wer ist's?" came the reply.

"RHQ. Where's Mr. Maguire?"

"Herr Maguire—he was in boat."

"Boat? What do you mean?—I want to talk to him. Fetch him at once. Orders for his prisoner tell him!"

The other voice commenced an explanation in broken English.

"Never mind what they're saying!" shouted George. "Take those things off and stand by to help her out of the boat; I can't leave the helm."

I did as I was told. The highly interesting conversation between "RHQ" and the Adler ceased for me abruptly. I could only guess at its purport by the figure I saw dart out of the wireless house and run to the officer on the bridge. A moment later, the propeller of the ship began to revolve and I saw a wisp of white steam blow away from halfway up her funnel. The melancholy wail of her siren drifted across to us.

"They've discovered the trick, George!" I shouted, in alarm.

"Never mind!" he said. "It's too late now! Stand by to pull her on board."

The boat rose on a wave just in front of us. The men had ceased rowing, were looking back at the ship, puzzled at her signal. The yacht was under way, and the next instant, swung by a deft touch on her tiller, was grinding alongside the ship's boat. A couple of men clutched at the rope we had slung ready alongside. Once more the steamer's siren hooted long and loud. She was moving through the water now, coming straight toward us.

"All right!" I shouted to the man in the stern-sheets. "There's a destroyer coming up—that's all. She wants you to get back as soon as possible. Pass up the girl!"

There was no time for hesitation with the two boats grinding against one another in that sea. He did the instinctive thing, hoisted the girl upight by main force—she drooped as though she were half-fainting—and, seizing the moment, pushed her into my grasp. I dragged her on deck in a tumbled heap.

"All clear!" I shouted, but George had not waited for my word. He set the motor to full speed, put the helm over, loosed the main sheet ready to his hand. The yacht whipped round like a top. I just heard an angry shout from the boat's crew—and then we were already distant from them.

The steamer was coming for us as though she meant to run us down, sounding her siren in quick and angry blasts.

"Don't matter about them!" cried George, as the yacht flew on before the wind. "They'll be half-an-hour picking up their boat's crew—and we're well away. Look after her!"

I bent over the girl. She lay huddled upon the deck, staring at me with a face blanched with terror. Then she looked at the man at the helm.

"George!" she cried.

Behind us the Adler was blotted out in a squall. The Eileen changed course slightly, raced, like a living thing, for safety.

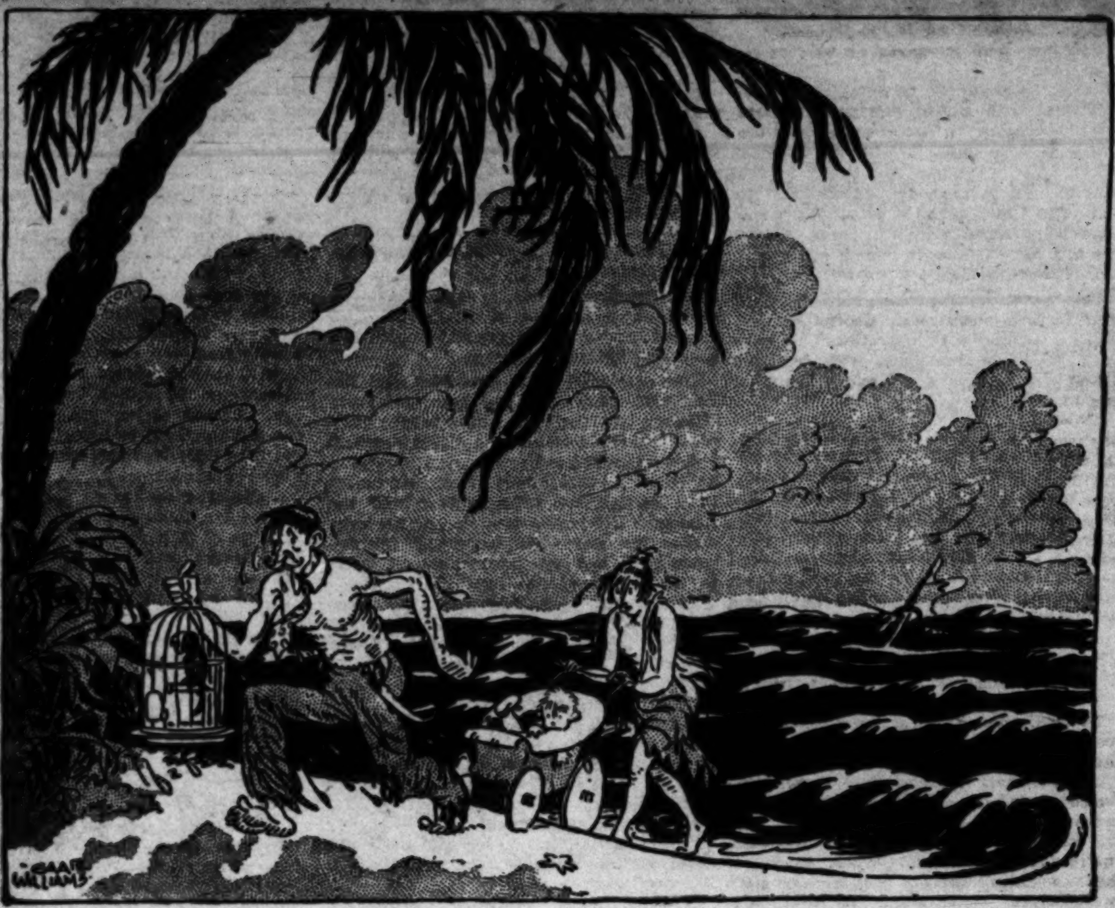
THE OTHER DAY

By Donald Ogden Stewart

DRAWING BY GAAR WILLIAMS



They were the only ones saved with the exception of a parrot and myself.

THE other day I got married in a church, and started across America toward New York. As the train was pulling out of Los Angeles I went back to the observation platform. A gentleman in a shiny silk suit was sitting there, smoking a long cigar. Beside him was a middle-aged lady with a magazine.

"A wonderful country," remarked the gentleman.

The lady did not reply.

"It certainly is a wonderful country," repeated the man.

The lady turned and looked at him.

"Are you a native?" she asked.

The man shook his head.

"No," he replied, and then he added, somewhat sadly, "I really am a native of no country."

The lady edged away a little.

"Would you like to hear my story?" asked the gentleman.

"No," replied the lady.

"I was born on shipboard," began the man.

The lady took up her magazine, and began to read. The man regarded her sorrowfully for a moment, and then turned to me.

"Would you like to hear my story?" he asked.

"Yes," I replied.

"I was born in Java," began the man.

"On shipboard?" I interrupted.

"Partly," said the man, and after a pause he continued. "My parents were planters."

"What did they plant?" I asked.

"Oh, the usual things," he replied, with a wave of his hand, and then he added: "Have you ever been to Java?"

"No," I replied.

"A wonderful country," he said, and then he repeated, "a wonderful country. You can't imagine."

"No," I said, "I can't."

"When my parents first went there," he continued, "they didn't know a soul. That was partly due," he added, "to the fact that they were washed up on Java after a shipwreck."

"A bad shipwreck?" I asked.

"They were the only ones saved," he replied, "with the exception of a parrot and myself."

"You?" I asked.

"I had just been born," he replied, "and none of us could speak a word of Java except the parrot, who knew a few phrases like, 'Can you direct me to a good second hand book store?' or, 'At what time, sir, does the train leave for Fontainbleau?'"

"That probably did not help you much," I said.

"No," he repied. "At first we had quite a lot of trouble. There was, above everything else," he continued, "the problem of food."

"Didn't the parrot know any good restaurants?" I asked.

"Ah," he replied, with a shake of his head, "but there were no restaurants. Nothing. Absolutely nothing. Just us—and the sea—and a few back numbers of Hooper's Bazaar which my mother had brought along in case anybody wanted to read."

"And did anybody want to read?" I asked.

"Not right away," he replied. "You see, we were very busy providing ourselves with the necessities. Everything was very scarce. For the first three days we lived on nothing but a little rice which my father found under his collar. My father and mother," he added, "were on their honeymoon."

"Wait a minute," I said.

"Certainly," he replied, with a slight bow.

"Something is wrong," I continued.

"Yes?" he said.

"Because either your father didn't change his collar for at least nine months," I said, "or—"

"I'm coming to that," said the stranger, patiently.

"Good," I said, somewhat relieved.

"My father, as I should have explained," he went on, "was somewhat eccentric—or, as you would probably say, he was a little off center."

"They both mean the same thing," I objected.

"Precisely," said the stranger, "but in sending telegrams I always try to select the shortest word."

"So do I."

"Will you have a cigar?"

"Thank you."

We lighted our cigars, and I waited.

"On the fourth day," he continued at last, "the supply of rice gave out and we thought that perhaps we should have to eat the parrot, of which we had all, needless to say, become very fond. Here was a dilemma—or, as you would probably say, a tight fix."

"You took the words out of my mouth," I said.

"Precisely," he continued, "and you can imagine how that parrot felt, too." He stopped. "Did you ever eat raw parrot?" he asked.

I shook my head.

"Do you know New Orleans?" he asked.

Once more I replied in the negative.

"Well," he said, "there used to be a restaurant in New Orleans where you could get what corresponded to raw parrot. It has since," he added, "been destroyed."

"I should think it would have been," I remarked.

"New Orleans isn't what it used to be," he said, somewhat sadly.

"So few things are these days."

"Will you have a cigar?"

"Thank you," I replied, "I think I will finish this one first."

We sat gazing out over the hot California landscape. Then we went into a tunnel.

"Where was I?" he asked when we had emerged.

"In Java," I replied, "about to eat the parrot."

"Ethel," he said.

"What?" asked the lady sitting next to him.

"Nothing," replied the gentleman. "I was just repeating the name of our parrot."

The lady resumed her reading.

"On the fifth day," said the stranger, "my father found a footprint. Imagine our joy! But imagine our despair when we discovered that the footprint was one which had just been made by my mother."

"That must have been a shock," I said.

"Father was very angry," he replied, "and began to sulk. He refused to eat anything."

"But," I objected, "there wasn't anything to eat."

"That was partly the reason," replied the stranger. "You see, father knew that the footprint business wasn't mother's fault—and yet he just couldn't help himself. He always used to get that way when he was hungry—or when dinner was a little late. And here dinner was five days late. I don't blame him. Do you?"

"No," I replied. "Five days is a long time to wait for dinner."

"We always used to eat at six o'clock sharp," said the stranger, "at home."

"So did we," I said, "except on Sunday."

"On Sunday nights," said he, "we went down to the athletic club."

"We didn't belong," I said.

"Indeed," said the gentleman. "What a pity."

"We could have belonged," I stated.

"I'm sure you could," said the stranger. "I'm sure you could."

There was a moment of sympathetic silence.

"My father," he said, "was very athletic. He practicaly founded the first Athletic Club in Northern Ohio."

"I'm from Columbus myself," I said.

"Indeed," remarked the stranger. "Do you know Eddie Ferguson there?"

"No," I replied. "Are you sure it wasn't Harry Gorman?"

"Maybe it was," admitted the stranger." I haven't been back there in years."

"It's changed a lot," I said.

"And what hasn't?" asked the gentleman. "Look at California."

I looked.

"It's changing every minute," he said.

"That's partly because we are on a moving train," I remarked.

He whistled. The engine answered him. He looked at me.

"Did you hear anything?" he asked.

He whistled again. Once more the engine responded.

"That's funny," he said.

"What's funny?" I asked.

"Nothing," he replied. Then he got up and walked to the other side of the observation platform. After a minute he leaned over the side and whistled again. There was no answer. He tried once more. No result.

"I guess you think I'm crazy," he remarked.

"Not at all," I said, with a reassuring smile.

"Yes you do," he said.

"No I don't," I replied.

"Well anyway, I'm not," he said. After a while, he turned to me and asked, "Are you married?"

"Yes," I replied.

"You know," he continued, "I'm married, too."

"It's the only natural condition," I remarked.

He took a photograph out of his pocket and showed it to me.

"Ethel," he said.

"What?" asked the lady next him.

"Nothing," he replied. "I was just showing this gentleman a picture of my wife. Her name is Ethel."

The lady returned to her reading. I examined the photograph.

"You haven't by any chance seen her anywhere, have you?" he asked, anxiously.

"Why, no," I replied. "Don't you know where she is?"

He shook his head.

"That was why I whistled just then," he said. "She and I used to whistle back and forth quite a lot."

"Oh," I said.

"I guess it was just the engine," he added.

I said nothing.

We sat there for a short while, saying nothing. Then I got up.

"I think I'll go back," I said, "and see what my wi—" I hesitated. "I think I'll go back," I repeated, "and get something to eat."

He nodded.

"See you later," he said.

As I opened the door into the car I heard him ask the lady if she minded cigar smoke.

"Yes," she replied.

I closed the door.

towering above her as she sat in the big chair by the fire. "I felt so isolated. There was no one to prod me, excite me, shame me into effort. The little college library was so poor in scholarship! I was deadened with a mass of teaching. When I was not in the classroom I was in some airless committee room listening to men of imagination debate some detail of no importance to exhaustion. Poverty was a ball and chain. And I had—I had anxieties."

In the pause she could see his bleak years as he had lived them.

"Your life was so vivid, so varied, so big, significant. You poured it all out to us with such fullness! You poured life into me. I began to write. I started some critical studies in the drama, toward my thesis."

He stopped again, this time for a long while. Honour scarcely breathed.

"Well, I got something done and sent it off. I had a letter today offering me a two year fellowship if I'd come on. It will pay more than my salary here. And I dared to hope perhaps you might come with me."

Later when she did at last go up to the invalid's room Aunt Delight gave her one perceiving glance.

"Well!" she said. "Don't tell me he's done it at last!"

She was all that Honour could have wished as her niece wept out her happy story.

"I guess," she said, as they parted for the night. "I'll try to come downstairs tomorrow."

They were married on commencement day. Once her improvement really set in, Aunt Delight explained, its progress was something miraculous. By June you would not have known she had been hurt. Even the sprained knee caused no trouble and the back never caught her at all.

"Talk about me being old!" she said as she drove the bride and groom to the station. "I'm only sixty-nine. Nothing but a girl. I've a good mind to come east in November and take you to the opera. I owe it to you, seeing I cheated you out of it last year."

Her rosy face beamed its last upon them from the platform. Certain strategies had succeeded just as she planned them. Better. Not only did Grantland Bartlett have his fellowship but the All-American Wool Trade Magazine had telegraphed its wish for Mrs. Bartlett's services. Even in New York efficiency is no drug on the market. Her young folks were to be happy. And they were to be relatively quite rich. Aunt Delight beamed as she waved after them.

"Do you know what will mean more to me than any opera?" Grantland Bartlett asked his wife as the train rolled out of the station. "To look out of your window at the little park and the front steps of the Willy Westons."

Looking at him she knew that the hour of her retribution had struck. How was she to tell him? Day by day she grew wan over this question. As each click of the wheels brought her nearer to New York her panic and her despair increased. How could she have failed to foresee this? How could she confess? How show herself the sham she had been? She met his happiness with a sick heart. Each day, she thought, "Today."

Then as the hours went she thought, "No! Tomorrow!"

By the time there were but a few hours between her and New York she had decided that the way to tell him was to take him up the five flights to the little back room, show him the window, the delicatessen, the tailor shop, the tenements, the L, picture her thrifty, commonplace daily life, strip the glamour from it all and cast herself upon his pity.

They took a cab straight for the Van der Donck mansion. He wished for it as the climax of his happiness. She sat with a cold hand in his as they threaded the busy avenues eastward. Once she turned to him.

"Will you love me always?" she asked. "No matter what happens?"

Wondering at her intensity he promised. The cab turned in at the familiar street.

"At the corner," she directed and let him help her descend.

"Perhaps he'll never want to hold my hand again," she said to herself as he helped her from the taxi.

She waited while her husband paid the fare. And as she waited she was conscious of a change that penetrated even the blindness of her misery. The square lay beside her, sweet in the evening light. The Van der Donck mansion was gone. A huge sign reared itself instead, reading, Manhattan Wrecking Company. Behind the sign, a vast sound of falling bricks and rending framework gave token of those night and day activities to which New Yorkers are habituated. She read the further legend on the sign and knew as her husband turned to her that the Van der Donck mansion, forever vanished, would be replaced in fifteen months by a twenty story apartment hotel with electric refrigeration and all other distinctive marks of modern home life.

Grantland Bartlett looked as she was looking at the sign. Then the two looked at each other.

"Gone!" he said.

"Gone!" she whispered. How should she tell him now? He saw her pallor.

"Never mind, you darling!" he laughed. "You've given it all to me with your eyes. I know it better than if I had seen it myself. And here's the dear little square. I used to walk in it with you in my dreams, and take heart and live my life like a man. What if the room is gone! We can walk in the square together."

Even as he drew her hand into the curve of his arm a cataract of bricks came down the chute.

"Maybe that's the last of your room," he laughed.

Curiously enough a half pint cream bottle careened empty and unbroken along the sidewalk at her feet. She looked at it.

"The last of it!" she said. "It's just a dream room now."

She smiled at him. Even her devouring conscience was appeased. Why invade with drab realities the sanctities of his beloved dream? Why take away a glowing vision? Why give him a woman less desirable than he had won?

"Let's walk in the park," she said. Grantland Bartlett looked first up, then down the street. Only in that quiet island in that multitudinous town could a deserted block have been found at that hour.

"Not before I kiss you," he said boldly. Before the ardor of that kiss her last scruples fled. The drab and solitary years vanished. The unseen plays, the imagined gayeties were forgotten.

"How wonderful it's going to be," she half whispered "really to see everything—"

"With me?" he filled in the pause.

"You were with me always," she confessed. "I haven't ever told you. But that was my part of the dream."

sponse, and then, in a state of panic, backed slowly toward the gate with his eyes fixed on the house. A loud crash sounded from somewhere inside, a gruesome figure in white hopped out and squatted on the step.

It was evident to Sergt.-Maj. Ward that Mr. Farrer was not there, and that no useful purpose could be served by remaining. It was clear that the young man's courage had failed him, and, with gray head erect, elbows working like the sails of a windmill, and the ends of the nightgown streaming behind him, the sergeant-major bent his steps toward home.

He dropped into a walk after a time and looked carefully over his shoulder. So far as he could see he was alone, but the silence and loneliness were oppressive. He looked again, and, without stopping to inquire whether his eyes had deceived him, broke into a run again.

Alternately walking and running, he got back to the town, and walked swiftly along the streets to his house. Police Constable Burgess, who was approaching from the other direction, reached it at almost the same moment, and, turning on his lantern, stood gaping with astonishment. "Anything wrong?" he demanded.

"Wrong?" panted the sergeant-major, trying to put a little surprise and dignity into his voice. "No."

"I thought it was a lady walking in her sleep at first," said the constable. "A tall lady."

The sergeant-major suddenly became conscious of the nightgown. "I've been—for a little walk," he said, still breathing hard. "I felt a bit chilly—so I—put this on."

"Suits you, too," said the constable stiffly. "But you army men always was a bit dressy. Now if I put that on I should look ridikerious."

The door opened before Mr. Ward could reply, and revealed, in the light of a bedroom candle, the astonished countenances of his wife and daughter.

"George!" exclaimed Mrs. Ward.

"Father!" said Miss Ward.

The sergeant-major tottered in and, gaining the front room, flung himself into his armchair. A stiff glass of whisky and water, handed him by his daughter, was swallowed at a gulp.

"Did you go?" inquired Mrs. Ward, clasping her hands.

The sergeant-major, fully conscious of the suspicions aroused by his disordered appearance, rallied his faculties. "Not likely," he said, with a short laugh. "After I got outside I knew it was no good going there to look for that young snippet. He'd no more think of going there than he would of flying. I walked a little way down the road—for exercise—and then strolled back."

"But—my nightgown?" said the wondering Mrs. Ward.

"Put it on to frighten the constable," said her husband.

He stood up and allowed her to help him pull it off. His face was flushed and his hair tousled, but the bright fierceness of his eye was unquenched. In submissive silence she followed him to bed.

He was up late next morning, and made but a poor breakfast. His after-dinner nap was disturbed, and tea was over before he had regained his wonted calm. An hour later the arrival of a dignified and reproachful Mr. Farrer set him blazing again.

"I have come to see you about last night," said Mr. Farrer, before the other could speak. "A joke's a joke, but when you said you would come I naturally expected you would keep your word."

"Keep my word?" repeated the sergeant major, almost choking with wrath.

"I stayed there in that lonely cottage from twelve to three, as per agreement, waiting for you," said Mr. Farrer.

"You were not there," shouted the sergeant-major.

"How do you know?" inquired the other.

The sergeant-major looked round helplessly at his wife and daughter.

"Prove it," said Mr. Farrer, pushing his advantage. "You questioned my courage, and I stayed there three hours. Where were you?"

"You were not there," said the sergeant-major. "I know. You can't bluff me. You were afraid."

"I was there, and I'll swear it," said Mr. Farrer. "Still, there's no harm done. I'll go there again tonight, and I'll dare you to come for me."

"Dare?" said the sergeant-major, choking. "Dare?"

"Dare," repeated the other, "and if you don't come this time I'll spread it all over Marcham. Tomorrow night you can go there and wait for me. If you see what I saw—"

"Oh, Ted!" said Miss Ward with a shiver.

"Saw?" said the sergeant-major starting.

"Nothing harmful," said Mr. Farrer, calmly. "As a matter of fact, it was very interesting."

"What was?" demanded the sergeant-major.

"It sounds rather silly, as a matter of fact," said Mr. Farrer, slowly. "Still, I did see a broken bough moving about the garden."

Mr. Ward regarded him open-mouthed.

"Anything else?" he inquired, in a husky voice.

"A figure in white," said Mr. Farrer, "with long, waving arms, hopping about like a frog. I don't suppose you believe me, but if you come tonight perhaps you'll see it yourself. It's very interesting."

"Did you see its face?" inquired Mrs. Ward, nervously.

Mr. Farrer shook his head.

"What sort of a body had it got?" said her daughter.

"So far as I could see, very good," said Mr. Farrer. "Very good figure—not tall, but well made."

An incredible suspicion that had been forming in the sergeant-major's mind began to take shape. "Did you see anything else?" he asked, sharply.

"One more," said Mr. Farrer, regarding him pleasantly. "One I call the Running Ghost."

"Run—" began the sergeant-major, and stopped suddenly.

"It came in at the front gate," pursued Mr. Farrer. "A tall, well-knit figure of martial bearing—much about your height, Mr. Ward—with a beautiful filmy white robe down to its knees—"

He broke off in mild surprise, and stood gazing at Miss Ward, who, with her handkerchief to her mouth, was rocking helplessly in her chair.

"Knees," he repeated, quietly. "It came slowly down the path, and halfway to the house it stopped, and in a frightened sort of voice called out my name.

"That'll do," said the sergeant-major, rising hastily and drawing himself up to his full height.

"You asked me," said Mr. Farrer, in an aggrieved voice.

"I know I did," said the sergeant-major, breathing heavily. "I know I did; but if I sit here listening to any more of your lies I shall be ill. The best thing you can do is to take that giggling girl out and give her a breath of fresh air. I have done with her."

The Story of Honour McM

THE major advantage of a north exposure is that the half pint bottle of cream, renewed every other morning, enjoys its lease of usefulness, cooling upon the window sill, well into May. After that a minimum of refrigeration is imperative for the kitchenette behind the gingham curtain. This carefully calculated amount is based mainly on what "ice" is willing to carry up five flights of stairs. Early in her New York career Miss McMinn learned that while the spirit of "ice" could brook this exercise for fifteen cents per climb, it flagged and flatly declined to soar for ten cents. The summer months, therefore, were sorrowfully budgeted to include an additional fifteen cents every other day.

This may seem frugal finance to an age accustomed to calculate in nothing short of billions. It is true, however, that Honour McMinn, one of the six millions who teem in Greater Manhattan, did her share of teeming by the aid of these and other careful devices, lopping off fifteen cents here or thirteen there, and so bringing the total outgo of her metropolitan venture safely within its monthly income. By safely, Miss McMinn meant more than her New York bank required her to keep in reserve. She had made a vow with that inner self of whose existence no one else in the world was aware to lay by as well a fixed sum each month for emergencies.

By emergencies she meant, among other things, the event which she felt reasonably sure might find itself in the public print almost any day under some such heading as "Hit and Run Motorist Leaves Woman Thirty-eight Unconscious."

When she first became a tenant of the Van der Donck Mansion she saw the heading as "Woman Twenty-eight." Her inner self stuck to twenty-eight long after her candid outer eye suggested a change.

These vital statistics did not, however, affect the nest egg which she continued to lay by, and which she budgeted along with insurance, life and accident, at the beginning of each fiscal year.

Emergencies included also railroad fare for the sudden trip to Agatha which she might, in the course of nature, expect to make.

It was in Agatha, on a sunny June morning, as she and her Aunt Delight walked home from commencement together that a remarkable conversation took place. It was the fifth commencement from which they had walked home since the day when they had not walked home from her own. She was twenty-two on that earlier day, and had walked home with the new English professor. He was a blond, newly come from a great eastern university. Honour had taken romanticism with him. Romanticism was a course. Courses may be taken without their spirit suffusing the spirit of the taker. Prof. Bartlett's course, however, in the case of Honour McMinn was more than a course in name only. Something beyond tales of wonder and terror, or Germanic influences, passed across his desk to the spirit of Honour McMinn, the exceptionally promising senior in seat thirty-two, row seven.

As they walked home together from commencement he was as pale as she was rosy. He lingered at her door. Eloquence looked from his eyes into hers. And yet he dropped her hand and went away. Honour McMinn went upstairs, threw herself down on her neat bed, regardless of the harm to her white commencement dress, and wept bitterly.

The fact was that Prof. Bartlett was hideously poor. He was one of those brilliant and undernourished young men to whom the college president refers at each commencement when he states to an approving public that "eighteen per cent of the graduates of the present senior class have either wholly or in part supported themselves throughout their college course."

These young men, as he does not go on to state, are then so depleted in pocket that a source of income is a shrieking necessity. The ones who understand kilowatts or atomic weights can usually sink rather fast to low browed affluence in industry. For an exceptional young man, full of language and of facts about literature, an idealistic professorship usually offers. Such a professorship at the small, privately endowed college of Agatha served Prof. Bartlett's turn. To Agatha, therefore, with some debts remaining from his undergraduate struggle and with two venerable and now dependent parents, he thankfully turned.

He was sure of two thousand dollars a year. It looked like a fortune. It did, in fact, serve to keep going himself and his dependents in a degree of security which they had not known for many years. There was no question, however, of a family of four. Marriage for Prof. Bartlett was a remote dream.

The dream might rosily, nay, agonizingly, invite. But he was a gentleman. He dropped her pulsing fingers and Honour McMinn fled upstairs to weep.

Five commencements later her Aunt Delight said, as they walked home together: "Honour, why don't you strike out for yourself? There's nothing for a girl in Agatha."

Honour looked at her aunt, a wild hope in her eyes. At this particular commencement Prof. Bartlett had been so busy with the Academic Procession that he had not even looked her way. She had spent the five years since her own commencement teaching mathematics in the Agatha High School.

As her niece looked at her with large eyes, Aunt Delight continued, "I'm hale and hearty, I've got my friends, and I've money enough. It looks to me like you ought to light out of this town while you're young enough to get some good of it."

"Of course," she went on, after they were inside the house. "If that school board had any sense you and Prof. Bartlett could get married. But as soon as you got married they'd fire you. So there you are."

Honour turned very red.

"Prof. Bartlett has never said one word about getting married," she said bravely. Her aunt snorted.

"He don't need to say. It's written all over him whenever you come in sight. But you can't wait around in Agatha forever. If I was you, I'd strike out. "I could always send for you if there was any need."

It was this last suggestion that made Honour McMinn keep ready in her checking account the amount of her fare out to Agatha. Aunt Delight continued, however, to be hale and hearty. By the time Miss McMinn's inner self agreed that the headline should read Woman Thirty-eight, instead of Woman Twenty-eight, Aunt Delight was still more free from ills of the flesh than most women twenty years her junior. Her weekly letters gave a pleasant picture of daily life. She went to the Ladies' Aid, she sided with the minister in the church fight, she served two years on the town council, she was treasurer of the Woman's Club, she gave a tea for the new president's wife, she entertained the bridge club. She helped take care of Prof. Bartlett's mother in her last painful illness. She went three times a week, now, and read to the father, blind and bedridden and pitifully alone.

"Prof. Bartlett," she wrote, "is that thin he looks like you could pull him through a knot hole. He certainly does set store by your letters."

She reread Aunt Delight's letter, and with her second cup of coffee was ready for the morning paper. The smile and the color evoked by the allusion to Prof. Bartlett lingered as she scanned the news.

On this morning the insidious chemistry of Aunt Delight's allusion fermented throughout all phases of the morning ritual. By the time her mind apprehended that ice could still be rubbed over the face after it had been vigorously dashed with hot water, and that New York society expected to open its social season, as always, with the first night of grand opera, a decision had resulted as the precipitation of these contributing forces. Outwardly, the same neat, quiet, pleasantly sensible figure that always descended her five flights of stair, she emerged into the nine o'clock crispness of the late October morning inwardly a new woman. Not since that day over ten years before, when she had turned her back on Agatha had Honour McMinn so defied all those prudent inhibitions which were hers by hereditary right and environmental practice. Her inner self had, without argument or discussion, boiled to the surface.

She walked rapidly along by the iron picket fence around her little park, enjoying the flutter of autumn leaf, and color of bright coated favored children playing within its boundaries. She went half a square out of her way to pass Number Eighty, on whose tight lipped windows and boarded doorway she gazed with pleasurable excitement. Number Eighty's brown stone front and marble steps belonged to the Willy Westons, those interesting children of the gold spoon intelligentsia who lived in this old quarter and made themselves a center of intellectual friction. The morning paper had told her that the Willy Westons, whose domestic fortunes had seemed to be somewhat on the rocks, had become reconciled. She was returning this week from Paris and he from Alaska. Both would occupy their box in the golden horseshoe next Monday night.

Even as Miss McMinn walked briskly by, workmen were arriving to take down the boards from the doorway and unseal the tight lipped windows. She looked upon their activities with a brightly conspiring eye. Thanks to her breakfast chemistry, she felt herself to be a part of these goings on. The Willy Westons, occupying their box might be unaware of it, but she knew that in a good seven dollar seat, in range of their reconciled figures, would sit an appropriately gowned and coiffured New York woman, Thirty-Eight, but certainly not Unconscious. Her ears would be attuned to the harmonies of the stage, and her eyes would possess a keenness which no detail of domestic harmony could escape.

Her Saturday morning duties in the business office of the All-American Woolen Trades Journal were performed in her customary desiccated manner. She sent out bills for overdue subscriptions and advertisements of a new All-American line of plaids originating on the backs of American born sheep and progressing by successive patriotic stages to the hands of All-American wholesalers and retailers. She made out pay checks, gave good but unwelcome advice to the bleached stenographer and reached one o'clock without varying from her usual reliable and intelligent behavior.

At one she became a drop in the Niagara of human beings that poured out of her downtown skyscraper. There are drops that drop and drops that effervesce. Miss McMinn buoyantly bounded on the surface of her Niagara, permitting other drops to sink into their appropriate subways, while she headed toward those quiet cross streets along upper Fifth Avenue where beauty may be had by all who speak her password. In her neat brown handbag she could hear the password uttered by the voice of Money, talking as always with golden persuasiveness. She had drawn out on the way to the office a sum so eloquent that beauty, she was confident, would be submissive in her hand before the afternoon was over.

She lunched expensively at Etienne's and feasted her eyes as well as her digestion upon the food provided by his smart clientele and famous cuisine. Then with the golden voice still warbling within her handbag she set out upon her quest of Beauty.

The voice warbled in other hands by sundown, hands expert in effecting such exchange. It was an afternoon of happiness and full reward. Not in vain for ten years had Honour McMinn, breakfasting by her fifth story window, studied the riddle of What to Wear and How to Wear It. The same intelligence that had made her face vivid in seat thirty-two, row seven had incubated long the ideas provided by style shows, Beauty Hints and shop windows. The adequate and not unpleasing exterior visible to the world for the long decade burst its cocoon on this fateful Saturday and Honour McMinn's inner self knew as she gave her address to one courteous saleswoman after another that Beauty of the sort appropriate to thirty-eight would be hers when the opening strains of "Aida" fell upon her ears and the ears of the Willy Westons in their box in the golden horseshoe.

The brown handbag lay flat upon her bureau that night. Not a whisper came from it save the lonely whisper of her seven dollar ticket for the opening night. Miss McMinn had even walked home because there was not in its depths the necessary dime for bus fare along the avenue. Happiness sustained her feet along the way, however, and carried them up her five flights of stairs. Happiness flavored the soft boiled egg on which she dined and lent champagne quality to the cup of hot milk with which she washed down her evening buttered toast. As she dined Happiness stood about her in boxes. True to their given word, the courteous saleswomen had sent everything Special. Until nine o'clock breathless boys kept staggering up the five flights, each boy leaving a box mysteriously whispering of Happiness, present and to come.

By midnight Happiness had enveloped her.

eloped her.

She had seen herself in everything. Her ankles clad in pale gold silk were slender. Her foot in its brown suede shoe with its glittering buckles was a neat foot suddenly glorified. Silk lay next her whole body. Its outer sheath was quite in color and subtle in line. Her cloak was soberly magnificent.

"No one," she told herself proudly, "will look at me twice."

What she meant was that in the first night crowd decked in its finest she would not be an alien. She looked at her image and approved without reserve. The brocaded velvet evening cloak was better than metal cloth, less conspicuous, infinitely more to the manner born.

"It's wonderful," she said to herself happily in bed, lights out, creme emollient and astringent rubbed on and off again.

"It's wonderful, just for once, to have one grand splurge!"

On the morning after her dress parade Honour McMinn's pen flew on inspired wings. The actual had invaded her life sufficiently to make her discussion of the week's new play and the approach of grand opera glow with unusual verisimilitude. The boxes standing about her inspired a truthful description of just how she would look in her seven dollar seat.

"My seat," she said, "is close to the Willy Westons, my neighbors just across the square. They will both be back in time for the gala occasion."

Why should the letter go on to explain the well known truth that a neighbor in New York and a neighbor in Agatha differed in neighborliness as one star differeth from another in glory? Would it be Honour McMinn's fault if Aunt Delight went ahead and imagined interchanges of crab apple jelly, or neighborly walking side by side in the park in the evening? Decidedly, she could not be her aunt's keeper in the understanding of the English language.

The week went by, devoted to her usual routines, down at what Aunt Delight always referred to as My Niece's Magazine. The discrepancy there, again, rests on Aunt Delight's own shoulders. Some early letter had, of course, said that it was the All-American Wool Trade Magazine, and that Honour was in the business office. It was no fault of her niece if Aunt Delight thereupon identified her with New York's literary elect, and had even, in the decade, built up the belief that because of her connection with this Nw York magazine her niece got two free tickets to everything in town.

On Saturday afternoon she had a water wave, which accentuated the pleasant tendency of her hair to curl. On Saturday night she slept in a hair net, to give the thing a good set. The next morning a knock at her door disturbed the pouring of her morning coffee.

A Western Union boy handed to the cold fingers of Honour McMinn his yellow envelope. She signed and heard him running down the first of the five flights before she closed her door. As she tore open the envelope she knew that the long awaited emergency had arrived and that the call of Nature had come. She read the fateful message.

"Aunt Delight gravely injured motor accident urge come at once.

"GRANTLAND BARTLETT."

Ten words.

She was prepared for the telegram, in a way. Even the splendid extravagance of yesterday had not destroyed the nest egg laid by for this moment. Yet who is ever quite prepared for the ten important words when Fate actually speaks them?

Her first thought, after she finished blushing over the implied intimacy of the word Grantland, was, "I can give my ticket to that bleached stenographer. She'll look ridiculous in that seat."

Such was her efficiency that two o'clock the next afternoon saw her, with all packing done, complete arrangements made at the offices of the All-American Woolen Trade Journal for an indefinite absence, her first night seat given to the bleached stenographer, her ticket to Agatha stowed in her brown handbag, and herself in her Pullman speeding westward. At the hour when the opening strains of "Aida," reached the ears of the Willy Westons, Honour McMinn was climbing soberly into upper ten, withdrawing her neat ankle from the top of the stepladder, and thinking as she did so that in all probability she would never see it again in a pale gold silk stocking.

She had put Happiness into her trunk after some debate. Would Agatha ever offer her any opportunity for the velvet dress and the brocade evening coat? Then she remembered that Aunt Delight would love it. How badly were people hurt when gravely injured?

Gravely, she reflected, as she lay in upper ten, was a characterisic word. No one but Grantland Bartlett would have used it in a telegram. Grantland! As she found herself thinking it her cheeks burned becomingly in the darkness of her berth.

A day and a night beyond Chicago lay Agatha. It was Grantland Bartlett's face that she saw waiting for her in the early morning sunshine outside the new station. For all the excitement of seeing that the station was new, she saw all too clearly that he was too thin, too pale, and that his neat suit had seen more than one season. His smile, as his outstretched hand helped her down from the platform of the Overland, was as she remembered it as she sat in seat thirty-two, row seven.

"Aunt Delight?" she asked him.

"Making a remarkable recovery! An indomitable, an amazing woman."

He was getting her into a little car as he described the accident. Aunt Delight had skidded, as she rounded the corner by the postoffice. Her car collided with a telegraph pole. She had gone through the windshield. Her first words on regaining consciousness had been, "Send for Honour!"

After all, her injuries had been less grave than was at first feared. There was a broken wrist, a badly sprained ankle, some lacerations about the head that bled profusely, but turned out to be fairly superficial. There was shock and weakness. And almost every hour of the day there was the wish that Honour would come.

He left her at the familiar doorstep, and she heard his little car making extraordinary reports of progress as it disappeared up the street. Up in the serene expanses of her old four-poster she found Aunt Delight, looking like a rosy Turk in her head bandages.

"Turn around and let me see your back," she commanded as her niece entered. "Is that where they have the fullness now in New York? You never said if you cut your hair or not. My opinion is it's going out."

Honour kissed her venerable relative.

"Darling!" she said, her voice a little tremulous and her eyes wet. Suddenly it seemed to her that she had been away a long time, that Agatha was a sweet, green, shady town, and that Aunt Delight's quiet bedroom was heaven.

"Tell me, really, how you are."

"I'm all right," said Aunt Delight, in a surprisingly hearty voice. "First time I'd tried to drive the thing alone. I took a car full of neighbors out to Prof. Bartlett's father's funeral. He was eighty-nine, and hadn't seen a thing for five years, poor soul! Fortunately, I'd got everybody home. Nobody hurt but me. And I'd insured it for all kinds of accidents. I'm glad your skirts are short. No use in getting old before your time. Nobody does these days. I'm young myself as I ever was."

The one eye not obscured by bandages verified by its brightness all that she had said.

"I've got Prof. Bartlett's housekeeper now He don't have much need of her, except for meals, and he's coming over here for dinners."

Honour McMinn, sitting by her injured aunt's bedside, blushed a becoming blush. A picture had formed itself before her eyes of herself at Aunt Delight's old pie crust table facing Grantland Bartlett. There would, she foresaw, be many dinners before the venerable invalid sat with them. As she looked solicitously into her aunt's one visible eye she knew that the accident had been deplorable. She realized again the pang that she had felt as she tore open the telegram. She knew afresh that she owed years of devotion to her aunt. And yet there bounded in ther veins an irrelevant joy that she had brought along in her trunk the pale gold stockings, the brocaded velvet wrap, and the quiet but undeniably good afternoon dress of that rosy shade of gray that made her eyes so blue. The dress had been a mere incident in her career on that memorable Saturday afternoon two weeks ago.

"As soon as your trunk comes," said Aunt Delight, "I want you should show me all your New York clothes. I'm having the Ladies' Aid on Tuesday. You'll have to put them all on. We're studying women of the harems, but since I'm sick, and they're meeting in my bedroom and all, I guess it'll be all right."

Not only was she guest of honor at the next Fraternity luncheon, but she was booked for a speech before the Literary Twelve, and for a series of talks on "Tendencies in Modern Drama and Art" before Prof. Bartlett's seniors.

"Your letters," he told her over the third dinner table together, "have been an inspiration. Your wonderful aunt shared them with me. And my classes profited. There was something so warm and vital in the pictures you conveyed that no amount of reading of reviews could give. My boys and girls owe you much more than they owe me."

Honour McMinn, seeing his eager face across the piecrust table, did not know what to say.

She wore the rosy afternoon gown to each of them. The young creatures sat about her entranced. She was not in their eyes Honour McMinn, old maid niece of Mrs. Witherspoon. She was that fascinating modern, a bachelor woman, with ten years behind her of life in the inner literary circles of New York, a woman of sophistication, grace and charm, modishly attired, a woman from whose lips dropped jewels of mystery and romance.

"She paid eighty-five dollars a month for one room," the whisper went around. And her talk on modernist sculpture sank deep into their young minds.

Aunt Delight's recovery, despite her good cheer and excellent appetite, was slow. Long after the broken wrist was out of its splint the strained knee kept her in bed. Something proved to be the matter with her back as well. It caught her when she tried to rise. Undue exertion also brought on headaches. There were, the doctor said, undoubted contusions that could not be lightly taken in one of her age.

It was indeed, the end of a rainy March before Aunt Delight did more than perhaps walk about her room each day. She never dined below stairs. For four months Honour reigned as arbiter on style and literature in Agatha. For four months she and Prof. Bartlett faced each other at pleasant dinners upon the piecrust table. Then on the evening after the March faculty tea, at which she had been a special guest and the new president's wife had shown her marked attention, she faced him, charming in her bois de rose gown, and realized his manner was distrait. He did not look at her as usual. He was pale. He had eaten little of the housekeeper's excellent dinner. They rose from the table after an almost silent meal. Forboding gripped her. This was how he had looked long ago on that dreadful commencement day.

Yet when she made as if to go up to the invalid's room he checked her.

"I must tell you something," he said.

He began once more with what her letters had done for him."

"Out here in this little place," he told her,

THE MOON

By Setrak Baker, 1129 North Allen Avenue, Pasadena

When last night I had gone to bed
I saw the moon shine overhead.
The moon was big and round and bright,
It filled my room with glowing light.

I watched the moon for hours and hours;
It climbed o'er hills, and trees, and towers.
And on, and on it sailed up high.
Above the clouds across the sky.

It sailed below the twinkling stars.
Beside the ruddy planet Mars.
It seemed that they were in a race—
The planet, and the big round face.

The moon was traveling in hgh speed,
And going very fast, indeed!
It neared its journey's end at last,
And quickly, out of sight it passed.

SUNRISE

By Ruth Schofield Clothier, Pocatello, Idaho

I

I chanced to be on a hill one morn,
Where the sun would soon rise high,
And I saw some pinkish clouds,
In the blue, blue, azure sky.

II

The eastern sky was a color bright,
The color of red so bold,
And around the spot where the sun would rise,
Was tinted a burnished gold.

III

Then up from the hill rose the sun so bright,
A beautiful golden hue,
And the sky that had once been burnished gold,
Now turned to a deeper blue.

IV

As the sun rose higher in the sky,
The color faded away,
And left a clear blue morning sky,
The dawn of a perfect day.

ROSES

By Bernice Gibbs, Age 15 Years, 5206 South St. Andrews Place, Los Angeles.

Velvety petals of rosy hue,
Half-ope'd buds glistening with dew,
A milkmaid, buxom lass in frock of blue,
Roses at dawn.

Creamy petals of perfect mold,
Full-blown blossoms tinged with gold,
A shepherdess tending her fleecy fold,
Roses at noon.

Perfumed blossoms, beauties rare,
Dream potions of the dusky air,
A lovesick lass in a garden fair,
Roses at twilight.

IRRESISTIBLE

Margaret Kostowal, 8544 Anzac avenue, Los Angeles.

Is it the blue of your eyes
The charm of your smile,
What is it about you?
That ne'er fails to beguile?

We girls all watch you,
With anxious despair
As you take all our sweethearts
Without turning a hair.

When Bob goes with Doris,
He raves about you,
At all of the dances,
My Jim sees only you.

Though we primped and we powdered
And curled our hair
The fine summer boarder
Hardly knew we were there.

It can't be your looks,
For others more fair
Don't stand a chance
Whenever you're there.

Just everyone loves you,
Thinks you a dear,
Everyone pets you
And wants you near.

This, the secret enchantment
We discovered at last,
Is to seek what is right,
And stick to it fast.

It's that gives you power
The world to win,
Gives you sweetness and charm
Immunity from sin.

AUNT DOLLY AND THE T.J.C.

By B. Anna Louise Spalding

Now we'll sing a song for Aunt Dolly
And her club for all the world.
With its arms stretched wide to help
All the needy people here.

Chorus:

Hurrah for the T.J.C.
Aunt Dolly and members, too;
So here's to the health of the T.J.C.
From sea to shining sea.

Though the T.J.C. is growing,
And one goal is nearly won,
We always are striving still,
For a bigger and better club.

With our motto of Truth, Love and Courage
We're always sure to win
Till our club is all over the wide, wide world
And our banner waves on high.

TO AUNT DOLLY

By Helen McMillan, Montebello.

We owe it all to you, Aunt Dolly,
You are always so true
And always so jolly,
We love your ways
And bless our days,
When we're with you and the T.J.C.

We owe it all to you, dear aunt,
For the Truth, Love and Courage
That you plant.
And many a child and mother, too,
Has trusted and put her faith in you.

THOUGHTS

By Ellen Snebley, 731 Cypress avenue, Santa Ana.

A leaf, which, tossed in windblown sky,
Carried my mournful spirits high—
And, in that tiny scarlet flame
Were joy and hope, without a name.

A crystal star fell through the night,
Carrying with it, in its flight
The shining beauty of the night;
Alas! Such is emotion's might.

TIGER'S WHISKERS IN BRISK DEMAND

CHINESE EXCITED AS TRAPPED MAN-EATER'S MOUSTACHE IS AUCTIONED

A few days ago in Wuchow there was an uproar of unusual proportions, and an enormous crowd was gathered on the river shore, jostling around some mysterious cargo just landed from a river junk. The center of interest proved to be a long, cylindrical crate, made of stout bamboo and rattan, through the meshes of which could be seen an immense man-eating tiger which had been crippled and trapped near by.

The tiger's hind feet were drawn forward and up, and were held by stout thongs over his back. His fore paws were tightly bound, and in his mouth was tied a bamboo gag. He could neither bite nor claw, but he could roar, and he did.

His whiskers were being auctioned off—one at a time.

The whiskers of a tiger are popularly supposed to bring good luck. Moreover, cut into small bits, they are said to make a potent medicine, and Chinese esteem them highly.

The whiskers sold for about 20 cents each and the buyer took the privilege of yanking out his purchase. He really did not have to yank, for as soon as thumb and forefinger closed on the chosen whisker the tiger would roar, and the purchaser, falling back with fright, would simply drag the whisker with him as he fell over.—[New York World.

CLUB RULES

To join "The Times Junior Club" you must be:

A clean-cut sport.

This means good fellowship under all conditions.

Pussy-foots not allowed!

Tattle-tales are out!

Trouble-makers are given their hats.

It's all right to advise, but never criticise.

Snobs are not wanted.

Money couldn't buy your way into "The Times Junior Club."

It's your heart that counts!

Clothes mean nothing to us, neither does creed nor nationality.

We do not care where you live!

We have members all over the world.

But you must pay your dues!

Must be loyal.

Must be true.

And don't forget to visit our clubrooms.

And bring in your friends.

Boom, boost, promote your club.

Be a go-getter, a "do-it-now" type.

And we will enroll you at once!

You must memorize the following:

OUR CLUB MOTTO IS:

Truth, love, courage.

SEVEN SIMPLE CLUB RULES

To know that the courage which is born of a merciful, just heart casts out all fear.

To adhere to cleanliness of soul and body!

To respect and recognize the Immortal Spirit governing all men and all things upon the face of this earth.

To find, and pass along, true happiness.

To give of all good things bestowed upon us, with no thought of reward.

To protect and help those who may be in need of our services.

To respect the law, and help keep public grounds in an orderly condition.

LITERARY RULES

We are in the market for short stories ranging from 250 to 1000 words in length. All manuscripts must be typewritten on one side of paper only, or written clearly and legibly in black ink. Be sure to place your name and address in upper left-hand corner. All contributions must be strictly original, although you may choose any subject you wish. Stories may be illustrated with one picture or more. The same rules apply to poetry. No copying allowed! Prizes range from $1 to $10 for best material submitted.

ART RULES

Art rules should be followed to the letter. All drawings must be original, of course; those caught copying will be expelled from the club. Pictures must be done in black drawing ink on white bristol board. Do not fold, roll or crease. If you sketch your drawing in pencil, be sure to remove all traces with a soft eraser or we cannot use it. We use illustrations, cover pages, comics and silhouettes, paying $10 for the front-page drawing and $2.50 each for prize-winning comic strips.

Our magazine-cover contest calls for a finished picture, 10x12½ inches. Pictures submitted on small scraps of paper in blue ink or colors will be rejected. Aim to keep your work clean, neat and attractive in appearance.

ALL ABOUT YOUR DUES

Club dues should be paid promptly on the first of each month. The lowest amount we accept is 10 cents, though payment is not obligatory. This is a club for all. Mail all dues to Aunt Dolly, The Times Junior Club, Los Angeles Times, Los Angeles, Cal. Stamps are not acceptable. Wrap money in slip of paper, or cut small hole in strip of cardboard, just large enough to hold coin.

Many skilled workers who left Hongkong during the strike last June have refused to return to the city and many industrial plants consequently are handicapped.

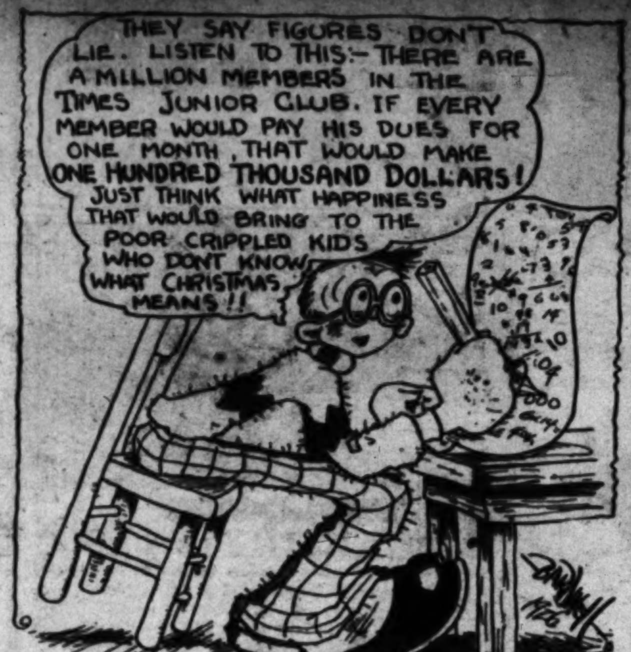
GIVE AND YOU WILL RECEIVE!

Remember Our Club's Christmas Drive by Mailing That Gift Now and so Avoid Confusion.



THEY SAY FIGURES DON'T LIE. LISTEN TO THIS:—THERE ARE A MILLION MEMBERS IN THE TIMES JUNIOR CLUB. IF EVERY MEMBER WOULD PAY HIS DUES FOR ONE MONTH, THAT WOULD MAKE ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS! JUST THINK WHAT HAPPINESS THAT WOULD BRING TO THE POOR CRIPPLED KIDS WHO DON'T KNOW WHAT CHRISTMAS MEANS!!

Christmas is coming! Such old, yet golden words. This year it has an especially endearing sound, as The Times Junior Club has gone over the top with a smash. Last week local members doubled their contributions, thus swelling our Yuletide fund to substantial proportion. That's the spirit! Stand in back of your club, and see the big drive go over with a smash.

Those who promised to donate personal gifts, however, have been quite negligent. Our stock is low, so get busy and make that little treasure today. If you yourself were confined in a hospital or institution, think how welcome a nicely-wrapped package would be on Christmas morning.

Many people confine their gift activities to a narrow circle of personal friends. Of course, this is quite in order, but it is not as commendable as giving freely to the needy youngsters all about us. In other words, broaden your mind and motives and you will find a lot more happiness in this topsy-turvy old world.

Be sure to make, or buy that gift and mail it as quickly as possible, so that last-minute confusion will be avoided. If you follow these suggestions you will make Aunt Dolly's own Christmas ten times more pleasant. For four long years she has been utterly exhausted on this day of days, due to stacks of gifts being delivered just as the trucks pull out.

Be kind, generous and considerate; if you are, your reward will be adequate.

CHRISTMAS SUGGESTIONS

By [illegible] Scott, [illegible] South Alvarado Street, Los Angeles

CHRISTMAS DAINTIES

Four level tablespoonfuls of gelatine, one and one-half cupfuls of boiling water, four cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of cold water.

Soak gelatine in cold water five minutes. Add boiling water. When dissolved add the sugar and boil slowly for fifteen minutes. When cool add flavoring. Pour into shallow tins that have been dipped in cold water. Let stand overnight. Cut in squares, roll in finely granulated or powdered sugar. Let stand to crystalline.

Any coloring or flavoring may be used. Finely chopped nuts or raisins also may be added.

FRUIT CAKE DELIGHTS

Cut fruit cake in small cubes or strips. Dip each shape into coating chocolate or melted fondant and drop on wax paper to harden.

This makes a very attractive Christmas candy.

[illegible]

Dates are delicious when stuffed with soft cream cheese, peanut butter, nuts or fig jam.

Figs also are good when stuffed. After the dates have been stuffed, roll in cocoanut, granulated sugar or powdered sugar.

Another recipe for stuffing dates is this:

Chop very fine a cupful of English walnuts. Add three tablespoonfuls of sugar and the grated rind of half an orange. Moisten with orange juice.

WRAPPING SUGGESTIONS

A long, flat package looks pretty when tied with a wide red ribbon with a big bow at either end.

Red paper and white ribbon look attractive together in wrapping a Christmas present. A silhouette of a boy or girl (it depends upon whether it is intended for a boy or a girl) may be pasted on the ribbon.

An ordinary glass with a design painted on the top and side makes an attractive container for candy and cookies.

For the writer an inexpensive gift can be made by making an attractive book of colored paper. Several original stories may be typewritten inside on white paper. Brightly-colored pictures can be cut from magazines and pasted in to illustrate the book.

QUESTION BOX

nights out of the week? I'll wager they never go to bed until the cock crows.

Now, I don't want to be a prude, but is this sort of thing right? Does it pay? Will they win in the end? Please tell me what you think. I'm all muddled.

Admiringly yours,
[Signed] PHILIP VAN G.

Phil, dear:

The broad open road, bound round [illegible] the very young, but it will [illegible] to drab and stale that not even the brightest lighted hall at the beach will have an appeal. You see youngsters who have not tasted night life are thirsty to experiment, but many of them go to excess, with the result that their worn bodies cannot support an active brain. Hence, they run down in business, while the sturdier, sensible boys climb over their shoulders into the $1,000,000 class.

One of the cleverest business men I ever talked to, once made this remark, "No, I never dissipated when I was young, not because I didn't want to, but because I figured youth was worth a fortune if rightly conserved. One does not take $1000 and throw it away, but wisely places it in the bank, allowing it to accumulate interest. This is what my temperate living did for me. At 32 I became president of my concern, and still feel as fresh as I did at 18. I didn't want to ruin it, mar it, and weaken myself, so that when the really big strains came in life I wouldn't be able to cope with them. Plenty of sleep and outdoor exercise have made me able to decide instantly many big questions that had older men stumped completely."

So you see, Phil dear, he is right. Either we throw away our strength and youth for a pittance, or we cash in very materially. The dance-mad crowds are growing by leaps and bounds. Study the pale "fatigue" faces of boys in their teens; we see "beach resorts" stamped hopelessly upon them. Their eyes are dull, their cheeks are pale, and, by and by, their bank accounts will be flatter than the proverbial flannel cakes.

You are doing the right thing by turning your back on excessive indulgences. It isn't prudishness, merely good common sense. Do write me soon again, Phil; I would love to hear from you.

Devotedly yours,
AUNT DOLLY.

JOYFUL HUNDREDS AT CLUB PARTY

HALLOWEEN FESTIVAL MARKS DIVISION IN RANKS OF MEMBERS

One of the most joyful masquerade balls ever staged in Los Angeles came to an end last evening when The Times Junior Club closed the doors on its first big senior hi-jinks. It was an affair for high school and college students, and it went over with the usual verve and pep of our club parties.

The Forum roof-garden was turned into a courtyard for grinning witches and withered hobgoblins. It saw a parade of hundreds of fanciful, brilliant costumes that will be hard to forget. In fact it was a truly magnificent array. There were dusty miners with tin plates and clumsy boots, pretty, wee misses peeking from beneath sunbonnets, and brown curls wagged, and tongues wagged harder, as a superjazz orchestra blared forth its merry strains. Then came refreshments, more laughter and more joy for four long hours.

This Halloween ball marked a radical division of activities as our club juniors and seniors will now have separate interests.

The fact that many of our seniors cannot attend parties during the daylight hours is one reason for drawing this line. Many of our seniors are working or going to part-time school in the afternoon, so it is impossible to plan day-time festivals. On the other hand it is absolutely wrong to have young children on the streets after dark, so this is the essential reason why all our junior affairs hereafter will be staged while the sun still rides high in the sky.

But this is not the only change in club life. Next Sunday many important announcements will appear on this page, as our Saturday-morning meetings are being reorganized along similar lines. There will be many more superfeatures for our younger juniors. Games will be played, a story hour established; in fact it will be a wholly delightful surprise for those still attending grammar school.

One thing more, there will be a special letter box erected in our clubrooms for all letters posted via air mail to Santa Claus. The T.J.C. headquarters are making ample provision for thousands of letters to be mailed direct to the North Pole. Simply drop in with your little note any time it is convenient, then put it in our big chute, and it will go fast as the wind to Santa Claus's own castle in the white and frozen North.

Keep all these important things in mind. Remember there are going to be radical changes, all for the betterment of the club during the busy winter months. You must read The Junior Times if you would keep in touch with our new activities.

A LITERARY ROLL OF HONOR

How good a literary critic are you? Here are some stories written by members of The Times Junior Club. Pick out the ones that you like best and write Aunt Dolly a letter telling why you like them. For the best letter received a $2.50 cash prize will be awarded. A similar cash award will be made to the writer of the story that receives the most votes in this contest. This contest is for all, so let us see just how good a literary critic you are. There will be another similar literary contest next week. AUNT DOLLY.

THE BLACKEST MEMBER OF THE PET FAMILY

By Onelee Jones, 12 years of age, 4163 Halldale avenue, Los Angeles.

"I wonder who the thief can be?" said little Ann to her twin brother, who was playing that he was chief of police, while Ann was only a plain-clothes officer of the staff.

"We'll catch that miscreant that took my knife and grandma's spectacles," said the proud little chief of police.

"Yes, and my pretty new pink pencil and baby's eating spoon and my hairpins that mama gave me to play dress-up-lady with after she bobbed her hair," interrupted little Ann.

"We'll get our patrol wagon out," they agreed. The "patrol wagon" was Sporteki, their dog. They tied a paper license on Sporteki's tail and pretended he was the patrol, for he could make a big noise barking when he ran.

The play police and their dog patrol hid behind the big rose bush and watched the house to catch the thief for things were being missed every single day.

It was hard for them to keep quiet though for all of their pets found them. Their duck, the black cat and her kittens, their black bantam hen, the pigeon and their pet crow. My, what a noise they all did make. The duck had to quack, the kittens meowed, the chicken scratched dirt into the dog's face and caused him to bark so loud that they were sure he would scare the thief away and especially when the crow began to "caw! caw!" Then crow-like, he picked at their shoes, buttons and rings until they got to giggling, which was indeed against the dignity of well-bred police people. They would simply have to scare their pets away or give up their detective work.

They were sure that cats and chickens were never supposed to enter a police office, so they began to say, "Shoo! Shoo!" to scare them away.

They were finally alone and all quiet except old Mr. Crow. He "cawed" a time or two as he sat perched on the upstair window sill preening his feathers, but finally he too quieted down and flew inside the room.

Suddenly they heard the flap, flap of wings and there flew their beloved crow with Ann's pretty red T.J.C. pin.

The crow evidently wanted to be a member of the wonderful Times Junior Club or else he was a plain thief. Oh! what were they to do? They ran after him until they saw him light in a big hollow tree.

The little chief of police shinned up the tree and what do you suppose? There they found almost enough loot to start a 5-and-10-cent store. The biggest question now was what should be done with the crow?

They would surely have to make the grape arbor into a jail and fasten him in there.

They wondered if real policemen felt so sad when they have to put a man in jail for being a thief. They felt very sorry for their pet crow for he had inherited that weakness from his great, great, great grandfather crow. They gave him one of the dozen or more pretty T.J.C. pins that he had taken from the different houses and let him keep it for his very own and he was so proud of it that he held it in his claws and "cawed" over it until everyone had to laugh.

Who knows? He may mend his ways and become a real T.J.C., some day, but if anyone loses his pin from this on, do not say "the crow got it," for he never gets out any

AWARDED PRIZE FOR "LIFE" STORY

AN EXPERIENCE OF THE SOUL WINS HONORS FOR WRITER IN CLUB CONTEST

A tale of a soul's faring is the winner of a our "life" story contest this week. "Into His Kingdom" is an actual experience, the writer stated in submitting his manuscript.

AUNT DOLLY.

"INTO HIS KINGDOM"

By Raymond Lee, 1712 St. James Court, Hollywood

A mist overhung the slumbering mountains, mountains that had drowsily viewed the pageant of man's 2000 years of existence. A dull group of unfurled clouds crept slowly into the heavens; a chilling wind driving them through the mist.

A jay screetched, the sound being relayed through the entire canyon. The wind caressed the bushy tops of the pines, while the breath of new-born grass sweetened the air, a scent of heavenly purity.

This mighty stage was to be my abode for two weeks. Truly it was a background from which a thousand tales might be woven. It was a scenery of a play which had been applauded by hundreds and thousands in the dead centuries.

I was here for quiet, to see nature and its wonders, to breathe of its perfumes, to wander in its palaces of eternal beauty. Like a dream, mysterious, unfathomable, I penetrated the forest.

In ecstasy I fixed my eyes upon the snow-capped mountains, the pale-tinted valleys, the purring streams, the chattering squirrels, and one or two sleepy moles.

The deep purple of night soon glided over the lofty ranges and stole into my resting place like heated gold oozes through a mass of rock and sand. It was night.

I kindled a fire and broiled a fresh trout I had caught but an hour previous. Shadows enveloped the trees and cast their cloaks of blackness upon the bubbling stream near by.

There seated by this tiny fire, with the flames drawing weird pictures upon my face and the surrounding trees, with the silence of night, the silence of a tongue in death, about me; I knew that I had found God, had wandered into His kingdom.

The grandeur of the mighty trees, pillars upholding the heavens, the last crimson staining the sky as the monarch of day died; the unseen wind rustling at my heels, the benediction of a hoot owl, and the godliness of the canyon: animated my soul. I slept.

Aunt Dolly's Question Box

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

What a blessing to think we have you at our back in time of trouble and perplexity. Surely it is a gratification to one and all, especially those who are gradually growing up.

Now this seems the very trouble. A boy of 18 is supposed to be a man or he is so gauged by the world, but, Aunt Dolly, it's the rockiest period of his life. I am 19 now, and have been struggling for the last twelve months to get my balance.

For certain reasons that I do not care to mention, a college education was necessarily denied me, and I went to work as soon as I completed my high-school course. Well, it was the usual thing. A change of companionship, different crowds, more sophisticated, more grown-up, a worldly thoughtless outfit. The fellows who work in my department draw good salaries, but spend most of it, like women, on their clothes, and the rest goes into a dance-hall fund. This is the appalling thing: must young fellows actually live at the beach, six

GAY BIRDS MAKE THE BEST WARRIORS

Gay birds are the hardy athletes of the feathered world, according to a theory advanced by C. H. Henshaw, a London naturalist.

Male birds are forced to be dashingly beautiful in order to attract the more sober-colored females, Mr. Henshaw explains. But a bird that wears scarlet, blue or orange feathers and that sings loudly and otherwise makes himself conspicuous, must be sturdy and alert if he is to survive long enough to establish a home and raise a family. He is as much a target for his enemies as the warrior who used to dash into battle wearing a red coat and riding a white horse.

How all this illustrates the old principle of the survival of the fittest is shown by Mr. Henshaw, who says: "The better mate an animal can get, the more chance its descendants will have of survival, and it is obvious that a male that has to face more danger and yet manages to survive has in all probability a greater capacity for keeping alive than one which lives through less danger. Therefore the female that chooses a mate with a dangerous habit or structure chooses what is, aside from the dangerous part, a better and more fit mate."

This tends to raise the vitality of the bird species, he says, because the male bird's vitality is inherited by both sexes of his family, although his hazardous beauty is handed on only to his male descendants.—[Science Service.

Aunt Dolly's Letter Box

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

I am sending you my membership blank, all filled out, and can hardly wait till I know it has reached you and I am a member of the largest, snappiest, best club in all the world. Long live The Junior Times!

Also I am sending a short story of mine, and hope you will like it. Do you think if I work real hard, auntie, I might see an article of mine in the best little paper going? I am going to try very hard, and some day may be, quien sabe?

Hoping you like my story, I remain,
Yours of the best club going.
[Signed]
EOLINE BARNEY,
1314 West Thirty-six street. Los Angeles.

My dear Aunt Dolly:

I have never written to you before, and now I have at last succumbed to the desire to write. I surely admire the gallant spirit in which the members of the T.J.C., go about their business in writing such a wonderful paper. It appears to me that each one takes his task and proceeds with such faithfulness that they act as if they had done it for centuries. They all love you. Well, so do I, only I wish I could be acquainted.

I want some one to be a pal. I guess all your girl members would make good pals, but I think you'd made the "bestest" pal on "oith."

I want to join your club, and I want to come down to your meetings and pitch in like any real sport would. I swim, play hockey and tennis. I'm fifteen and I am going to Fairfax High School. I wish to say that I will welcome any one who will be my new pal. Please publish this letter, so that some one will "brace up" and write to me. I will send my picture when you answer me and tell me whether I may or not.

I must close. Hoping to hear from you and many others real soon.

Lovingly yours,
[Signed]
FRANCES CUMISKEY,
118½ South Oxford street, Los Angeles.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I just couldn't wait to open your letter when it came. I thought it was the slowest letter I ever had opened. Ah! I was outside playing with the kittens when my sister came up from the mail box and said there was a letter for me. I was sure it was from you, so when she handed me the blue envelope I just leaped for joy, for then I knew it was sure from you.

I am going to send you a poem to be entered in your wonderful contests, for if I didn't do something I would feel as if I didn't belong to the T.J.C.

I am sure sorry I can't come to your meetings, but I wil be a booster of the T.J.C., in Redlands, and have my friends join.

I am sending 25 cents for my club dues.

Your happy niece,
[Signed]
HOPE PARKER,
Star route, box 11, Redlands.

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

I hope you are feeling cheerful and well. I do. I'm sending you a puzzle that I think you might be able to use in The Junior Times for the boys and girls to solve.

Also I am sending you my club dues, which I worked for by doing the cafeteria dishes. They are for three months. I surely think your club is very wonderful, and I hope it's done as much for everybody as it has for me. Ever since I've belonged to the T.J.C. I've had good luck and success. Your club is something like a little verse I know, "May your life be like a fried egg, "sunny side up." This is meant for everybody.

I must close now.

Lovingly yours,
[Signed]

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

I have read so much about your club. I would just love to join, and become a real active member, and wear your wonderful crimson button. I will boom and boost your club all I can, and will tell my friends about your jolly club.

Please write and tell me all about your contests and the amount of your club dues, for I want to help out in your most wonderful work.

Devotedly yours,

A HALLOWEEN NIGHT'S EXPERIENCE

By Virginia N. Morgan, 146 North Stafford avenue, Huntington Park.

Last Halloween night our club held a party in the high school. We played quite a few games until about 9:30.

It was hardly noticed that three of the girls went out of the room. Soon one girl came back and announced that, one by one, the girls were to be taken out and they were to do exactly what they were told. This, of course, excited interest, and the girl took one of the guests out, and in about five minutes the usher returned.

"Next victim," said she in an imperative tone.

I arose, volunteering to be the "next victim." The usher took me out in the hall. After blindfolding me, she took me in a dark corner and turned me around several times until I lost my sense of direction. She then walked me up and down in different halls until I had no idea where I was. We next entered into a room where I was bound by an oath of secrecy. The oath was in verse and meant that I was not to disclose to the other guests what I had gone through. I was put in a smaller room for a few minutes and then taken out. My blindfold having been removed, I saw that the room was perfectly dark, and I was led to a table and told to lie down on it. I could see nothing but visions of sheeted specters moving about. A "ghost" held my feet down while another held my arms over my head.

Someone began singing in a low, chanting voice. This alone gave me a cold chill up and down my spine, but suddenly a cold, clammy thing went over my face and down my arms. I couldn't help giving a startled shriek. The low chant continued, and the white creature, whom I could see very dimly, kept touching me with the cold thing which made me think of the hand of a ghost. Moans sounded at intervals from different parts of the room.

The "ghost" chanted these words, accentuating the uncanniness with a cold touch:

"The worms crawl out, and the worms crawl in.
They crawl all over your mouth and chin."

The "ghost" put a dragging tone on "mouth and chin."

When I was just about to scream again, the lights were turned on, and I beheld three of my girl friends, draped in sheets, and another girl watching the scene, doubled up with suppressed laughter.

Imagine my surprise and mirth when I found that the supposed clammy hand of the ghost was merely an old rubber glove with ice water in it!

THE PRINCESS WHO WOULDN'T BE SERIOUS

By Carolyn Hyman, 1035 1-2 West Eighteenth Street, Los Angeles

"His most gracious majesty, the king, will award to any person 1000 pieces in gold to the one who can make the Princess Maria serious," read the herald to a large crowd of people in the Kingdom of Parmonia.

The Princess Maria was the only child of Queen Olivia and King Agathon. From her earliest infancy, she had always been of a vivacious nature. She was never known to be sad or serious. There were times though when she should have been serious, but she never was. The king and queen began to worry about this, for she was the only heir to the kingdom and it was necessary for the kingdom to be ruled wisely and well. Nevertheless, Maria took everything lightly and as a matter of course. At last the king and queen began to endeavor to try to make her more serious at times. But they may as well have tried to stop a laughing brook.

They began telling her different kinds of sad stories; but she laughed and made fun of every one of them. Another time the chief counsellor went into the royal nursery and began to break all her beautiful toys. But the princess jumped up and down, crying, "Do it again! Do it again!" and began to break them, too. So there was nothing to do at last but to try another plan. People came from all over the kingdom in the hope of gaining the award; but it was all in vain.

Now a mile away from the capital, lived a little girl with her mother. Her name was Frances. She and her mother worked in the garden and obtained their living by that way. One day while they were working in the garden, Frances said, "Mother, I am tired of staying here where we never see anything interesting. I would like to obtain the award of the 1000 pieces of gold." Her mother at first objected; but after a great deal of coaxing finally consented to let her go. When she arrived at the capital she asked an aged woman where the royal palace was. She was told to go in the southern direction and she wouldn't fail to find it. A feeling of awe came upon her as she gazed upon the palace of white marble gleaming in the sunshine.

She knocked on one of the great oaken doors, and when the porter came, told her errand rather timidly. As she was standing in the hallway the queen came in. An amused smile lit up her face. "For," thought she, "how can a child like that succeed when so many have failed? Nevertheless, she spoke kindly to her and on learning her errand showed her into the nursery and closed the door.

Minutes and hours passed dexterously. At last the king and queen opened the door and went inside with the whole court. Could they believe their eyes? There sat little Frances with the princess beside her on the floor. Frances was telling her a story, while the tears were rolling down the princess's cheeks.

The queen walked over to Frances and took her hand. "How can I ever thank you for what you have done!" she exclaimed.

"Oh, mamma, please let Frances stay here with me," begged the princess. "Name the reward that you would like, my child," said the queen. "Nothing much, except that my mother could come and live with me," said Frances shyly.

"That, my children is the whole story," said Grandmother Perkins to the five wide-eyed children around her feet by the fireside.

"Gee! she's sure lucky," said little Tim thoughtfully.

"How I would have loved to have been little Frances," exclaimed Myrtle, the oldest of the five, her cheeks red and her eyes shining. "I don't doubt that she was the happiest little girl in the whole kingdom."

NO COMPLICATIONS TO JUSTICE IN ABYSSINIA

Abyssinia is a country without lawyers, explains Rosita Forbes, famous woman explorer, in an article telling how the East solves its crime problem in Liberty, "for there are no courts except for foreign nationals in the capital. Any respected citizen may act as judge. Seated by the roadside, or in the open market, he will listen patiently. The witnesses will often mimic the whole scene.

"If one man accuses another of crime, they are chained togehter until the case can be adjudged. If the couple are of opposite sexes, the plaintiff has to produce a man or woman of his own family, according to the sex of the defendant, to be chained to him or her until judgment is given.

"Death can be imposed only by the Empress or her regent. Treason or any crime against the imperial person is punished by slow strangulation in the public market. Ordinary cases of murder are often settled on a basis of blood money. If blood money is refused, the murderer is taken to the potters' field outside the city and handed over to the family of his victim.

"He must be killed exactly as he killed—by knife or bullet or rope, as the case may be. Two policemen stand by to see that no torture is committed."

WIN AWARDS IN PLAYERS' DIVISION

Many Headliners [illegible] Added to List [illegible] Club's Winter Theatrical Season

Remember our announced plan to open the season of our Players' Club with a new and snappy repertoire this winter? Well, it's coming true; fresh talent is pouring into headquarters like wildfire, and the picture printed below is that of our prize-winning couple for this week; that is, they have won an honorary position in The Times Players' section.

The handsome little couple, standing hand in hand, are brother and sister, Wray and Stella Essex, old-time stage favorites who have lately become "Times" stars and will be booked for our Sawtelle program during the month of December. Their novel little try-out took place recently when they helped entertain at headquarters during one of our weekly meetings.

The grace and beauty of their particular "character dances" cannot be overestimated. Stella was charming as a curly-haired senorita, and Wray took the part of a dashing young senor.

Another bright spot on our program was Rolland Lively, who executed a difficult Russian dance in the shiniest of electric blue satins. His tiny young brother, Clifford, age 4 years, literally took down the house with his amusing song entitled "Fifty Cents."

Pat Walsh and his pretty little partner, Eileen Van Dorn, also delighted their audience with a full-time dance sketch in extremely stunning costumes. The applause was all any artist could wish for.

Next week we will run a full set of pictures and a big story about the one-hour program given last Saturday, featuring the old timers in our Players' Club, and many new tots, as Buddy Brown, who literally made the Times Junior clubrooms ring with laughter and applause. So watch for the write-up, it will be well worth your time to keep in touch with our talented young people.

To protect the national button industry of France, the manufacturers' union has demanded that the government take steps so that they may recover the time lost in holidays by adding an hour to the regular working day.

Fontana Folks Take a Great Pride in Their Homes

The Famous Fontana Estates

Why wait until you have made $50,000, $250,000, or a million dollars until you retire to a country estate?

Today's plan—the Fontana Plan—is to buy a beautiful 5 or 10 acre farm, build your home and poultry plant, and make a Life Income from what many consider the pleasantest work in the world!

Even men of means who could afford never to do another tap of work—and Fontana has many such residents—soon tire of inactivity, and want some such occupation as taking care of a walnut grove or looking after a flock of hens. The returns more than pay current expenses.

With our ten-year terms and liberal loans for improvements you may be able to start your estate and ENJOY IT NOW. We will tell you candidly if we feel the odds are against your making a success at Fontana.

Every afternoon, at 2:30, on the sixth floor of our building at 631 S. Spring St., Los Angeles, we show five reels of moving pictures of Fontana. See them. There is no charge—no obligation—no annoyance.

See the groves and vineyards and how the crops are handled. See the famous Fontana Poultry Plant, where record-breaking birds are bred. See some of the hundreds of flocks supporting families owning Fontana estates.

And above all see the social side of life at Fontana—the clubs, the schools, the cooperative associations, where every resident can find his niche, according to his tastes and inclinations.

It is worth mailing that coupon to find out just what Fontana has to offer YOU. Mail it now!

Suggestions for Shrub Planting About the New Home

By Frances Duncan

The loose-growing, gaily berried sprays of Cotoneaster make an interesting approach.

THE FIRST step in beauty treatment for a new house is the planting close to it. And here are some of the considerations at which the canny gardener or beauty loving householder takes a look before selecting his plants.

The plants stay there; every time one enters the house he sees them; it is not like a garden which one enters and leaves and which may be a thing apart; the planting immediately about the house becomes an essential part of the house's appearance. Therefore, it's desirable that the plants near the house should look well most of the time; that they should have what the gardeners call a good habit—not be spindling or leggy. For this reason, because of their all-the-year-round excellence, the broad-leaved evergreens are very often chosen for this next-to-the-house position. In the East, those that can be used for an unsheltered situation are comparatively few—Rhododendrons, Kalmias, Mahonias, Andromedas and a few others. California, however, is peculiarly rich in these; also in shrubs which, like the Pyracantha, are of very slow growth elsewhere but are here quite rapid.

Here are a few of the many that are very desirable: If the names seem formidable it's a simple matter to get thee to a nursery and make acquaintance with the plants themselves. Also most garden-owners are kindly folk who rarely object to giving information. An eighteen-months'-old friend of mine has two phrases, "Whazzat?" and "Wha-ziz-zit?" They are extremely useful for those of us who wish to get acquainted with the plants.

For planting next a porch, say at the side, where a bit of seclusion is desirable—but not a close screen that would exclude the air—try Eugenia Hookeri. The habit is slender, quite graceful, foliage green, shining, slender leaves, somewhat the shape of the oleander leaves; the fruit, handsome, plum-colored, whereof the thrifty housewife may make jelly.

There are other interesting Eugenias—Eugenia Jambos—the Rose Apple—is attractive; the fruit is the size of a loquat—rather sweet in taste, but for a decorative planting E. Hookeri is better. Eugenia takes its name from Prince Eugene of Savoy.

Coprosma is another broad-leaved evergreen, excellent for a hedge or for close-to-the-house planting, and it thrives extremely well in Southern California. Its glossy leaves and bright yellow berries give it a certain joyousness.

Notable among the berried shrubs or low-growing trees are the thorns. The whole race of Crataegus is very rich in its fruiting adornment, but it includes the English hawthorn, and the native American thorns, which are legion. The Evergreen thorn grows slowly in the East but is of rapid growth and much luxuriance in the Southland. Quite lately the Evergreen Thorns have dropped their patronymic and are known as Pyracantha instead of Crataegus Pyracantha. These are all excellent for near-the-house planting and for softening the line at a house-corner. They are sturdy, vigorous, with clean, handsome, small-leaved foliage. Pyracantha var. Lalandii has brilliant orange berries. P. Crenulata is dense, bushy in habit and its berries are holly-red. A smaller form is P. var. Yunnanensis, whose slightly smaller berries are coral-red.

Cotoneaster is another handsome, small-leaved evergreen shrub, slightly drooping in habit, somewhat suggesting the Berberis Vulgaris done in evergreen; C. Franchetti has brilliant orange berries which persist during the winter. Cotoneasters also come in scarlet-berried forms, as Pyracantha var. Lalandii, somewhat more vigorous in growth than the common Pyracantha, has brilliant orange berries. Pyracantha Crenulata (or Crataegus Crenulata) is a dense bushy shrub with holly-red berries—it is very attractive. A smaller form is var. Yunnanensis whose slightly smaller berries are coral-red.

Another delightful shrub is the Japanese Nandina Domestica. This is a great favorite in Japan—hardly a garden is without it. It is slender, graceful in growth, with rather delicate foliage light and airy in character—a graceful plant for patio, or for next the house.

The myrtles, not hardy East, are excellent here, with their delicate, definite foliage; both the English myrtle and the Roman myrtle thrive in California.

Pittosporum is a plant of many virtues, chiefest of which is the clear shining green of its foliage, always as fresh and vivid as if there had just been a rain. To an Easterner the Pittosporum's leaf suggests that of the Rhododendron—only not so heavy. It is excellent for a wide thick hedge as the foliage is very dense. Undulatum is used either as a shrub or for hedges—this has a common name—Victorian Box. P. Rhombifoliam has bright orange berries which last throughout the winter. For next-the-house planting P. Tobira is one of the best.

There are many others—Leptospermum, Abelia, Choisya (named for the Swiss botanist, Choisy). These are not startling in brilliance but for all-the-year-round companionship they are admirable. In some situations it's well to choose plants as the Vicar chose his wife, for "excellent wearing qualities."

Late October Planting

Bulbs may be set out now—Anemones and Amaryllis, Callas and Crocus, Freesias, Hyacinths, Ixias, Oxalis, Ranunculus, Spanish Iris, Sparaxis Tulips, Watsonias, Lilies, Freesias, German Iris, Montbretias, Gladioli. Plants of Pansy and Viola in full bloom may be obtained now; also Cineraria, Stock and Violet.

Sowing of annuals in the open ground for earliest spring blooming is done any time during November. It is a good time to sow California wild flowers. If one cannot go to the wilderness, one brings the wilderness to one, like Mohammed's mountain.

Playgrounds and Beauty

William Morris' idea that the Useful should also be Beautiful, has rarely been applied to the city playgrounds. Of course, Morris' dictum won't always work; there are admirably useful people who are far from beautiful. Yet the most unlovely may acquire some attractiveness with skilful treatment and a little regard to setting; so may a playground. Children love color and unconsciously are charmed by beautiful surroundings. If the playground have no more than a setting of trees it is redeemed from its hopelessly arid character.

On a playground by far the safest place for any planting is close to the boundary fence; and by far the safest planting is of low-growing trees or tall-growing shrubs, whereof the stems are stout enough so that a chance encounter with a ball, or even with the person of a youngster, doesn't spell disaster. The flowering branches are borne high overhead where they are quite as lovely to look at as if they were within range of accident. California Lilac, California Holly, Pyracantha, Spanish Broom, Oleander, Crape Myrtle, Pomegranate—these are some of the trees that could be used successfully.

I have found that a wooden caging, for instance, a six-inch-wide board, sunk to the depth of three inches, gave ample protection to a flower-bed and made possible a long narrow strip of planting along the boundary fence.

At the foot of the tall shrubs, plant bulbs—Crocus, Ranunculus, Daffodil, Iris—one of the most enduring of plants. Here also might be California wild flowers—Poppies, Godetia, Clarkia, the gorgeous scarlet Larkspur, and many others which grow with little care. If the children who use the playground are allowed to do the planting, they will take far more interest in it than if it were done for them and all expected of them were appreciation.

There is an immense field for usefulness in the small park which is also a playground for little children. Larger youngsters need more space and can go to some distance to find it; but the smaller ones, who must be taken thither by mother or nurse or older child—for these the combination of small park and playground is most fortunate. To any accompanying grown-up, the average playground affords no personal enjoyment whatever, not even a chance to sit down; it is simply an endurance test.

Fairmount Park, at Riverside, is a delightful instance of how greatly a park can combine opportunity for children's play with the charm and green restfulness of a park. Any newer municipality, contemplating making either a small park or a playground, might well send a committee thither to take notes. There are trees in abundance, and the playground is not standardized, nor is the apparatus grouped together—all the swings, all the slides, and the like; they are set about wherever is space for them. The supposedly necessary open center isn't there. Lads who want to play ball go to the ball-field where they may play unworried by the presence of smaller children.

Coprosma Bauerii makes an admirable hedge, and is equally good for close planting. The taller shrubs here are Pyracanthas.

There are not concrete walks lined with benches facing each other, but near the swings is a chance for a grown-up to sit under a spreading tree; he may watch also a smaller child diverting himself in the wading pool. That Riverside playground is a pleasant place for any adult to visit. Dad or grandpapa could take the children, sit and read his Sunday paper in peace and enjoyment, and save his gasoline.

The very new Mulholland Park at Montebello is evidently planning something of the sort; it already has a croquet ground and bowling green, both in a pleasant setting. The Boston Public Garden has its sandboxes and many a corner where children may play and an attending grown-up sit at ease and watch them. In fact, the introduction of a little play apparatus for smaller children into the smaller park hurts the park not at all and adds immensely to the joy and comfort of its clientele. In the city's desert of stone and concrete, park and playground are oases. And an oasis is a place of refreshment to the eye as well as to the body.

It doesn't hurt the park to become a little more diverting, nor does it hurt the playground to be more decorative. As Tennyson says, though in another connection:

"Two dear things make one of double worth."

Irrigation Is All Important---Study It!

Production and Profit Largely Dependent on Proper Water Use—Amount and Method of Application Vital Considerations—Real Investigation Needed for Determination of Soil Moisture Content

By MARVIN B. ROUNDS, Farm Adviser for Los Angeles County

THE importance of water supply as a factor in the normal growth of fruit crops is only realized in part by many. Those engaged in the production of fruit have recognized it, but even the fruit grower in the past has not supplied his trees with moisture in a scientific way, and today he is just beginning to learn the requirements of his trees and how to apply irrigation water efficiently.

Production and profit in the growing of fruit are probably governed more by water supply than by any other one factor, although this does not minimize the necessity for giving the greatest consideration to the other factors involved. The water content of fruit trees will approximate 75 per cent, considering all parts of the tree and root. Parts of the tree, such as the root and succulent portions, contain much more than the others; the old wood contains the least.

Water is constantly being given off by the tree, especially the green portion, the leaves giving off the larger amount. This process is called transpiration and is one which is going on at all times, taking water up through the tree from the soil by means of the roots and tissues in all parts of the tree. This process of transpiration must necesarily go on continuously if the tree is to remain in good health, function properly and produce fruit. Transpiration is necessary for several reasons. First, if the rigidity of the leaves and tree tissues in the plants is to be maintained this process is necessary. It is necessary for the purpose of supplying food, water being actually used in the metabolism of the plant. Furthermore, water must be constantly supplied to the tree in order to transport food which finds its way up from the soil through the roots, and finally to the leaves where the plant food is elaborated. Transpiration of water is also necessary for the purpose of regulating the temperature of the tissues of the tree.

Several factors are involved which tend to decerase or increase this transpiration rate. The three most important of these factors are temperature, humidity and the velocity of the wind. The transpiration rate, as well as the actual water supply, which depends to a large extent on climatic conditions, partly governs the varieties of fruit that can be raised in a certain area. Fruit trees adapt themselves to the atmosphere or particular climate according as they are able to properly function and produce crops under cerain specific conditions. Some varieties are able to withstand certain atmospheric conditions which increase transpiration because of the very nature of their parts. Fruit trees growing under conditions where the transpiration rate is low, usually have broad leaves, while trees growing where the transpiration rate is high have leaves which cut this transpiration rate down to the minimum. Under our conditions the rate of transpiration is great in the interior sections and lower in the coastal regions.

THE WATER DEMAND

It is estimated that on the average, with fruit crops, for each pound of dry matter produced about 500 parts of water are required. Of course, this proportion varies in different localities, and with different varieties of fruit trees. There is also considerable variation as between individual trees. A tree more succulent than another would necessarily take more water than the latter, which is not putting on so much growth. The growth of the tree should be studied and the water supply maintained consistently, for the best development and growth. The growth of the root system should also be studied, this in relation to the soil type, and a root system should be developed which will be conducive to an ideal top growth. It has been estimated that in the growing of some deciduous crops about ten to eleven acre-inches of water are necessary for the season. This amount will be required for the growth and production of fruit, providing there is no loss. It does not, however, take into consideration losses due to run-off, evaporation, or too deep penetration, but considers only that which is being used by the tree.

Authorities have estimated what this loss is, and consider that it is on the average about two-thirds of the water applied. For the average deciduous orchard, then, it would require from thirty to thirty-five acre-inches of water annually to fulfill the requirements of the trees and the fruit, and allow for losses.

If the same percentage requirements and losses were used in connection with citrus, no doubt it would be necessary to use throughout Southern California even more water than would be required for the average deciduous orchard. These figures are fairly well borne out with regard to citrus in the figures given in Bulletin 374 of the Agricultural Experiment Station, Berkeley, which gives the report of a survey made three years ago. In the bulletin the figure given in acre-inches for irrigation water applied in orange groves under usual conditions, in what is called the intermediate territory, is 21.5 to 26.4 acre-inches.

OMNIPRESENT PROBLEM

How is the fruit grower, then, going to have an adequate amount of water available for the tree at all times? This is a question which confronts growers about twelve months in the year, ordinarily. This is a problem which should constantly be studied by the grower, because no orchard in Southern California is watered with 100 per cent efficiency. How shall water be conserved?

Conservation can be accomplished in general, first, by having the surface of the soil in the proper physical conditions for the absorption of water; second, by obtaining a proper distribution of moisture throughout the root feeding area of the soil, and third, by preventing too deep penetration.

Proper physical condition means surface soil that is loose and friable, with no plowsole beneath, nor any hard stratum just below the surface. Under these conditions, irrigation water when applied will be absorbed into the soil quickly and will be carried down, with proper penetration accomplished.

An ideal distribution of the irrigation water is accomplished when the whole root-feeding area of the soil is moistened and this without having to apply too much water in certain parts in order to get a proper distribution and penetration in other parts. In many soils under furrow irrigation it is not possible to accomplish this proper distribution because too great a penetration is had in part of the orchard in order to get the seepage laterally and wet the portion over which the furrows do not run. An even distribution of root is the ideal and it is necessary, in order to supply this ideal root system with moisture at all times, to effect a proper distribution of irrigation water. Many an orchard has been cut down in production because of an uneven distribution of root system, and of soil moisture. A plow sole is the bane of the orchardist and materially limits proper irrigation of the land.

For the sake of efficiency proper penetration is necessary, for if water passes down through the soil and the root feeding area and, farther, not only is the water wasted but the soluble and available plant food which should be used by the tree is lost. It is not possible for this moisture and plant food to come up again, nor become available to the tree through the roots.

We recognize the fact that fruit trees require a certain amount of water per annum if profitable production is to be maintained. We are growing our orchards in different types of soil. Soil types vary considerably as to the amounts of water which they will hold. Much depends on the size of the soil grains and its porosity. A great deal of difference exists in retentive power so far as moisture is concerned of these different types of soil. Sandy soil having large grains, will not retain as much water as the heavy types of soil where the particles are smaller.

Capillary water, or only that water which adheres to the soil grains, is available to the plant. It can readily be seen then that where the soil particles are large and there are fewer of them, as is the case in sandy soils, there is less water available. On the other hand, in a heavy soil where

Agriculture in the Canyon Nooks and Crannies of Old San Timoteo

By ROBERT R. BENSON

THE concentrated waters of Yucaipa's apple valley, from the rolling hay fields of Beaumont's summit and from sundry abbreviated gulches and gullies debouching from the Moreno Hills, have carved a winding and deeply trenched watercourse among a labyrinth of barren hills to the south and east of Redlands. This is San Timoteo.

The creek proper first appears a mile or so to the west of Beaumont, a dry, shallow, gravelly wash playing a meager role in the topography of San Gorgonio Pass. A few miles down—at Singleton's—its course is more clearly defined by the greenery of cottonwoods along its deepening trench. Immediately below, augmented by the winter freshets from Potato Creek and Live Oak Canyon, bearing down through Yucaipa from Oak Glen, San Timoteo becomes the salient topographic factor, and has gouged out a trough thirty feet deep oy 200 broad—an ugly scar in the soft canyon-bottom soil. This arroyo, flanked on either side by sheer walls of eroded loam and clay, attains its greatest depth near El Casco, below which the bluffs become less sheer, so that when San Timoteo is ready to open out upon the floor of San Bernardino Valley to the southwest of Redlands, the erstwhile canyon-bound creek has again become a gravelly wash.

The entire watershed comprises some seventy-odd squire miles of what is significantly classified as "rough, broken land." Yucaipa Valley with its Oak Glen tributary forms the largest body of arable land in the watershed. The canyon nooks of San Timoteo proper total but a small portion of the area.

Short as is the course of San Timoteo, twenty miles at most, the farm lands of the canyon represent a gradual but decided transition from the warm orange empire below Redlands, with an elevation of about 1200 feet, up to the chill cherry highlands of Beaumont 2600 feet above the sea. Smiley Heights looks down upon a broadening expanse of citrus groves about the Mission Exchange and around Bryn Mawr. To the eastward up the canyon, the groves become smaller and smaller, and finally cease to be a part of the landscape. Lack of cheap water may have been the initial limit to citrus culture in the canyon, but even today, with efficient pumps tapping the certain underground stream of San Timoteo, the or-

The Raising of Queens for the Beeman

By OLIVER SAYLOR

While there are many beemen, who conduct a thriving business in producing honey, the industry has been specialized to a certain extent, even as has the poultry industry. There was a time when the equipment was almost altogether home-made, but nowadays there are stores where supplies of almost every kind may be bought at reasonable prices, so that it does not pay to attempt to make most of the equipment, although a handy man can save some cash in constructing the more simple divices for use about his place and plant.

Another branch of the honey business, and a rather technical one, is the rearing of queens to supply to trade. The first step in commercial queen raising is to secure the right strain, and the average honey producer cannot take the time to investigate and usually has not the patience to select just the right ones out of the many. "Many are called but few are chosen."

The selection of a queen to breed from for queens calls for certain important qualities. She must not swarm; she must be gentle; she must lay her eggs, reaching the height of production about two weeks before the honey flow comes on, and she must lay them solidly, filling the frames from the bottom to the top of each frame. Color is considered, but it is not the chief consideration, for sometimes a queen not perfectly colored will have all the other desirable characteristics and should not be discarded.

The best queens are raised in June and July. That appears to be the natural time for the development of queens. Those raised after the honey flow stops frequently look all right and apparently have all the good qualities the queen raiser seeks, but it has been learned by experience that as a rule these queens are short-lived.

A Shipment of Queens.

Fifty-eight cages which contain the mothers of future swarms of bees, ready to leave the queen-yard of George Sigmont of Bell.

The bee business is comparable to the cattle business. The man who has good stock that is satisfactory in every way does not need to go out and buy new stock very often, but the one who seeks improvement of his herd or his swarms discovers that there are specialists who have developed particularly high producing and easily handled strains, and buying from them saves the arduous task of developing strains of their own and is productive of as good results.

There are bee brokers who will furnish queens for those who wish them. As a rule, it is better to buy from the queen breeder direct, as it is true with this as with almost every other business, the breeder keeps the best for himself, sells the good ones he can spare under his own name and sends the rest to the broker to dispose of for him.

A good many queens to meet the demand have been raised in Southern California this year. When they are ready for shipment they are carefully packed in cages and shipped usually by express. The trade has grown to considerable dimensions, and recently one shipment included fifty-eight queens for buyers in Montana, Washington, and four widely separated districts in California.

FORM FUR CLUB

RIVERSIDE.—The Associated Rabbit Breeders of Riverside county have established headquarters in the Tetley Block, here. An auxiliary, known as the Ladies' Fur Club, has been organized to learn the art of making various useful articles from rabbit fur. Robert Jackson, fur expert, is to act as instructor. There are now forty-two members of the fur club. Plans are being made for a rabbit show thhis fall by members of the club.

CLUB VISITS DAVIS

VENTURA.—All the members of the Ojai chick raising club of boys attended the annual convention of boys' and girls' agricultural clubs at Davis in October. They returned, inspired by their visit to the State Agricultural Farm and say they expect to make greater progress during the coming year.

DECKS CLEAR FOR NAVELS

WOODLAKE.—The navel orange crop of Central California promises to be unusually early this year. In fact, much of the fruit in this section already passes the 8-to-1 test. The local crop is not as large as usual, but the fruit is of good size. However, some groves are carrying a heavy crop and props are being used. Market conditions are promising, and, with the southern Valencias nearly off the market, the navels are expected to find a keen demand at the opening of the shipping season.

MONEY FOR CULLS

REDLANDS.—N. Leo Lelean, manager of the local co-operative packing house, which ships about 900 carloads of oranges each year, has just distributed checks aggregating approximately $17,000 as returns from the cull oranges shipped to the by-products says, was more than was expected and was plant at San Dimas. The cull money, he due to an increased sale for the by-products.

FARMING ON HIGH

ALPINE (Ariz.)—Alpine, with an elevation of about 9000 feet above sea level, is the highest point in Arizona where farming is the chief occupation of the inhabitants. Here the Blue Mashonnek potato made its last stand in the United States, this variety ripening well in the short summers of the mountains. It has given place to standard varieties now. In the valley around Alpine, 1500 acres are cropped to corn, wheat, rye and oats, hull-less oats especially returning large yields. There is plenty of rain during the summers, so irrigation is rarely needed

ROTATION PAYS THEM

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—The alternation of lettuce and cantaloupes on their twenty-acre Alhambra farm has enabled Dick Richards and his wife to prepare for a winter trip to England and Ireland, they say. They attribute their success to rotation of crops and heavy fertilization and declare that when they take food out of the ground they believe in putting food back in to take its place. As a result of such practice, they say, they took 360 crates of cantaloupes from a single measured acre. They tried cotton but lost on it for several years, although they believe they have solved the problem of making the staple pay.

LETTUCE OUTLOOK GOOD

WOODVILLE.—Two hundred acres of lettuce, representing the season's planting in Tulare county, is up and doing well, according to horticultural officials. The acreage is probably slightly smaller than that of last year. It is found chiefly in the Woodville, Poplar, Earlimart and Pixley districts. Lettuce has been grown very successfully in this section for some years. A normal yield is expected. Most of the county crop this season will go south, the greater portion going by auto truck.

GRAPES GET LESS WATER

EXETER.—Emperor vineyards in Exeter district are in the best condition and fruit thereon is of the highest quality in years, according to Dooley P. Wheeler, local horticultural expert. Water has been withheld more than is usual and the fruit has developed an unusually high sugar content, which will cause it to hold up better. Growers are not rushing their fruit to market but are waiting for cash f. o. b. orders.

Land Grant Colleges

Land grant colleges are institutions organized under the provisions of the Morrill Act of 1862, which allows a certain number of acres of Federal land for their support. There are sixty-nine such colleges in the United States, the first nine in point of size being those of California, Illinois, Minnesota, Ohio, Wisconsin, Nebraska, New York, Pennsylvania and Oregon.

WHY THE PREJUDICE?

without, in fact, will often climb up on the stancheon when they see the milk maid coming with her bucket.

A great many goat feeds are ready mixed and most of them are very good. The various brands should be fed and the goats given the one they like best. A double handful in the morning and evening and a feed of green or dry hay at noon is sufficient, and plenty of fresh water should be kept before them at all times.

A goat is a browser rather than a grazer, and if allowed to get out among the trees will do a great deal of damage. They are very fond of carrots, cabbage or any vegetable, and a few rows of sorghum, Milo maize, or any cover crop will practically keep one or two goats, and you will find that they will more than pay for their keep.

Then there is the business of moving, or going into the mountains for the summer. If there is a sick baby who must be kept on the same diet, Nanny can be put in the car and will ride right along as contentedly as the family dog and will be far more useful.

Amendment No. 10

THIS measure on which the people of California are to vote at our imminent fall election provides funds for buildings of the State and the University of California. If passed, it will make available $2,500,000 for State buildings at Sacremento and Los Angeles; $3,000,000 for new buildings at Berkeley, and $3,000,000 more for new structures on the site of the Southern Branch of the University, at Westwood.

It is stated that the taxpayers of the State will be out nothing ultimately on the $2,500,000 for State buildings, as the rents saved for State officials will be cut off and this great sum will more than pay the building program. At Berkeley there are, according to the authorities there, $17,000,000 worth of collections, housed in old firetraps unworthy of the highest educational institution of a great State. The beautiful new site for the Southern Branch in Los Angeles calls for ample and attractive buildings. At present this great school is crowding 6000 students into buildings intended for 2000.

It does not seem necessary to say more. Our readers are intelligent people, who can realize the needs of the situation without harangue or argument. That's the situation. What will you do with it?

What's the Matter?

WE HAVE before us a paper published in Florida, which contains a totally unnecessary, uncalled for and gratuitous attack on California, apparently made for no reason other than that California has not had a hurricane. It comes with what seems to us particular impropriety right after California has joined other States in contributing largely for the relief of storm sufferers on the Gulf.

We have not found any California papers which have indulged in severe criticisms of Florida. This due to a number of reasons: California does not consider that "knocking" is good business; she does not find it necessary to her own well being, and third, and lastly, she is not that kind of a State. She recognizes Florida as a sister State with some good qualities and a few failings, like all the rest of us. For Florida to prosper was never anything but pleasing to California—Florida's disasters evoke as sincere a sympathy here as elsewhere.

It is strange why the people of other States rise up on their hind legs, run around in circles and circles and lift up their melancholy voices like the pelican in the wilderness whenever California is mentioned. It is not because we are a haughty race apart, for we come from every State in the Union. It is not because we find fault with other folks, for we don't. It is not because we are unhappy, ill-natured and bad-tempered, for we aren't.

We hate to think that these violent fault finders are jealous, but what other hypothesis have we?

Specialty crops are like jam on bread. The great staples provide the bulk of agricultural returns for the country.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS

PASADENA.—This city has determined to make a thorough test of the project of making fertilizer from sewage on its municipal farm east of Alhambra. Equipment costing several thousand dollars for the drying of the sludge has arrived at the farm sewage treatment plant and is being put up. It is expected to be in operation early in November. A ready sale is assured for the dried sludge to citrus growers and truck farmers of the El Monte-San Gabriel district, it is believed. A suggestion that the effluent which comes from the city's septic tank be pumped back into special mains and made to irrigate the lawns and gardens in Pasadena has been made to the city directors by Ray G. Coates, an engineer of Los Angeles. He points out that such refined sewage water is used in other cities of the county for lawns and flowers and believes such a course would help solve Pasadena's water problem.

MORE PLANT AVOCADOS

SANTA BARBARA.—Avocado plantings in the foothills of this district are beginning to follow experiments which indicate that the uplands are well adapted to the production of this fruit. Verehelle Brothers set out an avocado orchard on a knoll in the western part of this city and the young trees are loaded with fruit. There have been increased avocado plantings in Montecito and Carpinteria, and in the Goleta and Hope district canyons similar work is done whereever water is available for irrigation.

DATES FOR FLOWER SHOW

ONTARIO.—The annual fall flower show sponsored by the Hotpoint Floral Society has been announced for November 4, 5 and 6. This year it will be held in the Caldwell building. During the show the prizes will be awarded the winners of the Home Beautiful contest which closed this month. It is claimed that as a result of this contest, Ontario can boast of as many attractive front and back yards per capita as any city in the Southland.

EXPECTS BIGGER CROP

TERRA BELLA.—Dick Ostendorf, manager of the Chew Mock place near here, now owned by Peppers & Tillottson, expects a much larger orange crop than that of last season. He anticipates from 20,000 to 30,000 boxes of navels from 115 acres and perhaps 30,000 boxes of Valencias from eighty-five acres. A large quantity of fertilizer has been used during the year and Ostendorf is planning to spend $15,000 for barnyard and commercial fertilizer for immediate use. This property is the largest single citrus development in this section of Tulare county.

MADERA WINS SOW

VISALIA.—State directors for the county department of the California Farm Bureau in session at Visalia recently awarded a prize Poland China sow to the Madera County Farm Bureau for the largest increase in membership in 1925. Madera received this distinction in competition with Tulare, Kern, Fresno and Kings counties. The sow was raised by the Boys' Agricultural club of the Kern county high school, weighs over 600 pounds and is valued at $150. Madera county will have possession of the animal until March 15, 1927, when she will again be awarded to the county making the highest membership record for 1926. The litter of pigs expected to arrive in the meantime will be at the disposal of the Madera county farm bureau directors.

BIG LETTUCE PATCH

RIVERSIDE.—An eighty-acre planting of Los Angeles lettuce is proving profitable on the Mt. Valley ranch, two miles east of the Val Verde school in Perris Valley. The Pennsylvania Macaroni Company of Pittsburg is responsible for the planting, which is under the management of C. T. Fisher. C. McFadden is in direct charge of growing the crop. It is expected that the lettuce will be harvested the last of December. Another crop is to be planted in January for spring cutting.

RE-ELECT OLD OFFICERS

VENTURA.—At the annual meeting of the board of directors of the Ventura County Farm Bureau held October 19, the old officers were re-elected as follows: George Harlan, president; J. N. Thille, vice-president; George Sexton, secretary, and C. E. Kelsey, State director. O. Borgstrom handed in his resignation as treasurer and Guthrie Clark was elected in his stead.

WATER HEARING VITAL

HEMET.—Water users in the Hemet-San Jacinto Valley are deeply concerned over the outcome of a hearing to be held in Riverside November 3, 4 and 5. The State water division's tentative allotment of San Jacinto River water will be taken up at the hearing. This allotment is meeting with much protest here, as local interests believe too much water is awarded to "outside interests." It was made by the request of water users of Corona, Elsinore and Perris sections for increased rights.

POMONA PIGEONS WIN

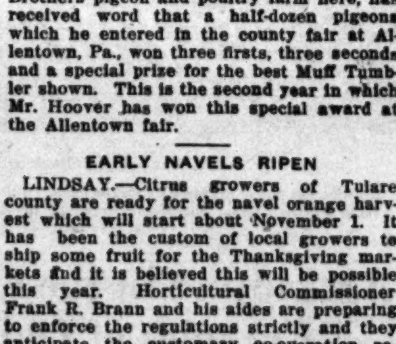
POMONA.—Roscoe Hoover of the Hoover Brothers pigeon and poultry farm here, has received word that a half-dozen pigeons which he entered in the county fair at Allentown, Pa., won three firsts, three seconds and a special prize for the best Muff Tumbler shown. This is the second year in which Mr. Hoover has won this special award at the Allentown fair.

EARLY NAVELS RIPEN

LINDSAY.—Citrus growers of Tulare county are ready for the navel orange harvest which will start about November 1. It has been the custom of local growers to ship some fruit for the Thanksgiving markets and it is believed this will be possible this year. Horticultural Commissioner Frank R. Brann and his aides are preparing to enforce the regulations strictly and they anticipate the customary co-operation received from growers and packers. Extensive purchases of heaters last year, especially in the Lindsay district, brought the frost damage low and frost loss in this area was very small. Similar results are expected this season.

BIG HAY SHIPPER

CORCORAN.—The J. W. Guilberson Company produced about 2000 tons of alfalfa hay on its ranch near Corcoran this season, and by the end of October over 1400 tons had been shipped by rail to Los Angeles.



A Huge Haystack.

Eighteen hundred tons of alfalfa hay in one stack on the ranch of the J. W. Guiberson Company near Corcoran.

FLORIDA CITRUS LOSSES

REDLANDS.—A. M. Pratt, sales manager for citrus interests in Florida, in a letter to friends in Redlands, states that the loss to the grapefruit crop of Florida, due to the great storm, amounts to 27 per cent, with an 8 per cent loss of oranges. The greatest damage, he says, was in Dade county, where the loss amounted to 90 per cent of the entire citrus crop.

TRY CAULIFLOWER

CASA GRANDE (Ariz.)—A good deal of interest has been aroused in the planting of cauliflower for early winter markets in this locality this season. Over 100 acres were transplanted early in September. Because of excessive heat, it was necessary to grow the transplanted plants under cheesecloth, and under this system very few plants were lost. The largest acreage of Early Snowball cauliflower is on the farm of the American Fruit Company. Last year a large acreage of early spring cabbage was grown on this farm. Cauliflower is expected to work into the planting scheme well and become an important crop here if marketing facilities are supplied.

"DOLLING UP" ROADS

MONTECITO.—The efforts of community roadside committees first organized here are gradually changing the appearance of the roads in this section. Heavy undergrowth is being removed and ornamental plantings are taking its place, beautifying the country and rendering traffic conditions safer especially at road intersections, as crossroad corners are being set to low growing, flowering plants. The activities of the committees are directed to beautifying highways, eliminating weeds and wild growths and helping remove fire hazards.

A GOOD FAMILY TREE

COVINA.—Avocado trees planted in dooryards a few years ago are now supplying family tables providing grateful shade and bringing in substantial incomes besides. An 11-year-old tree in the yard of L. M. Swallow here has a spread of fifty feet, and $150 worth of fruit was sold from it this year besides what the family ate. C. H. Wedgewood has a Mexican seedling

A Specialist Offers Some New Ideas in the Feeding of Poultry

POULTRYMEN of Los Angeles county gathered at the auditorium of the local farm adviser's office recently to hear Dr. Walter Holst speak on poultry nutrition. Dr. Holst was formerly connected with the University of Sweden as a poultry expert and is now poultry nutrition specialist of the California College of Agriculture at Berkeley. His address was a most interesting one and some of his statements startled his hearers, since they did not agree with commonly accepted feeding practice. He said:

"The chief components of all feeds are carbohydrates, fats and proteins. The two former are common in most feeds. Proteins are vital to animal life both for growth and production. We must have feed for chickens which contains not only enough protein but the right kind of protein. Protein is a compound composed of a number of elements known as animo-acids. There are over twenty of them and three are of prime importance.

"Our principal feed for chickens is grain. There is no basic grain for poultry; no one grain is absolutely essential. All grains are deficient in the quality of their proteins, so we have to supply a supplementary feed which will make up for the lack. There is no difference in the quality of grains from a feed standpoint. The basis for feeding should be the price. One hundred pounds of wheat contains approximately seventy-two pounds of digestible nutrients; corn comes next with seventy pounds of nutrients, and oats, barley, milo and kafir contain about sixty-five digestible nutrients, in 100 pounds of the grain. It is a waste of money to feed wheat at present prices, for wheat is worth but 2 per cent more than corn but 7 per cent more than other grains and the quality is about the same in all. There is no best grain for chickens; it should be bought and fed solely on the cost basis. At present, barley is the cheapest grain we have and you can safely feed 50 per cent of barley in your grain. Some prefer to feed a mixture of grains. The only advantage in this practice is that it is more palatable. By remembering that there is no difference in grain quality, you can cheapen your feed to a large extent and still get good production.

"The faulty protein of grain may be supplied by using meat-scrap, fish-scrap, milk or such vegetable products as soybean meal, linseed meal and the like. The Middle West often feeds milk as the only supplement. You can get satisfactory growth and production with any of them, but milk it too high-priced to be used economically.

"Most poultry mashes consist of from 40 to 50 per cent wheat bran, middlings or mill-run. Poultrymen began feeding these products because they were cheap and not because the chickens need them, and now they have the habit. Bran is a by-product of wheat and contains the same deficiencies as grain. It is a grain feed. This makes an excess of grain proteins, overloading the liver and kidneys. Much of the nutrient of mill-run is indigestible to poultry and is waste. It is not essential.

COST MAIN CONSIDERATION

"Animal proteins are not essential for animal growth. By supplying minerals, as good growth and production may be obtained by feeding the proteins in vegetable oil cake and meal. What I am anxious to make clear is that these proteins are interchangeable and that the use of them should depend on the price. It might be advisable to buy animal proteins in San Diego and vegetable proteins in San Francisco because of the market price. There is no difference between meat proteins and fish proteins. You will frequently find that a good quality of fish-scrap is preferable to average meat scrap because the latter has been subjected to high temperatures which lowers its digestibility and palatability. Generally speaking, good fish-scrap is worth 30 per cent more than average meat-scrap. Milk contains no more valuable proteins than the other concentrates. No experiment station has ever been able to demonstrate any better production from feeding milk than from other protein supplements.

"Other elements necessary are minerals, vitamines and water. Minerals are absolutely essential. A chicken will starve to death more quickly from lack of minerals than lack of feed. All the minerals necessary are found in ordinary feeds with the addition of bone meal and limestone. The total mineral content should be about 10 per cent of the mash. Use ground oyster shell or any pure form of calcium carbonate; use steamed bone meal or any other form of calcium phosphate. A little salt is necessary, and is not injurious if water is provided.

"Another vital need is found in the vitamines. There are five different members of the vitamine group, called A, B, C, D and E. Vitamine C is not needed by poultry; Vitamines B and E are very evenly distributed in all poultry feeds. In this State we have a source of abundant Vitamine D in our sunshine. Vitamine A we must provide and we have to seek it in a cheap source. It is found in green feed. It can be supplied without green feed, of course. Codliver oil contains it, but you should be careful to get a tested oil, for much of it varies in vitamine content. Birds can be maintained on one product entirely. You can have growth and good production by feeding a good quality of alfalfa leaves. The green color in the leaves indicates the vitamine content; when the green color is lost the vitamine is lost.

"The mash should supplement the deficiencies of the grain and the materials making it up should be coarse. Finely ground grain passes through the fowl too rapidly. The mash should contain 20 per cent of fish-scrap, or a smaller percentage of meat-scrap with a proportion of soybean or similar meal. I should use barley in the mash and a mixture of other grains for scratch. While linseed meal contains the proteins needed, it is so laxative that it should be used in small quantities.

CHARCOAL VALUELESS

"You will notice that I have not added any charcoal. I realize the amounts of money wasted on this article and I feel it my duty to call attention to it. Practically every experiment station has tried to demonstrate the value of charcoal in poultry raising, and every one has failed to show that it has the least benefit.

"I have heard considerable discussion over the amount of protein that should be given the growing and the laying chickens. All animals need large amounts of protein while growing. They need less after maturity. The basic ration for chickens is the same for growing and for laying, but the protein content may be reduced as the chickens grow older. Nobody knows the exact protein requirements for a hen. The hen herself is not always a good judge. The method producing the best results is to keep track of production and weight and regulate them by varying the food proportions in both scratch and mash feeds. The trouble with 'all-in-one' mashes and mixtures is that you cannot control your production and body weight. The only object in feeding such mixture is that they save labor. Some poultrymen back east are feeding grain in hoppers before their birds all the time, and they seem to have as good results as those who feed night and morning."

Dr. Holst stated at the opening of his address that he presumed many would disagree with him, and suggested that as opportunity offered they should try out his suggestions on a small scale and test his views on poultry feeding.

Hens Bring Cash and Trip to Girl

OWENSMOUTH.—On March 8, last, Marjorie Hazeldon entered the local poultry club contest with 100 hens. Six hens were lost during the four-month period of the contest, but the rest did nobly and the flock earned her $56.

She Won the Contest.

Marjorie Hazendon's 100 hens brought her $56 and a trip to Davis from her home in Owensmouth.

The contest required entrants to take care of all the chickens, keep strict accounts, including all money spent for feed and labor, all eggs collected, sold, and all cash received. In addition, the contestants had to write an account of the work, in the form of an essay. All these items entered into the competition and Miss Hazeldon was the victor.

Besides the money she earned and the knowledge she gained, she was given a trip to the University Farm at Davis during the recent annual convention of Boys' and Girls' Agricultural Clubs there.

Keeps Running Water in Her Lofts

ROSCOE.—Mrs. Cynthelia Isgregg Knefler, local breeder of Swiss Mondaine pigeons, states that running water is essential to the health and comfort of pigeons since they are great bathers and in this way keep themselves free from mites and lice. She had installed in her lofts on Penrose avenue pans of galvanized iron thirty inches deep. An overflow pipe one inch from the top empties into a five-inch sewer pipe and the waste water is used to irrigate an alfalfa patch.

Because Mrs. Knefler is keeping more than a thousand birds, she buys her feed in wholesale lots. The peas and hemp she uses for feed come from the Orient, the corn from Argentina, milo from Sacramento Valley and wheat from Kansas and Nebraska, for she insists on having hard red wheat. Her formula for mixing her feed is as follows: 300 pounds of corn, 300 pounds Milo maize, 300 pounds peas, 100 pounds of wheat and 100 pounds hemp. During the summer months she cuts down the corn one-third and supplies a third more Milo. She cuts out the hemp entirely during the hot summer months, as hemp is very fattening. She feeds lettuce twice each week.

The feed is scattered on the sand of the floors twice each day. The floors of the pens are cleaned once a month and fresh sand put in once every three of four months. The nests are not changed after each hatching, as pigeons do not like to have their nests disturbed. Fresh tobacco stems are put where the birds can get them, as they like to put fresh stems in the old nest and use it again and again. The water pans are cleaned twice each week with sodium fluoride. The manure, which is very high in ammonia content, is said to keep down vermin.

Breeding stock is saved from Mrs. Knefler's highest producing pairs. As soon as the young birds understand how to feed themselves and drink they are taken from the old birds and are put into a pen to themselves. As soon as the sex can be distinguished the cocks are separated from the hens and they are kept apart until they are from seven to nine months of age. Then they are put together and allowed to mate naturally, care being taken that brothers and sisters do not mate. All birds are banded and a careful record is kept. Mrs. Knefler is experimenting in line-breeding, and her experience has taught her that with good stock inbreeding is better than outbreeding.

Comfortable Quarters.

LOSSES BY BREAKAGE

After a series of exhaustive tests made on shipments of eggs from five States to eastern markets, the United States Department of Agriculture reports that the average money loss per case in twelve carloads amounted to 1.65 cents. Some cases showed a loss of less than a cent and others had a loss of nearly 2 1-2 cents. Circular No. 391-C, which is distributed free as long as the supply lasts, to those who write for it to the department, compares eight different methods of packing eggs.

'Ag' School Not Needed, Say Regents

A separate college of agriculture for Southern California at this time is opposed by the Board of Regents of the University of California in a recent statement of policy on the question issued at Berkeley. The Regents, however, put themselves on record as favoring the acquisition of land near the Southern Branch at Westwood, suitable for agriculture and which can be used as a site for a college of agriculture or university farm should changed conditions warrant such a plan. Following is the draft of the Regents' statement:

(1.) The Regents believe that the university has no more important function than the relief of the difficulties which confront the agricultural and horticultural interests of this State. They are heartily in sympathy with a co-ordinated program in instruction, research, and agricultural extension service which will meet the needs of the farmers to the fullest extent possible: Believing that the solution of the problems which confront the farming industry depends chiefly upon research, conducted by the most able investigators, they pledge their support to the expansion of the research activities of the college of agriculture in all parts of the State to the limit of the funds which can be secured and effectively expended.

Because they are sincerely devoted to these purposes, they oppose, as economically and educationally unsound, the development of a second college of agriculture or of a second university farm in California at this time. Some of the facts which have led them to this conclusion are:

(a) The United States is already overstocked with agricultural colleges and similar agricultural institutions, and student attendance in practically all of them has been and still is decreasing. (In the thirteen leading agricultural colleges of the United States, for the three years immediately preceding the great war, the average annual student attendance was altogether 10,795; in the three years immediately following the war, the average annual attendance was 10,122; two years ago the total attendance in the same thirteen agricultural colleges was 6240; and last year it was 5423, or just 50 per cent of the annual attendance before the war.)

(b) The way to keep well-prepared and promising students in California interested in agriculture is not to have two or more agricultural colleges of inferior quality but to have one agricultural college of superior quality.

(The finances of the State will not support more than one agricultural college of superior quality, and, even if this were not so, good professors could not be secured for two colleges because there are not enough to go around in the colleges already existing in the United States.

(d) The facilities for agricultural instruction existing in the University of California now serve only 350 degree-seeking students, although they are on a scale sufficient to serve 1200.

This policy does not include opposition to agricultural work in other parts of the State, which, because of environmental conditions, cannot be conducted successfully at present centers of agricultural instruction and research.

(2.) The Regents concur in the conclusion reached by the Special Legislative Commission on Agricultural Education, of which Mr. A. C. Hardison was chairman, that "The college of agriculture in contact with the broad life of a university and directed by the same board of trustees is the best agency" for agricultural instruction, and that "the college of agriculture should be an integral part of the State University situated on the same campus, served by the same faculty, and managed by the same trustees."

(3.) The Regents favor, and will continue efforts to secure, not less than 160 acres of land suitable for agriculture, contiguous to the main campus of the new Southern Branch site at Westwood, which would permit the development of such agricultural instruction as the future years may prove to be necessary. It is to be understood, however, that the Regents would receive this additional land, not with the intention of establishing thereon a college of agriculture or a university farm, but in order that there may be facilities for doing so if radically changed conditions as to agricultural education should prove this step to be necessary in the future.

(4.) It is believed that additional land will be secured either by means of a bill now before the Congress of the United States providing for the sale of 160 acres of the Soldiers' Home lands at Sawtelle, or by the purchase of other lands for which the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors has formerly resolved to submit a bond issue to the people, if the Soldiers' Home project should fail. In addition, the Regents will keep from forty to fifty acres of the present campus at Westwood free from buildings or other development in order that it may be available for agriculture if conditions in the more or less distant future become such that the Regents decide to institute agricultural instruction at the Southern Branch.

Slighted Soil Grows Good Cotton

McFARLAND.—The heavy soils east of McFarland have heretofore been regarded with disfavor as less valuable and less productive than the light sandy loams west of the city. But now experienced cotton men declare that the eastern district is ideal for cotton growing. Thirty-one acres are being farmed to cotton this year by E. C. Cozart east of McFarland, and a very large yield is predicted. J. M. Terrill, manager of the Anderson Clayton gin, declares it is the best field of cotton he has ever seen. Thirty-one bales were taken off the field on the first picking recently completed.

The soil is heavy and hard to work, but Mr. Cozart believes it contains more plant food than some of the lighter loams. He has plenty of water and it is thought that the heavy soils hold moisture better than the sandy lands and make irrigation more economical.

The land is owned by D. Billings, the local banker, and was leased to Mr. Cozart this year. So well pleased is the latter with the prospects that he has renewed his lease for 1927.

FIELD MEETS ARRANGED

VENTURA.—County Farm Adviser V. F. Blanchard has announced four field meetings to demonstrate the pruning of bearing walnut trees, to be held at Saticoy, Santa Paula, Moorpark and Simeon November 8 and 9.

Downey Woman Pioneer Roadside Merchant

DOWNEY.—Roadside-market stands are common enough now, but at that the average traveler on the public highways would probably call them an institution of comparatively recent origin. It is true they have sprung up like mushrooms in the last few years.

Downey folks, however, were introduced to the roadside market as much as twenty years ago. They believe, in fact, that the plan originated here. Back in 1905 or 1906, Mrs. Eliza Talbert, a thrifty and energetic farm woman living with her husband and small children on a four-acre ranch, began to wonder what she could do with a lot of good pears and apples going to waste on the place. The ranch, she realized, often produced more fruit than the market demanded and, being a thrifty housewife, the waste worried her. Canning was not then so conveniently managed. She had watched the travelers go past, looking at the luscious fruit on the trees, and she conceived a neat and simple method of satisfying the longing of the dry and thirsty ones, of eliminating the waste, and of adding to the family exchequer.

Still Going Strong.

Roadside fruit stand and cider mill that was started twenty years ago at Downey.

Wherefore, one hot, dusty afternoon out under an apricot tree beside the road now known as Twelfth street, she set up the [illegible] choicest pears and apples on an old cart, wheeled this under the apricot tree, and the first roadside stand awaited customers. Team after team toiled along the dusty road, for the smooth boulevards of today were only a dream then, stopped at the cart under the apricot tree and bought Mrs. Talberts pears. Nine-dollars' worth of fruit she sold during the first half day. And the Talberts are still selling fruit from their roadside market.

Mrs. Talbert was not only the pioneer roadside fruit and vegetable merchant hereabouts at least, but she ran the pioneer cold-drink stand. Then the apple season was drawing to a close, she made cider—made it herself with a hand press and sold it from her stand. And the cider business grew and prospered and cider is still sold both wholesale and retail from the same place—though not of the same vintage.

In the early days the business was personally conducted in every sense of the word. Mrs. Talbert constructed her stand herself—the stand which speedily supplanted the cart of the initial experiment. Taking lumber she found loose about the ranch she made the counter, picked the apples herself, and herself toted them to the little roadside market. Like most folk who succeed in any farming venture, she has never been afraid of any form of hard work.

Today, on the same site, her son, P. J. Talbert, carries on a flourishing business, but the Talbert cider mill is run by electricity, and more than fruit and vegetables are sold, for hundreds of turkeys are vended there, and the venture which was housed in the little old cart has become a goodly sized wholesale and retail market.

Mrs. Talbert's original cart, with a reproduction of its original content, would have been an interesting exhibit in the woman's department at the late Downey fair, for in the commercial and horticultural progress of Southern California women have had no small share. Interesting as is this enterprise of Mrs. Talbert's, it is typical of California women, rather than exceptional, as a record of the achievements of the sex in the Golden State will reveal.

For Florida Relief

The California Fruit Growers' Exchange recently donated the proceeds from the sale of two cars of lemons and two cars of oranges to the National Red Cross Florida relief fund. Fruit auction companies waived their charges and the fruit brought $12,600.

Narcissi
The Narcissi are one of the most beautiful and easily grown of all the bulbous flowering plants. They are very popular as cut flowers because of their splendid keeping qualities and fragrance. They may be grown in beds, borders, or planted amongst shrubbery and while preferring partial shade, will thrive in full sun.

We are very fortunate in having a large quantity of the following California grown varieties which we are able to offer you at the exceptionally low price of 57c per dozen; $3.75 per 100.

SIR WATKIN—A lovely large flower with a sulphur yellow perianth and a deep yellow trumpet.

VON SION—The flowers are pure yellow and double. We consider this one of the best of the double varieties.

LAURENS KOSTER—Very fragrant, having a pure white perianth with a large orange yellow cup.

ASPASIA—One of the largest of the Poetaz Hybrids. Pure white with a deep yellow cup.

ELVIRA—Pure white with a bright yellow cup margined with red.

GRAND MONARCH—Especially adapted for growing in water. A beautiful pure yellow bunch flowered Narcissus.

Anemones—A & M Giant Single, mixed, 98c per 100

Mail orders add 10c per dozen for packing and postage.

CALLA LILIES

YELLOW CALLA—One of the most attractive flowers grown, suitable for outdoor bedding or for pot culture. The blossom is large and a deep golden yellow. The leaves are spotted white..........35c ea. $3.50 per doz.

PINK BABY CALLA—Here is a novelty which will please you as a garden plant or a pot-plant. The flowers are minature callas, being 1½ to 2 inches across and of a pretty pink shade. They grow beautifully out of doors and attract the attention of all who see them..........75c ea. 5 for $3.00

AMARYLLIS JOHNSONII—A wonderful amaryllis as free blooming and fragrant as the Belladonna, but of a brilliant shade of red with a white stripe through each petal..........35c ea.; 3 for $1.00

The Livestock Bulletin

By ROBERT T. LYANS.

Model Segis Prilly Gelsche, a pure-bred Holstein cow in the fine show herd sent east this year by Billiwhack Stock Farm of Santa Paula, has been one of the most consistent winners in the Black-and-White division wherever she was shown. In competition with some of the greatest herds in the United States at the major fairs and shows in the East and Middle West this great cow has been a favorite with the judges for grand championship honors. Her latest achievement was at the National Dairy Exposition at Detroit, Mich., where she repeated her performance at the Sesqui-centennial in Philadelphia; the Dairy Cattle Congress at Waterloo, Iowa, and many State fairs, by taking the coveted purple ribbon. Other members of this great California show herd have annexed many prizes, thereby reflecting much credit on Southern California. A list of the awards captured at the National Dairy Exposition by Billiwhack Stock Farm are as follows: Third prize three-year-old bull, for Sir Adna Perfection; first prize senior yearling bull on Berylwood Prince DeKol Retha, also named junior champion Holstein bull; first prize junior yearling bull on Billy Homestead DeKol; first prize, aged cow, senior and grand champion female on Model Segis Prilly Gelsche; second prize, four-year-old cow on Jeanie DeKol Segis Walker; first prize, three-year-old heifer on Miss Tritomia Fobes Walker, and first prize two-year-old heifer on Miss Papoose Piebe.

The twenty-second annual Arizona State Fair will be held at Phoenix during the week of November 8 to 13. An excellent live-stock show is promised by the management, the entires this year showing an increase over former years. More interest is being shown by dairymen in this year's fair owing to the growing interest in dairy farming in Arizona, and it is expected that a strong line up of dairy stock will face the judge, Prof. J. B. Fitch of the Kansas Agricultural College. This will be especially true in the Holstein and Jersey classes, as quite a number of breeders from outside Arizona have entered some of their choicest stock.

Livestock judges who will officiate at the forthcoming Pacific Slope Dairy Show at Oakland, November 13 to 20, have been announced as follows: Holstein-Friesian, Axel Hanson, Savage, Minn.; Guernsey, Prof. W. M. Regan, Davis; Ayrshire, L. W. Wing, Salinas; dairy cattle judging contest, in charge of G. E. Gordon, California Dairy Extension specialist, University of California, and M. Boissevain, Agricultural Extension Service.

The late fall and winter schedule for fair and livestock shows is as follows: Pacific International Live Stock Exposition at Portland, Or. October 30 to November 6; Arizona State Fair, Phoenix, November 8 to 13; Pacific Slope Dairy Show, Oakland, November 13 to 20; American Royal Live Stock Show, Kansas City, Mo, November 13 to 20; International Live Stock Exposition, Chicago, Ill., November 27 to December 4; Imperial Valley Midwinter Fair, Brawley, December 1 to 5.

A note of warning to cattlemen was recently sounded by J. A. McNaughton, general manager of the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, regarding an excessive marketing of cows and heifers from breeding herds. A recently compiled statement shows that for the first seven months of this year, approximately 85 per cent of the cattle slaughtered in the United States were classified as being 49 percent steers, 48 per cent cows and heifers and 3 per cent bulls and stags.

The increased slaughter of breeding stock, says Mr. McNaughton, has been induced largely by attractive prices offered for she-stock. Because of this continual slaughter of cows and heifers, which has been increasing at something like 10 per cent per year since 1921, breeding herds are being reduced at an abnormal rate. Furthermore, he states that breeders who are curtailing on production (which practice resembles burning a candle at both ends,) will not be in a position to share to the fullest extent in the prosperity which now appears to be in the offing for the industry as a whole.

Model Segis Prilly Gelsche.

The great Holstein cow shown by Billiwhack Stock Farm of Santa Paula that was made grand champion female of the breed at the National Dairy Exposition held at Detroit, Mich.

The Wasco Creamery at Wasco is helping finance increases in the herds and in the establishment of new dairies in the hope of doubling the number of cows supplying it. There are now about 2500 dairy cows serving the creamery. Most of the cream and some of the milk is trucked to Los Angeles. A considerable local business in butter, cottage cheese, sweet milk and buttermilk has been built up, and arrangements have been made to dispose of all surplus skim milk in condensed form to a powdered milk manufacturer in the northern part of the San Joaquin Valley.

For the month of September 435 cows were on test by the cow testing association of Santa Barbara county. The highest producing cow, owned by the Harmony Dairy of Buellton, produced 57.1 pounds of butter fat. Two other cows from the same herd yielded 56.2 and 55.2 pounds of fat respectively, standing third and fourth.

The nineteenth annual convention of the California Wool Growers' Association will be held at San Francisco, November 5 and 6. Among the speakers who will appear on the two-day program will be Chris L. Christensen, newly appointed chief of the Division of Co-operative Marketing of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Three herds in the Imperial Valley Cow Testing Association averaged over thirty pounds of butter fat per cow for the month of September. Two of these herds have been under test for nearly four years and the third completing its second year. During September 1679 cows were tested by the association; the average production was 597 pounds of milk and 22.8 pounds of butter fat. E. T. Parker and Son of Calexico owned the highest producing cow, with a yield of 58.6 pounds of fat. The same firm had nine cows in a herd of forty-nine which produced forty pounds or more during the month, and his five highest cows produced 257.1 pounds of fat. A. H. Farnsworth of El Centro, H. T. White and A. H. Smithson, both of Holtville had herds which tested over thirty pounds average for September. During the month twenty-four boarder cows were culled by members of the association.

Marion Haines, a graduate of the animal husbandry department of the Iowa State Agricultural College at Ames, Iowa, has taken over the supervision of cow-testing work for Santa Barbara and Ventura counties, in place of Herman Grabow. Mr. Grabow will take charge of the retail milk business of a dairyman of Ventura county.

A contract has been let for the erection of four new silos on the Los Angeles County Farm at Hondo. The heavy production of silage made this advisable this fall. Several fine Holstein cows have been added to the herd recently, among them Ida Johanna Bell 2nd with a record of 1047 pounds of butter fat and Rosamaine's Julianna with a record of 723 pounds of fat. Judge Segis 7th, a recently purchased bull, will be one of the good herd sires expected to increase the future butter-fat yields of the farm cows.

Pathologists of the United States Department of Agriculture have discovered the origin of much of the tuberculosis affecting hogs. Of 136 examined, sixty had tuberculosis of the bovine type, forty-five of the avian type and thirty-one of both. In other words, tuberculosis affecting both cattle and poultry may infect swine.

Avian tuberculosis exists to a limited degree in eastern and southern States, but causes great losses in the Corn Belt. Dr. J. A. Kiernan, of the Bureau of Animal Husbandry in charge of the tuberculosis eradication work, is authority for the statement that in many counties of the Middle West avian tuberculosis causes greater financial loss than bovine tuberculosis. During the past fifteen months the field force of the bureau has examined 202,538 flocks of chickens containing more than 16,450,000 fowls. Of this total, 12,301 flocks were found to be infected.

Where infected flocks were found the owners were urged to dispose of all their birds, to clean and disinfect the premises thoroughly and, if possible to select a new location before establishing a new flock.

Attamannsit Princess La Noce, a yearling daughter of La Noce's May Rose, the latter being class D leader for the Guernsey breed, was sold in the recent Guernsey auction offering from Attamannsit Farms, East Falmouth, Mass., to H. F. Andrus, Millerton, N. Y., for $3000. Another yearling heifer in this sale, which brought the same price from the same purchaser, was Attamannsit Coronet, a daughter of Jean Duluth Coronet, a cow that stands third in class AA with a yearly production of 952.3 pounds of butterfat from 20,004 pounds of milk. The forty-six animals selling in the Attamannsit Farms sale averaged $560, according to recent reports.

The Los Angeles County Agricultural Extension Service reports that the annual dairymen's field day will be held at the Los Angeles County Farm, Hondo on November 3. An excellent speaking program has been arranged in addition to the free barbecue to be served at noon. The program will conclude with the presentation of cups and ribbons to winning dairymen in the annual dairy cow competition.

Why All the Prejudice Against Goats?

By ELIZABETH BOSWELL

I like goats. Others would like them too, if they would take the trouble to become better acquainted with them. They will not admit it, but their principal reason for hating the goat is because it has always been the "goat." There is another reason, and a good one, for the male goat's unpopularity, but he is to be left entirely out of this discussion.

In the first place goats are intelligent—too much so, I sometimes think. They learn to turn on the water when thirsty, never bothering to turn it off again, unfasten gates, and do many other things which they are not supposed to know how to do, but that will enable them to get their food and drink.

They tell me that a buffalo calf lies down after feeding and will lie there and starve to death if it is not made to get up again at feeding time. The mother buffalo attends to this when she mothers her calf, but if the youngster is mothered by range cows boys must place a flag where the calf lies down so that they can find him at feeding time.

An Anglo-Nubian Doe.

Not so with the young of the goat. They are up and rustling by the time they are five minutes old. One of my mother goats for some reason took a violent dislike to one of her two kids and refused to feed him. Did he lie down and mope over his misfortune? Not that kid. He was so amiable and friendly that he compelled notice and we would hold his obstinate mother for him to feed. In two days that kid had learned to watch for his friends, and would meet us at the gate. In a week's time he would come half way to the house as if urging a little more speed.

It is this instinct to rustle for what he—pardon—she gets, and to cheerfully make the best of a bad situation that has won for the goat the libel that these animals eat old tin cans, rags and papers. A well bred goat is naturally very dainty about her food, and if you do not believe it, bite from a carrot or an apple and offer it to one. She will actually turn up her nose and walk away. She positively refuses to eat food or drink water that has become contaminated in any way.

But her good disposition and cleanly habits are not all the talking points that a goat has. There is the milk. Let it be distinctly understood for the second time that it is not only the female of the species that is under discussion, but a well-bred goat. In buying a goat ask to sample some of her milk for there is often a vast difference in both the taste and the richness of the milk from different goats.

"Bah," I seem to hear you say. "I wouldn't drink it for anything." Very well, then, don't, but you are allowing your prejudice to cheat you out of a health-giving food that is at the same time good to the taste.

I have seen so many frail bodies round out into plumpness, so many weak constitutions become strong from drinking goats milk, that I would like to preach the gospel of the goat in every land, and particularly in places where there is much waste land and where the underbrush is thick. More goats in Southern California would not only make good use of brush land that is of little use now, but would be a factor for better health in the section.

Where all feed is bought one goat can be maintained for ten cents a day or less, it has been found. An ordinary goat will give two or three quarts of milk a day, and many of the Toggenberg and Saanen goats that have been bred for milk production will give four, five and even six quarts a day.

Goats require very little care. Being healthy animals, they are seldom sick. They should be protected from cold and rain, and their pens should be on a sloping ground with good drainage. As much room should be given as possible for a run, although goats seem quite happy in a small pen.

The pen should be furnished with a rack for hay and a stancheon for milking. It is not a wise plan to train them to eat while being milked. They will stand very quietly

Strong Tomato Market Is Anticipated

POMONA.—The tomato season in the Pomona Valley is unusually long this season. The Cutler-Lobingier canning plant has been handling about seventy-five tons of fine tomatoes every day, and operations will continue until frosts nip the vines. It is expected that the local plant of this company will shut down sooner than that at Fullerton, where frosts usually come still later.

The sales outlook is regarded as very satisfactory. Early frosts in the Middle West have created a general shortage for the national tomato pack which will make for an active demand. The local crop is considered superior in size, quality and flavor.

When the tomato season is over, probably about November 15, the cannery will put up pie pumpkins. The crop is light here but large quantities have been contracted for and will be shipped here from Orange county.

Old Vineyard Still in Heavy Bearing

HANFORD.—The Lucerne vineyard near Hanford is believed locally to be the largest raisin grape vineyard in the world. Thirteen hundred acres are devoted to grape production by this great concern, 1100 acres being planted to Muscats and the rest principally to Malagas. The Muscat has the distinction of being the only variety which meets with a demand for table grapes, juice or raisins. Last year the Lucerne vineyard shipped 252,860 lug boxes of grapes, twenty-eight pounds net to the lug, for juice purposes, 31,550 crates of Muscats and 34,000 crates of Malagas for table use, and produced about 400,000 pounds of raisins. This year picking began about two weeks earlier than usual. The market demands have changed somewhat and a larger proportion of grapes are being dried this season.

The utmost care is exercised in picking, handling, packing and shipping Lucerne grapes. Muscats are tender and the juice grapes are field-packed by experts. The table grapes are put up in the packing house by experienced workers, with four baskets, neatly but solidly arranged, in each crate. From the vine to the car it takes not over twelve hours. Solid packing, the superintendent asserts, saved the vineyard $8000 last year, with fewer crates and boxes, lower freights and higher prices. The shipments go largely to the Atlantic seaboard, as the Chicago market is not as good as those of cities farther east. The vineyard has its own agents in the east and the grapes are sold at the regular fruit auctions, the superior pack and high quality bringing an average of $10 a ton over the regular market. This year the possible output is estimated at about 410 carloads, but probably not over 150 cars will be shipped, the rest being dried.

The Lucerne vineyard was set out thirty-six years ago by Paige, Monteagle and Chittenden, L. S. Chittenden being the director-manager. It is said that the first planting was made on March 1, 1890, and that in thirteen days 1000 acres were set out. There was but 3 per cent loss of vines. Constant war was waged against jackrabbits, with guns, poison and other lethal means. Rabbits are scarce nowadays. Later the great vineyard was owned by West and Son, operating wineries in several cities. Then it passed into the hands of Wiley B. Giffen, for several years head of the Sunmaid Raisin Growers' Association. Now it is the property of M. D. Hopper, who has in all approximately 2000 acres in grapes. After thirty-six years the Lucerne vineyard appears to be bearing as heavily as ever. Mr. Hopper believes that success in the grape business depends very largely on proper care in packing.

In the early days raisins were made in dryers and no vineyard was considered completely equipped without one. Nowadays the bulk of the grapes are sun-dried. However, the Lucerne vineyard has a drying house, said to be the largest of its kind in existence.

Kings county is a heavy grape shipper. Last year 2200 cars of Muscats were shipped east from the county, and a large tonnage was trucked out to Los Angeles and other Coast cities. About three-fourths of the crop was shipped fresh. This season it is believed that the crop will be smaller and that a much larger percentage of grapes will be dried.

Club Delegates Attend Davis Meeting

On the evening of October 13 a party of fifty boys and girls left Los Angeles as county delegates to the twelfth annual convention of Boys' and Girls' Agriculture Clubs of California, held at Davis on the University Farm. The first stop-over was made at Sacramento, where the boys were given a swim at the Y. M. C. A., and the girls were entertained at the Hotel Senator. Gov. Friend W. Richardson shook hands with each delegate, and a sight-seeing trip was made through the capitol. In the office of the State Department of Agriculture, Director G. H. Hecke made an interesting talk on the history of California agriculture. Later the party visited Sutter's Fort.

At Davis the party from the South, including delegates from Ventura and San Diego counties as well as Los Angeles county, joined the 800 other delegates. During the following day and a half twenty demonstrations were made for their benefit.

One of the professors conducted the agricultural engineering demonstration. Prof. Stahl of the pomology division spoke of the value of bees in the pollination of fruit trees. Another professor explained the principles of value of bees in the pollination of fruit trees. planting ornamentals with a miniature farm to illustrate his points. In the animal husbandry division, sheep, hogs, cows and horses were led out and the method of selection illustrated, while a poultry expert showed the construction of an egg and moving pictures indicated the development of the embryo during the hatching period. The variation in moisture penetration of soils was demonstrated by means of three trenches dug for the purpose. Forestry was discussed. The girls were given demonstrations pertaining to shoes, clothing, nutrition and other matters of especial interest to them. Amusement features were provid-tion and other matters of especial interest Amusement features were provided in abundance.

K. W. Koch, Los Angeles county club leader, had charge of the trip and was assisted by Miss Ruth Joyce of Owensmouth, Miss Leila Hecke of Los Angeles, M. W. Dula of Littlerock, E. E. Frary of Spadra and L. D. Sanborn of Lankershim.

High Prices for Green Feed Expected

POMONA.—About 100 acres located in the southern part of the Pomona Valley have been planted to early grain already, so that green feed for dairy cows may be available by the first of the year. The main crop, which will be grown on thousands of acres of hill and valley land, will be sown in November, provided the rains come in that month.

The grain growers say that they expect advancing prices for hay and feed grain for the coming season, basing their opinion on the State of the supplies on hand and the growing live-stock industry. It is thought probable that the hay and grain crop of the valley will be larger this coming season than it has been for several years.

SAN TIMOTEO CANYON

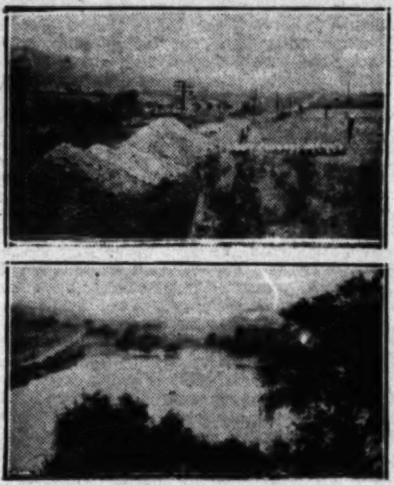
ange empire has no further tenancy in the canyon.

PEAR A FAVORITE

Indicative of the transition from citrus to deciduous planting is a grove of young orange trees interplanted to pears. The pear seems to be a favorite in the plantings of the last few years. At present there are no bearing pear orchards, but the young trees look promising. Many of the sheltered canyon nooks harbor peach orchards varying in size from ten to forty acres, all thrifty and prospering. These, too, are of the last decade's planting. Older trees than these indicate that the apricot was the popular fruit of early days. A few old olive groves give testimony of foreign flights of fancy among the first planters of the canyon.

It is apropos to describe the soil of this part of the canyon—and the soil conditions throughout are very similar—as being a sandy loam varying from fine sandy to coarse sandy, gray in color, classified in the Hanford series as being deep and uniform, taking water well but not overly retentive, and hence calling for frequent irrigations in generous amounts. The topography of the canyon, being broken by the descending shoulders of the hills, makes irrigation difficult. The slope of the land in the direction of the fall of the canyon floor is too steep for thorough watering—the length of the run of water from the hills toward the creek is too short and the fall is too great. In general the lands are watered in small fields, with borders running diagonally across the natural fall of the canyon floor.



El Casco Reservoir.

This is an old water right in the middle of San Timoteo Canyon. The upper picture shows work on the new Moreno Irrigation Company ditch tapping water-bearing strata of the middle canyon.

The middle reaches of San Timoteo are devoted chiefly to the dairy industry. Alfalfa and corn for silage are grown in every nook and corner to which water can be economically raised and spread. Some very attractive herds are kept on the old holdings at El Casco and on the Singleton property. In this mid-section fruit production dwindles to family-orchard dimensions. This is the best watered section of the canyon. Here Live Oak canyon empties and here the gorge narrows, indicating a probable bedrock formation effecting a subterranean reservoir. Here are the oldest water rights in San Timoteo, and here Moreno Valley, six miles to the south, has turned in order to secure the increased flow which that section absolutely needs for expansion.

THE DRY FARM AREA

Above Singleton's, the canyon opens out, the creek is less rigidly confined, its walls become low, sandy banks, the hills on either side retreat and subside into broad rolling billows over which appear the blue ridges of the Yucaipa Range to the north and the sharp pinnacle of San Jacinto off in the east. This is a dry-farm area, cropped to barley hay and barley grain. Dwarf milo, too, occupies many of the canyon nooks. No water has been developed. A cherry orchard indicates an elevation similar to that of Beaumont, but this orchard is dry-farmed and is not an entire success. Gophers have killed many of the trees, and the survivors would appreciate a good irrigation.

San Timoteo Canyon dairy herd.

What shall we say of the future of San Timoteo? For half a century the canyon's even tenor has been disturbed only by the rumble of Southern Pacific trains carrying the produce of richer sections back and forth through its portals. Perhaps the older days were even better than today, for now paved highways divert traffic from the old canyon thoroughfare to Redlands and to Riverside, to the north and south respectively. In the lower reaches some attractive ranches are in process of development. The well watered middle section has attracted attention unto itself, not for itself but as an ally to Moreno's growth. The upper expanses will probably continue as now in their alternate round of dry-farmed grain and years of fallow. For further prophecy than this we turn to that easy Mission-day philosophy which San Timoteo seems to represent: "Quien sabe?"

The Cover Page

The cover page of this week's Farm and Orchard pictures a three-year-old grapevine in a young vineyard planting at Fontana. The vine is bigger than the nine-year-old girl posed with it and, as will be seen, contributed its bit to San Bernardino county's great seasonal production. Easterners are always amazed at the development recorded by grapes in California's vineyard sections and such pictures tell the story of why the Golden State beats the world in grape production.

Good Program Promised at Fullerton

The strongest program in years has been completed for the Farmers' and Fruit Growers' convention to be held at Fullerton, November 9 and 10, according to George H. Hecke, director of the California Department of Agriculture. Several nationally known speakers will address the meeting, at which practically all of the State's important agricultural problems are to be discussed.

One of the most interesting speakers will be Dr. J. T. Jardine, director of the Oregon Agricultural Experiment Station at Corvallis, a brother of W. M. Jardine, Secretary of the United States Department of Agriculture. Another will be Chris L. Christensen, newly appointed chief of the division of co-operative marketing in the Federal Department of Agriculture.

One of the most important matters which will be under consideration will be that of the new clearinghouse plan for the marketing of perishable products. Colonization on a sound rural development basis is another subject which is to be discussed. Agricultural engineering, irrigation, transportation, legislation and pest control will come in for a share of attention.

The Farmers' and Fruit Growers' convention has a long record of accomplishments in California. The organization of the Agricultural Legislative Committee, State-wide rodent control, the Western Plant Quarantine Board and other developments of unquestioned value to the State had their inception at these meetings.

Painting and Planting His Hobbies

SAN JACINTO.—Seven years ago C. N. Parker and his family left their "old Kentucky home" and journeyed to California. They finally settled in San Jacinto, where Mr. Parker opened a service station and garage. Mr. Parker has two hobbies—painting and planting. So first he painted everything that would be improved by a coat of color, and then he planted things on every square inch of land available. His station was neat and attractive and so was his home. But there was not enough room.

So he bought twenty acres adjoining the Woodhead-Warren Ranch on San Jacinto avenue—raw land with a few cottonwoods maintaining their existence there. He found water only twenty-seven feet below the surface, and installed an electric pump. Next he built a modern four-room bungalow, and began work on a two-acre garden. The home commands a beautiful view, with the picturesque cottonwoods in the foreground and the peak of San Jacinto in the distance.

He got his vegetables into the ground pretty late—July 1, but the magic of sun, soil and water has produced a fine crop of thrifty tomatoes, sweet and Irish potatoes, squash, beets, parsley, beans, okra, turnips, peas, corn, cucumbers, watermelons, cantaloupes, muskmelons, casabas, alfalfa, sudan grass and many flowers. He is fitting the ground for sweet onions and berries.

Eggs are not wanting for family use and for sale. Mr. Parker built a poultry house big enough to accommodate 700 White Leghorn hens, and during August he reports that the eggs sold brought a profit of $18.40 per hundred hens.

Look at It Now!

C. N. Parker and his wife planted their San Jacinto vegetable garden in July, but sun, soil and water hurried it along.

STUDY IRRIGATION!

the soil particles are smaller and consequently in larger numbers, there is more capillary water, and consequently more available for the use of the tree. We see then that a soil acts as a reservoir and will hold water in amounts varying with the soil type.

PRACTICE MUST VARY

Recognizing the fact, then, that the trees require the same amount of water regardless of the type of soil, and that some soils will hold considerably more water than others, we find it is necessary to vary the irrigation practice accordingly. Sandy soil, holding less water, will necessarily have to be filled up with irrigation water more often than a soil of heavy type that holds more. This is why it is necessary on some sandy soils to irrigate every two or three weeks while with heavy types every six to eight weeks during the irrigation season may be enough.

Optimum moisture content in the soil for some fruit crops is estimated to be about one-half what it will absorb and retain as capillary moisture. Citrus specialists and investigators in California, however, feel that as long as any moisture is available in the form of capillary moisture ideal growth will continue and that the tree will function normally and actively. It is certain that if the soil, especially in the citrus orchard, is kept up to or above the optimum for too long a period during the growing season, great harm will be done to the trees and they will not function normally. The result may be decreased root-activity and an actual rotting of the root already in the soil. In other words, the ideal to be followed so far as soil moisture regulation is concerned, is to permit the trees to use first the available water within the soil before more is added. This means, of course, that the soil moisture within the soil will fluctuate between full field capacity and a point which is not very far above the wilting coefficient. Under these conditions, the bacterial flora within the soil will be more active. The roots, too, will be more active because it is necessary for them to have a comparatively high temperature in which to function properly, and this high temperature would not be maintained if cold irrigating water was applied too often, and the water kept at too high a point within the soil. It is impossible, then, in having ideal conditions for growth to prevent a fluctuation of soil moisture.

Just as too much water maintained in the soil is detrimental to the tree and tree growth, so too much drying out of the soil causes a condition whereby the tree cannot function properly. Just as the fruit cannot function properly when the soil is applied with too much moisture, so the tree cannot produce profitable crops of fruit where an inadequate moisture supply is the rule. As is well known by growers, when the drying out process goes too far, the leaves wilt and drop off, and as a consequence trees will not produce thereafter, perhaps for two or three years.

MUST KNOW PENETRATION

The fruit grower may ask this question: How may I determine my soil moisture content? The answer is, use a soil auger, a soil tube, a shovel, or some kind of a tool in order to get into the soil and determine how far the moisture has gone. Determine the distribution, and penetration, and decide whether the root feeding area has been properly supplied with moisture. In some districts it may be possible to get away from the old-time schedule. Most irrigation is carried on where the grower himself is one of the company, that is, by co-operative irrigation. Where this is the case and the demand is great enough, companies can make other plans so that an absolute schedule does not need to be adhered to. Within the last two or three years, irrigation companies have made changes so that the growers have been enabled to irrigate more nearly when it has been necessary. Growers with orchards in sandy soil are given water more often than growers in heavy soil. In this way the irrigation in a given district may be carried on more efficiently, to the benefit not only of growers themselves, but to the community at large.

The furrow system of irrigation is the one most in use. The one weak point, perhaps, in connection with the use of this system is that the upper part of the orchard, or the part nearest the source of water, receives more water than the lower end of the run. This makes it necessary, in order to get best results so far as distribution of the water in the orchard is concerned, to consider the length of the furrows. With a sandy or light type of soil it is necessary to have short furrows, that is furrows around 250 to 300 feet long; probably 300 feet should be the limit in the lighter soil type. In heavy soils perhaps longer furrows would be satisfactory, although probably about 500 feet in our average heavy soils should be the limit. With this method of irrigation, the necessity for having loose surface soil without a plow-sole or hard stratum beneath the surface, is a paramount one. If a plow-sole is present and water does not penetrate into the subsurface soil, it should be broken up in some way through sub-soiling.

With the furrow system there is some danger of accumulation of salts in the surface soil, causing too great a concentration in the soil solution, especially if sufficient water is added later to carry the salts down to the feeding roots. A rainfall following an accumulation of salts may cause some trouble. Probably, however, where the salts do accumulate, and this is followed by a heavy rain of several inches all soluble materials may be carried not only through the root feeding area but down below that, the heavy rain being beneficial to the trees.

Basin irrigation is another method of applying water. This is the method in which a certain amount of water is applied to each tree and held there through ridges running in both directions in the orchard. In this case, the water is held on the surface of the ground and around the tree until it necessarily penetrates the soil. There is some danger, however, with this method because standing water around the trunk of the tree, makes an ideal condition for the infection of certain diseases to take place, especially in citrus trees. By this method however, water is probably more evenly distributed than with the furrow system.

Overhead or spray irrigation is coming into use at the present time throughout the Southland. This method appears to be very good, especially in light soil, where penetration is immediate. It is more or less experimental, however, and it remains to be seen what the effect on the trees will be under heavy soil conditions. With this method it would appear that some of the advantages are the more economical use of water and of the fertilizers applied to the soil. No salts accumulate if the irrigation is carried on as it should be. Penetration can be controlled. It is also apparent that better distribution of water can be effected. It is a very desirable way to irrigate an orchard where the soil is quite shallow.

WATER FOR YOUNG TREES

A word about the irrigation of young trees: In the irrigation of the young trees either in orchard form or where they are replants in a large orchard, the growers many times run furrows near the trees. The furrows probably run as long as they do around the older trees. In any event, frequently the water is run on either side of a row of young trees so long that it must necessarily penetrate down through the root feeding area and way beyond. This seems to be a common practice. In the irrigation of young trees this point should be watched, and just as with the older trees, as soon as the moisture gets down as far as the roots penetrate, the water should be cut off; otherwise the soil will be leached and the young tree will suffer.

In general, as we see it, the soil moisture regulation program for the year should be about as follows:

In the winter, before the growing season commences, see to it that the soil in the root-feeding area in the orchard is filled up with water to field capacity. If this is accomplished, it will be long into the spring before the necessity arises for adding irrigation water. This will make for ideal growing conditions throughout the spring months. When the water throughout the spring or early growing season seems to diminish to the extent where a thorough examination makes the addition of more appear necessary, then, but not until then, should more be added.

Throughout the growing season, then, moisture should be added only as it is needed. And as long as moisture is present, do not add more water. This practice should be followed well into the fall months. At no time during the season should the soil be allowed to get too dry. Do not wait for rain if the soil needs moisture. In the winter again see to it that the moisture is supplied to all of the root feeding area.

To sum up, let us remember that water is necessary to the fruit tree in definite amounts and that these amounts not vary according to soil conditions, although the requirements may vary according to the climatic and weather conditions. Attention should be given to supplying the proper amount of water. Irrigation water should be properly distributed throughout all of the root feeding area in order to obtain the maximum results, in so far as vigorous growth of the tree and the production of profitable crops are concerned. See to it that the water is properly conserved, and that a sufficient depth of penetration is accomplished without wasting any. Do not add water when an adequate supply is already available. An examination of soil moisture should be made from time to time enabling the grower to more economically and efficiently supply the demands of the trees. Remember, too, that the shadow of the owner in the orchard is desirable, providing said grower is making a real study of his conditions and determining his practices accordingly.

The United States Department of Agriculture, after a study of the flowering habits of the avocado, advises that mixed plantings of different varieties are conductive to the setting of fruit. Solid plantings of any one variety are regarded by the department experts as unwise.

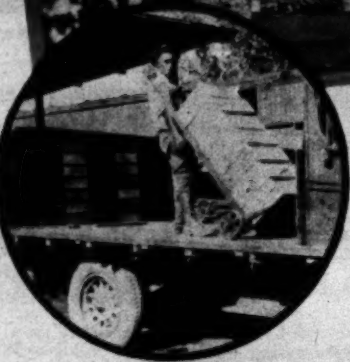
Where Muscats Grow for Table, Juice and Raisins

Illustrating article in this issue

Thirteen hundred acres are devoted to grapes by the Lucerne [illegible] ford. Most of the ground is planted to Muscats because of their adaptability for table, juice and raisin purposes.

The big dryer of the Lucerne Vineyard. This year an unusually large percentage of grapes will be converted into raisins.



The juice grapes are picked and packed solidly and with great care by experienced hands in the field.

Various Irrigation Systems Used in Our Orchards

Illustrating article by M. B. Rounds in this issue

The basin method of irrigation is a common one and is approved in certain soils. It has its advantages and its dangers as well.

The furrow system is used very widely because of its convenience and effectiveness. The scene is in a walnut grove.

Here both basin and furrow methods are combined to advantage in a citrus grove of the San Gabriel district.

When the young trees are first planted they have to have water, and if the irrigation system is not installed the grower resorts to the tank wagon.

Overhead irrigation has many staunch supporters among the citrus growers. Economy in the use of water and efficiency in moisture penetration are claimed for it.

Here a small fruit tree just set out is getting a first irrigation from a garden hose. There is some likelihood that it will get more than is good for it.

A young citrus tree which has been injured by too much water. The irrigation furrows were made too close to it.

Too much water is every bit as bad as not enough. This over-irrigated area has lowered the health and fruiting of a citrus grove. A soil auger would have told the grower what the trouble was.

HOW MUCH WOULD YOU GIVE FOR A HEN LIKE No. 217?

She is the product of a long unbroken pedigree of high producers bred on our own ranch and has laid in the trap nests 270 eggs first year, 264 eggs second year, and 251 eggs in her third year.

Not a world record, perhaps, but so valuable to us that she is not for sale at any price. We hatched 182 chicks from her eggs last year, Feb. to Nov. Her eggs have averaged 25 ozs. to the dozen.

We consider her an almost perfect specimen of the breed.

Her sons will be used in several of our 1927 matings. Orders now being booked for hatching eggs and baby chicks. Breeding stock always for sale.
